

II. The government’s use of non-governmental entities to censor Americans by proxy

The Select Subcommittee’s oversight revealed how the federal government also worked with third parties to target and censor Americans’ speech, including (1) how the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) used proxies and partners to target and censor Americans’ election-related speech;³⁵ and (2) how the National Science Foundation (NSF) has funded and supported the development of AI-powered tools that would supercharge the government’s ability to censor disfavored speech.³⁶

On November 6, 2023, the Select Subcommittee issued a report, “The Weaponization of ‘Disinformation’ Pseudo-Experts and Bureaucrats: How the Federal Government Partnered with Universities to Censor Americans’ Political Speech,” detailing how Stanford University and other partners created the Election Integrity Partnership (EIP), a consortium of “disinformation” academics led by the Stanford Internet Observatory (SIO), that worked directly with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the State Department’s Global Engagement Center (GEC) to monitor and censor Americans’ online speech in advance of the 2020 presidential election.³⁷ Created in the summer of 2020 “at the request of DHS/CISA,” the EIP provided a way for the federal government to launder its censorship activities in an effort to bypass both the First Amendment and public scrutiny.³⁸ The Select Subcommittee uncovered how the EIP sent thousands of Americans’ social media posts directly to Big Tech, often with specific recommendations on how Big Tech should censor the posts.³⁹ The flagged posts included true information, jokes, and political opinions.⁴⁰

The Select Subcommittee has shown that CISA’s unconstitutional censorship efforts have continued well beyond the 2020 election. In particular, the Select Subcommittee’s June 26, 2023 report, “The Weaponization of CISA: How a ‘Cybersecurity’ Agency Colluded with Big Tech and ‘Disinformation’ Partners to Censor Americans,” revealed that, instead of focusing on legitimate cybersecurity threats, CISA turned its focus to alleged domestic misinformation, disinformation, and malinformation (MDM) and metastasized into the nerve center of the federal government’s domestic surveillance and censorship operations on social media.⁴¹ The report detailed how under Director Jen Easterly’s tenure: (1) CISA has “work[ed] with federal partners to mature a whole-of-government approach” to curbing alleged misinformation and disinformation; (2) CISA considered the creation of an anti-misinformation “rapid response team” capable of physically deploying across the country; (3) CISA moved its censorship operation to a CISA-funded non-profit after the states of Missouri and Louisiana, along with several other plaintiffs, sued CISA and the Biden-Harris Administration in federal court; (4) CISA wanted to use the same CISA-funded non-profit as its mouthpiece to “avoid the appearance of government propaganda”; and (5) members of CISA’s advisory committee internally worried that it was “only a matter of time before someone realizes we exist and starts asking about our work.”⁴²

The Select Subcommittee also documented how the federal government has poured millions of taxpayer dollars into automating censorship and propaganda technologies.⁴³ The Select Subcommittee’s February 5, 2024 report, “The Weaponization of the National Science Foundation: How NSF is Funding the Development of Automated Tools to Censor Online Speech “At Scale” and Trying to Cover Up Its Actions,” detailed the NSF’s funding of AI-powered censorship and propaganda tools, and its repeated efforts to hide its actions to avoid political and media scrutiny.⁴⁴ In the name of combatting alleged misinformation regarding COVID-19 and the 2020 presidential election, the NSF issued multi-million-dollar grants to university and non-profit research teams to develop AI-powered censorship and propaganda tools that can be used by governments and Big Tech to shape public opinion by restricting certain viewpoints and promoting others.⁴⁵ Non-public documents obtained by the Select Subcommittee demonstrate that these federal bureaucrats, “disinformation” researchers, and non-profit groups understood that their actions—“content moderation” and combatting so-called misinformation—amounted to “censorship.”⁴⁶ Yet, the NSF forged ahead, supporting new technologies that would essentially enable the censorship of online speech at scale.⁴⁷ These documents also revealed a years-long, intentional effort by the NSF to hide its role in funding these censorship and propaganda tools from media and political scrutiny.⁴⁸

From working with third parties to set up a consortium of “disinformation” pseudo-scientists to flag Americans’ social media posts for censorship, to relocating its censorship activities to a government-funded non-profit, to funding university and non-profit research teams to build censorship and propaganda tools, the Select Subcommittee has shown how the federal

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Following the 2016 presidential election, a sensationalized narrative emerged that foreign “disinformation” affected the integrity of the election. These claims, fueled by left-wing election denialism about the legitimacy of President Trump’s victory, sparked a new focus on the role of social media platforms in spreading such information.¹ “Disinformation” think tanks and “experts,” government task forces, and university centers were formed, all to study and combat the alleged rise in alleged mis- and disinformation. As the House Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government have shown previously, these efforts to combat so-called foreign influence and misinformation quickly mutated to include domestic—that is, American—speech.²

The First Amendment to the Constitution rightly limits the government’s role in monitoring and censoring Americans’ speech, but these disinformation researchers (often funded, at least in part, by taxpayer dollars) were not strictly bound by these constitutional guardrails. What the federal government could not do directly, it effectively outsourced to the newly emerging censorship-industrial complex.

Enter the Election Integrity Partnership (EIP), a consortium of “disinformation” academics led by Stanford University’s Stanford Internet Observatory (SIO) that worked directly with the Department of Homeland Security and the Global Engagement Center, a multi-agency entity housed within the State Department, to monitor and censor Americans’ online speech in advance of the 2020 presidential election. Created in the summer of 2020 “at the request” of the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA),³ the EIP provided a way for the federal government to launder its censorship activities in hopes of bypassing both the First Amendment and public scrutiny.

In the lead-up to the 2020 election, amid the COVID-19 pandemic, the American public and lawmakers debated the merits of unprecedented, mid-election-cycle changes to election procedures.⁴ These issues, like all contemporary discourse about questions of political import, were extensively discussed on the world’s largest social media platforms—the modern town square. But as American citizens, including candidates in these elections, attempted to exercise their First Amendment rights on these platforms, their constitutionally protected speech was intentionally suppressed as a consequence of the federal government’s direct coordination with third-party organizations, particularly universities, and social media platforms.⁵ Speech concerning elections—the process by which Americans select their representatives—is of course entitled to robust First Amendment protections.⁶ This bedrock principle is even more critical as it relates to speech by political candidates.⁷ But as disinformation “experts” acknowledge, the labeling of any kind of speech is “inherently political”⁸ and itself a form of “censorship.”⁹

This interim staff report details the federal government’s heavy-handed involvement in the creation and operation of the EIP, which facilitated the censorship of Americans’ political speech in the weeks and months leading up to the 2020 election. This report also publicly reveals for the first time secret “misinformation” reports from the EIP’s centralized reporting system, previously accessible only to select parties, including federal agencies, universities, and Big Tech. The Committee and Select Subcommittee obtained these nonpublic reports from Stanford University only under the threat of contempt of Congress. These reports of alleged mis- and disinformation were used to censor Americans engaged in core political speech in the lead up to the 2020 election.

As this new information reveals, and this report outlines, the federal government and universities pressured social media companies to censor true information, jokes, and political opinions. This pressure was largely directed in a way that benefitted one side of the political aisle: true information posted by Republicans and conservatives was labeled as “misinformation” while false information posted by Democrats and liberals was largely unreported and untouched by the censors. The pseudoscience of disinformation is now—and has always been—nothing more than a political ruse most frequently targeted at communities and individuals holding views contrary to the prevailing narratives.

The EIP’s operation was straightforward: “external stakeholders,” including federal agencies and organizations funded by the federal government, submitted misinformation reports directly to the EIP. The EIP’s misinformation “analysts” next scoured the internet for additional examples for censorship. If the submitted report flagged a Facebook post, for example, the EIP analysts searched for similar content on Twitter, YouTube, TikTok, Reddit, and other major social media platforms. Once all of the offending links were compiled, the EIP sent the most significant ones directly to Big Tech with specific recommendations on how the social media platforms should censor the posts, such as reducing the posts’ “discoverability,” “suspending [an account’s] ability to continue tweeting for 12 hours,” “monitoring if any of the tagged influencer accounts retweet” a particular user, and, of course, removing thousands of Americans’ posts.¹⁰

Government agencies and disinformation “experts” are quick to cite the need to combat foreign actors attempting to undermine American elections as a justification for this censorship regime. While foreign states do attempt to conduct influence operations, the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s investigation has revealed that the true focus and purpose of the censors’ “election integrity” work was to target the very Americans they claim to protect. Instead of targeting foreign or inauthentic accounts, the EIP targeted Americans, disproportionately candidates and commentators with conservative viewpoints. And despite its stated purpose to combat “disinformation,” the EIP worked with social media companies to censor true information, jokes and satire, and political opinions.

As part of this report, the Committee and Select Subcommittee are releasing all of the previously secret, archived data the Committee has obtained pursuant to a subpoena issued to Stanford University, which Stanford produced only after the threat of contempt.¹¹ In the lead-up to the 2020 election, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) had the ability to see what American speech was being censored. Today, as a result of the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s investigation, political candidates, journalists, and all Americans have the opportunity to see if they were targeted by their government and what viewpoints DHS, Stanford, and others worked to censor. While the EIP disproportionately targeted conservatives, Americans of all political affiliations were victims of censorship.

The First Amendment prohibits the government from “abridging the freedom of speech” and protects “the right of the people . . . to petition the Government.”¹² The ability of Americans to criticize the government and its policies is a fundamental and sacrosanct principle of our constitutional republic. The Supreme Court has long recognized that for “core political speech” “the importance of First Amendment protections is at its zenith.”¹³ Moreover, as constitutional scholars have explained: “Because the First Amendment bars ‘abridging’ the freedom of speech, any law or government policy that reduces that freedom on the [social media] platforms . . . violates the First Amendment.”¹⁴

The government may not dictate the type or terms of the criticism to which it is subject, even when—especially when—the government disagrees with the merits of that criticism. To inform potential legislation, the Committee and the Select Subcommittee have been investigating the Executive Branch’s collusion with third-party intermediaries, including universities, to censor protected speech on social media.

The Committee and the Select Subcommittee are responsible for investigating “violation[s] of the civil liberties of citizens of the United States.”¹⁵ In accordance with this mandate, this interim staff report on CISA’s violations of the First Amendment and other unconstitutional activities fulfills the obligation to identify and report on the weaponization of the federal government against American citizens. The Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s investigation remains ongoing. CISA still has not adequately complied with a subpoena for relevant documents, and more fact-finding is necessary. In order to better inform the Committee’s legislative efforts, the Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to investigate how the Executive Branch worked with social media platforms and other intermediaries to censor disfavored viewpoints in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

GLOSSARY OF KEY TERMS & NAMES

Term/Name	Organization	Description/Definition
CFITF	CISA’s Countering Foreign Influence Task Force (CFITF)	Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Task Force under the Cybersecurity & Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) which brought together DHS components, including DHS Intelligence and Analysis and others to look at the broader foreign influence and disinformation challenge based on the U.S. intelligence community’s 2017 assessment of foreign influence. In 2021, the CFITF name was changed to Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation Team (“MDM Team”).
CIP	Center for an Informed Public	University of Washington’s Center for an Informed Public’s mission is to resist strategic misinformation, promote an informed society and strengthen democratic discourse. One of the four founding members of the EIP.
CIS	Center for Internet Security (CIS)	CIS is a CISA-funded, nonprofit that channeled reports of mis- and disinformation from state and local government officials to social media platforms.
CISA	The Department of Homeland Security’s Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency	The Cybersecurity & Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA), a component of the Department of Homeland Security, has stated that one of its goals is to build “resiliency to foreign influence operations and disinformation . . . in close partnership with the interagency, private sector, academia, and international stakeholders.”
DFRLab	The Atlantic Council’s Digital Forensic Research Lab	The Atlantic Council’s DFRLab is dedicated to operationalizing the study of disinformation, tracking information campaigns, exposing attempts to pollute the information space, and building digital resilience. One of the four founding members of the EIP.
DHS I&A	DHS Intelligence and Analysis	DHS I&A specializes in sharing unique intelligence and analysis with operators and decision-makers to identify and mitigate threats to the homeland.
Disinformation		CISA defines disinformation as “deliberately created to mislead, harm, or manipulate a person, social group, organization, or country.”

EI-ISAC	Elections Infrastructure Information Sharing & Analysis Center	The EI-ISAC operated as an intermediary between state and local election officials and the social media platforms, offering a centralized reporting mechanism.
EIP	Election Integrity Partnership (“EIP”)	Originally named the “Election Disinformation Partnership,” the EIP was a collaborative project to develop real-time misinformation response capabilities. The EIP worked with a number of “external stakeholders,” including the federal government. The four original members at the EIP were: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Stanford Internet Observatory; • the University of Washington, Center for an Informed Public; • Graphika; and • The Atlantic Council’s Digital Forensic Research Lab (DFRLab).
FITF	The FBI’s Foreign Influence Task Force (FITF)	In 2017, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) established the Foreign Influence Task Force (FITF) to identify and counteract malign foreign influence operations targeting the United States.
GEC	Department of State, Global Engagement Center	The GEC is a multi-agency organization housed within the State Department tasked with identifying and combating foreign propaganda and disinformation.
Graphika	Graphika, digital intelligence company	Graphika is a social media analytics platform that specializes in monitoring online networks as well as content to provide insights on the spread of information.
Hale, Geoff	Senior CISA official
Jira	Jira Software system	Jira is a software system used to create tickets to assist with project management. The EIP used JIRA tickets to track and share misinformation reports with large social media companies, the government, and other parties.
Krebs, Chris	Former CISA Director
Malinformation		CISA defines malinformation as “based on fact, but used out of context to mislead, harm, or manipulate.”
MDM		Misinformation, Disinformation, and Malinformation

MDM Subcommittee	CISA Cybersecurity Advisory Committee's (CSAC) Subcommittee on "Protecting Critical Infrastructure from Misinformation & Disinformation"	The MDM Subcommittee, which has since disbanded, played an advisory role, and consisted of Big Tech executives, former federal government officials, and academic misinformation "experts." The MDM Subcommittee meetings featured CISA participants.
MDM Team (CISA)	CISA's Mis-, Dis, and Malinformation Team (formerly CISA's Countering Foreign Influence Task Force (CFITF))	In January 2021, CISA transitioned its Countering Foreign Influence Task Force to promote more flexibility to focus on general MDM, or so-called "Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation." According to CISA's website in February 2023, the MDM team was "charged with building national resilience to MDM and foreign influence activities." CISA publicly posted that "[f]oreign and domestic threat actors use MDM campaigns to cause chaos, confusion, and division."
Misinformation		CISA defines misinformation as "false, but not created or shared with the intention of causing harm."
MS-ISAC	Multi-State Information Sharing & Analysis Center	MS-ISAC is a joint-CISA supported collaboration with the Center for Internet Security (CIS) designed to serve as the central cybersecurity resource for the nation's state, local, territorial, and tribal (SLTT) governments.
Scully, Brian	Former Head of CISA's CFITF (later MDM team)
SIO	Stanford Internet Observatory	SIO is a cross-disciplinary laboratory, within Stanford University's Cyber Policy Center, for the study of abuse in information technologies, with a focus on the misuse of social media.
Stamos, Alex	SIO Director; former Chief Security Officer at Facebook

I. CISA’S ROLE IN THE CREATION OF THE EIP

The Election Integrity Partnership (EIP) was established in July 2020, and consisted of the nation’s self-described “leading institutions focused on understanding misinformation and disinformation in the social media landscape: the Stanford Internet Observatory, the University of Washington’s Center for an Informed Public (CIP), Graphika, and the Atlantic Council’s Digital Forensic Research Lab.”¹⁶ According to the EIP’s postmortem report about its censorship activities during the 2020 election cycle, the EIP’s goals included “[i]dentify[ing] misinformation before it goes viral,” and “flag[g]ing policy violations to [social media] platforms.”¹⁷

Led by Stanford, the EIP was devised and founded in close coordination with CISA, a little-known agency within the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), created less than two years earlier.¹⁸ Stanford and others, in collaboration with the federal government, established the EIP for the express purpose of violating Americans’ civil liberties: because no federal agency “has a focus on, or authority regarding, election misinformation originating from domestic sources within the United States,” there is “a critical gap for non-governmental entities to fill.”¹⁹ CISA and Stanford created the EIP to bridge this “critical gap”—an unconstitutional workaround for unconstitutional censorship.

A. CISA’s Precursor Censorship Efforts

The creation of EIP did not occur in a vacuum. Before EIP’s origination in the summer of 2020, CISA was directly or indirectly involved with the operation or consideration of at least three other “misinformation” reporting channels: (1) switchboarding; (2) the Elections Infrastructure Information Sharing and Analysis Center (EI-ISAC); and (3) a “Misinformation Reporting Portal” to be operated by the Center for Internet Security (CIS), a non-profit funded in part by CISA.²⁰

The constitutional defects with these reporting channels notwithstanding, CISA and “disinformation” experts recognized that they needed another avenue to monitor and remove Americans’ speech in the lead-up to the 2020 election. The EIP served that role, functioning in the words of the head of EIP (and former Chief Security Office at Facebook) Alex Stamos as the “one-stop shop for local election officials, DHS, and voter protection organizations” to work directly with social media platforms to censor the speech of American political candidates and commentators.²¹

1. Switchboarding, Disclaimers, and the Threat of Government Retaliation

“Switchboarding” describes the federal government’s practice of referring requests for the removal of content on social media from state and local election officials to the relevant platforms.²² CISA personnel involved in the agency’s switchboarding operation have described it as a “resource intensive” process.²³ Documents and information obtained by the Committee and the Select Subcommittee reveal that CISA knew serious legal and constitutional concerns were implicated by switchboarding (a process DHS Secretary Mayorkas testified that CISA no longer participates in).²⁴ CISA’s inclusion of a lengthy—and ever-changing—legal disclaimer betrays that internally the agency understood that there were serious legal questions with the federal government’s engaging in this type of direct communication with social media platforms regarding Americans’ posts and content. Though the disclaimer ostensibly served as a written commitment against government retaliation, ironically, CISA’s disclaimer actually spelled out how the federal government’s multi-agency approach to censorship provided a number of avenues for government retaliation if the companies did not comply.

DHS’s efforts to assist with the reporting of “mis- and disinformation” on social media platforms pre-date the creation of CISA. Former CISA Director Christopher Krebs testified in a transcribed interview with the Committee and Select Subcommittee that CISA’s predecessor, the National Protection and Programs Directorate (NPPD), engaged in switchboarding prior to the creation of CISA.²⁵ After CISA’s creation, switchboarding continued throughout the 2020 election cycle, but was discontinued for the 2022 election.²⁶

DHS—in litigation and before the Committee—has insisted that CISA’s “switchboarding” role was only that of an intermediary facilitating the sharing of reports, but not playing a substantive role in the “misinformation” reporting process. For example, DHS Secretary Mayorkas testified to the Committee in July 2023 that “what it amounted to was serving as an intermediary between election officials and social media companies; we were not making a judgment.”²⁷ Head of CISA’s Countering Foreign Influence Task Force, Brian Scully, testified during his deposition in Missouri v. Biden that switchboarding was “CISA’s role in forwarding reporting received from election officials . . . to social media platforms.”²⁸ But documents obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee reveal that “switchboarding”

Hello again, wanted to follow up on a few points just to be crystal clear -- could you please confirm that (a) the worker in question is not a pollworker, or (b) that he did not, in fact, destroy ballots (or at least that there is no evidence that he destroyed ballots).

Would appreciate this clarity tremendously. Thank you so much.

 The county has issued an official statement on the matter:

In addition to CISA substantively weighing in or commenting on the misinformation reports being shared with the social media companies, CISA could also attempt to influence the social media companies' decisions by deciding whether—and how many times—to follow up. Based on documents obtained by the Committee pursuant to a subpoena to CISA, starting in or around March 2020, used a disclaimer that stated that DHS and CISA were not the “originating source” of the misinformation report, but that the report “may also be shared with law enforcement or intelligence agencies.”³¹ The disclaimer continued: “In the event that CISA follows up to request further information, such a request is not a requirement or demand. Responding to this request is voluntary and CISA will not take any action, favorable or unfavorable, based on decisions about whether or not to respond to this follow-up request for information.”³²

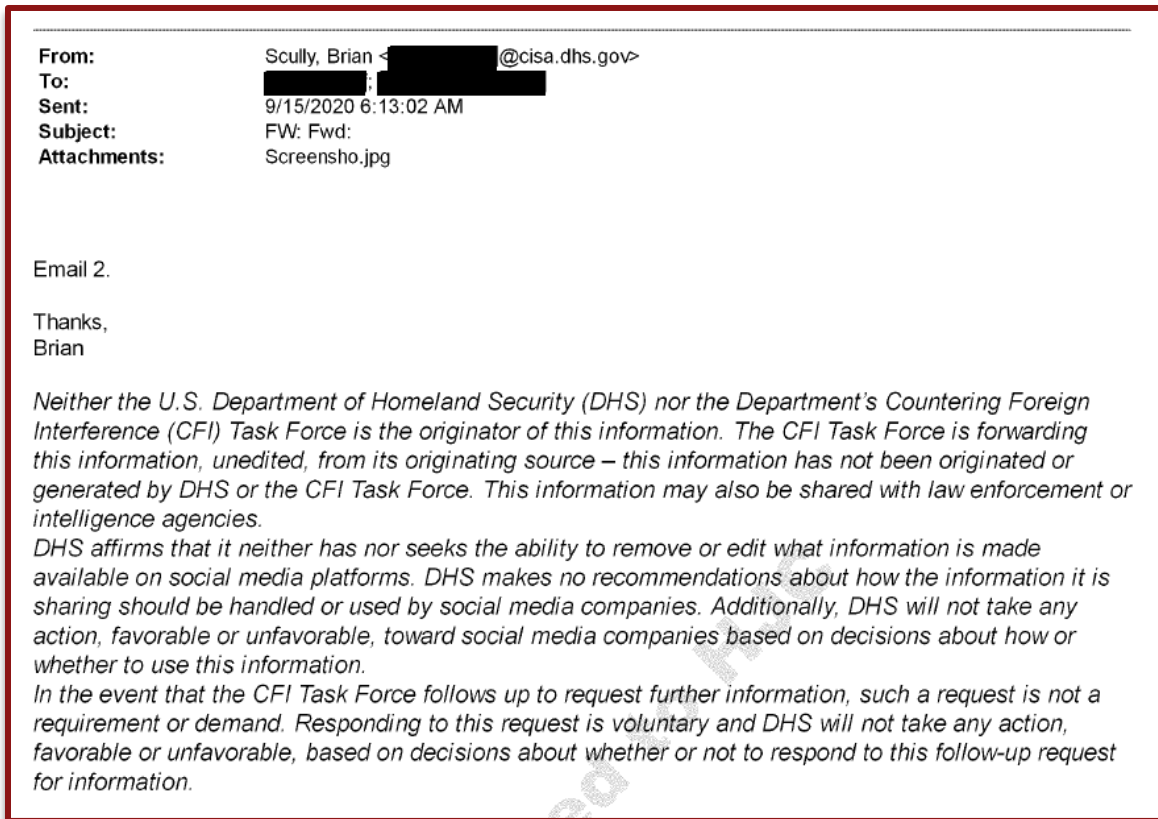

By September 2020, CISA’s switchboarding emails began to include an extra paragraph declaring that “DHS affirms that it neither has nor seeks the ability to remove what information is made available on social media platforms,” but it notably continued to leave open the possibility that the “information may also be shared with law enforcement or intelligence agencies.”³³ Put plainly, a lawyer for one of the social media companies would see that DHS and law enforcement agencies (such as the FBI) may know the company received the misinformation report, but only DHS committed to not take any unfavorable action against the company based on the company’s “decisions about how or whether to use this information”—i.e., the FBI or other law enforcement agencies may take action if the social media company did not censor appropriately.

The following month, CISA appeared to narrow the language of the disclaimer to state that CISA (rather than all of DHS) would not “take any action favorable or unfavorable, based on decisions about how or whether to use this information.”³⁴ The more limited disclaimer now stated only that: “CISA affirms that it neither has nor seeks the ability to remove or edit what information is made available on social media platforms. CISA makes no recommendations about how the information it is sharing should be handled or used by social media companies.”³⁵ CISA also removed an entire paragraph of its disclaimer referencing follow-up communications.³⁶ In the ongoing federal litigation Missouri v. Biden, the Biden Administration cited the inclusion of this disclaimer as evidence that CIS and the EIP were not “‘censorship partners’ with CISA” and that the disclaimer supported companies to apply their policies “independently.”³⁷ But as described above, rather than ensure that companies did not feel pressure, the revised disclaimer emphasized that CISA would involve law enforcement agencies and that CISA would not (or could not) commit that law enforcement agencies would not take an unfavorable action based on how the social media platforms decided to respond to the misinformation report.

Unsurprisingly, around this time, CISA began to follow-up with social media platforms about posts the agency had flagged, as seen in the example below.⁴⁰

Hi [REDACTED]
We will ask the team to review.

[REDACTED]

⁴⁰ Email from DHS official to Twitter employee (Oct. 19, 2020, 6:34 PM) (on file with the Comm.).

During his transcribed interview with the Committee, Matt Masterson, a former senior cybersecurity advisor at CISA, testified that there had been internal deliberations with CISA’s lawyers regarding the disclaimer and whether constitutional rights and civil liberties were implicated:

- Q. Do you recall any discussions during your tenure at CISA regarding if there are any constitutional implications if CISA’s work engaged with, we’ll say, misinformation, disinformation, malinformation, coming from domestic actors?
- A. I don’t recall a specific conversation around that. I recall that – obviously that CISA lawyers were involved, as I previously indicated, for instance, around the disclaimer conversation, including lawyers around constitutional and civil liberties. But I don’t know or recall the specifics of any given conversation around that.⁴¹

CISA’s inclusion of a disclaimer discussing whether CISA’s frequent emails should be interpreted as a request or whether the refusal to respond could result in “unfavorable” action is evidence that, at a minimum, the lawyers within DHS felt compelled to consider whether the practice of switchboarding was legally and constitutionally sound. But rather than end the practice (as CISA apparently did by the 2022 election), in the fall of 2020, CISA decided to push forward with its censorship efforts, appending a meaningless email disclaimer as a weak and transparent attempt to satisfy the glaring First Amendment concerns.

Crucially, CISA’s disclaimer included the ominous line: “This information may also be shared with law enforcement or intelligence agencies.”⁴² Whereas the disclaimer stated that “CISA will not take any action, favorable or unfavorable, toward social media companies based on decisions about how or whether to use this information,” the disclaimer makes no such guarantee about retaliation from the “law enforcement or intelligence agencies” with whom CISA may share the relevant social media content.⁴³

The threat of law-enforcement reprisal is amplified by the fact that the FBI would inform social media companies when CISA provided the FBI a “misinformation” report. The Committee and Select Subcommittee have obtained multiple documents that show that social media companies were aware that CISA was sharing information with federal intelligence and law enforcement agencies, including the FBI.⁴⁴

In other words, CISA’s disclaimer indicated to the social media companies that CISA, law enforcement, and intelligence agencies may receive the misinformation report, but the disclaimer stated only that CISA would not retaliate against the social media companies if they failed to censor the flagged content. CISA made no promises with respect to what the FBI or one of the intelligence agencies may do. And the social media companies were well aware that CISA was forwarding some subset of the reports to the FBI (if not other federal law enforcement or intelligence agencies).

In his interview before the Committee and Select Subcommittee, former Facebook executive Alex Stamos testified that involvement with a law enforcement agency such as the FBI was necessarily more worrisome for companies than CISA, explaining that “you can’t have a casual chat with an FBI agent when you’re an executive at a company. It’s not safe. You end up with a $3,000-an-hour row of people sitting next to you.”⁴⁵ Mr. Stamos continued:

Q. And what do you mean you can’t have a casual conversation with the FBI? Why is that?

A. I think defense attorneys would tell you that FBI agents are always looking out – you might feel like you’re having a friendly conversation with them, but you never know if you’re actually the target. And I think there has been a number of situations which companies have tried to engage the FBI because they were victims of, say, a cybercrime, and then they end up getting punished or their executives getting punished And so, you know, dealing with a law enforcement agency that has coercive powers is just a risky thing to do if you’re part of some big organization and some other – there might be some investigation involving the organization that you don’t even know about.

Q. That perspective you just shared with respect to the FBI, do you think it was widely shared by the executives at Facebook when you were at the company?

A. Certainly, the policy of the company was that an executive could not talk to the FBI without attorneys present

Q. . . . Even if the government represents that the interests are aligned, it could be the case that, later on, the government changes its mind. Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And this fact is well known by tech executives?

⁴⁵ House Judiciary Committee’s Transcribed Interview of Alex Stamos (June 23, 2023), at 188 (on file with the Comm.).

- A. Yes. And I think all executives of all public companies understand that *there's lots of parts of the government that can punish you for activity that you thought was appropriate.*⁴⁶

So why did CISA engage in this “resource intensive” process of switchboarding, go through the trouble of writing and rewriting a disclaimer in hopes of sidestepping serious constitutional concerns, and directly involve federal law enforcement and intelligence agencies? Because CISA wanted flagged content removed, and switchboarding provided an effective means to do so. During his deposition in Missouri v. Biden, senior CISA official Brian Scully admitted that CISA did, in fact, have an understanding that its reporting would lead to removal by the platforms.⁴⁷

2. EI-ISAC

The Center for Internet Security (CIS) is a non-profit organization based in New York, which was established “in partnership with the U.S. Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA).”⁴⁸ CIS operates the Elections Infrastructure Information Sharing and Analysis Center (EI-ISAC), which is funded alongside the Multi-State Information Sharing and Analysis Center (MS-ISAC) to the tune of $27 million for FY 2024 for the two ISACs.⁴⁹ The EI-ISAC is an information-sharing channel used by state and local election officials to report alleged “mis- and disinformation” to social media platforms.⁵⁰ During the 2018 midterm election cycle, all fifty states were participating in the EI-ISAC.⁵¹ Moreover, according to witness testimony to the Committee and Select Subcommittee, EI-ISAC employees are considered CIS employees.⁵²

According to the EIP’s report, in the 2020 election cycle, “the EI-ISAC served as a singular conduit for election officials to report false or misleading information to platforms.”⁵³ The report also explained EI-ISAC’s function in relation to CIS: “By serving as a one-stop reporting interface, the EI-ISAC allowed election officials to focus on detecting and countering election misinformation while CIS and its partners reported content to the proper social media platforms.”⁵⁴ And the report described CISA’s role, noting that “the Countering Foreign Influence Task Force (CFITF), a subcomponent of CISA, aided in the reporting process and in implementing resilience efforts to counter election misinformation.”⁵⁵ The misinformation reports submitted to the EI-ISAC in the lead-up to the 2020 election were “also routed to the EIP ticketing system.”⁵⁶

Like switchboarding, the EI-ISAC operated as an intermediary between state and local election officials and the social media platforms, offering a centralized reporting mechanism in an effort to remove content from social media.⁵⁷ For example, on November 2, 2020, a state election official submitted a report of alleged misinformation to the EI-ISAC, which, in turn, forwarded the report to the relevant platform.⁵⁸ According to the EI-ISAC’s response to the state official, the EI-ISAC also shared the report with both CISA and the EIP.⁵⁹

3. Misinformation Reporting Portal

Even with switchboarding and the EI-ISAC, CISA and CIS had discussions internally and with social media companies throughout the first half of 2020 on whether to create a “misinformation reporting portal.” Pursuant to multiple subpoenas, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have obtained documents revealing CISA’s and CIS’s efforts to pursue a third avenue of “misinformation reporting.”

As early as January 2020, CISA officials were in discussions with CIS to establish a “misinformation reporting portal.”⁶⁰ On January 3, Aaron Wilson, the Senior Director of Election Security at CIS, sent an email to senior CISA officials Matt Masterson and Brian Scully, among others, writing: “I have spoken to both of you separately about a concept we are developing to help election officials report mis/disinformation during the 2020 elections. You both . . . indicated our proposal may be helpful.”⁶¹ Mr. Wilson indicated that his goal was “to demonstrate the basic capabilities [of the misinformation reporting portal] by the end of this month.”⁶²

CIS and CISA’s joint efforts were even briefed to law enforcement in January 2020 with CIS reaching out to the FBI, stating that “CIS is working with DHS on a misinformation reporting portal. The intent is to build a web portal to manage the reporting of election infrastructure misinformation from local and state election officials to the social media platforms. We are working with our partners at the National Association of Secretaries of States (NASS), National Association of State Election Directors (NASED), and DHS to vet this idea. Subject: Misinformation Reporting Portal FBI Briefing

JC,

It was great to meet you last week. As I mentioned, CIS is working with DHS on a misinformation reporting portal. The intent is to build a web portal to manage the reporting of election infrastructure misinformation from local and state election officials to the social media platforms. We are working with our partners at the National Association of Secretaries of States (NASS), National Association of State Election Directors (NASED), and DHS to vet this idea. We are currently building a prototype and will have something to show by the first week of February.

Given the FBI’s role, I’d like to bring you up to speed on our efforts and get your feedback on this effort, and hopefully your engagement. Our primary goals are to:

- Provide election officials a single place/POC to report misinformation
- Ease the burden on election officials when they go to report the misinformation
- Collect the information necessary for the FBI, DHS, and social media platforms to do their jobs
- Expedite and enhance the process by which social media companies are made aware of the misinformation
- Provide visibility about what election officials are reporting to: other election officials, DHS, NASS, NASED, FBI, etc.
- Facilitate information sharing between election officials about what they are seeing, what to look out for, etc.
- Provide meaningful feedback to election officials on the status of their misinformation reports

Are you available for a call this week to discuss more?

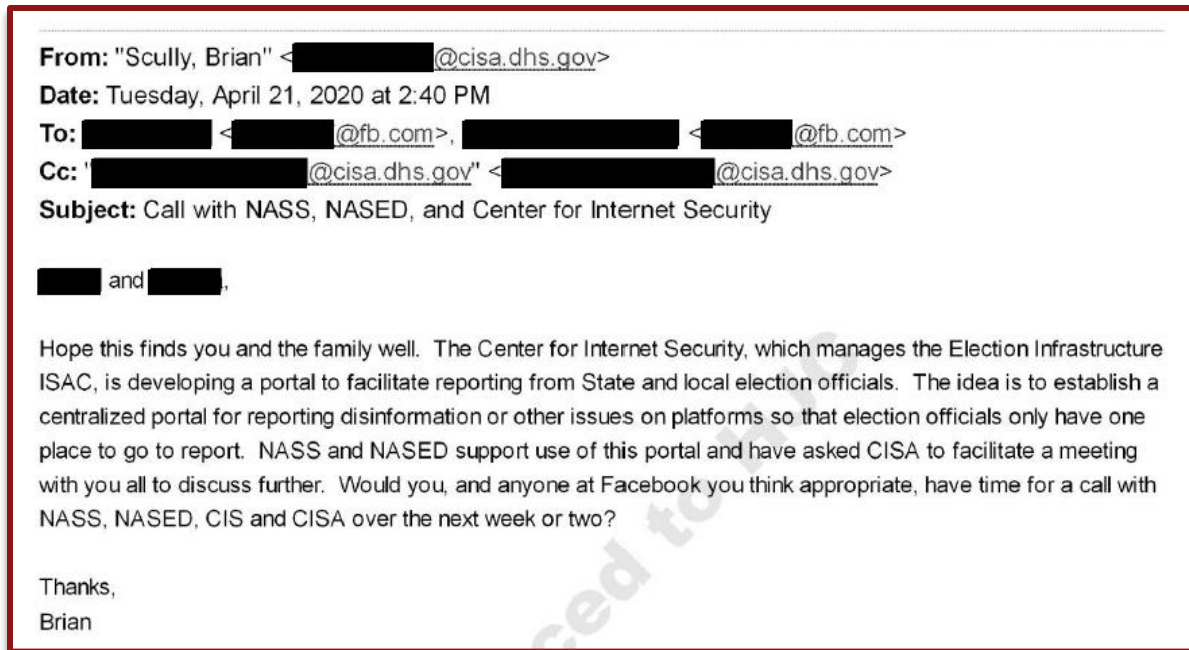

Thanks,

Aaron

CISA assumed an active role in promoting CIS’s proposal for a misinformation reporting portal, facilitating meetings between the relevant third-party non-profits and social media platforms. On April 21, 2020, for example, Brian Scully sent an email to two Facebook employees, in which Scully wrote: “The idea is to establish a centralized portal for reporting disinformation or other issues on platforms so that election officials only have one place to go to report.”⁶⁴

But planning for a CIS-CISA misinformation reporting portal had hit a roadblock by May 2020. According to the internal notes of a call between Facebook employees and DHS personnel regarding a “Misinformation Reporting Portal,” “DHS cannot openly endorse the portal, but has behind-the-scenes signaled that [the National Association of Secretaries of State]/[the National Association of State Election Directors] has told them it would be easier for many states to have ‘one reporting channel’ and CISA and its ISAC would like to have incoming the same time that the platforms do.”⁶⁵ Less than two months later, the EIP would be established to serve that very purpose.

 Subject: CIS & NASS/NA SED & DHS Call

Team,

Wanted to share a read-out from our call late Friday with DHS, NASS & NASED. Great job by [REDACTED] & [REDACTED]

No action for us now, however, we will reconvene after a Beta test of their proposed reporting portal in the next few weeks.

Best,
 [REDACTED]

TL;DR: On May 29, U.S. Public Policy ([REDACTED]), P&G Outreach ([REDACTED]), and Security Policy ([REDACTED]) met with DHS, the Center for Internet Security, and NASS/NA SED about a "Misinformation Reporting Portal" that CIS is developing for state and local-level elections officials to report mis/disinformation and IO-type activity concerning election interference to the platforms, with a focus on Facebook, Twitter, and Google. Following a beta test CIS will do in Florida, Colorado, North Carolina, and Rhode Island in early June, they would like to do a demo for Facebook. Internally, Facebook would prefer our independent reporting channel which makes us an industry leader, and was reported as successful by all parties on this call and is monitored 24/7, but we are aware that if the majority group moves towards a centralized channel, there are PR challenges for not participating.

o Highlights:

- DHS cannot openly endorse the portal but has behind-the-scenes signaled that NASS/NA SED has told them it would be easier for many states to have "one reporting channel" and CISA and its ISAC would like to have incoming the same time that the platforms do.
- CIS is in discussions with Twitter to gauge their interest, and it was unclear what engagement has been with Google
- CIS is talking with Graphika, which has said it is interested in nationwide trends that the reporting portal may reveal.
- CIS is talking with the Belfer Center, which is developing an "IO Playbook & Training" that may be released in the coming months before November 2020.
- NASS/NA SED is supportive, but not all the states are onboard – CIS said they would like to launch with platforms supportive and engaged and bring states incrementally along.
- CIS would like some sort of API with Facebook – such a set up may be impossible, and CrowdTangle, if this progresses, may be the way to go.

3. To what extent can the U.S. government, other platforms, and others view back and forth with platforms and also cross-platform content or escalations, and how will this be controlled? Are you open to a version of the portal that forwards intake to a platform email, with further back and forth being handled just between the platform and the reporter (but the initial report is available to other states/platforms/portal users).
4. How will portal access be determined?
5. What is the limit on the number of people and organizations who will have access to the portal?
6. What is the data retention period for the portal?
7. Is it the expectation that the portal will be a short-term or long-term project?
8. How will the portal sort information so that it is of importance and properly sorted by various terms of service depending on the platform, so that recipients of the information will be able to triage it quickly and deconflict?
9. What quality control measures will be in place to ensure that the escalations sent to the portal are not "noise" and will be properly described and not duplicative, and also not repeats of the same already-escalated content, to avoid burdening resource, operational, and engineering bandwidth during a very high-stakes election cycle where timely response and action will be critical?
10. Is the expectation that the portal will replace the dedicated 1:1 reporting channels maintained by the platforms, either in the short or long terms?
11. How will the portal advise whether or not a particular escalation has already been reported to the platforms and avoid sending an alert when such an escalation has already been made?
12. To what extent can the portal be used to surface trends and patterns across platforms that can be shared, if of value, while maintaining direct platform-level communication from the states?
13. Which states are not yet onboarded to the portal and what is the plan for those states?
14. How will the portal be made user-friendly for the wide range of users?
15. Who will train users on the portal, trouble shoot, and provide tech support for the portal?
16. What will turn around time, both before the election, and on election day, for portal support and login issues?
17. How long does it take to approve access to the portal? Will there be expedited review closer to the election?
18. How will the portal enable platform-specific back and forth?
19. Will the portal provide links and not just screenshots to enable swift actioning of context?
20. How does the portal plan to surface behavior-type or pattern-type signals, as opposed to discrete pieces of content?
21. How will the portal prevent the same escalation being reported multiple times by multiple sources?
22. Aside from receiving "intake," and evaluating that, if possible, pursuant to platform-specific terms of service, what are other expectations of engagement from the platforms?

Twitter was initially briefed on the portal in May 2020, according to a meeting agenda produced to the Committee.⁶⁷ Per the agenda, “DHS appreciates the efforts of Twitter to help improve the ability of elections officials to submit mis/disinformation.”⁶⁸ The agenda was also indicative of CISA’s and the broader federal government’s effort to enhance the censorship operation through the portal: “Hopefully, this effort will streamline and make more efficient the process that has been improving over the past several years, but is still far from efficient and effective from the perspective of the elections community and Federal government.”⁶⁹ As indicated in the excerpt below, top CISA officials were scheduled to open this discussion on CIS’s potential misinformation reporting portal.⁷⁰

Misinformation Reporting Portal Discussion with Twitter

May 11, 2020, 2pm to 3pm ET

VTC Dial in information: TBD

Agenda and Candidate Discussion Points

Welcome – Brian Scully, CISA or Matt Masterson, CISA

- DHS appreciates the efforts of Twitter to help improve the ability of elections officials to submit mis/disinformation (e.g., the recent addition of an electronic submission capability). Also, we appreciate the opportunity to have a discussion with Twitter about the use of a Portal to improve the ability of elections officials to report mis/disinformation and to provide elections officials with visibility of similar reports and across platforms. Hopefully, this effort will streamline and make more efficient the process that has been improving over the past several years, but is still far from efficient and effective from the perspective of the elections community and Federal government.

Subject: Re: Reporting Portal with CIS, NASS, NASED and Twitter

All,

Below are some of the questions we hope to discuss during our next call. Looking forward to it!

[REDACTED]

These documents demonstrate that CISA and CIS caused the social media companies to seriously question and entertain the proposal for a misinformation reporting portal, although the portal was not ultimately established.

- 1.
2. Will there be some sort of agreement or terms of reference that will align all participants (reporters, government entities, companies) on objectives and usage of the portal?
- 3.
- 4.
5. Who will have access to view/analyze reported information? Will there be any restrictions in place to dictate what can be done with this information?
- 6.
8. Would other companies have access to see reports for other platforms? What if the report has content from multiple companies?
- 9.
- 10.
11. What is the criteria used to determine who has access to the portal? How many individuals do you anticipate having access?
- 12.
14. How long will reported information be retained?
- 15.
- 16.
17. How long will the portal be in operation? Just through the 2020 presidential election?
- 18.
- 19.

CONFIDENTIAL-NON-PUBLIC INFORMATION-PROVIDED TO CONGRESS IN RESPONSE TO SUBPOENA CIS-JUDCOM0000070_Confidential

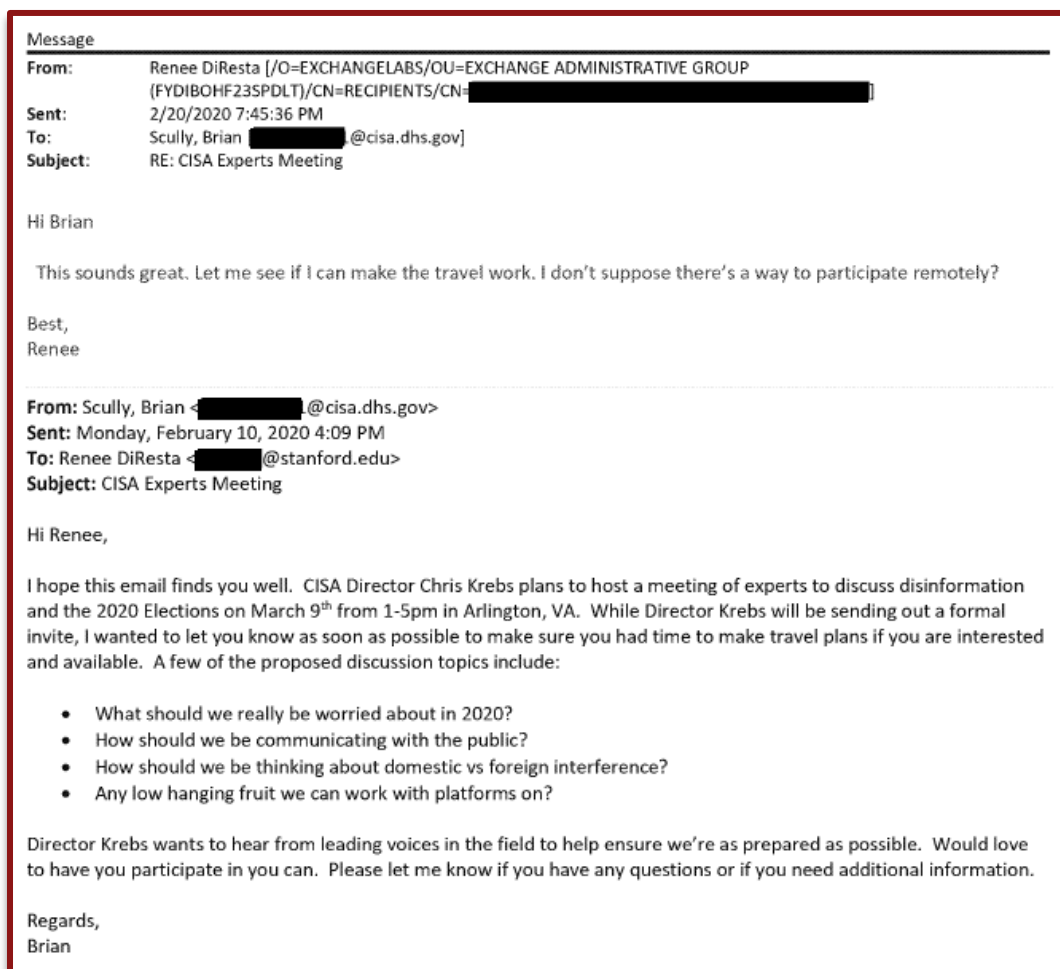

20. Companies' terms of service vary. How will individuals know what to report?
- 22.
23. Will there be any quality checks in place? Will there be a review of reports before they are submitted to companies? Will all reports be treated with equal priority?
- 24.
- 25.
26. Will partners continue to use Partner Support Portal (PSP) or will everyone migrate to this reporting tool?

4. CISA Did Not Distinguish Foreign and Domestic Actors on Social Media

Finally, in the midst of operating or considering up to three different avenues of “misinformation reporting” (switchboarding, EI-ISAC, and the “misinformation reporting portal”), by early 2020, CISA had dropped any pretense of focusing only on foreign disinformation, openly discussing how to best monitor and censor the speech of Americans.

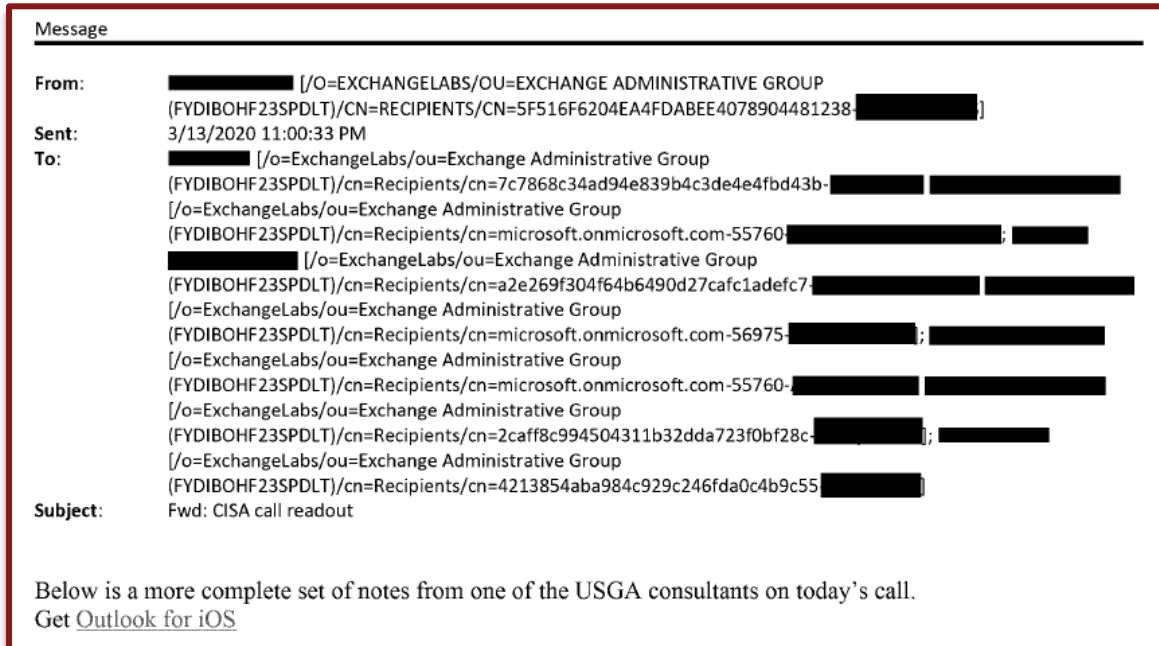

On February 20, 2020, Brian Scully, the head of CISA’s Countering Foreign Influence Task Force (CFITF), sent an email to the SIO’s Renée DiResta, inviting her to a meeting hosted by CISA Director Krebs, “to discuss disinformation and the 2020 Elections.”⁷² Scully provided a list of agenda items in the email, including: “How should we be thinking about domestic vs foreign interference?” and “Any low hanging fruit we can work with platforms on?”⁷³

The COVID-19 pandemic reinforced CISA’s desire to take a more active role in surveillance and censorship on social media. On March 13, 2020, Director Krebs participated in a “broad stakeholder conference call to provide an update regarding current activities related to” COVID-19.⁷⁴

According to internal Microsoft notes from the call obtained by the Committee pursuant to a subpoena to Microsoft, Krebs identified “Monitoring disinformation” as one of four “core lines of effort,” asking “how quickly can we work with social media organizations, as well as state and local governments to clarify and combat misinformation.”⁷⁵

⁷⁴ Email from Microsoft employee to Microsoft employees (Mar. 13, 2020, 11:00 PM) (on file with the Comm.).

In his testimony before the Committee, Krebs stated unequivocally on multiple occasions that CISA did not treat content on social media differently based on its domestic or foreign origin.⁷⁶ At one point, Krebs even described the name of CISA’s Countering Foreign Influence Task Force as “a misnomer.”⁷⁷ Krebs further testified:

- Q. Was there an effort during this time to try to determine if the source was domestic or foreign?
- A. So, we certainly would look to the intelligence community if they made a determination on foreign threat actor intelligence. But, again, as these things pop up, things like “hammer and scorecard,” it doesn’t necessarily matter whether it’s foreign or domestic. Again, our authorities are rooted in the Homeland Security Act, which enables us to act on domestic or foreign threats. And, again, they don’t come waving a flag⁷⁸

Director Krebs reiterated CISA’s approach of treating foreign and domestic activity on social media in the same way in the context of CISA’s “Rumor Control” initiative.⁷⁹ For example, he testified:

- Q. When did these discussions regarding domestic influence first start?
- A. I don’t recall.
- Q. Okay. Were they ongoing by the beginning of 2020?
- A. Again, I don’t recall the moment in time or the periods of time within which we were thinking about the distinction between domestic and foreign interference. Again, I think this gets to, as we ultimately saw with rumor control, narratives are narratives, and we’re providing explanation on how the things actually work. So, again, it would not matter if it was foreign or domestic for the context, again, of rumor control.⁸⁰

⁷⁹ One telling exchange between Mr. Krebs’s counsel and counsel for the Committee regarded whether any authorities limit CISA’s rights to combat so-called “misinformation.” Mr. Krebs’s counsel appeared to dismiss what role, if any, the First Amendment played with respect to restricting CISA’s ability to monitor and censor speech, demanding that the Committee cite a legal authority “other than the First Amendment” to justify its line of questioning. House Judiciary Committee’s Transcribed Interview of Chris Krebs (Oct. 11, 2023), at 162 (on file with the Comm.).

Up to and through the 2020 election, CISA considered its authority as extending to domestic speech, not just foreign disinformation.⁸¹

In early 2021, CISA dropped the “misnomer” of the “Countering Foreign Influence Task Force” and became the “Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation Team.”⁸² In spring 2023—following the Missouri v. Biden lawsuit, the Twitter Files reporting, and the Committee’s investigation—CISA removed all references on its website that its MDM team was censoring domestic speech too.⁸³

B. Creation of the EIP

Unable to proceed with its original plan, CISA enlisted Stanford to launder its censorship operation. On July 8, 2020, Stanford Internet Observatory (SIO) Director Alex Stamos sent an email to Dr. Kate Starbird at the University of Washington’s Center for an Informed Public (CIP), writing: “We are working on some election monitoring ideas with CISA and I would love your informal feedback before we go too far down this road . . . [T]hings that should have been assembled a year ago are coming together quickly this week.”⁸⁴

The following day, on July 9, 2020, representatives from the SIO had a “[m]eeting with CISA to present [the] EIP concept.”⁸⁵ Among those in attendance were Brian Scully, the future head of CISA’s Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation (MDM) team, Geoff Hale, the director of CISA’s Election Security Initiative, and Matt Masterson, then-Senior Cybersecurity Advisor at CISA.⁸⁶

Subject: CISA <> Stanford Internet Observatory, Election Misinformation Project Introduction

Location: Microsoft Teams Meeting

Start: 7/9/2020 4:00:00 PM

End: 7/9/2020 5:00:00 PM

Show Time As: Tentative

Good Afternoon All,

Thank you for taking the time to meet tomorrow for an introductory conversation on the Election Misinformation Project: a potential collaboration between ESI/CFI and the Stanford Internet Observatory. As we have discussed, this project aims to increase CFI’s real-time misinformation response capabilities by connecting SLTT and other CFI stakeholders to the third party misinformation research community.

The main topics we hope to cover this meeting are as follows:

- Overview of the Election Misinformation Project (SLIDES)
- What are SIO’s core capabilities in this space?
- How would CISA and SIO’s misinformation response capabilities be augmented from such a partnership?
- Overview of open questions, concrete next steps.

According to the email invitation for the meeting, the “Election Misinformation Project,” which would later be rebranded as the more euphemistic “Election Integrity Partnership,” “aim[ed] to increase . . . real-time misinformation response capabilities.” One of the agenda items was a discussion of how “CISA and SIO’s misinformation response capabilities [would] be augmented from such a partnership.”⁸⁷

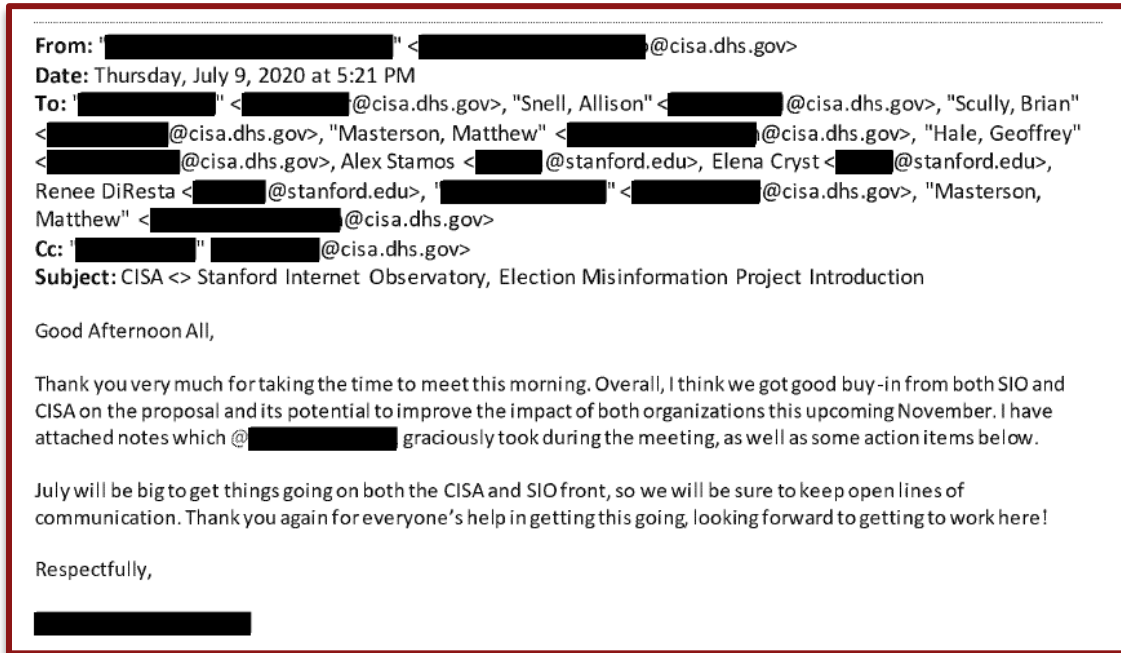

An early workflow diagram of the then-named “Election Disinformation Partnership” shows that from the beginning Stanford and CISA envisioned the partnership connecting federal agencies with social media platforms.⁸⁸

A subsequent summary of the July 9 kick-off meeting from a CISA employee stated that “I think we got good buy-in from both SIO and CISA on the proposal and its potential to improve the impact of both organizations this upcoming November July will be big to get things going on both the CISA and SIO front, so we will be sure to keep open lines of communication.”⁸⁹

The summary also listed a number of action items for CISA and SIO, including “discussions [about] how to best integrate reporting into CISA/[Countering Foreign Influence]’s ops center and send tips back to SIO.”⁹⁰ Among the due-outs was a consultation with CISA’s Office of Chief Counsel (OCC), as seen in the action item “Legal: get an initial proposal for OCC.”⁹¹

Stamos also admitted during the interview that he had likely consulted with then-CISA Director Christopher Krebs during the summer of 2020 about the EIP. He testified:

Q. Did you consult with Chris Krebs in the summer of 2020?

A. I probably did, yes.⁹⁵

Documents produced to the Committee and Select Subcommittee likewise cast doubt on the notion that a handful of students were responsible for the EIP’s conception.⁹⁶ Regardless of what role, if any, students played in the “idea” of EIP, these documents show the direct role that high-ranking CISA, CIS, and SIO personnel played in forming an operation with nearly 100 people directly involved that worked with over a dozen partners to flag thousands of posts and narratives via hundreds of “misinformation” reports.⁹⁷

Finally, even the founding four partners of the EIP, such as the Atlantic Council’s DFRLab, understood in the summer of 2020 that the EIP was created at CISA’s request. As revealed in an internal Atlantic Council email obtained by the Committee pursuant to a subpoena, Graham Brookie, one of the central figures involved in the EIP, understood in July of 2020 that the EIP was “set up . . . at the request of DHS/CISA.”⁹⁸

And understood. Given the work DFRLab does on geopolitics, technology, and election interference with GEC, we were just caught off guard because they asked us about it.

I am not as concerned on the money or the project, but rather consolidating our approach to GEC as we go into the season for expanded renewals on two separate, multi-year agreements in the six figure range that cover a significant amount of our work on elections and all of our work in South Africa and Latin America.

On the DHS app, fake news, and any other US election-related work, it would be great to sync-up, as well. I know the Council has a number of efforts on broad policy issues around the elections, but we just set up an election integrity partnership at the request of DHS/CISA and are in weekly comms to debrief on disinfo, IO, etc..

Best,
 Graham

Internal Atlantic Council documents, obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee pursuant to a subpoena to the Atlantic Council, also reveal that while students were involved in the EIP, the critical work, including “attaching more contextual information,” preparing blog posts, and making recommendations to the social media platforms, was handled by the disinformation professionals.⁹⁹

COORDINATION ON US DOMESTIC PRIORITIES

Hi to both –

The struggle here is that Emerson is managing efforts and Andy is managing staff and outputs. The only way to be successful is to make sure that the three of us are explicitly on the same page about how we are allocating staff to efforts.

The below is intended to do that – and I will be adding Emerson to the DCHQ WhatsApp chain, where we will coordinate in general, as soon as we're on the same page as below. Our first obligation is always to our staff and not setting them up for failure. Our second obligation is to our core work, which every single one of us is managing key elements of. Thus the burden falls on the three of us to coordinate both.

Please reply in red or blue to the below. I also didn't have explicit names in the “staffing” section of each, so please fill out.

Thanks,
Graham

Election Integrity Partnership

Key questions: What is the schedule of shifts, noting that we just need to assign people to them? EIP, the voluntary shift system is a potential challenge because it requires a person to spend X amount of hours monitoring things, which either results in no outputs being produced, or a sudden need to complete an output that the person may or may not be suited to complete, especially if it's an international member of the team with limited knowledge of US politics, geography, culture, etc.

In scenarios where something potentially important surfaces within EIP, how do we go about prioritizing it? For example, when is it simply a matter of “this is a good story so please get me a draft in 72 hours” vs “all hands on deck, this is like a major takedown?” In either case, the three of us need to be locked up in order to not undermine our whole business operation through editorial capacity, who gets assigned, scheduling, etc.

One not ideal scenario is a situation where Jean or Ayush volunteer for a few hours, end up finding something important, and then having not having all three of our awareness and approval, which could lead to significant members of staff being taken away from their core responsibilities for extended periods of days/week. In other words, a shift is just the tip of the iceberg, commitment-wise.

Another question is what constitutes a contribution to EIP. While the focus has been on the partnership and the process (which makes sense) we're part of a team reviewing leads and deciding when to act on them. But we also continue to cover election-related stories that will originate from our original research, rather than the college students volunteering at EIP, especially now that Jared is coming on board and while looking into more conspiracy related content. Can we consider those contributions? I imagine for some researchers there's more incentive to contribute when they're able to generate research leads themselves rather than being responsive to tips, though I understand responding to tips is still core to the partnership.

Important to note: not college kids surfacing EIP leads. Krebs CISA is texting Stamos with some regularity. A few tickets have been flagged by the platforms. Starbird's UW team is surfacing a lot of stuff using advanced soc media listening methods. College kids (T-1) just doing the first round of analysis.

The job of DFRLab is to be T-2, doing a deep dive into tickets, attaching more contextual information, and writing up a twitter thread/blog post if that's the recommendation of the researcher (and the T-3 shift manager approves).

Analysts can step away and write a blog post on-shift. That's what Alyssa did last week.

C. The EIP’s Purpose: Using Proxies to Circumvent the First Amendment

By its own admission, the EIP was expressly created “in consultation with CISA”¹⁰⁰ to serve an unconstitutional purpose, as a mechanism for flaunting legal restrictions on illicit government activity. As stated in the EIP’s post-election report:

Yet, no government agency in the United States has the explicit mandate to monitor and correct election mis- and disinformation. This is especially true for election disinformation that originates from within the United States, which would likely be excluded from law enforcement action under the First Amendment and not appropriate for study by intelligence agencies restricted from operating inside the United States. As a result, during the 2020 election, local and state election officials, who had a strong partner on election-system and overall cybersecurity efforts in CISA, were without a clearinghouse for assessing mis- and disinformation targeting their voting operations . . . in consultation with CISA and other stakeholders, a coalition was assembled with like-minded partner institutions.¹⁰¹

In her notes for a fall 2021 presentation at the annual CISA Summit, Renée DiResta, the Research Manager at the SIO, wrote, as part of her presentation script, that the “gap” the EIP was intended to fill “had several components,” one of which was “[u]nclear legal authorities including very real 1st amendment questions.”¹⁰²

¹⁰² “CISA keynote.pptx” attach. to email from Renée DiResta to Kenneth Bradley and Amanda Glenn (Oct. 6, 2021, 3:58 PM) (on file with the Comm.); see also email from Renée DiResta to Kenneth Bradley and Amanda Glenn (Oct. 6, 2021, 3:58 PM) (on file with the Comm.) (DiResta writes, “I was just writing out the full script into the speaker notes in case the teleprompter was the best bet.”).

Our team and CISA's team have done some pioneering work in partnership thinking about how to respond to mis- and disinformation in areas in which it can have significant harm. One of those areas is elections, and I'm going to talk about some learnings from that work today.

In August 2020, students from the Stanford Internet Observatory (SIO) who were doing an internship with CISA identified a massive gap in the capability of federal, state and local governments to become aware of, analyze and rapidly respond to mis- and disinformation — both foreign and domestic — targeting the 2020 election.

That gap had several components:

- Federal gov't not prepared to identify and analyze election mis/disinfo:
 - There was no clear federal lead to coordinate this work. The IC, of course, is rightly limited to a foreign-focus. The FBI also has very specific designations and limitations, and CISA had created support but had no real capability.
 - Unclear legal authorities including very real 1st amendment questions
 - No expertise resident within federal gov't to analyze public content across platforms to identify trends & risks
- Lack of reporting mechanisms for state and local partners to surface activity that they saw building in their communities, to help them understand it.

The federal government was building relationships with platforms but there is a healthy distrust both ways for good reason

A trusted, nonpartisan partner(s) with expertise in the way that misinformation moved on public platforms, with analysts capable of understanding public conversations, and broad ability to explore publicly available data, was needed.

In order to circumvent these “very real 1st amendment questions,” organizations devoted to peddling the pseudoscience of “disinformation,” like the SIO and the University of Washington’s CIP, were selected to serve as part of a “central organization to support elections officials or CISA in identifying and responding to misinformation.”¹⁰³ According to an early EIP presentation, “Academic/Research Institutions” were chosen to spearhead this effort specifically because they were considered to be the “‘easiest’ politically.”¹⁰⁴

Current Landscape

Who could potentially solve this problem? Why aren't they?

	CISA	Platforms	Academic/Research Institutions
Currently Offers	EHSAC collaboration to provide real-time monitoring tools such as the SOC as well as the classified and unclassified Situation Rooms	Direct contact with secretaries of state as well as some cross-platform communication on this front	Institutions have created their own independent groups, little coordination
Strengths	Direct communication with every election official, central node in the election infra ecosystem	Highest monitoring capacity into what is happening in the social landscape, lots of $$$ and resources	'Easiest' politically, transparent, existing institutions (SIO). Agile, lightweight teams.
Weaknesses	All efforts focused on hardware, no misinformation workstream, govt entity, can't be seen as 'monitoring' the electorate, highly political.	Political, easily seen as partisan, don't have the direct communication/report with all election officials.	Don't have the direct communication or rapport with all election officials, need to raise $$$

It is “axiomatic,” the Supreme Court has explained, that the government “may not induce, encourage or promote private persons to accomplish what it is constitutionally forbidden to accomplish.”¹⁰⁵ CISA’s involvement in the creation of and collaboration with the EIP is the type of unconstitutional outsourcing against which the Supreme Court has long ruled.¹⁰⁶ Censorship-by-proxy is an especially nefarious form of state action, given that it is designed to evade detection, oversight efforts, and public records requests.¹⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁶ See also Missouri v. Biden, No. 23-30445, slip op. (5th Cir. Oct. 3, 2023), ECF No. 271. As the Committee’s investigation has revealed, CISA’s practice of exploiting third-party non-profits to sidestep legal prohibitions against censorship and surveillance also extended beyond the EIP. For example, on November 4, 2020, Robert Schaul, CISA’s Analysis and Resilience Policy Lead, sent an email to an individual affiliated with Alliance for Securing Democracy, a project of the German Marshall Fund and subject of several Twitter Files installments. In the email, Schaul writes that he is “checking in to see if you’re seeing anything of particular concern that might be worth elevating to Director Krebs. Are you still seeing #stopthesteal popping up? We’re still all hands on deck here.” Email from Robert Schaul to Alliance for Securing Democracy Employee (Nov. 4, 2020 12:02 PM) (on file with the Comm.). Notably, Schaul did not distinguish between organic, domestic discussion of #stopthesteal and foreign amplification of the hashtag.

II. CISA'S COMPLETE INTERTWINEMENT WITH THE EIP

“CISA and the EIP were completely intertwined.”

-Missouri v. Biden, Case No. 3:22-cv-1213,
ECF No. 293 (Injunction & Opinion) at 113 (July 4, 2023).

A. CISA's Collusion with the EIP

After CISA helped to create the EIP, the federal agency remained thoroughly intertwined with the EIP's operations in the months preceding the 2020 election. Throughout the fall of 2020, CISA officials coordinated extensively with the EIP and CIS.¹⁰⁸ Emails obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee pursuant to a subpoena show clearly that the EIP system was designed to operate as a unit, not as a separate entity from DHS. Moreover, while there were many students involved in the EIP (which had nearly 100 people working for it, not including external stakeholders such as the GEC and CISA), the EIP was led by well-known figures in the censorship-industrial complex, such as Stanford Internet Observatory (SIO) Director (and former Chief Security Officer at Facebook) Alex Stamos, SIO Research Manager Renee DiResta, and Vice President and Senior Director of the Atlantic Council's Digital Forensic Research Lab (DFRLab) Graham Brookie. The EIP also collaborated closely with senior CISA officials, including Brian Scully, the head of CISA's Countering Foreign Influence Task Force (CFITF).

Not only were there a number of university students involved with the EIP, at least four of the students were employed by CISA during the operation of EIP, using their government email accounts to communicate with CISA officials and other “external stakeholders” involved with the EIP. For example, by September 3, 2020, CISA had designated one of these DHS-SIO interns as the point of contact to be responsible for “taking point on a lot of the EIP <> CISA interface.”¹⁰⁹

Subject: RE: CISA <> CSI Disinfo Reporting follow up

Hello Aaron:

Sorry for the delay here – for some reason, the @cisecurity alias keeps getting routed to my 'Other' folder, so I was about to follow up on this myself. I'll try and chat with our techdesk today about this.

On the EIP side, if you could please add tips@eipartnership.net, this alias will auto create Jira tickets for any incoming reports for visibility to the whole EIP team. I've also added [REDACTED] to this thread, [REDACTED]@cisa.dhs.gov, who will be taking point on a lot of the EIP <> CISA interface here, so he should also be added. I will let Brian and Matt note whether they also would like to be on the backend of this alias.

One note on the EIP side: we just finished getting our Jira system online to be ready for intake. For security purposes, the tips@eipartnership.net alias has a strict whitelist of emails which will be allowed through: any email not specifically designated into an organization will be silently dropped. I've created a new CIS organization on our system and added misinformation@cisecurity.org to it, as well as [REDACTED]'s CISA email. Any reports forwarded from these email addresses will make it into our system. However, if misinformation@cisecurity.org auto forwards anything in such a way that it is sent from a different alias (ex: bob@washington.gov), this will be dropped in our system.

There are ways around this, but I just wanted to flag this upfront and get a sense from you how this might be working on your end? I have a free calendar all day tomorrow basically, and could hop on a call with our tech lead to figure out the best way of doing this.

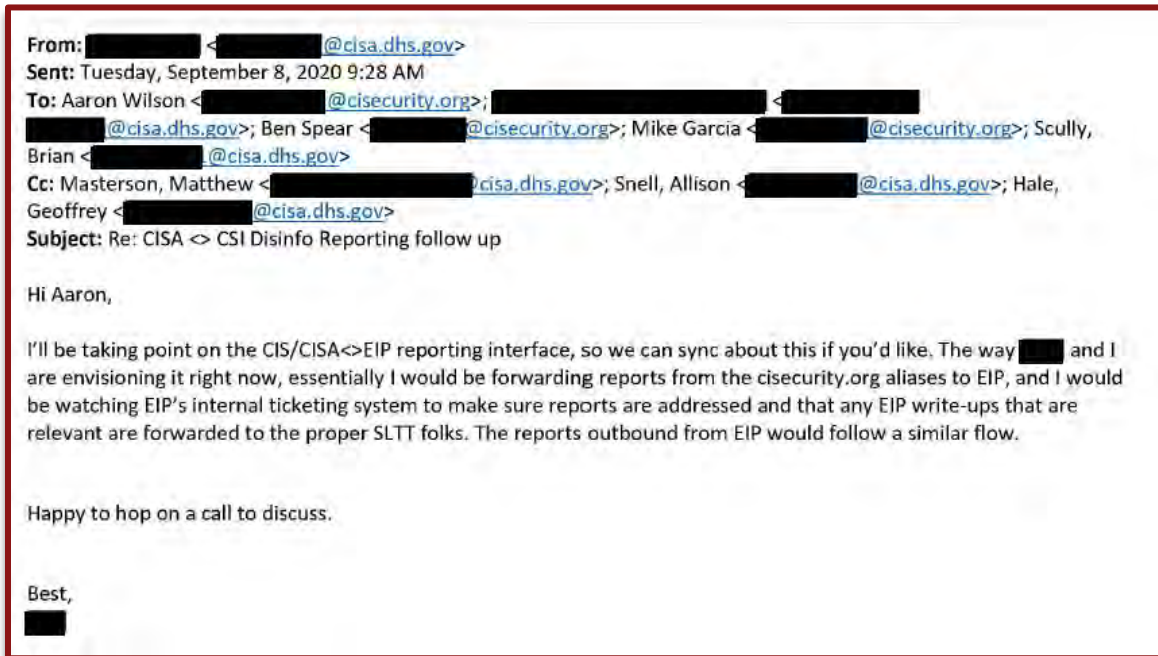

Best,

[REDACTED]

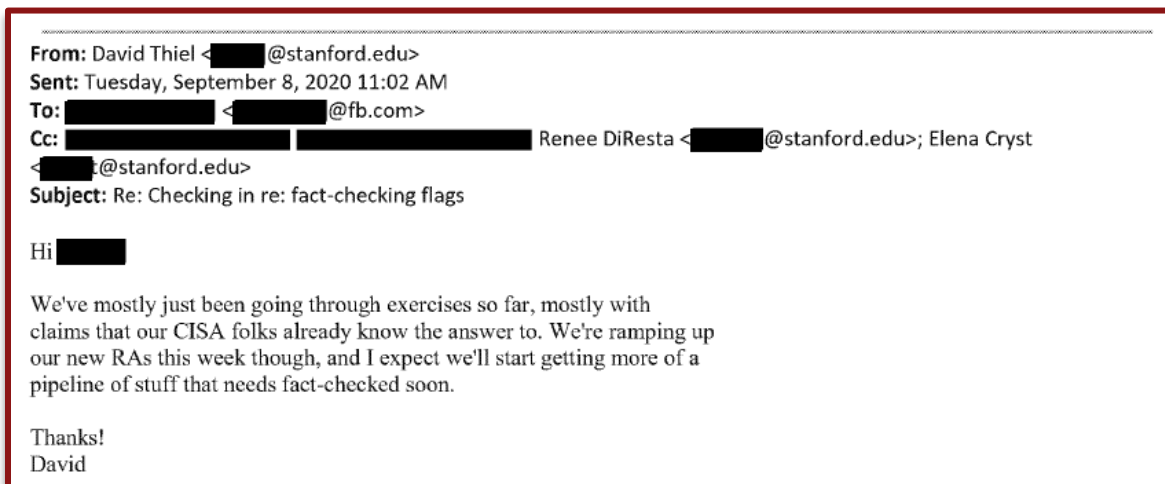

This Stanford student, working as a DHS intern, would be “inside the EIP network,” with the responsibility of “forwarding reports from the cisecurity.org aliases to EIP,” and “watching EIP’s internal ticketing system to make sure reports are addressed and that any EIP write-ups that are relevant are forwarded to the proper SLTT [state, local, tribal, and territorial] folks.”¹¹⁰

¹¹⁰ Email from CISA official to Aaron Wilson, Ben Spear, Mike Garcia, and Brian Scully (Sept. 8, 2020, 9:28 AM) (on file with the Comm.).

In other words, DHS had a point of contact with direct access to the EIP’s internal ticketing system who could (and did) share this information with the agency.¹¹¹

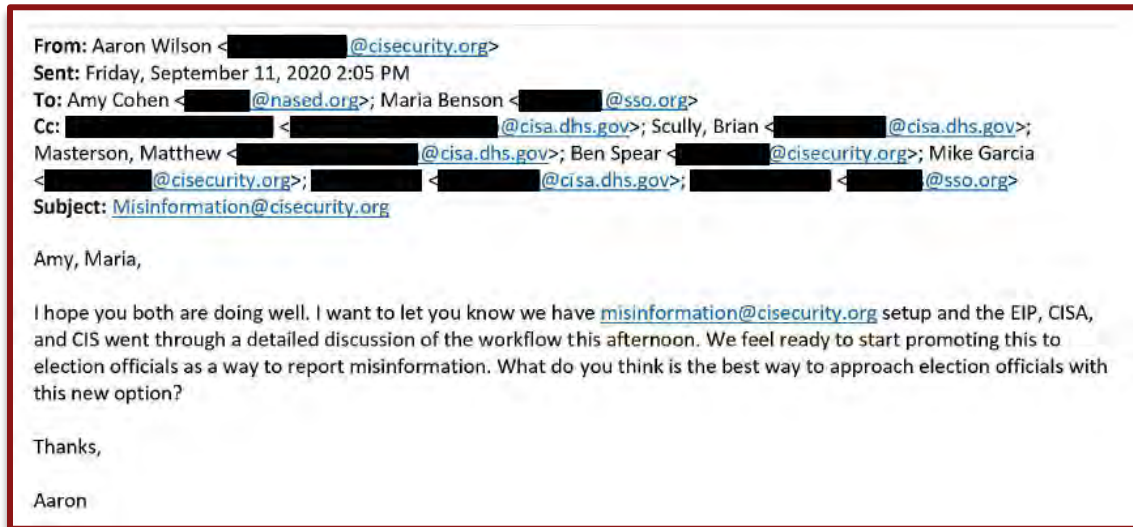

As the EIP geared up for the 2020 election, it appears that the EIP coordinated with CISA to conduct censorship “exercises.” A September 8, 2020, email to a Facebook employee from David Thiel, the SIO’s Chief Technologist, reads: “We’ve mostly just been going through exercises so far, mostly with claims that our CISA folks already know the answer to.”¹¹²

¹¹² Email from David Thiel to Facebook employee (Sept. 8, 2020, 11:02 AM) (on file with the Comm.).

On September 11, Aaron Wilson, emailed that “the EIP, CISA, and CIS went through a detailed discussion of the workflow this afternoon. We feel ready to start promoting this to election officials as a way to report misinformation.”¹¹³

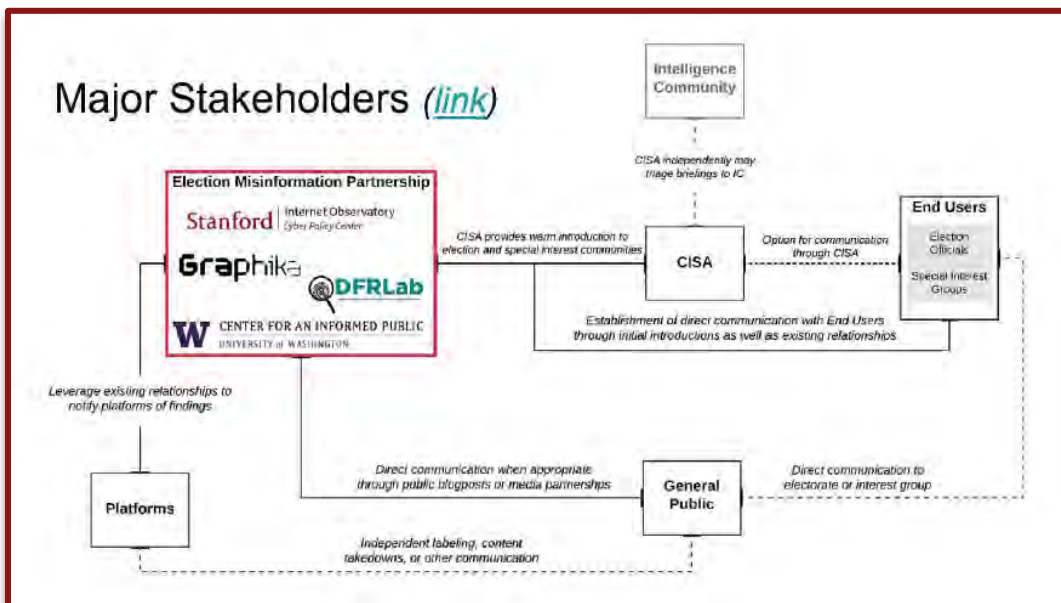

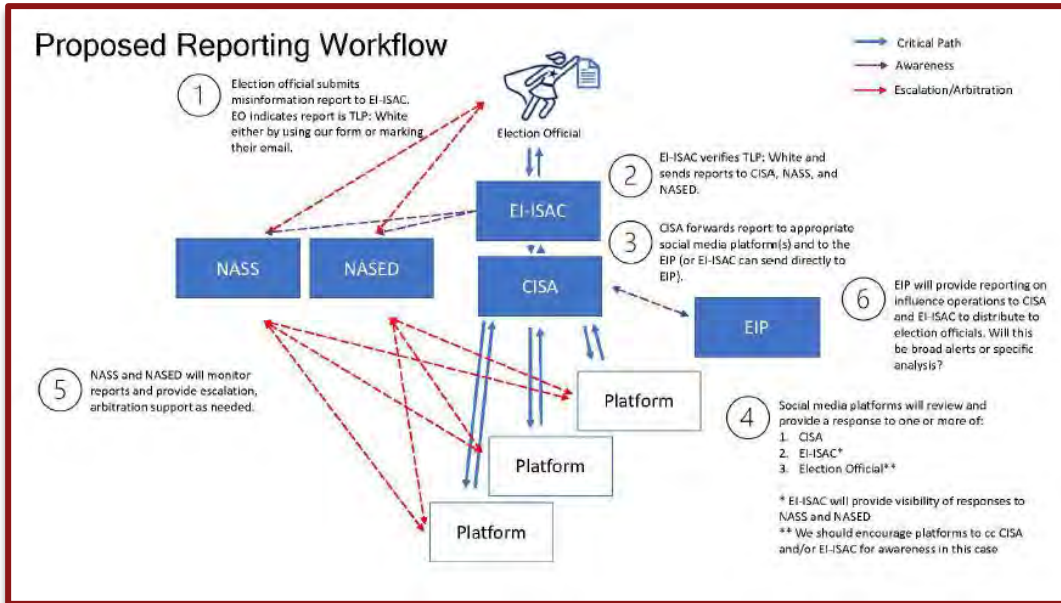

The proposed workflow makes clear that neither the EIP nor CIS were acting completely independently of CISA, but instead operated cooperatively and systematically within the same censorship organ CISA helped to create. As described in the same mid-September 2020 email thread below, election officials would submit misinformation reports to CIS; CIS would then (1) forward the email to CISA, with the agency then forwarding the report to the social media platforms (i.e., the CISA track); and (2) forward the email to EIP, who would search for other similar content to be flagged before sending reports to the social media platforms (i.e., the EIP track). As a consequence, CISA had visibility on what was being submitted to the EIP. And critically, social media platforms knew that CISA had knowledge of the EIP’s intake.

¹¹³ Email from Aaron Wilson to Amy Cohen and Maria Benson (Sept. 11, 2020, 2:05 PM) (on file with the Comm.).

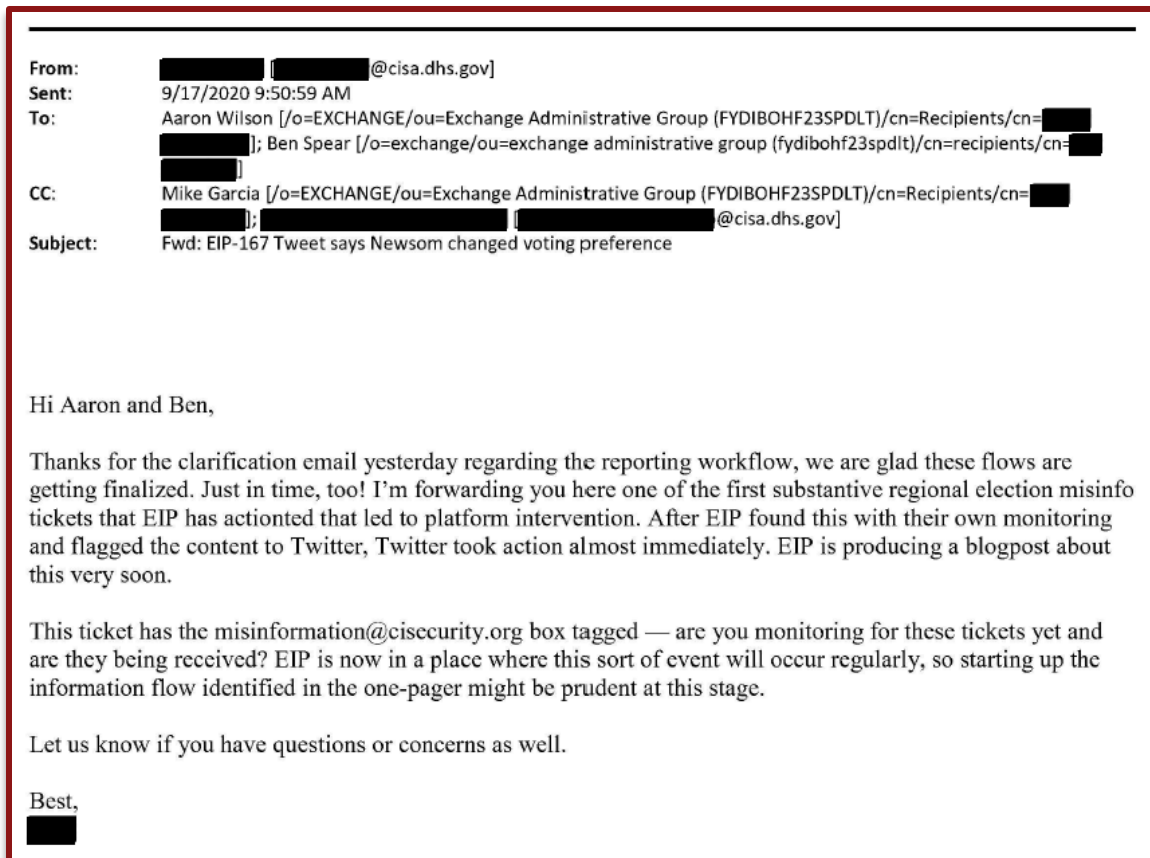

The close, direct coordination between CISA and the EIP was contemplated from the beginning, as seen in the below diagrams contained in what appear to be early EIP briefing materials. Multiple steps in the “Proposed Reporting Workflow,” explicitly link CISA and the EIP. For example, one step read: “CISA forwards report to appropriate social media platform(s) and to the EIP (or EI-ISAC can send directly to EIP).”¹¹⁴ Another diagram, titled “Major Stakeholders” drew a link between the EIP, CISA, and the Intelligence Community.¹¹⁵

¹¹⁵ Election Disinformation Partnership: Overview for Partners (unpublished presentation notes) (on file with the Comm.).

This arrangement quickly bore fruit for the federal government’s censorship-launders operation. On September 17, a CISA official emailed CIS’s Aaron Wilson and Ben Spear, writing: “I’m forwarding you here one of the first substantive regional election misinfo tickets that EIP has actioned that led to platform intervention. After EIP found this with their own monitoring and flagged the content to Twitter, Twitter took action almost immediately.”¹¹⁶ Put plainly, the EIP reported back to the federal government that it had successfully induced Big Tech to censor Americans’ political speech on behalf of CISA.

CISA knew that flagging individual posts for removal would not be sufficient to achieve its goal of categorically censoring disfavored viewpoints, primarily conservative political speech. Instead, entire “narratives” needed to be targeted for censorship. Pursuant to multiple subpoenas, the Committee and Select Subcommittee obtained communications between CISA, the EIP, and CIS demonstrating that the true objective in flagging content to social media platforms was to censor entire narratives not just specific, flagged posts. However, this did not stop the EIP from identifying massive amounts of social media posts allegedly spreading “misinformation,” with some misinformation reports containing over 500 individual links.¹¹⁷

Subject: RE: EIP-167 Tweet says Newsom changed voting preference

Hello Aaron:

Jumping in to answer a couple of the technical questions! We just had an issue with Facebook’s reporting box which was configured oddly as a ‘bulk’ email inbox. Is your mail receiver for misinfo@cisecurity.org automatically dropping emails tagged as ‘bulk’? Because if so, the Jira alias where these tips are coming from (which I think is a bulk inbox) won’t work with it. I am relaying this from our technical team so can ask for more information as helpful.

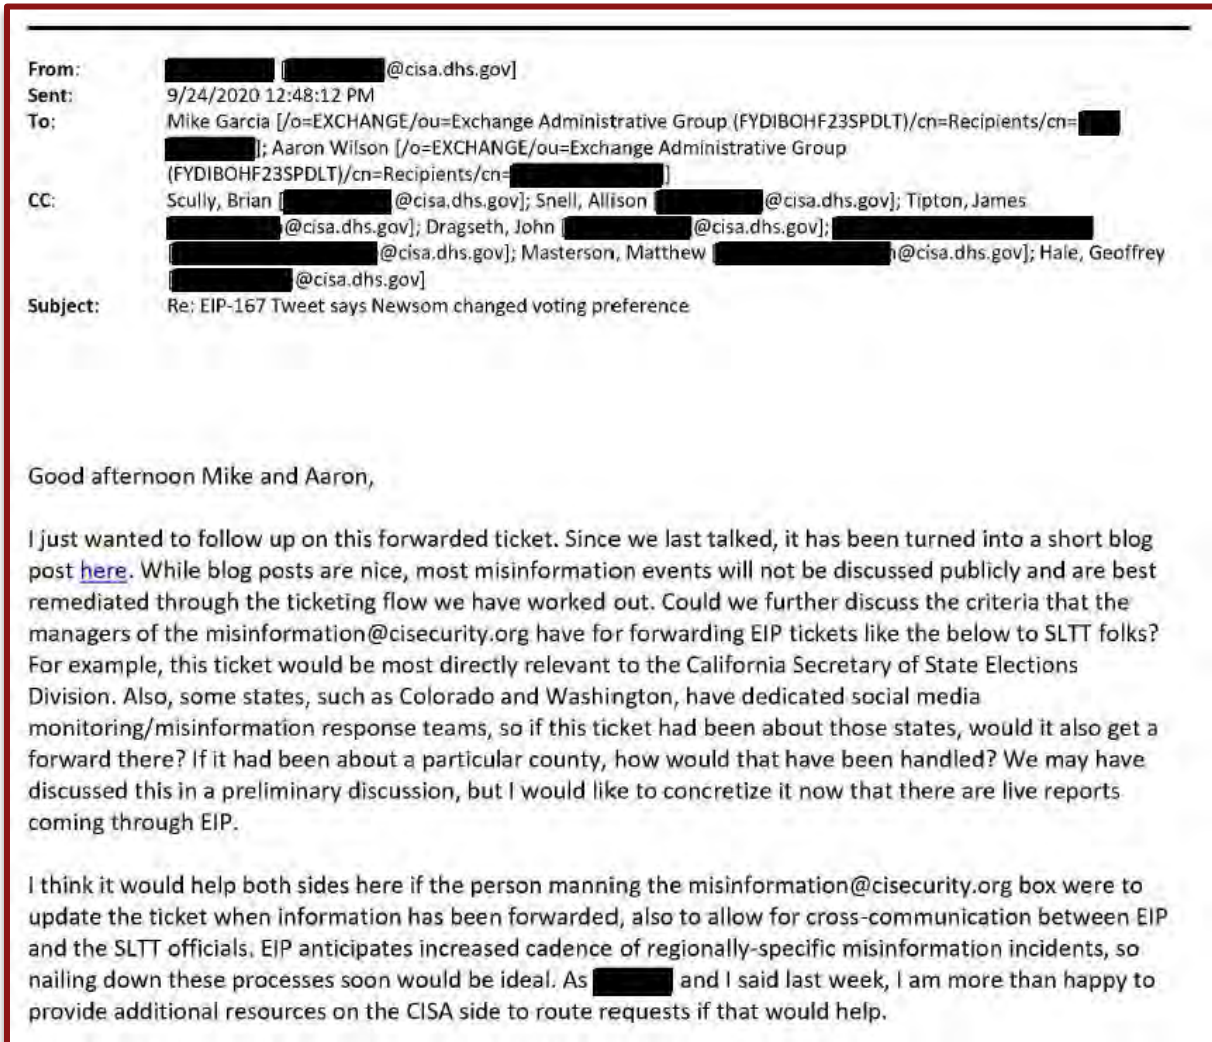

Regarding your second question on whether the ticket is closed: we closed the ticket as we had given the organizations tagged a reasonable amount of time to respond (~1 week in this case) and received no further commentary. We also wrote up our findings publicly. I don’t think the status of the ticket as Open or Closed means much for the election officials – we are sending this to you early in hopes of having it go straight to the impacted stakeholders as close to instantly as possible, so that if its of interest, they can ask further questions and we can be responsive to find more information. We just don’t know what is helpful to them yet.

As to the action on certain links: there is no way we found every piece of misinfo related to this incident, so we don’t give a ton of weight to how many of the links that we sent over got actioned (though we hope all would) because we know we didn’t find all the links anyways, and that the platforms are not going to communicate to us how many further leads they found and actioned as well (it could be none, it could be a network of 1000 users. Though they’d likely tell us about the latter). Because of this, we see the narrative itself as the most important thing to communicate, and the links as supplementary examples. We are always available to re-open a case to give further information on a narrative as helpful.

In another email sent on September 24, one of the CISA-SIO interns who was later hired to the full-time staff at CISA offered support for the joint censorship enterprise, writing, “EIP anticipates increased cadence of regionally-specific misinformation incidents, so nailing down these processes soon would be ideal I am more than happy to provide additional resources on the CISA side to route requests if that would help.”¹¹⁹

Furthermore, while the SIO has claimed that the “EIP’s goal was and continues to be to research and analyze attempts to prevent or deter people from voting,” the SIO-affiliated individual wrote in the same email that “[w]hile blog posts are nice, most misinformation events will not be discussed publicly and are best remediated through the ticketing flow we have worked out.”¹²⁰

Evidence obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee also makes clear that the highest levels of CISA leadership, including then-Director Krebs, had awareness of the CISA-

Hi all,

Just bumping this. Twitter has now taken action on one of the tweets in this ticket. Evidently Director Krebs personally reached out to Stamos asking what had happened around this event around the time the content was taken down, which was only an hour after this ticket was created. If this system is to work, we will need the turnaround time to be much faster for sending these tickets out to states.

Can anyone advise on next steps for actioning this event?

Thank you,

Overt coordination between CISA, the EIP, and CIS continued well into the 2020 election cycle. On October 5, 2020, Masterson, Scully, Stamos, and Garcia, among others, were invited to a meeting titled “EIP-CIS Sync.”¹²⁴ According to the email invitation: “The misinformation@cisecurity.org reporting system is now up and running, as is EIP’s inbound and outbound tip system. This call is to discuss how this process has gone so far, and to nail down the EIP \diamond ISAC SLA moving forward.”¹²⁵

An email from CIS, sent on October 21, 2020, demonstrates that CIS was keeping track of both the “CISA track” and the “EIP track” for flagging posts on social media platforms.¹²⁶

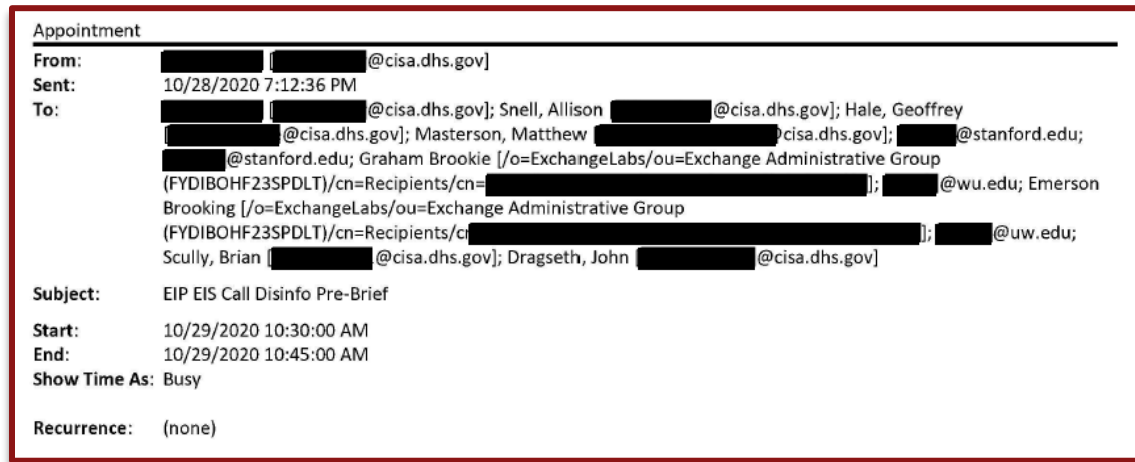

The EIP and CISA had another meeting to coordinate their censorship operation on October 29, 2020, as evidenced by a meeting invitation with the subject “EIP EIS [Election Security Initiative] Call Disinfo Pre-Brief.”¹²⁷ EIS appears to be in reference to CISA’s Election Security Initiative, which included Geoff Hale and Matt Masterson at the time.

B. Jira Tickets: The Main Weapon in the EIP’s Censorship Arsenal

Once the EIP had been formally organized on July 26, 2020, it quickly set about devising a method to mass-report content that it deemed undesirable to the relevant social media platforms. The EIP’s tipline of choice was Jira, an issue-tracking software developed by Atlassian, an Australian software company.¹²⁸ According to the EIP’s post-election report, the EIP “chose Jira because it supported a large team and allowed the addition of workflows that require both robust customer management capabilities and organizational features to reflect the numerous roles needed to respond to any inbound request.”¹²⁹

The EIP’s report including an example image of what a Jira ticket looked like, demonstrating how the Jira system allowed for real-time collaboration by “members of the EIP, government partners, and platform partners.”¹³⁰

C. The Collusion in Practice: The Coordinated Flagging of Posts

Pursuant to a subpoena, CISA has produced to the Committee and Select Subcommittee dozens of emails in which CIS sent reports of misinformation from state and local election officials to both the EIP and CISA. CISA then switchboarded the reports to the relevant social media platforms. CIS frequently included both CISA and the EIP on the same email chains, including CISA’s Brian Scully, CISA’s CFITF, and the EIP (as indicated by the EIP email domain “@2020partnership.atlassian.net”).¹³¹

Plainly put, the federal government, CIS, and the EIP were all on the same email chains discussing the censorship of Americans’ political speech. One of just many examples is shown below.¹³² While Stanford and SIO Director (and effectively the head of the EIP) Alex Stamos have given carefully crafted statements and testimony to the Committee and Select Subcommittee that CISA could not directly report misinformation content to the EIP, this email chain and others show that CISA routinely was copied on emails from CIS to the EIP reporting misinformation.¹³³ In other words, while CISA did not directly report content to the EIP, CISA had complete visibility on what was being reported to the EIP and at the same time was reporting the same content directly to the social media platforms. While CISA had “no official role,” CISA knew what reports were being submitted to the EIP, received Jira ticket reports and notifications via email, had personnel with direct access to the EIP ticketing system, and was in direct contact with the social media platforms.

In another characteristic example below, CIS’s “Misinformation Reports” email account sent an email to Brian Scully, CISA Central, CISA’s CFITF, and EIP, which read:

¹³⁰ Id. at 30.

No.”) (emphasis added).

“Misinformation report: Facebook post regarding debunked conspiracy theories about elections.”¹³⁴ The Facebook post in question linked to an article from the Daily Wire, a prominent conservative publication.¹³⁵

Emails from CIS to CISA and EIP continued throughout the 2020 election cycle, including the months of October and November 2020, during which time many Americans relied on information shared on social media platforms to inform their vote. Moreover, a significant number of emails from CIS were directly addressed specifically to CISA CFITF team lead “Brian [Scully] and EIP” and included employees of the social media platforms hosting the content of concern.

On November 5, for example, an email was sent from CIS’s Misinformation Reports email address to CISA, the EIP, and Facebook, which read “Brian and EIP – we have included Facebook in this report.”¹³⁶ The email copied two employees of Facebook directly on the report of “misinformation.”¹³⁷ Thus, the Facebook personnel on the receiving end of this email would understand that CISA and the EIP were receiving the same notifications at the same time. Emails such as this one revealed that the federal government had direct knowledge of what was being reported to the EIP.

On November 11, CIS sent an email to a Twitter employee, multiple CISA accounts, and the EIP, writing, “Brian and EIP, we have included Twitter in this report.”¹³⁸ The email copied an employee of Twitter on the alert about “misinformation.”¹³⁹

While the First Amendment certainly applies to states and state officials, it is concerning that Secretary Hobbs expended her office’s limited resources to flag content on social media regarding a Republican candidate’s speech. But even more alarming, Hobbs’s staff was apparently trawling through private Facebook pages to identify dissent and “misinformation” for removal. According to public reporting, Hobbs’s office continued flagging social media posts well after the election, into January 2021.¹⁴² In some cases, Hobbs’s staff emailed the social media platforms directly, requesting that posts criticizing her be censored.¹⁴³

Even more damaging to the argument that CISA and EIP were independent of one another is the fact that CISA personnel, who supposedly had no access to the EIP’s Jira system, referenced the EIP-specific ticket codes when discussing “misinformation” reports. The email below, sent on November 2—the day before the 2020 election—is one such example, in which a CISA official informed Twitter: “Please see below reporting from Connecticut election officials. The ticket is also tagged EIP-572.”¹⁴⁴

At one point, it appears that Christopher Krebs, the then-Director of CISA, directed Robert Schaul, CISA’s Analysis and Resilience Policy Lead, to contact Graham Brookie, Senior Director of the Atlantic Council’s Digital Forensic Research Lab (DFRLab), to inquire about a particular election-related narrative spreading on social media. In the email, Schaul wrote: “We’re getting the EIP take as well but wanted to check in with you . . . [Director Krebs is] particularly interested in any analytics we can pull together on the narrative as well as where it’s coming from and who is amplifying it.”¹⁴⁵ Internal Atlantic Council documents show that

Hi to both –

The struggle here is that Emerson is managing efforts and Andy is managing staff and outputs. The only way to be successful is to make sure that the three of us are explicitly on the same page about how we are allocating staff to efforts.

The below is intended to do that – and I will be adding Emerson to the DCHQ WhatsApp chain, where we will coordinate in general, as soon as we're on the same page as below. Our first obligation is always to our staff and not setting them up for failure. Our second obligation is to our core work, which every single one of us is managing key elements of. Thus the burden falls on the three of us to coordinate both.

Please reply in red or blue to the below. I also didn't have explicit names in the “staffing” section of each, so please fill out.

Thanks,
Graham

Election Integrity Partnership

Key questions: What is the schedule of shifts, noting that we just need to assign people to them? EIP, the voluntary shift system is a potential challenge because it requires a person to spend X amount of hours monitoring things, which either results in no outputs being produced, or a sudden need to complete an output that the person may or may not be suited to complete, especially if it's an international member of the team with limited knowledge of US politics, geography, culture, etc.

In scenarios where something potentially important surfaces within EIP, how do we go about prioritizing it? For example, when is it simply a matter of “this is a good story so please get me a draft in 72 hours” vs “all hands on deck, this is like a major takedown?” In either case, the three of us need to be locked up in order to not undermine our whole business operation through editorial capacity, who gets assigned, scheduling, etc.

One not ideal scenario is a situation where Jean or Ayush volunteer for a few hours, end up finding something important, and then having not having all three of our awareness and approval, which could lead to significant members of staff being taken away from their core responsibilities for extended periods of days/week. In other words, a shift is just the tip of the iceberg, commitment-wise.

Another question is what constitutes a contribution to EIP. While the focus has been on the partnership and the process (which makes sense) we're part of a team reviewing leads and deciding when to act on them. But we also continue to cover election-related stories that will originate from our original research, rather than the college students volunteering at EIP, especially now that Jared is coming on board and while looking into more conspiracy related content. Can we consider those contributions? I imagine for some researchers there's more incentive to contribute when they're able to generate research leads themselves rather than being responsive to tips, though I understand responding to tips is still core to the partnership.

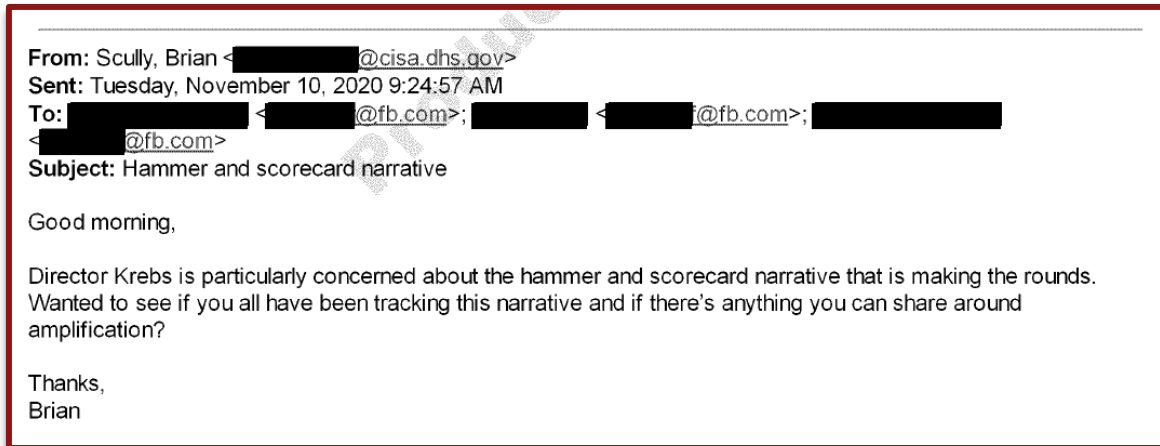

Important to note: not college kids surfacing EIP leads. Krebs CISA is texting Stamos with some regularity. A few tickets have been flagged by the platforms. Starbird's UW team is surfacing a lot of stuff using advanced soc media listening methods. College kids (T-1) just doing the first round of analysis.

The job of DFRLab is to be T-2, doing a deep dive into tickets, attaching more contextual information, and writing up a twitter thread/blog post if that's the recommendation of the researcher (and the T-3 shift manager approves).

Analysts can step away and write a blog post on-shift. That's what Alyssa did last week.

¹⁴⁶ Email exchange between Graham Brookie and Atlantic Council personnel (Sept. 30, 2020 5:05 PM) (on file with the Comm.).

CISA personnel also solicited information about political speech on social media from employees of the platforms. On the same day, November 10, Scully sent an email to three Facebook employees, writing, “Director Krebs is particularly concerned about the hammer and scorecard narrative that is making the rounds. Wanted to see if you have been tracking this narrative and if there’s anything you can share around amplification?”¹⁴⁷

These emails directly contradict claims that CISA had only a “very little role, if none” in the EIP.¹⁴⁸ To the contrary, CISA had real-time awareness of what was being submitted to EIP, what steps EIP was conducting, and what actions the social media platforms were taking—and EIP and the social media platforms were aware of CISA’s significant role.

D. The State Department’s Direct Participation in the EIP’s Censorship Operation

The Global Engagement Center (GEC) is a multi-agency organization housed within the State Department, which Elon Musk has described as “[t]he worst offender in US government censorship & media manipulation.”¹⁴⁹ The GEC and GEC-funded entities have, on multiple occasions flagged content to social media platforms that included Americans engaged in constitutionally protected speech.¹⁵⁰

Unlike CISA’s pretext of peripheral non-involvement, the EIP openly admitted that the GEC “reported tickets” to the EIP in its final report looking back on the 2020 election cycle.¹⁵¹ In fact, according to that report, the GEC was one of the most frequently tagged organizations in the EIP’s Jira system.¹⁵²

On October 15, 2020, Adela Levis, an “Academic and Think-Tank Liaison” with the GEC, sent an email invitation to a meeting with the title “GEC/Election Integrity Partnership.”¹⁵³ In the body of the email, Levis wrote that the meeting was “to discuss a concrete idea we have for possible support of the EIP effort.”¹⁵⁴

E. Other Federal Agencies' Involvement with the EIP: the FBI and the NSA

CISA was not the only government entity apprised of the EIP's activities. On June 23, 2023, the Committee and Select Subcommittee conducted a transcribed interview of Alex Stamos, examining his and CISA's involvement in the EIP. During the interview, Stamos testified that the SIO briefed several other government agencies about the EIP, including the National Security Agency (NSA) and Cyber Command. Stamos further testified that Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) Special Agent Elvis Chan, who was the primary liaison between the FBI and Silicon Valley and was involved in the suppression of news about information damaging to the Biden family found on a laptop belonging to Hunter Biden, arranged the SIO-NSA briefing.

Stamos testified:

Q. Which other federal agencies did EIP brief?

A. I did a briefing for General Nakasone, then the director of NSA and Cyber Command

Q. Did the FBI also receive briefings for the election?

A. The FBI was part of that briefing, so I did it from the FBI office in – in San Francisco because I just can't Zoom into the NSA.

Q. Do you recall who set up the meeting between you and the NSA?

A. Elvis Chan had set up the – so the meeting was set up because Nakasone had come to campus. Elvis was the facilitator who provided the space and participated, listened to the briefing in San Francisco.

Q. Yeah. Did you know Mr. Chan before this meeting had occurred?

A. I did.¹⁵⁸

The SIO continued to provide the FBI with updates on the EIP throughout the 2020 election cycle. For example, on October 5, 2020, Alex Stamos sent an email to Elvis Chan, writing: "Right now, the Election Integrity Partnership is running three shifts each weekday . . . We don't have any good indications of foreign interference from our work, and most of the things we have spotted can be tied to known domestic actors," i.e., Americans.¹⁵⁹

Elvis-

Right now, the Election Integrity Partnership is running three shifts each weekday (and one on Sunday) looking for election related disinformation. We are handling about a dozen "incidents" per day, which can correspond to multiple pieces of disinformation or just one (this is varying widely). We are intaking reports from locals via EI-ISAC, working with NGOs like Common Cause, and routing issues to platforms to get handled.

It's working pretty well. You can see a handful of incidents we wrote up at eipartnership.net. We will be adding shifts in a couple of weeks and will be staffing a war room at my house (post COVID-testing) on election day.

CONFIDENTIAL

SIO-HJC014624

What's your mandate look like? We don't have any good indications of foreign interference from our work, and most of the things we have spotted can be tied to known domestic actors. Probably some foreign amplifiers, but figuring that out is generally outside of our scope and the data we have access to. Check out our "Rapid Reaction" posts and see if any of those kinds of topics are in scope for your work.

Alex

In response to Stamos's question regarding the FBI's mandate, Chan wrote: "The FBI [San Francisco] mandate is to be the conduit to/from the social media companies for all election-related threats, whether foreign or domestic. We've been receiving mostly domestic voter suppression-related accounts to flag for social media companies as each state had its primaries."¹⁶⁰

Hi Alex,

It seems like you have a good system in place and are plugged in with the relevant entities. The FBI SF mandate is to be the conduit to/from the social media companies for all election-related threats, whether foreign or domestic. We've been receiving mostly domestic voter suppression-related accounts to flag for social media companies as each state had its primaries.

At our command post, we'll have a NCRIC-embed who will have access to HISN, EI-ISAC, and MS-ISAC feeds as well. We are hoping USIC partners will be able to declassify information fast enough for us to push out to the companies for awareness.

Since you are also flagging things and sending them to the social media companies, I know they'll be able to relay any coordinated campaigns they see to us for examination and possible case opening. Let's plan to stay in touch as things start to heat up. Thanks!

Regards,
 Elvis

III. THE EIP’S JIRA TICKETS: AN ENCYCLOPEDIA OF CONSERVATIVE CENSORSHIP

An examination of the Jira tickets themselves reveals a veritable who’s who of prominent conservative voices targeted for censorship by CISA and the EIP. On March 17, 2023, in response to increased media scrutiny of the SIO’s activities, including the Select Subcommittee’s March 9 hearing on the Twitter Files, the SIO published a blog post riddled with false statements about the EIP.¹⁶¹ For instance, the blog post stated that the EIP did not “‘target’ or discriminate against conservative social media accounts or content.”¹⁶² While it is true that the EIP, did flag non-conservative content to maintain a façade of neutrality, the EIP’s reports show a clear attempt to suppress conservative speech in particular.¹⁶³

According to the EIP’s post-election report, there are four categories of election-related “misinformation” that the EIP considered to be “in scope” of the type of “misinformation” the EIP would analyze.¹⁶⁴ Some of the categories, like “procedural interference” are relatively anodyne—although often stretched beyond its intended contours—and include things like “[c]ontent that misleads voters about how to correctly sign a mail-in ballot” and “[c]ontent that encourages voters to vote on a different day.”¹⁶⁵

The EIP repeatedly used its fourth category, in particular, to justify the censorship of conservative political speech: the “Delegitimization of Election Results,” defined as “[c]ontent that delegitimizes election results on the basis of false or misleading claims.”¹⁶⁶ This arbitrary and inconsistent standard was determined by political actors masquerading as “experts” and academics. But even more troubling, the federal government was heavily intertwined with the universities in making these seemingly arbitrary determinations that skewed against one side of the political aisle.

The EIP routinely flagged conservative content on social media under the guise that it was inappropriately “delegitimizing” election results, even in cases where the content was factually accurate. Criticism of the electoral system is constitutionally protected speech. A political system that allows a small minority of government-approved “experts” to exercise influence over the ability of other citizens to express concerns with the government represents a profound threat to our constitutional republic. Indiscriminately or improperly suppressing accusations of electoral fraud necessarily suppresses speech about real instances of electoral fraud, thereby allowing the government free rein to conduct elections in a manner that is not accountable to the American people.¹⁶⁷

A. Dropping the Pretense of “Mis- and Disinformation”: The EIP’s Absurd Approach to Classification

The EIP acknowledged in its report that it is “not a fact-checking organization” and that “[f]or some tickets, it was not possible to find an external fact-check for the content, either because no fact-checker had yet addressed the issue, or because the information was resistant to simple verification.”¹⁶⁸ Unbelievably, the EIP also admitted that its analysts “identified at least one external fact-check source for approximately 42% of the in-scope tickets.”¹⁶⁹ In other words, EIP analysts were unable to identify a single external source to support its designation of a particular post or narrative as “mis- or disinformation” in a majority of posts it flagged.

The general reliance of social media censors on fact-checkers, many of whom have a distinctly liberal political bias, creates an environment that is hostile to free speech, especially conservative viewpoints, and is concerning in and of itself. However, the fact that the EIP could not find even a single fact-checker, biased or not, before flagging content to social media in a majority of cases and was willing to publicly admit to that fact, is indicative of a brazen and megalomaniacal approach to censorship, unbothered by the truth or maintaining even the appearance of political neutrality.

For cases in which the EIP was unable to fact-check a claim or narrative it had identified, the EIP could have opted not to flag the content to the social media platforms, given that there was uncertainty about the truth value of the content in question. Instead, the EIP aggressively flagged such posts to the platforms, noting in the tickets that it had no justification for reporting the content other than CISA’s and the EIP’s own political agenda.

For example, an entry in EIP-713, a Jira ticket regarding a Gateway Pundit article, submitted on the afternoon of Election Day, November 3, read: “We are sending this to you quickly as we likely won’t be able to figure out a factcheck here.”¹⁷⁰ In EIP-418, concerning a tweet from One America News Network, a contributor wrote: “We have not seen a fact-check on this direct story, but this story is targeted at discrediting the validity of vote-by-mail.”¹⁷¹ In its report, the EIP claimed that its purpose was “to identify and analyze mis- and disinformation,” which even CISA publicly defines as false information.¹⁷² However, the approach demonstrated in these and other tickets makes clear that the EIP’s focus was not on the truth, but rather the advancement of viewpoint-based discrimination.

B. Efforts to Censor the Truth

Even in the limited cases in which the EIP was able to find an external fact-check, the fact-checkers were often unsure themselves, admitted that the relevant claims were not false, or subject to undeniable political bias. On November 3, 2020, Alex Stamos sent an email to a Reddit employee with the contents of a Jira ticket concerning irregularities at polling sites in Philadelphia, as Reddit refused to participate in the Jira system directly.¹⁷³

The ticket, although ostensibly about a specific claim regarding signs posted outside polling sites, flagged more generic content, including the below tweet from Republican Party official Harmeet Dhillon.¹⁷⁴ The "Fact Check" cited in the ticket is a tweet from the office of the Democratic District Attorney in Philadelphia and does not dispute any of the claims in Dhillon's post.

C. Efforts to Censor President Trump and His Family

The most prominent conservative voice targeted by CISA and the EIP was none other than the sitting President of the United States, Donald Trump. On October 27, 2020, a local official reported a tweet from President Trump to CIS’s “misinformation” tipline, which then forwarded the report to the EIP and CISA, per its usual protocol.¹⁷⁵ CISA then flagged the content to Twitter.¹⁷⁶ To be clear, this evidence shows an unelected executive branch official flagging a statement from the elected leader of the executive branch for removal from one of the world’s largest and most active public forums. CISA has not provided the Committee any evidence that it contacted the White House prior to making the referral to opine on the veracity of the claim in the tweet.

Please see below report from Washington.

Thanks,
 Brian

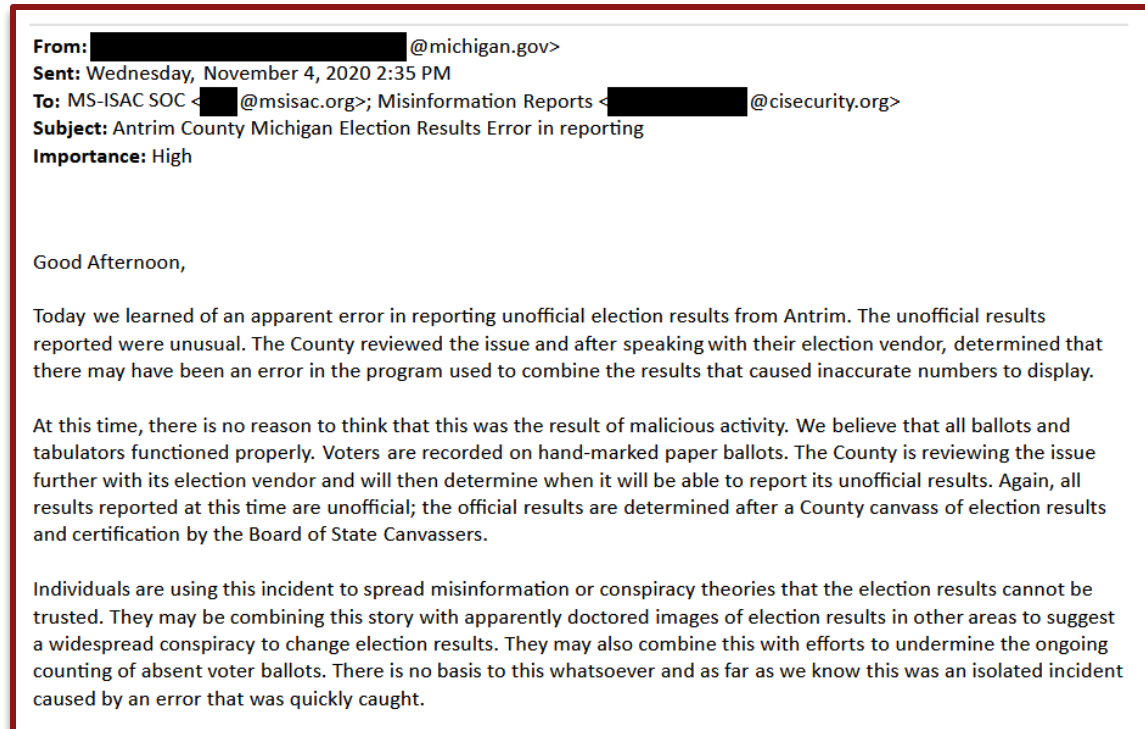

CISA’s involvement in the attempted censorship of President Trump did not end once the report had been submitted to Twitter. Instead, as noted in an entry on the Jira ticket identified as EIP-482: “We [the EIP] heard back from Twitter through CISA” regarding how Twitter decided to handle the reported tweet.¹⁷⁷

This was not the only time CISA and the EIP attempted to hinder the duly elected President’s ability to communicate with the American public. On November 4, 2020, a Michigan election official made a “misinformation” report to CIS, writing, “Today we learned of an apparent error in reporting unofficial election results from Antrim. The unofficial results reported were unusual. The County reviewed the issue and after speaking with their election vendor, determined that there may have been an error in the program used to combine the results that caused inaccurate numbers to display.”¹⁷⁸ According to the election official, this was concerning because “[i]ndividuals are using this incident to spread misinformation or conspiracy theories that the election results cannot be trusted.”¹⁷⁹

¹⁷⁷ See EIP-482, supra note 175.

¹⁷⁸ Email from Michigan election official to CIS and MS-ISAC personnel (Nov. 4, 2020 2:35 PM) (on file with the Comm.).

As usual, the report was then sent at the same time to the EIP and CISA for further action.¹⁸⁰

In response, the EIP dutifully activated its surveillance antennae, scouring social media for posts and activity related to the reporting irregularity that the state election official confirmed had actually taken place. The EIP then reported a series of URLs to Twitter and Facebook regarding the incident in Antrim County.¹⁸¹ Facebook replied that it had “applied the relevant labels on the links you shared.”¹⁸² One of the links included in the ticket was a tweet from

President Trump, in which the President shared an article from Breitbart, with the added commentary: “What a total mess this ‘election’ has been!”¹⁸³

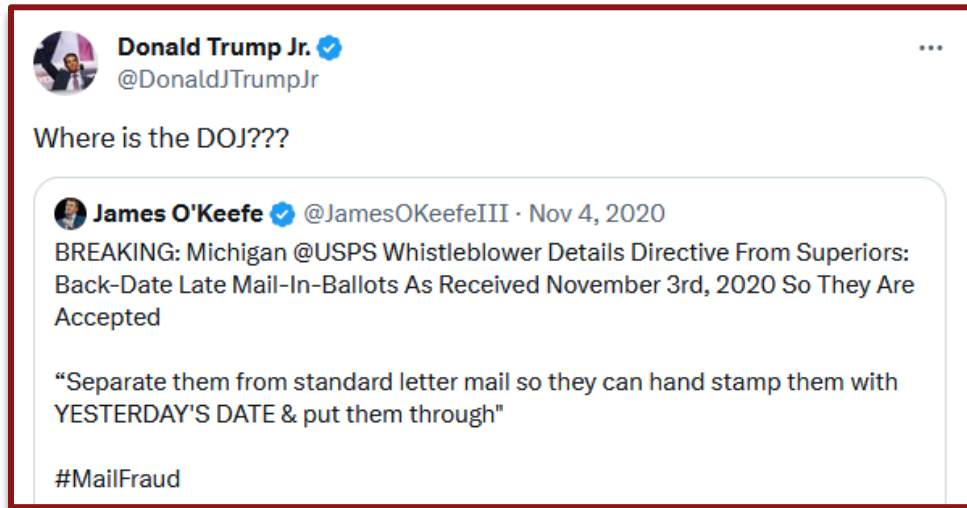

CISA has not provided the Committee with any evidence that the agency contacted the White House directly to convey its concerns with the tweet, instead relying on the EIP to conduct censorship by proxy.

Members of President Trump’s family were also targeted for censorship by CISA and the EIP. During the course of its work in the 2020 election cycle, the EIP flagged multiple posts from both Donald Trump Jr. and Eric Trump, some of which appear to have been removed or labelled.¹⁸⁴ In one ticket, tagged EIP-867, the EIP flagged Donald Trump Jr.’s Twitter account

D. Efforts to Censor Political Candidates and Legislators

CISA's and the EIP's censorship enterprise targeted not only President Trump but also former, current, and prospective legislators. In EIP-450, the EIP flagged a tweet, pictured below, from former Speaker of the House of Representatives Newt Gingrich about changes to Pennsylvania election law.¹⁸⁶

In EIP-904, the EIP attempted to censor Rep. Jody Hice, a sitting Republican Congressman from Georgia, engaging in core political speech criticizing the administration of the election in his home state.¹⁸⁷

¹⁸⁶ See EIP-450, submitted by [REDACTED], ticket created (Oct. 23, 2020, 1:43 PM) (archived Jira ticket data produced to the Comm.).

EIP analysts also flagged a completely innocuous tweet from Sen. Thom Tillis of North Carolina in EIP-936 because the group deemed his declaration of victory to be premature.¹⁸⁸ Sen. Tillis did, in fact, win his reelection to the Senate.

The EIP further targeted Republican candidates for political office, including those who would later be seated in Congress. For example, in EIP-596, the EIP flagged this Facebook post from Rep. Nicole Malliotakis’s campaign page. The post appears to have been removed by Facebook.¹⁸⁹

In EIP-780, the EIP’s “analysts” flagged a post from Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene’s campaign account, in which the Congresswoman encouraged her followers to share her post.¹⁹⁰ It is a slippery slope if political candidates and their supporters are not able to express legitimate concerns with the election process. While many disinformation experts are quick to criticize Republican candidates about undermining “faith in elections,” these experts appear to be notably silent whenever Democrats objected to election results in other elections, or baselessly blamed election losses on unfounded claims of fraud or cheating. Perhaps most notably, many Democrats repeated the unfounded claim that President Trump colluded with Russia, rather than accept the truth that his victory over Hillary Clinton was legitimate.¹⁹¹ But as the disinformation experts in their own words acknowledge, the study of “disinformation” is of course “inherently political.”¹⁹²

E. Efforts to Censor Humor and Satire

Documents obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee also show that the EIP flagged content that was obviously humorous and satirical. For example, EIP analysts internally identified a tweet from former Governor of Arkansas Mike Huckabee, in which Huckabee made a quip about dead relatives voting.¹⁹³ According to the ticket, labeled EIP-460, an individual affiliated with the EIP wrote, “ISAC Partners, adding you to this thread for visibility. We recommend to Twitter that this be labeled, especially under option (b) as it was posted by a public figure.”¹⁹⁴

The EIP even objected to and attempted to censor humorous images that could not reasonably be perceived as genuine.¹⁹⁵ Both images, replicated below and flagged in EIP-811, are self-evidently doctored and depict the transportation of boxes labelled “Emergency Democrat Votes.”¹⁹⁶ The EIP wrote in the ticket: “Users on Twitter and Facebook are sharing manipulated images of people moving boxes in trucks labeled ‘Emergency Democrat Votes.’ We suggest labeling or removing tweets that use this photo, as it could undermine people’s faith in the legitimacy of the election process. Though the image may seem ridiculous, some users may still believe it is real.”¹⁹⁷

F. Efforts to Censor Other Influential Conservative Accounts

In addition to the accounts mentioned previously, the EIP targeted the social media accounts of conservative journalists, commentators, and personalities with large followings and high engagement for suppression. In the Jira ticket numbered EIP-805, the EIP flagged both posts in the screenshot below, one from Candace Owens and the other from Charlie Kirk.¹⁹⁸

The EIP also flagged posts from notable and popular conservative accounts, including those of Paul Sperry, Chanel Rion, Sean Davis, Dave Rubin, Michelle Malkin, James O’Keefe, Benny Johnson, Jack Posobiec, Tracy Beanz, Mike Roman, Sean Hannity, the Babylon Bee, Newsmax, Mollie Hemingway, and Tom Fitton, among others.

The suppression of conservative politicians and media resulting from this censorship operation deprived countless American voters from exposure to a range of perspectives on the most important political issues in the days and weeks surrounding a general election. Critically, the EIP conducted its censorship operation at the direction of, in collaboration with CISA, a federal government agency actively seeking to undermine free expression and the sitting President. The significance of these facts cannot be overstated.

IV. THE EIP'S COERCIVE TACTICS

In the lead-up to the 2020 election, social media platforms were inundated by requests for censorship from a number of federal agencies, including the FBI and CISA.¹⁹⁹ As documented in Section I of this interim report, CISA and its proxies already had two avenues to submit reports—switchboarding and the EI-ISAC—and was heavily lobbying a third avenue, a “misinformation reporting portal” operated by CIS, before the creation of EIP. Then, with the EIP, Jira ticket data and emails establish clearly that social media platforms understood that the federal government was working directly with the EIP.

In addition to having the explicit and implicit backing of the federal government, the EIP had another tool at its disposal to pressure social media companies to comply with the censorship requests: the media. In his testimony before the Committee, Alex Stamos—the SIO director and former Chief Security Officer at Facebook—explained how social media companies felt pressure from public criticism about the failure to remove content that experts had labeled as misinformation.²⁰⁰ He testified:

Q. And, with respect to the blogpost, are there any -- did anyone from EIP ever communicate to the platforms that you were going to make these blogposts public?

A. I mean, it's possible that we gave them a heads-up when we were posting about it.

Q. And why would you do that?

A. I think it's a polite thing to do so that they know that we're going public. We didn't want them to feel like we were blindsiding them.

Q. And what do you mean by “blindsiding” them?

A. We wanted them to know that there's going to be a possible discussion of what was going on in their platform, and they should know about it. I think the -- you know, we were -- I am sympathetic to how hard it is to be in one of these companies and to try to balance all the different equities. And so, if somebody was writing something that could generate a communications moment during an election period, then that's something I would want to know for sure.

Q. What do you mean by “communications moment”?

A. So, if we wrote a blogpost that said, “This is something viral that’s happening that’s not true,” you very well could find members of the media going out and then finding that content on five different platforms and then writing about it being up or not.

Q. And, if it was still up, would some of those media publications be criticism of the platforms?

A. It’s possible.²⁰¹

Similarly, Dr. Kate Starbird of the University of Washington, and one of the central figures involved in the EIP’s operation, similarly testified about using her platform (independent of the EIP) to publicly push social media platforms to change their policies. She testified:

Q. Was the purpose of the public communication to have Twitter change its policy?

A. It was, for me -- again, this is not, like, within the EIP brand. This is sort of something that we were just kind of doing that eventually we start working together. But this is just something that I do a lot, which is to put out analysis and have recommendations for the platforms at the end of that analysis.

Sometimes that’s in formal papers. In this case, I would sometimes put the analyses out on Twitter to say this is happening and that it’s a problem, to draw attention to it, and for them to think about what they should do to change. Yeah.

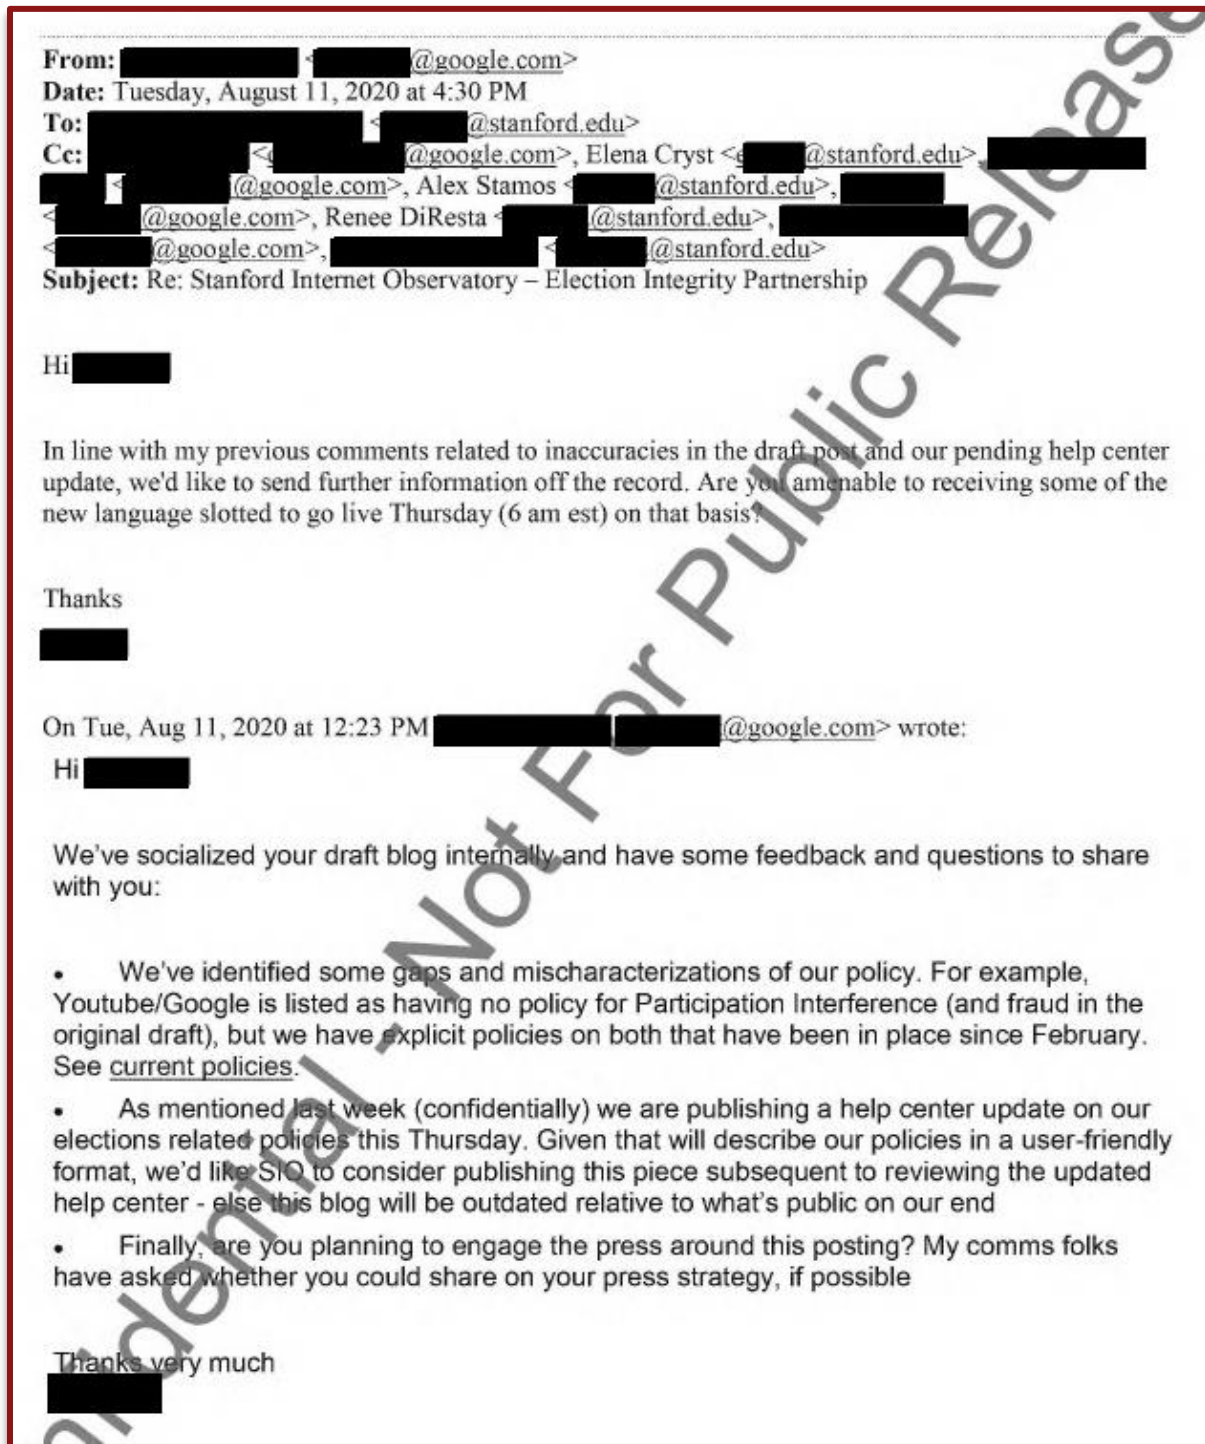

And I don’t always recommend -- I rarely recommend a specific action. I wish -- I didn’t get to say this -- I wish I had something better to say. But most of the time, I just point out problems and don’t tell them how to fix them. And I understand that the fixes for the problems are very tricky and very hard, so I give them credit for that. But I did a lot of, like, pointing out: This is a problem.²⁰²

In the fall of 2020, the EIP also worked on preparing work product summarizing the major social media platforms’ content moderation policies and the differences among them. The EIP initially gave Alphabet (the parent company of Google and YouTube) an opportunity to comment on YouTube’s content moderation policies. As the email chain below demonstrates, Alphabet was keenly aware that the EIP may “engage the press.” In particular, the company wanted to ensure that the EIP would not publish “inaccuracies” or “mischaracterizations” that would suggest the company's policies were insufficient in removing election-related content labeled as misinformation by the EIP.²⁰³

V. STANFORD'S EFFORTS TO OBSTRUCT THE COMMITTEE'S INVESTIGATION

A. Stanford's Deceitful Public Statements about the EIP's Flagging of Posts

On March 17, 2023, following the Select Subcommittee's March 9 hearing on the Twitter Files, the SIO published a blog post titled "Background on the SIO's Project on Social Media," in which the SIO sought to downplay the extent of the EIP's censorship and surveillance, claiming that both the EIP and its successor, the Virality Project, "are non-partisan research coalitions that operate in an open, transparent, and public manner."²⁰⁴ On March 20, the SIO's counsel sent a link to the blog post to Committee staff, writing: "Here's the statement Stanford put up on Friday attempting to correct some of the myths floating around in the press."²⁰⁵

In addition to its mendacious framing of the EIP's activities and CISA's involvement therein, the post contains statements that are categorically untrue. Most notably, the SIO falsely claimed in the post that the "EIP informed Twitter and other social media platforms when certain social media posts violated each platform's own policies; EIP did not make recommendations to the platforms about what actions they should take."²⁰⁶

Documents produced to the Committee and Select Subcommittee by both the SIO and other entities contain numerous examples of EIP analysts and staff making explicit recommendations to the platforms for specific enforcement measures. Appendix I compiles recommendations from 75 Jira tickets Stanford produced in which the EIP made a direct recommendation to platforms on what action should be taken.

²⁰⁶ Background on the SIO's Projects on Social Media, STANFORD INTERNET OBSERVATORY (Mar. 17, 2023), <https://cyber.fsi.stanford.edu/io/news/background-sios-projects-social-media> (emphasis added).

Below are a few examples to illustrate how explicitly the EIP instructed social media companies to take action:

Ticket #	Entry
EIP-345	“The article is being shared on Facebook, and while it has been labeled when shared in a group, official Page shares did not receive such a label . . . We recommend labeling all instances of the article being shared on Facebook.”
EIP-378	“This has circulated in pro-Trump conservative groups and sub-communities . . . We recommend that you all flag as false, or remove the posts below.”
EIP-396	“Hi Facebook, Reddit, and Twitter . . . we recommend it be removed from your platforms.”
EIP-407	“Hi Twitter team – please see the ticket above, which we’d recommend be labeled with information pertaining to mail-in voting.”
EIP-421	“We recommend that posts like these be labeled if they are alleging fraud, and that further action may be appropriate if this post actually documents fraud.”
EIP-460	“Huckabee has not said whether the tweet was a joke or not . . . We recommend that Twitter labels the post with (a) proper voting information.”
EIP-461	“Given the large audiences and Pennsylvania’s swing state status, we’d recommend this content be actioned.”
EIP-581	“We recommend you label or reduce the discoverability of the post.”
EIP-638	“We recommend labeling his [sic] tweets and monitoring if any of the tagged influencer accounts retweet him.”
EIP-656	“@SeanHannity is sharing a partial statement by Rep. Ilhan Omar . . . we recommend Twitter adds a label to Tweets sharing the link to the article.”
EIP-668	“We repeat our recommendation that this account be suspended for the duration of election day from posting additional misleading information about voting.”
EIP-673	“We recommend that this tweet, and other tweets sharing this false information, should be removed.”; “We recommend taking action specifically on this account, such as suspending their ability to continue tweeting for 12 hours.”
EIP-680	“We recommend that this tweet, as well as the tweets with the original video should be removed or labeled as misleading.”
EIP-1020	“[W]e recommend links to its content be labeled or removed.”

In EIP-421, the responsible EIP analyst appeared to make a remarkable admission about the EIP's true intentions, writing: "We recommend that posts like these be labeled if they are alleging fraud, and that further action may be appropriate if this post actually documents fraud."²⁰⁷

B. Stanford's Initial Efforts to Unlawfully Misrepresent and Withhold Jira Data

Despite the fact that the EIP admitted in its own report that the Jira system facilitated communication between the EIP and the federal government, Stanford initially refused to provide the Committee and Select Subcommittee with the archival Jira data. Based on the representations from Stanford and other entities with knowledge of the EIP's data retention practices, the Committee understood that Stanford was the only entity with access to the Jira ticket data.²⁰⁸ Following a March 24, 2023, production which failed to adequately comply with the Committee's requests for the Jira data, the Committee issued a subpoena on April 12.²⁰⁹ On April 28, the date of the subpoena's deadline, Stanford produced a set of marginally responsive communications, but again did not produce the Jira tickets.²¹⁰

On May 4, Committee staff raised the issue of Jira tickets again during a phone call with counsel for Stanford, who agreed to consult with his client regarding the nature and retention of the Jira tickets.²¹¹ Remarkably, on May 15, Stanford's counsel confirmed to Committee staff in another phone call that the contents of the Jira tickets were responsive to the Committee's subpoena but that Stanford would nevertheless refuse to produce them.²¹² According to Stanford's counsel, the Jira tickets supposedly "concern[ed] only a research project conducted by Stanford students."²¹³ In light of Stanford's apparent unwillingness to comply in full with the subpoena, on June 1, 2023, the Committee sent a letter to Stanford raising the prospect of enforcing the subpoena, the deadline of which had long since passed.²¹⁴

The Committee's subpoena imposes legal obligations on SIO to comply and produce responsive materials. Thus, your client's refusal to produce documents responsive to the Committee's subpoena—four weeks after the subpoena return date—is highly concerning. Accordingly, the Committee expects the SIO will complete its production of responsive documents, in full, by no later than Wednesday, June 14, 2023, at 5:00 p.m. If Stanford fails to comply in full with the subpoena's demands, the Committee may be forced to consider the use of one or more enforcement mechanisms. Thank you for your client's attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Jim Jordan
Chairman

It was only after the Chairman's letter that the SIO ultimately relented and began producing the Jira data.²¹⁵ All told, the Committee has received fifteen productions from the SIO, including six which contain the data for almost 400 EIP Jira tickets.²¹⁶

C. Numerous Documents Contradict Witness Testimony Regarding CISA's Involvement with the EIP

The Committee and Select Subcommittee have conducted transcribed interviews of several witnesses involved in the EIP who have claimed that CISA had little to no involvement in the EIP. This testimony is contradicted by the overwhelming amount of evidence obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee pursuant to several subpoenas issued to entities involved with the EIP. For example, Alex Stamos, the head of the EIP, claimed that CISA's role in the EIP was limited to introducing the EIP to the EI-ISAC:

Q. So, you have contacted CISA, CISA introduces you to EI-ISAC. And we are still in the summer of 2020, to the best of your recollection?

A. Okay.

Q. What roles did CISA play, if any, after that?

A. In the EIP they had no official role. They did not have the ability to report things directly to us. We would take things from EI-ISAC. I don't believe anything that EI-ISAC sent us came from CISA employees themselves. And they were not part of our day-to-day operations or our analysis. So, *they had very little role, if none, in EIP.*²¹⁷

²¹⁷ House Judiciary Committee's Transcribed Interview of Alex Stamos (June 23, 2023), at 95 (on file with the Comm.) (emphasis added).

But Dr. Kate Starbird of CIP—and one of the founding members of the EIP—recalled more involvement from CISA. She testified:

Q. Was it your understanding that some of the external partners were government agencies?

A. It was my understanding that there was one Federal Government agency and that there were other organizations that convened local and State election officials who we saw — who my understanding was is that we could help them and they could help us figure out what the ground truth was around election processes and procedures. And so that that would be an important part of a collaboration when you're trying to address that kind of misinformation.

Q. And which Federal agency was the one that you were referencing?

A. The Federal agency that -- is kind of who was -- is the CISA agency, yeah.²¹⁸

Regarding the creation of the EIP, former CISA Director Krebs testified that “EIP’s establishment was independent of CISA,” which is directly contradicted by documents from the summer of 2020 that the Atlantic Council, one of the members of the EIP, understood that the EIP was created “at the request of DHS/CISA.”²¹⁹

The testimony of Stamos and Krebs regarding the extent of CISA’s involvement in the creation and operation of EIP is contradicted by an overwhelming amount of evidence obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee, which makes abundantly clear that, not only was CISA directly involved the creation of the EIP, but it also took an active role in the EIP’s day-to-day operations, receiving a constant stream of tips and other information from both CISA and the CISA-funded CIS.

D. Stanford’s Continued Misrepresentations Regarding CISA, the EIP, and Jira

Unable to hide from its own report, counsel for Stanford initially admitted, in a June 14, 2023, letter to the Committee, that the GEC submitted tickets through the Jira system.²²⁰ However, Stanford’s counsel then claimed that “[a]side from this small number of GEC-initiated EIP tickets, SIO did not use Jira to receive information from, or share information with, any federal government agencies or officials about the [Virality Project] or EIP projects.”²²¹ Stanford’s counsel also claimed that “for EIP, SIO did not provide any government agency or employee of a government agency (whether federal, state, or local) access to the Jira database, that Jira data. However, the statement in the Committee’s letter that the “government and large social media platforms initiated and received information” from Jira is not accurate.¹¹ Social media companies did not initiate any EIP or VP Jira tickets. Federal government agencies did not initiate any Jira tickets relating to the VP project. The State Department’s Global Engagement Center (GEC), which was established by Congress to counter foreign state disinformation and propaganda, initiated a very small number of tickets (fewer than 20) during the EIP 2020 project. These tickets concerned foreign propaganda and disinformation, primarily instigated by Russia. Aside from this small number of GEC-initiated EIP tickets, SIO did not use Jira to receive information from, or share information with, any federal government agencies or officials about the VP or EIP projects. Information from a small number of Jira tickets relating to the EIP project, and from an even smaller number of tickets relating to the VP project, was shared with social media companies. (As stated above, Stanford is producing Jira ticket data that was received from the GEC or exchanged with social media companies.) As Stanford’s counsel has explained in several telephone conversations with your staff, the vast majority of Jira tickets were generated by students and supervising researchers, and it is Stanford’s understanding that the tickets were never accessed or viewed by individuals or entities other than the researchers and non-governmental institutions participating in EIP and VP.

More specifically, for EIP, SIO did not provide any government agency or employee of a government agency (whether federal, state, or local) access to the Jira database, and SIO only communicated using Jira with a single federal agency (the State Department) regarding the handful of tickets that GEC initiated. As noted above, social media companies did not initiate any Jira tickets. The non-governmental, non-profit Center

These statements are inaccurate. In addition to the fact that CISA personnel referenced the “EIP-” codes when switchboarding, the Committee has obtained records of communications proving that CISA personnel were receiving information from or generated by the Jira system. For example, the email notification below, which was generated by the Jira system, indicates that the ticket “EIP-833” was “shared with . . . CISA CFITF.”²²³

An email exchange from November 3, 2023 between Alex Stamos and Reddit further suggests that CISA had some form of access to the Jira system. In the email, Stamos attempted to pressure Reddit to join the EIP's Jira system, writing: "It would be great if we could get somebody from Reddit on JIRA, just like Facebook, Google, Twitter, TikTok, Instagram, CISA, EI-ISAC..."²²⁴ The Reddit employee responded: "Thanks. Unfortunately as we mentioned at the beginning of this project we are unable to participate in external jiras, but we are happy to receive info over email."²²⁵

When confronted with this discrepancy during his transcribed interview, Stamos claimed that he "was probably making a mistake there talking about CISA because EI-ISAC were the people who had access to the Jira," despite the fact that he independently listed both CISA and the EI-ISAC in the email.²²⁶

The Jira data produced to the Committee and Select Subcommittee contains a number of cells in which "CISA" is mentioned, including in contexts that prove close coordination between CISA and the EIP. For example, EIP-315 contains an entry which reads, "EIP – this information was posted on an app that is not a primary social media platform. CISA is looking into how to handle this type of reporting."²²⁷

On July 27, 2023, more than a month after Stamos's interview, Stanford's counsel finally admitted in a letter to the Committee that CISA was, in fact, involved with the EIP's Jira system and that CISA had been directly "tagged" on a number of tickets.²²⁸ Stanford's counsel claimed in the letter that “At the time of Mr. Stamos’s interview, Mr. Stamos was not aware that CISA or CFITF had been ‘tagged’ in any Jira tickets.”²²⁹

¹ Following Alex Stamos’s June 23 interview with Committee Staff and the Committee’s questions with respect to Stamos Ex. 16, Stanford has reviewed whether any federal government entity other than the Department of State’s Global Engagement Center (GEC) initiated or was “tagged” in any Jira tickets. Stanford has since determined that the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) Countering Foreign Influence Task Force (CFITF) was “tagged” in a small number of Jira tickets. Based on the information currently available to Stanford, it appears that for a short period of time, some EIP researchers utilized this “tag,” rather than or in addition to the “EI-ISAC” tag, to flag the Jira tickets potentially needing input or review by the relevant state and local election officials. Stanford has identified 14 Jira tickets with a CISA CFITF “tag,” specifically: EIP-236, EIP -239, EIP-243, EIP-563, EIP-570, EIP-616, EIP-664, EIP-686, EIP-695, EIP-713, EIP-743, EIP-810, EIP-833, and EIP-1009. At the time of Mr. Stamos’s interview, Mr. Stamos was not aware that CISA or CFITF had been “tagged” in any Jira tickets.

This is an especially dubious assertion, given that EIP-664, EIP-686, EIP-695—tickets which the SIO admitted were shared with CISA—were assigned to Stamos, according to the Jira data produced to the Committee and Select Subcommittee.²³⁰

EPILOGUE

It is no surprise that Stanford University attempted to refuse to turn over documents responsive to the Committee's subpoena: they reveal that the EIP was not a non-partisan "school project" comprised of students and researchers interested in combatting misinformation online. Instead, from start to finish, the EIP operation worked directly with the federal government and disproportionately targeted conservative-oriented speech.

After the 2020 election, what others have deemed the "censorship industrial complex," played out as expected. After President Trump fired CISA Director Chris Krebs in November 2020, Mr. Krebs created the Krebs Stamos Group with Alex Stamos, the head of the EIP and the SIO, in January 2021. Matt Masterson left CISA at the end of 2020 and took a position as a non-research fellow with Stanford, working with the SIO and its Virality Project.

With the election over and the American people questioning the wisdom of lockdowns and the safety of the COVID-19 vaccines, the EIP reconstituted itself as the Virality Project. Again working with the federal government, the SIO launched the Virality Project as a "a global study aimed at understanding the disinformation dynamics specific to the COVID-19 crisis." The Virality Project again used Jira tickets. Though Stanford was less explicit and specific in its recommendations for censorship as it was under the EIP model, social media platforms still dutifully removed content flagged by Stanford:

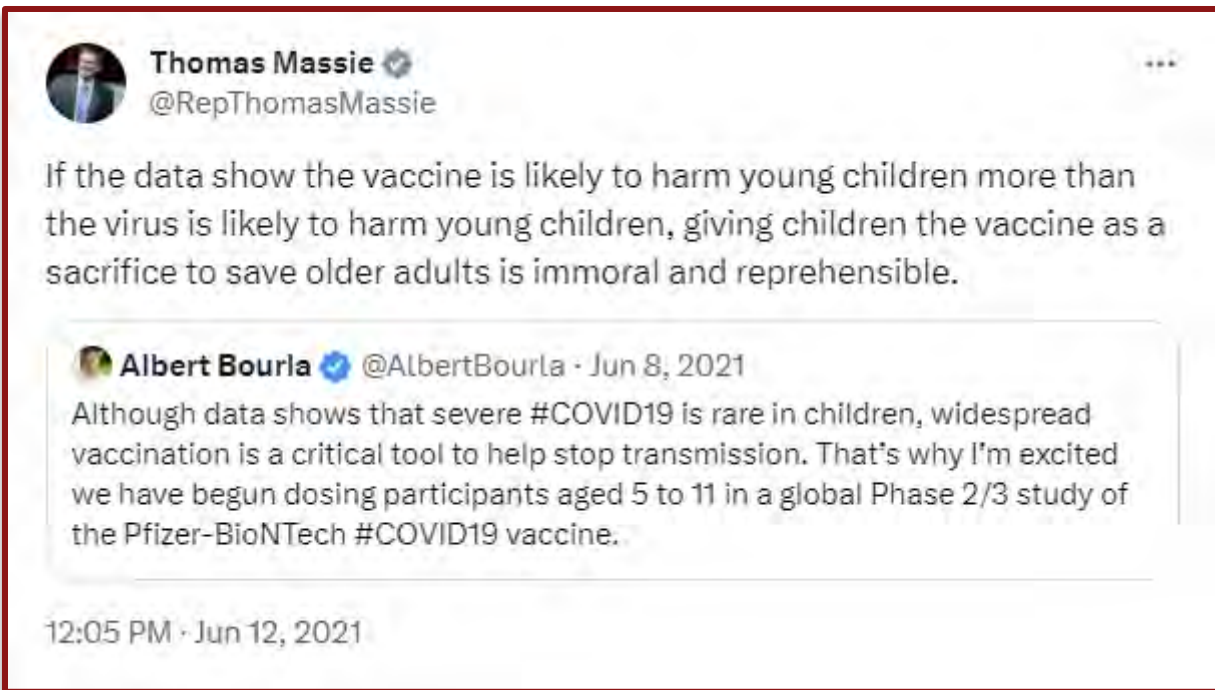

Like the EIP, Stanford’s Virality Project continued to flag content directly to social media platforms, including true content by elected officials, such as the tweet below by Congressman Thomas Massie.²³¹ In reference to this tweet, the Virality Project ticket stated, “Dear Facebook and Twitter teams, Please note this Israeli narrative claiming that Covid-19 immunity is equivalent to vaccination immunity, with the following URLs:” before flagging Congressman Massie’s tweet among other Facebook and Twitter links.²³²

After President Biden was inaugurated in January 2021, the government’s censorship regime ramped up. At CISA, the CFITF team dropped any pretense of a “foreign”-focus and relabeled itself as the “MDM team” that would focus on foreign and domestic speech that the government considered mis-, dis-, or malinformation.²³⁴ Throughout 2021, the Biden White House engaged in a pressure campaign against Facebook and other social media companies to censor anti-vaccine content, even if it was true.²³⁵ By 2022, CISA invited Dr. Starbird, then-Twitter Executive Vijaya Gadde, and others to form an advisory MDM Subcommittee to consult with CISA about how the agency could and should combat Americans’ speech that the government considered to be mis-, dis-, or malinformation.²³⁶ DHS created, and then disbanded after public outcry, the short-lived Disinformation Governance Board.²³⁷

But by 2023, as Republicans retook the majority in the House of Representatives and initiated oversight of the censorship-industrial complex, CISA scrubbed its website of references to domestic censorship.²³⁸ The Committee and Select Subcommittee obtained and revealed how Facebook changed its policies because of pressure from the Biden Administration.²³⁹ Internal Facebook documents showed that the Biden White House in particular wanted true information and satire censored at a rate even Big Tech found objectionable.²⁴⁰ Based on the Committee's and Select Subcommittee's work, even the mainstream media could no longer ignore these constitutional violations.²⁴¹ The plaintiffs in Missouri v. Biden have obtained significant victories before a federal district court and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, and now will have their case heard by the Supreme Court. Public reporting shows that universities are reconsidering whether to permit their professors to receive funding and engage in censorship work.²⁴²

But the work is not done yet. The Committee and Select Subcommittee's investigation remains ongoing. To better inform legislative efforts to end government censorship and protect Americans' rights guaranteed by the First Amendment, the Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to investigate the extent of CISA's and other Executive Branch agencies' interactions with social media platforms and third parties, including those used to facilitate censorship by proxy.

APPENDIX I

The House Judiciary Committee and its Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government have obtained documents and information from Stanford University, pursuant to a subpoena, which reveal that EIP analysts and staff made explicit recommendations to social media platforms for specific enforcement measures on at least 75 occasions in just a four-month span in the lead-up to and during the 2020 election. This appendix compiles those 75 recommendations in order of their EIP Jira ticket number. The entire Jira ticket, including comments from social media platforms, can be found by cross-referencing the archived Jira ticket data provided in Appendix II.

Ticket #	Entry
EIP-166	“Hello Google, . . . We recommend this ad be removed.”
EIP-279	“We recommend Twitter label or remove this tweet.”
EIP-307	“We recommend that the following platforms take these actions: Twitter - Disable account.”
EIP-321	“Recommended actions: Ban sharing links to the following sites:”
EIP-329	“We are reporting two instances of electoral disinformation constituting participation interference and delegitimization. We flag a post and an account to you all at Twitter, and recommend the following:”
EIP-330	“We recommend that Twitter and Facebook remove these posts. If you are not able to remove these posts, we suggest that they be labeled as misleading.”
EIP-345	“The article is being shared on Facebook, and while it has been labeled when shared in a group, official Page shares did not receive such a label . . . We recommend labeling all instances of the article being shared on Facebook.”
EIP-348	“Recommend labeling.”
EIP-378	“This has circulated in pro-Trump conservative groups and sub-communities . . . We recommend that you all flag as false, or remove the posts below.”

EIP-512	“We recommend that Twitter remove this tweet.”; “We recommend these tweets be taken down.”; “I recommend that Twitter and Facebook remove these posts or add a strong label.”
EIP-537	“Hello Youtube, Facebook teams: We are adding you to this ticket as the videos in questions contain several misleading claims about mail-in ballots as well as in-person voting. We recommend a specific label be applied to these posts.”
EIP-559	“We recommend removing or labeling this tweet.”; “As this is clearly false information about the election we recommend removal by Twitter.”
EIP-575	“We recommend Twitter actions the account for election delegitimization.”
EIP-581	“We recommend you label or reduce the discoverability of the post.”
EIP-585	“We recommend removing the linked Tweet.”; “Recommend also removing the linked Quote Tweets.”
EIP-589	“As it is a false claim that undermines trust in the electoral process we recommend its removal.”
EIP-608	“Recommend labeling.”
EIP-614	“We recommend at least labeling as this is a disproven claim of an electoral crime.”
EIP-615	“We recommend removing these posts and will update you with any more.”
EIP-638	“We recommend labeling his [sic] tweets and monitoring if any of the tagged influencer accounts retweet him.”
EIP-639	“We recommend removing or labeling these tweets.”
EIP-656	“@SeanHannity is sharing a partial statement by Rep. Ilhan Omar . . . we recommend Twitter adds a label to Tweets sharing the link to the article.”
EIP-664	“Twitter, recommend removing:”
EIP-668	“We repeat our recommendation that this account be suspended for the duration of election day from posting additional misleading information about voting.”

EIP-673	“We recommend that this tweet, and other tweets sharing this false information, should be removed.”; “We recommend taking action specifically on this account, such as suspending their ability to continue tweeting for 12 hours.”
EIP-680	“We recommend that this tweet, as well as the tweets with the original video should be removed or labeled as misleading.”
EIP-698	“Recommend removal for some, labeling for other Tweets.”
EIP-705	“We recommend that this tweet be removed or flagged for misleading content.”
EIP-706	“As the accounts are making a baseless claim that undermines trust in the electoral process we recommend the accounts be actioned.”
EIP-715	“This account in the above tweet is attempting to delegitimize the voting process without evidence. We recommend it be actioned.”
EIP-746	“We recommend removing this content.”
EIP-767	“We recommend Twitter remove the posts.”
EIP-779	“We recommend that posts sharing links to this story and posts sharing screenshots of this story be removed. If they cannot be removed, a banner explaining that they are sharing false or misleading content should be added.”
EIP-780	“We know you are aware of the #stopthesteal push but we have gathered here some of the major contributors . . . We recommend actioning these quickly.”
EIP-789	“These posts are growing rapidly, and we recommend that they be removed, because they undermine people’s faith in the legitimacy of the election result.”
EIP-790	“They share this video to suggest that Biden is engaging in voter fraud, but this is misleading . . . Facebook has put a warning banner on similar posts (see linked post), and we suggest that Twitter either remove these posts or do the same.”
EIP-795	“We recommend that these posts be removed immediately.”
EIP-798	“We recommend that the tweet be removed, or at least covered with a misleading/disputed content banner. It falsely undermines people’s faith in the legitimacy of the election results.”
EIP-811	“Users on Twitter and Facebook are sharing manipulated images of people moving boxes in trucks labeled ‘Emergency Democrat Votes.’ We suggest labeling or removing tweets that use this photo, as it could undermine people’s faith in the legitimacy of the election process.”

EIP-817	“As it is a claim without evidence that undermines trust in the election we recommend it be actioned.”
EIP-847	“We recommend labeling (as some have already been) or removing these tweets.”
EIP-853	“Recommend labels or removal.”
EIP-867	“We recommend that these claims be labeled as unsubstantiated.”
EIP-868	“We strongly recommend that platforms take action on this content and any further content with this screenshot. These posts should be removed or labeled appropriately.”
EIP-869	“We recommend at least labeling as this is a disproven claim of an election crime.”
EIP-879	“We recommend that this content be removed or labeled.”
EIP-890	“We recommend flagging (or removing) posts that make this claim:”
EIP-909	“We recommend removal.”
EIP-920	“Recommend you limit spread of attached tweets.”
EIP-949	“We have completed this analysis of the attached Breitbart article and recommend that any links to it be labeled or removed per policy.”; “recommend applying the same label to other/new instances of the narrative.”
EIP-952	“We recommend it be actioned with fact-check labeling.”
EIP-969	“Facebook: please see this misleading Instagram story . . . Recommend labeling or other action, as it has already made its way to Twitter.”
EIP-970	“Facebook and Twitter: this story from alleged Nevada ‘whistleblower’ claiming voting irregularities has not been verified or substantiated. It has received significant viral amplification. We recommend these links be labeled.”
EIP-987	“We are working on a thread but recommend that Twitter/Facebook delete (or at least label) the videos.”

EIP-989	“We recommend it be removed as violative of terms of service.”
EIP-996	“We recommend removing or labeling this content as appropriate.”
EIP-998	“We recommend that they be flagged for labeling or removal.”

Interim Staff Report of the Committee on the Judiciary
and the
Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government

U.S. House of Representatives

June 26, 2023

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

“One could argue we’re in the business of critical infrastructure, and the most critical infrastructure is our cognitive infrastructure, so building that resilience to misinformation and disinformation, I think, is incredibly important.”

– CISA Director Jen Easterly, November 10, 2021.¹

The First Amendment recognizes that no person or entity has a monopoly on the truth, and that the “truth” of today can quickly become the “misinformation” of tomorrow. Labeling speech “misinformation” or “disinformation” does not strip it of its First Amendment protection. As such, under the Constitution, the federal government is strictly prohibited from censoring Americans’ political speech. The government also may not use third parties to bypass the First Amendment and conduct censorship by proxy.²

The Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government have been conducting an investigation into government-induced censorship on social media. Although the investigation is ongoing, information obtained to date has revealed that the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA)—an upstart agency within the Department of Homeland Security (DHS)—has facilitated the censorship of Americans directly and through third-party intermediaries.

Founded in 2018, CISA was originally intended to be an ancillary agency designed to protect “critical infrastructure” and guard against cybersecurity threats.³ In the years since its creation, however, CISA metastasized into the nerve center of the federal government’s domestic surveillance and censorship operations on social media.⁴ By 2020, CISA routinely reported social media posts that allegedly spread “disinformation” to social media platforms.⁵ By 2021, CISA had a formal “Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation” (MDM) team.⁶ In 2022 and 2023, in response to growing public and private criticism of CISA’s unconstitutional behavior, CISA attempted to camouflage its activities, duplicitously claiming it serves a purely “informational” role.⁷

This interim staff report details, among other things, that:

⁷ See, e.g., Scully Dep. 17:9–14, supra note 5.

- CISA is “working with federal partners to mature a whole-of-government approach” to curbing alleged misinformation and disinformation.⁸
- CISA considered the creation of an anti-misinformation “rapid response team” capable of physically deploying across the United States.⁹
- CISA moved its censorship operation to a CISA-funded non-profit after CISA and the Biden Administration were sued in federal court, implicitly admitting that its censorship activities are unconstitutional.¹⁰
- CISA wanted to use the same CISA-funded non-profit as its mouthpiece to “avoid the appearance of government propaganda.”¹¹
- Members of CISA’s advisory committee agonized that it was “only a matter of time before someone realizes we exist and starts asking about our work.”¹²

The Committee and the Select Subcommittee are responsible for investigating “violation[s] of the civil liberties of citizens of the United States.”¹³ In accordance with this mandate, this interim staff report on CISA’s violations of the First Amendment and other unconstitutional activities fulfills the obligation to identify and report on the weaponization of the federal government against American citizens. The work, however, is not done. CISA still has not adequately complied with a subpoena for relevant documents, and much more fact-finding is necessary. In order to better inform the Committee’s legislative efforts, the Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to investigate CISA’s and other Executive Branch agencies’ entanglement with social media platforms.

BACKGROUND

The Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government have been conducting oversight of the federal government’s work with non-government entities to censor speech online. The Select Subcommittee has also convened two hearings on the subject of social media censorship¹⁴ and published an interim staff report exposing the Federal Trade Commission’s (FTC) politically motivated harassment campaign against Elon Musk’s Twitter.¹⁵

The First Amendment to the United States Constitution rests on the principle that no person or institution, including the government, has a monopoly on the truth, and that viewpoint-based suppression of speech by the government is dangerous and may even spell the death of a constitutional republic.¹⁶ Under the First Amendment, the “government has no power to restrict expression because of its message, its ideas, its subject matter, or its content.”¹⁷ As the Supreme Court has explained: “If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation, it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion, or other matters of opinion.”¹⁸

Labeling speech “misinformation” does not strip it of First Amendment protection. That is so even if the speech is untrue, as “[s]ome false statements are inevitable if there is to be an open and vigorous expression of views in public and private conversation.”¹⁹ In refusing to carve out a First Amendment exception for “false” speech, the Framers of our Constitution recognized the significant danger in making the government the ultimate arbiter of truth.²⁰ The First Amendment also protects the right to receive information, “an inherent corollary of the rights to free speech and press that are explicitly guaranteed by the Constitution” because “the right to receive ideas follows ineluctably from the sender’s First Amendment right to send them.”²¹

It is “axiomatic,” in the words of the Supreme Court, that the government may not “induce, encourage, or promote private persons to accomplish what it is constitutionally forbidden to accomplish.”²² Moreover, the First Amendment prohibits the government from “abridging the freedom of speech”²³—not “negating” or “abrogating,” but merely “abridging.” Thus, any law or administrative policy that impedes the ability of users to speak freely on privately owned social media platforms violates the First Amendment.²⁴

This interim report focuses primarily on the censorship efforts of the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA), a component of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), and its role in what one journalist and commentator has called the “censorship industrial complex.”²⁵

The Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency

Congress established CISA in 2018, redesignating the National Protection and Programs Directorate (NPPD) within DHS as CISA.²⁶ CISA’s statutory mission included “lead[ing] cybersecurity and critical infrastructure security programs, operations, and associated policy,” and “carry[ing] out the requirements of the Chemical Facility Anti-Terrorism Standards Program.”²⁷ In April 2019, Daniel Sutherland, CISA’s Chief Counsel, claimed: “We are a non-regulatory, non-law enforcement, non-intelligence community” agency.²⁸

As defined in 2003 by Homeland Security Presidential Directive 7, the term “critical infrastructure” was formerly used to describe “information technology; telecommunications; chemical; transportation systems, including mass transit, aviation, maritime, ground/surface, and rail and pipeline systems; emergency services; and postal and shipping.”²⁹ It was not until 2017, shortly after the 2016 election, that President Obama’s DHS Secretary Jeh Johnson designated “election infrastructure” as a “critical infrastructure subsector.”³⁰

Ostensibly created to protect the electrical grid and other “critical infrastructure” sectors from cybersecurity threats,³¹ CISA, a little-known agency buried in the depths of DHS, soon expanded its mission to combat “foreign disinformation.”³² Not long thereafter, under the pretext of protecting “election infrastructure,” CISA began surveilling and censoring American citizens online, directly and by proxy.

CISA’s Cybersecurity Advisory Committee (CSAC)

DHS created the CISA Cybersecurity Advisory Committee (CSAC) in June 2021 “to advance CISA’s cybersecurity mission and strengthen the cybersecurity of the United States.”³³ CSAC in turn established a “Protecting Critical Infrastructure from Misinformation & Disinformation” Subcommittee,³⁴ commonly known as the “MDM Subcommittee.”³⁵

The MDM Subcommittee, which has since disbanded,³⁶ brought together government, Big Tech, and academic misinformation “experts,” including:

- Dr. Kate Starbird, Associate Professor and Co-Founder of the University of Washington’s Center for an Informed Public (CIP).³⁷ CIP was a member of both the Election Integrity Partnership (EIP)³⁸ and the Virality Project (VP).³⁹ Starbird served as the Chair of the MDM Subcommittee.⁴⁰
- Vijaya Gadde, the former Chief Legal Officer of Twitter, who was “involved in censoring [the New York Post’s Hunter Biden laptop” story.⁴¹ Gadde was also “behind the decision to permanently ban former President Trump from Twitter.”⁴² Shortly after Elon Musk completed his purchase of Twitter, Gadde was fired from the company in October 2022.⁴³

MDM Subcommittee meetings also featured government participants, including Geoff Hale, who leads CISA’s “Election Security Initiative,”⁴⁶ and Kim Wyman, the former Washington Secretary of State, who now serves as CISA’s Senior Election Security Advisor.⁴⁷

During its existence, the MDM Subcommittee issued two sets of formal recommendations: one set in June 2022,⁴⁸ and another in September 2022.⁴⁹ The Subcommittee’s June 2022 recommendations included, among other things, recommendations that “CISA should approach the [misinformation and disinformation] problem with the entire information ecosystem in view. This includes social media platforms of all sizes, mainstream media, cable news, hyper partisan media, talk radio, and other online resources.”⁵⁰

The Center for Internet Security (CIS)

The Center for Internet Security (CIS) is a nonprofit organization that operates the Multi-State Information Sharing and Analysis Center (MS-ISAC) and Elections Infrastructure Information Sharing and Analysis Center (EI-ISAC).⁵¹ According to a postmortem report covering social media activity related to the 2020 election cycle, “the EI-ISAC served as a singular conduit for election officials to report false or misleading information to platforms.”⁵² Put plainly, election officials around the country sent CIS purportedly false or misleading content, which CIS forwarded to the relevant social media platforms.⁵³

CISA’S MISSION CREEP INTO SURVEILLANCE, CENSORSHIP, AND COVER-UPS

The Committee and Select Subcommittee have obtained previously undisclosed, non-public documents that reveal CISA expanded its mission to surveil Americans’ speech on social media, colluded with Big Tech and government-funded third parties to censor by proxy, and tried to hide its plainly unconstitutional activities from the public.

Surveillance. CISA expanded its mission from “cybersecurity” to monitor foreign “disinformation” to eventually monitor all “disinformation,” including Americans’ speech. In one e-mail exchange obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee, the agency’s rapid mission creep surprised even a non-profit focused on foreign “disinformation.”

Censorship. CISA exploited its connections with Big Tech and government-funded non-profits to censor by proxy, in order to circumvent the First Amendment’s prohibition against government-induced censorship. This included the creation of reporting “portals” which funneled “misinformation” reports from the government directly to social media platforms. Newly uncovered meeting minutes show that CISA was advised by a group Big Tech executives and academics who encouraged CISA’s unconstitutional behavior.

Cover-ups. As CISA’s operational scope expanded further into unconstitutional territory, the agency and its advisors tried to cover their tracks and cover up CISA’s censorship of domestic speech and surveillance of American citizens’ social media activity. This included scrubbing CISA’s website of references to domestic “misinformation” and “disinformation.”

I. CISA has transformed into a domestic intelligence and speech-police agency, far exceeding its statutory authority

CISA’s focus on “cybersecurity” quickly expanded into social media surveillance of real and perceived foreign actors. Shortly after CISA became its own agency, then-DHS Secretary Kristjen Nielsen created the “Countering Foreign Influence Task Force” (CFITF) within CISA “to focus on election infrastructure disinformation.”⁵⁶ Following the unfounded claims by Democrats that foreign—particularly Russian—influence changed the outcome of the 2016 election,⁵⁷ CISA expanded its “cybersecurity” role to include countering foreign malign influence operations. In its public materials, CISA emphasized at the time that it was primarily concerned with addressing foreign, rather than domestic, disinformation.⁵⁸ Starting in January 2019, Brian Scully served first as the head of the CFITF and later as the head of the MDM team at CISA.⁵⁹

In January 2021, after President Biden took office, “CISA transitioned its [CFITF] to promote more flexibility to focus on general MDM,” or so-called “Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation.”⁶⁰ In so doing, CISA admitted that its focus was no longer exclusively on “countering foreign influence,” but was also targeting MDM originating from domestic sources. For example, according to a 2022 CISA pamphlet titled “Planning and Incident Response Guide for Election Officials,” “MDM also may originate from domestic sources aiming to sow divisions and reduce national cohesion.”⁶¹

Although CISA’s efforts to police speech are highly troubling overall, one particularly problematic aspect is CISA’s focus on “malinformation.” According to CISA’s own definition, “[m]alinformation is based on fact, but used out of context to mislead, harm, or manipulate.”⁶² In other words, malinformation is factual information that is objectionable not because it is false or untruthful, but because it is provided without adequate “context”—context as determined by the government.

In addition, what constitutes “misinformation” or “disinformation” is determined by government actors, whose evaluations of truth and falsity are necessarily subjective, and “inherently political,” as explained in the comments of a Google Doc by Starbird below.⁶³

CISA’s involvement in policing alleged mis- and disinformation, as well as malinformation—truthful information without “sufficient” context—is a direct and serious threat to First Amendment principles.

Although the CFITF did not formally shed “foreign” from its name until January 2021, CISA’s efforts to curb domestic MDM had been ongoing for months, ramping up in advance of the 2020 election. An e-mail exchange on November 4, 2020 demonstrates that even non-profits focused on “disinformation,” such as the German Marshall Fund’s Alliance for Securing Democracy (ASD), were caught off guard by CISA’s expansion into the surveillance of domestic speech. In the exchange, an ASD employee emailed Robert Schaul, the Analysis and Resilience Policy Lead at CISA,⁶⁴ writing: “Obviously, what we’re seeing domestically, particularly around mail-in fraud, is very concerning, but I know that’s outside your purview.”⁶⁵ Schaul corrected the ASD employee: “Mail-fraud disinfo[rmation] is in-bounds for us this time, domestic or foreign; so if you see something you’re worried about let us know.”⁶⁶

Despite constituting a clear departure from its statutory mandate, CISA’s MDM team has, at its peak, been comprised of “a total of 15 dedicated part- and full-time staff,” who focus on “disinformation activities targeting elections and critical infrastructure.”⁶⁷ Jen Easterly, the current Director of CISA, justified CISA’s MDM-related activities by saying: “One could argue we’re in the business of critical infrastructure, and the most critical infrastructure is our cognitive infrastructure, so building that resilience to misinformation and disinformation, I think, is incredibly important.”⁶⁸

A. Switchboarding: CISA’s coordination with Big Tech to censor Americans

CISA’s Director, Jen Easterly, claimed in her March 28, 2023 testimony before Congress that “we don’t flag anything to social media organizations at all. We are focused on building resilience to foreign influence and disinformation.”⁶⁹ Despite Easterly’s assurances, however, the DHS Office of Inspector General (OIG) has reported that CISA began “notifying social media platforms or appropriate law enforcement official when voting-related disinformation appeared in social media” as early as 2018.⁷⁰

When deposed as part of ongoing litigation in federal court, Brian Scully, the head of CISA’s MDM team, confirmed that CISA has historically flagged disinformation to social media platforms, in a process known as “switchboarding.”⁷¹ Scully further described switchboarding as a “resource intensive”⁷² process whereby CISA officials received alleged “misinformation” reports from election officials and forwarded those reports to social media companies so that they could take enforcement measures against the reported content.⁷³

CISA has sought to disclaim any responsibility in affecting social media companies’ decisions on content moderation. In reporting content to social media platforms, CISA officials, including Scully, often appended a disclaimer to their e-mails, claiming, “CISA affirms that it neither has nor seeks the ability to remove or edit what information is made available on social media platforms.”⁷⁴ However, when deposed as part of ongoing federal litigation, Scully admitted that CISA was aware that its outreach to social media companies about alleged disinformation would trigger content moderation.⁷⁵

B. CISA’s MDM consultants rejected constitutional “limitations” on the surveillance and censorship of domestic speech

Originally created to protect critical infrastructure such as dams and pipelines from foreign malign actors, CISA has ventured well beyond its founding mandate and began targeting constitutionally protected domestic speech for censorship on social media platforms. By 2020, just two years after its creation, CISA had unilaterally expanded its authorities from countering foreign influence operations to curtailing domestic speech. In 2021, CISA created an advisory committee, including the MDM Subcommittee, in order to receive input from Big Tech and “disinformation” experts. According to documents produced to the Committee and Select Subcommittee,⁷⁶ members of the MDM Subcommittee, while serving in this advisory role, pushed aside legitimate criticism and urged CISA to continue on its unconstitutional trajectory.

On August 30, 2022, MDM Subcommittee members discussed the propriety of DHS “identifying domestic actors” spreading alleged disinformation.⁷⁷ According to notes of the meeting that day, Suzanne Spaulding, a former CIA legal advisor, “urged Dr. Starbird not to solely focus on addressing foreign threats.”⁷⁸ Spaulding also “encouraged Dr. Starbird to emphasize that domestic threats remain and while attribution is sometimes unclear, CISA should be sensitive to domestic distinctions, but cannot focus too heavily on such limitations.”⁷⁹ In the same meeting, the director of CISA’s Election Security Initiative “[Geoff] Hale reflected that these discussions of scoping authority relate to the Subcommittee’s initial deliberations urging CISA to be actor-agnostic in their work combating mis- and dis-information.”⁸⁰ In other words, Hale, a federal government employee, observed that the Subcommittee’s work addressing alleged mis- and dis-information should not distinguish between foreign and domestic sources.

Other documents produced to the Committee and Select Subcommittee suggest that Hale and the MDM Subcommittee urged action in the domestic space, even in the face of opposition from state and local election administration officials. In particular, during the MDM Subcommittee’s August 8, 2022 meeting, Twitter’s Chief Legal Officer Vijaya Gadde “reflected on the group’s previous meeting with the National Association of Secretaries of State (NASS) and the National Association of State Election Directors (NASED) and noted in their feedback that CISA should not be involved in this mission space, except when a foreign adversary is at play.”⁸¹ Gadde doubted that this distinction could serve as a meaningful limit for CISA because “it is difficult to determine whether a foreign adversary is involved.”⁸² Later in the same meeting, Starbird “noted that because mis- and disinformation is universal, CISA must play a role on the national level.”⁸³

- Subcommittee members discussed CISA’s role in the elections space. Dr. Starbird addressed the doubt and manufactured doubt into whether CISA should play a role. She stressed one of the goals of the recommendations is to share why CISA should act in the elections space to combat mis- and dis-information.
 - Ms. Gadde reflected on the group’s previous meeting with the National Association of Secretaries of State (NASS) and the National Association of State Election Directors (NASED) and noted in their feedback that CISA should not be involved in this mission space, except when a foreign adversary is at play. She cautioned that it is difficult to determine whether a foreign adversary is involved.

C. CISA considered creating an anti-MDM “rapid response team” to physically deploy across the United States

In one particularly notable departure from its legal authority, during the MDM Subcommittee’s June 14, 2022 meeting, participants “explore[d] the idea of how CISA could develop a rapid response team to deploy . . . in-person to local election officials’ jurisdictions struggling with specific informational threats.”⁸⁴ The CISA officials present at the meeting seemed receptive to the idea, with Geoff Hale, the director of CISA’s Election Security Initiative, commenting that “this is a fascinating idea that takes CISA’s existing operational responsibilities to consider MDM as part of its core mission set.”⁸⁵

CISA

- Dr. Starbird added that Mr. Richer’s colleague, Mr. Scott Jarred, suggested that the subcommittee explore the idea of how CISA could develop a rapid response team to deploy virtually or in-person to local election officials’ jurisdictions struggling with specific informational threats. The support would include checking equipment to verify if a breach is present or not, determining how to communicate the existence of a breach, and determining how to target certain kinds of communication.
 - Ms. Tate-Nadeau clarified if this rapid response team would only act in the context of MDM threats. Dr. Starbird noted that the response team would require a broader range of expertise, as they first must be able to verify whether a real threat exists, then be able to communicate the existence of an MDM threat.
 - Mr. Geoff Hale, CISA, commented that this is a fascinating idea that takes CISA’s existing operational responsibilities to consider MDM as part of its core mission set. He noted that this would be an evolution of CISA’s current defensive posture. Ms. Gadde agreed with this framing of the question.
 - Dr. Starbird commented that the rapid response team would need to surge for short periods of time around elections. She suggested the subcommittee consider the requirements for the team’s expandability, ability to conduct media analysis, and the level of understanding on MDM in a communications context.

Starbird, the chair of the MDM Subcommittee, also “commented that the rapid response team would need to surge for short periods of time around elections.”⁸⁶ Hale then “noted the possibility to stand up this team in the short term by encouraging the communications team to consider MDM equities.”⁸⁷

Subcommittee members then abandoned any pretext of operating within CISA’s legal authority, with Twitter’s Vijaya Gadde noting “that the idea of a rapid response team must include the ability to engage whether or not a cyber component is present.”⁸⁸ “Dr. Starbird agreed with Ms. Gadde’s point that threats to critical infrastructure are not limited to cyber threats.”⁸⁹

- Ms. Gadde noted that physical and MDM-related threats are often interrelated, so the group cannot address the physical threats against elections officials without addressing the root cause of MDM-related threats. She continued by stressing that MDM threat exist with or without a cyber component. She noted that the idea of a rapid response team must include the ability to engage whether or not a cyber component is present.
- Dr. Starbird agreed with Ms. Gadde’s point that threats to critical infrastructure are not limited to cyber threats.

D. MDM “experts” wanted CISA to crack down on factual information

Even so-called “malinformation”—truthful information that, according to the government, may carry the potential to mislead—could not escape the scrutiny of CISA’s MDM “experts.”⁹⁰ In an e-mail exchange between MDM Subcommittee members Starbird and Spaulding, Spaulding wrote: “As I’ve read more about malinformation, I think you’re right that it could fit the kinds of risks we are concerned about. The challenge may be that because it is not false, per se . . . it is much trickier from a policy perspective.”⁹¹ Spaulding proposed a “compromise”: “that [malinformation] is part of CISA’s current scope but that our recommendations, at least at this stage, are focused primarily on countering false information.”⁹²

 thanks for continuing to think about this issue. As I've read more about malinformation, I think you're right that it could fit the kinds of risks we are concerned about. The challenge may be that because it is not false, per se (though presented in a misleading, manipulative way to cause harm), it is much trickier from a policy perspective. I think we could compromise by noting that it is part of CISA's current scope but that our recommendations, at least at this stage, are focused primarily on countering false information. Would that work? I'll try suggesting line-in line-out changes to the text.

Starbird responded that “malinformation is perhaps the hardest challenge in this space.”⁹³ Starbird then lamented that “unfortunately current public discourse (in part a result of information operations) seems to accept malinformation as ‘speech’ and within democratic norms” and that CISA may face “bad faith criticism” for censoring content that is true.⁹⁴

E. CISA is only one part of a “whole-of-government” approach to MDM

Documents obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee establish that CISA and the MDM Subcommittee considered CISA to be only one part of a grander, “whole-of-government” approach to tackling disfavored speech. For example, according to the MDM Subcommittee’s “Subcommittee Overview & Update,” “CISA is bringing on staff to address MDM related to the pandemic . . . as well as improving our ability to do analytics on narrative intervention. We are also working with federal partners to mature a whole-of-government approach to mitigating risks of MDM, framing which . . . interventions are appropriate to the threats impacting the information environment.”⁹⁵

As another example, during a March 1, 2022 meeting of the MDM Subcommittee, Laura Dehmlow of the FBI’s Foreign Influence Task Force (FITF), who had been invited to brief the MDM Subcommittee, claimed that the “FBI does not perform narrative or content-based analysis.”⁹⁶ According to the meeting notes, Starbird, the chair of the MDM Subcommittee, then offered CISA to fill this perceived gap in the government’s censorship efforts, suggesting that “CISA might have a role based on the Subcommittee helping to define the narrative so the ‘whole of government’ approach could be leveraged.”⁹⁷

F. State election officials warned CISA to “remain within [its] operational and mission limits,” lest it should earn the public’s “distrust.”

MDM Subcommittee meeting notes and other documents obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee reveal that those engaging with CISA, and even election officials, were critical of CISA’s efforts to crack down on domestic speech related to elections. On August 2, 2022, Leslie Reynolds of the National Association of Secretaries of State (NASS) cautioned the MDM Subcommittee “that it is important for CISA to remain within their operational and mission limits. CISA specifically should stick with misinformation and disinformation as related to cybersecurity issues.”⁹⁸ Unfazed by the admonishment, Starbird promptly “sought to clarify how CISA can assist with matters outside their direct mission scope.”⁹⁹

H. Social media companies mocked CISA’s MDM team and DHS’s Disinformation Governance Board

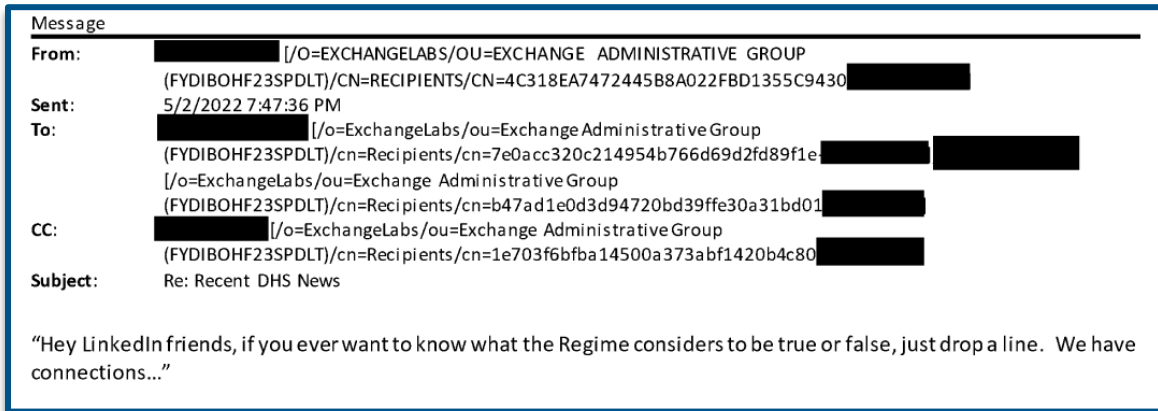

CISA’s “connectivity to the (domestic) social media companies” did not, however, prevent it from being criticized by these social media companies. In May 2022, following public backlash concerning DHS’s Orwellian Disinformation Governance Board,¹⁰³ Brian Scully, the head of CISA’s MDM team, e-mailed several LinkedIn employees, writing, “[g]iven the confusion around last week’s announcement of a DHS disinformation governance board, I want to make sure you know that LinkedIn can always reach out to CISA should you have any questions.”¹⁰⁴

¹⁰³ The Disinformation Governance Board was an organ of DHS intended to “coordinate countering misinformation related to homeland security,” which was first announced on April 27, 2022. A LinkedIn employee then forwarded Scully’s e-mail to another LinkedIn employee, who responded internally, mocking Scully: “Hey LinkedIn friends, if you ever want to know what the Regime considers to be true or false, just drop a line. We have connections...”¹⁰⁵

I. CSAC members were concerned about the MDM Subcommittee

Other members of the broader CSAC also exhibited discomfort at CISA’s and the MDM Subcommittee’s efforts related to MDM. During a closed session of the CSAC at its June 2022 Quarterly meeting, Cloudflare CEO Matthew Prince “flagged his concerns with the MDM Subcommittee and the perception that CISA is influencing narratives.”¹⁰⁶

Nicole Perloth, another CSAC member, also “recommended that CISA establish an independent equivalent of a Facebook oversight board with people who are not vocal on Twitter, nor are they politically active, to give honest feedback. She expressed concern that since Director Easterly is serving under a political administration, this will put the recommendations at a higher risk.”¹⁰⁷

II. CISA colludes with third parties to circumvent the First Amendment and conduct censorship by proxy

For the same reasons that the federal government may not censor Americans' speech, the federal government is also prohibited from using third parties to censor speech on its behalf. Under the First Amendment, the government may not "abridg[e] the freedom of speech."¹⁰⁸ The Constitution thus forbids the government from engaging in conduct that prevents or hampers speech on private social media platforms because of its content or the viewpoint that it expresses.¹⁰⁹

Challenges to government involvement in the suppression of speech on social media are all relatively recent. As such, courts have had little opportunity to address the matter. However, a federal court recently found that this type of conduct gave rise to a plausible First Amendment claim: "Plaintiffs have clearly and plausibly alleged that [the government] engaged in viewpoint discrimination and prior restraints,"¹¹⁰ the court declared, citing the plaintiffs' allegations of "extensive and highly effective efforts of government officials to silence or muffle the expression of disfavored viewpoints."¹¹¹ The court concluded that the plaintiffs had "plausibly alleged state action under the theories of joint participation, entwinement, and the combining of factors such as subsidization, authorization, and encouragement."¹¹²

In a draft of its June 2022 recommendations, the MDM Subcommittee refers to this pattern of unconstitutional outsourcing, writing, "CISA should also engage in content- and narrative-specific mitigation efforts . . . CISA should support these efforts . . . through funding outside organizations to assist in this work."¹¹³

- #2: CISA should also engage in content- and narrative-specific mitigation efforts. Proactive work should also include identifying and supporting trusted, authoritative sources in specific communities, e.g. in the elections context, local media and election officials. These efforts should also include building knowledge and experience that can empower individuals to be more resilient against divisive and despair-inducing MDM. CISA should support these efforts by creating and sharing materials; by providing education and frameworks for others to produce their own materials; and through funding to outside organizations to assist in this work

A. CISA’s external censorship arm: the EI-ISAC

The CISA-funded EI-ISAC was used by CIS during the 2020 election cycle as “a single point of reporting and tracking for misinformation across all channels and platforms.”¹¹⁴ As described in a slide from a CIS presentation titled, “2020 CIS Election Infrastructure Misinformation Reporting Summary,” the EI-ISAC was intended to “[s]treamline and simplify misinformation reporting for election officials by eliminating multiple interactions to submit and follow up on reports.”¹¹⁵ In so doing, CIS boasted that it “leverage[d] DHS CISA’s relationship with social media organizations to ensure priority treatment of misinformation reports.”¹¹⁶

CIS The CIS Approach

- Streamline and simplify misinformation reporting for election officials by eliminating multiple interactions to submit and follow up on reports
- Established a single EI-ISAC email account and database to serve as a single point of reporting and tracking for misinformation across all channels and platforms
- Leverage DHS CISA’s relationship with social media organizations to ensure priority treatment of misinformation reports
- Facilitate information sharing between election officials about reported misinformation
- Provide timely and meaningful feedback to election officials on the status of their reports
- Partner with outside analysis efforts, the Election Integrity Partnership*, to augment identification and analysis of elections-related misinformation

* The Election Integrity Partnership (EIP) was comprised of the Stanford Internet Observatory and Program on Democracy and the Internet, Graphika, the Atlantic Council’s Digital Forensic Research Lab, and the University of Washington’s Center for an Informed Public.

CISA also became involved with the Election Integrity Partnership (EIP). CIS and the EI-ISAC, as well as CISA itself, all served as “external stakeholders” of the project.¹¹⁷ During the 2020 election cycle, the CISA-funded entities could—and did—send in reports of alleged misinformation to the EIP. Members of EIP, such as Alex Stamos, the director of the Stanford Internet Observatory, would send purportedly problematic content directly to social media platforms with recommendations on what content moderation steps the platforms should take.

Brian Scully, CISA’s MDM lead, confirmed in his deposition, that CISA did not directly engage in switchboarding for the 2022 election cycle, unlike in the 2020 election cycle.¹¹⁸ Rather, CISA transferred the “switchboard function” to the EI-ISAC.¹¹⁹

B. State and local election officials used the EI-ISAC in an effort to silence critics and political opponents

CIS had previously claimed that “Election Infrastructure Misinformation and Disinformation does NOT include: “content that is polarizing, biased, partisan or contains viewpoints expressed about elections or politics”; “inaccurate statements about an elected or appointed official, candidate, or political party”; or “broad, non-specific statements about the integrity of elections or civic processes that do not reference a specific current election administration activity.”¹²⁰

But, in practice, state and local election officials used the CISA-funded EI-ISAC in an effort to silence criticism and political dissent of the nature allegedly “NOT include[d]” in CIS’s definition of “Election Infrastructure Misinformation and Disinformation.” For example, in August 2022, a Loudoun County, Virginia, government official reported a Tweet featuring an unedited video of a county official “because it was posted as part of a larger campaign to discredit the word of” that official.¹²¹ The Loudon County official’s remark that the account she flagged “is connected to Parents Against Critical Race Theory” reveals that her “misinformation report” was nothing more than a politically motivated censorship attempt.¹²²

The EI-ISAC then forwarded the report from the Loudoun County government to Twitter.¹²³

The CISA-funded EI-ISAC also facilitated a Democratic state government official’s attempt to censor core political speech by a sitting Republican U.S. Senator. As demonstrated below, a state government official working for Pennsylvania’s Secretary of State reported to the EI-ISAC posts on Twitter and Facebook from Senator Ted Cruz’s accounts,¹²⁴ in which Senator Cruz asked: “Why is it only Democrat blue cities that take ‘days’ to count their votes? The rest of the country manages to get it done on election night.”¹²⁵

C. CISA admitted to outsourcing its surveillance operation to third parties

On numerous occasions, CISA officials and MDM Subcommittee members acknowledged, both implicitly and explicitly, that CISA was not authorized to conduct the kind of surveillance and censorship it was conducting. Instead of calling for an end to CISA’s unconstitutional activity, however, those involved routinely attempted to conceive methods by which CISA could surreptitiously outsource its surveillance and censorship to non-governmental third parties.

For example, during a March 15, 2022 meeting of the MDM Subcommittee, Starbird “asked what are, or what should be, the limitation of CISA’s work regarding monitoring, such as social media.”¹²⁷ Starbird then “addressed the highly limited scope for government in terms of social media monitoring . . . She also posed how CISA could work with or otherwise support external groups, such as researchers and non-profits, to support MDM response and how this work would be funded in the future.”¹²⁸ According to Starbird later in the meeting, “[t]hese limitations provide an opportunity for this subcommittee to inform gaps in this information.”¹²⁹

March 15, 2022

- Dr. Starbird identified the third MDM potential area as response and proposed monitoring, identifying, and responding to MDM threats including rumor control and election integrity partnerships. She asked what are, or what should be, the limitation of CISA’s work regarding monitoring, such as social media. She asked if rumor control should be a project within CISA and if so, what should it look like. She also posed how CISA could work with or otherwise support external groups, such as researchers and non-profits, to support MDM response and how this work would be funded in the future.

Twitter’s Chief Legal Officer, Vijaya Gadde, then “highlighted the many sensitivities, beyond legal ones, in terms of the relationship between social media companies and government concerning media monitoring and the perception this plays globally,” as well as the need to ensure that this government-social media relationship did not result in “any form of surveillance.”¹³⁰ Starbird responded that “this work should come from outside of government due to the sensitivities in this relationship.”¹³¹

- Ms. Gadde highlighted the many sensitivities, beyond legal ones, in terms of the relationship between social media companies and government concerning media monitoring and the perception this plays globally. She stressed that this is something we have to be very thoughtful about, as terms of services, use of APIs, etc. do not involve any form of surveillance. Dr. Starbird suggested that this work should come from outside of government due to the sensitivities in this relationship.

Rather than abandon the consideration of surveilling Americans, Starbird and Gadde attempted to find ways to circumvent the First Amendment’s strictures by outsourcing the “monitoring” activity from the government to private entities.

In the same March meeting, Spaulding warned that “the government cannot ask an outside party to do something the Intelligence Community cannot do.”¹³² But a few months later, MDM Subcommittee members were still considering how CISA could “rely upon third parties” rather than “monitor media for MDM” itself.¹³³ In the comments of an outline for the MDM Subcommittee’s June 2022 recommendations, Spaulding wrote, “[CISA] relies on third parties to detect and notify it of malicious activity in non-government networks. Similarly, CISA may decide not to monitor media for MDM but, instead, to rely upon third parties to notify it of problems.”¹³⁴

III. CISA has attempted to conceal its unconstitutional activities and remove evidence of wrongdoing

April and May 2022 were difficult months for the censorship regime. President Biden’s DHS announced the formation of the Disinformation Governance Board on April 27, 2022, but had to pause its work on May 18,¹³⁵ and subsequently disband it,¹³⁶ following severe public outcry.¹³⁷ On May 5, the Attorneys General of Missouri and Louisiana filed a federal lawsuit against the Biden Administration, including CISA, alleging government-induced viewpoint-based censorship.¹³⁸ This lawsuit would soon reveal, among other things, direct pressure from the Biden White House to social media companies to censor vaccine-skeptical content.¹³⁹

Meeting notes of the MDM Subcommittee from this period demonstrate that its members and CISA were fully aware of these developments and discussed how CISA could outsource its MDM-related activities to third parties so as to bypass the First Amendment and “avoid the appearance of government propaganda.”¹⁴⁰

A. Fearing public pressure and legal risks, CISA outsourced its censorship operation to the EI-ISAC

In addition to outsourcing its censorship operation to the EI-ISAC, an MDM Subcommittee member and CISA official also suggested laundering its messaging through the EI-ISAC, thereby making the EI-ISAC the mouthpiece for “trusted information.”¹⁴¹ During the April 12, 2022 MDM Subcommittee meeting, “Subcommittee members . . . discussed designating a point of contact as a clearing house for trusted information. Ms. Spaulding and Mr. Hale suggested designating the ISACs as the clearing house for information to avoid the appearance of government propaganda.”¹⁴²

On July 26, 2022, CISA’s Kim Wyman made a particularly forthright admission about CISA’s attempts to launder its censorship operation to outside parties. According to the meeting notes, Wyman was discussing CISA’s “switchboard function to alert a media platform if a mis-or dis-information post is identified by another user.”¹⁴³ In that discussion, Wyman indicated that “CISA is currently transferring this work to the Information and Sharing and Analysis Centers (ISACs). She noted the concern over CISA operating this function given the current lawsuit filed by Louisiana and Missouri against CISA over perceived suppression of free speech.”¹⁴⁴

- Ms. Wyman shared concerns expressed by the National Association of Secretaries of State (NASS) and the National Association of State Election Directors (NASED) since they were not consulted when the Subcommittee was drafting recommendations. She reviewed a sample of CISA’s work to deliver products to the elections community to include operating a switchboard function to alert a media platform if a mis- or dis-information post is identified by another user. CISA is currently transferring this work to the Information Sharing and Analysis Centers (ISACs). She noted the concern over CISA operating this function given the current lawsuit filed by Louisiana and Missouri against CISA over perceived suppression of free speech.

B. The MDM Subcommittee tried to disguise its recommendations by removing references to surveillance and censorship

Both CISA and its advisory subcommittee were keenly aware of and concerned about the political environment and legal risks that accompanied its surveillance and censorship activities. During the May 10, 2022 meeting of the MDM Subcommittee, “Dr. Starbird suggested refining the name of the subcommittee to ‘Informational Threats to Critical Infrastructure’ or ‘Informational Threats to Election Security’ so as not to conflate the group’s efforts with the work of the DHS Disinformation Governance Board.”¹⁴⁵ Twitter’s Gadde then “affirmed this [suggestion] and cautioned the group against pursuing any social listening recommendations for the CSAC June Quarterly Meeting.”¹⁴⁶

- Dr. Kate Starbird, Associate Professor, Human Centered Design & Engineering, University of Washington, MDM Subcommittee Chair, began the meeting by asking subcommittee members to discuss the announcement of the new DHS Disinformation Governance Board and the broader implications for this subcommittee.
 - Ms. Kim Wyman, Senior Election Security Lead, CISA, stressed that misinformation and disinformation are elevated to national awareness due to this board. Dr. Starbird suggested refining the name of the subcommittee to “Informational Threats to Critical Infrastructure” or “Informational Threats to Election Security” so as not to conflate the group’s efforts with the work of the DHS Disinformation Governance Board. Ms. Vijaya Gadde, Legal, Public Policy, and Trust and Safety Lead, Twitter, affirmed this and cautioned the group against pursuing any social listening recommendations for the CSAC June Quarterly Meeting.

A little over a week later, on May 19, Starbird sent an e-mail to the other members of the MDM Subcommittee, writing: “I made a few final changes this morning and am sending off our draft [of the MDM Subcommittee’s June 2022 recommendations] to the CISA team. I want to note that I removed ‘monitoring’ from just about every place where it appeared.”¹⁴⁷

These attempts to disguise the true nature of counter-MDM work are emblematic of the tactics employed by academics “studying” disinformation. According to recent reporting by the Washington Post, in response to the Committee’s request for documents from Stanford University, “lawyers at the institution warned researchers to be more thoughtful about what they said in emails. ‘It makes me more careful in my communications with colleagues and collaborators,’ said professor Jeff Hancock, the faculty director of the Stanford Internet Observatory.”¹⁴⁸

C. CISA’s MDM advisors fretted that it was “only a matter of time before someone realizes we exist and starts asking about our work.”

On May 20, Spaulding sent an e-mail to Starbird expressing her concerns about growing public attention. In an e-mail, Spaulding wrote: “It’s only a matter of time before someone

During a May 24 meeting of the MDM Subcommittee, Starbird “restated the Subcommittee’s commitment to transparency but expressed concern for the Subcommittee’s efforts and cautioned the group on how to communicate their ongoing work.”¹⁵¹

- Dr. Kate Starbird, Associate Professor, Human Centered Design & Engineering, University of Washington, MDM Subcommittee Chair, discussed the Subcommittee’s recommendations to present during the CSAC June Quarterly Meeting and the path forward to strategically approach MDM in the government during the current discourse. In an apparent effort to conceal the full scope of CISA’s MDM-related efforts, Spaulding then “stressed that CISA should examine MDM beyond elections but suggested including in the recommendations that the Subcommittee is scoping their work around elections given the approaching election cycle.”¹⁵²

- Ms. Suzanne Spaulding, Senior Advisor for Homeland Security and Director of the Defending Democratic Institutions Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), suggested that the group recruit subject matter experts (SMEs) to support the Subcommittee’s efforts, solicit different perspectives, and apply credibility to the Subcommittee’s work with a broader audience. Ms. Spaulding offered an additional suggestion of asking Director Easterly for her perspective of socializing this Subcommittee’s work with Congress to prevent outside parties from being blindsided by their efforts. She further suggested the Subcommittee re-read and refine the recommendations and stressed that the safest ground in election is the recommendation for CISA to 1) point individuals to an authoritative source and 2) utilize their convening power. She stressed that CISA should examine MDM beyond elections, but suggested including in the recommendations that the Subcommittee is scoping their work around elections given the approaching election cycle. Ms. Spaulding offered an additional recommendation for CISA to scope their mission space to MDM that poses significant risk to national critical functions (NCFs).

Spaulding’s and others’ proposal to “socialize” the MDM Subcommittee’s work was met with resistance from CISA’s Megan Tsuyi, who told Starbird that “[t]he Subcommittee should not be socializing its work with outside parties . . . as it’s pre-deliberative at this time. We also shouldn’t be soliciting feedback on the recommendations from outside parties.”¹⁵³

D. CISA purged its website of references to domestic MDM and its First Amendment violations in response to public pressure

Following increased public awareness of CISA’s role in government-induced censorship and the Committee’s issuance of subpoenas to Alphabet, Amazon, Apple, Microsoft, and Meta in February 2023, CISA scrubbed its website of references to domestic MDM. Prior to the cleansing, the domain “CISA.gov/mdm” was associated with a webpage titled “Mis, Dis, Malinformation,” as seen in the screenshot below, which shows the website as it appeared on February 12, 2023.¹⁵⁴

The screenshot shows the CISA website's 'MIS, DIS, MALINFORMATION' page. The header includes the CISA logo and navigation links for 'cisa.gov/uscert', 'Report Cyber Issue', and 'Subscribe to Alerts'. The main navigation bar lists categories: CYBERSECURITY, INFRASTRUCTURE SECURITY, EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS, NATIONAL RISK MANAGEMENT, ABOUT CISA, and MEDIA. The breadcrumb trail reads 'National Risk Management > Election Security > MDM'. The page title is 'MIS, DIS, MALINFORMATION'. A left sidebar under 'Election Security' lists: Election Cybersecurity Toolkit, Crossfeed, Election Risk Profile Tool, Election Security Library, MDM Resource Library, Mis-, Dis-, Malinformation (highlighted), Resilience Series Graphic Novels, and Rumor Control. The main content area includes a paragraph about CISA's MDM team, an 'ANNOUNCEMENT' section with expandable items like 'MDM Overview' and 'What is MDM?', and a search bar.

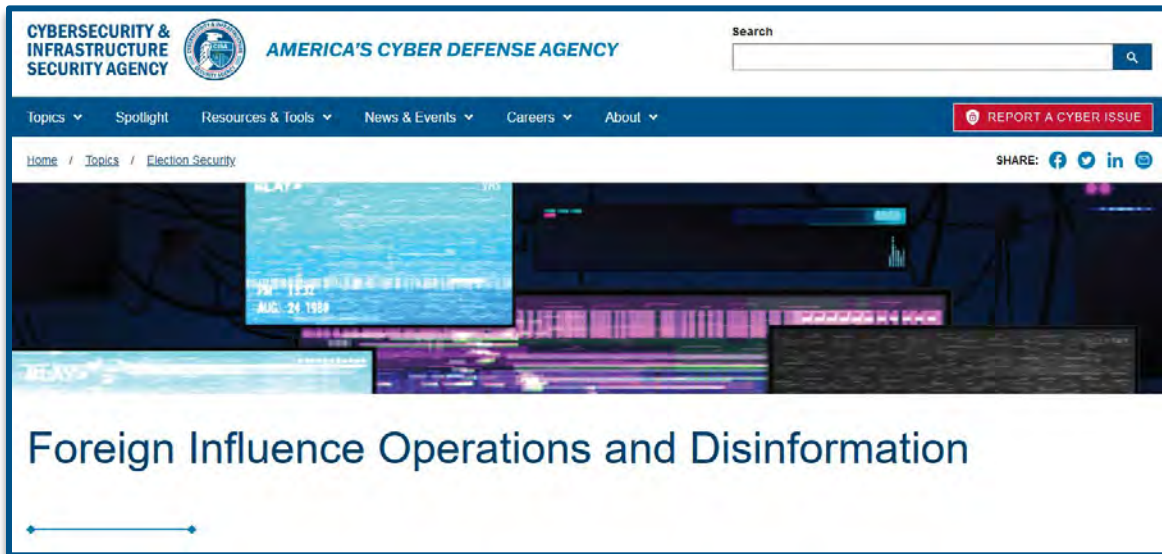

The website previously described the threats posed by both foreign and domestic MDM. For example, the section titled “What is MDM?” read, “Foreign and domestic threat actors use MDM campaigns to cause chaos, confusion, and division. These malign actors are seeking to interfere with and undermine our democratic institutions and national cohesiveness.”¹⁵⁵

The screenshot shows the 'What is MDM?' section. It defines Misinformation, Disinformation, and Malinformation. Misinformation is false but not intended to cause harm. Disinformation is deliberately created to mislead, harm, or manipulate. Malinformation is based on fact but used out of context to mislead, harm, or manipulate. The text states that foreign and domestic threat actors use MDM campaigns to cause chaos, confusion, and division, and that resources at the bottom of the page provide examples and more information.

As reported by the Foundation for Freedom Online, “between Friday, Feb. 24 at 4:37 p.m. and Sunday, Feb. 26 at 5:55 am., CISA’s once loud-and-proud declaration of long-arm jurisdiction over domestic opinions online seems to have been walked back.”¹⁵⁷

E. The Biden Justice Department interfered with public records requests in order to shield CISA from public scrutiny of its unconstitutional practices

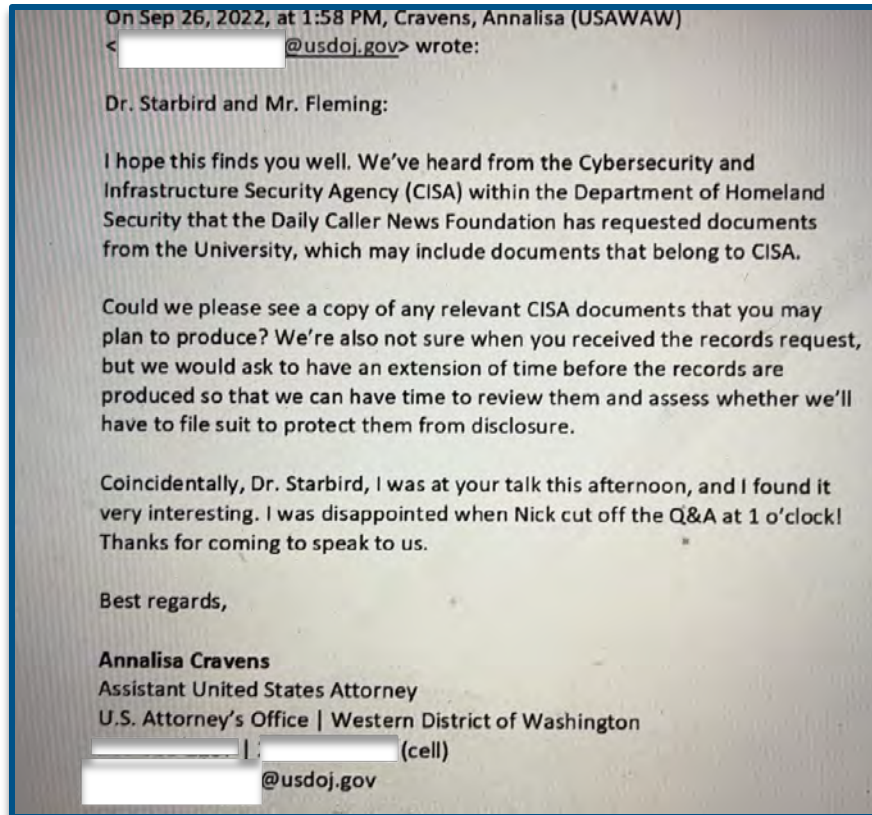

The effort to cover up CISA’s malfeasance appears to be a joint effort across the Biden Administration, according to recent reporting by journalist Lee Fang. In the fall of 2022, several non-profits and journalists, including Fang, individually submitted record requests to the University of Washington for material about Starbird’s work with CISA.¹⁵⁸ On September 26, 2022, Annalisa Cravens, an Assistant United States Attorney with the Department of Justice (DOJ), sent an e-mail to Starbird, writing, “Could we please see a copy of any relevant CISA documents that you may plan to produce? We’re also not sure when you received the records request, but we would ask to have an extension of time to review them and assess whether we’ll have to file suit to protect them from disclosure.”¹⁵⁹

As Fang subsequently explained, “[t]he stalling effort highlights not only the broad authority that the federal government has to shape the political content available to the public, but also the toolkit that it relies upon to limit scrutiny of its involvement in the regulation of speech.”¹⁶⁰

CONCLUSION

“Silencing those who disagree with us is a sign of weakness, not strength, and it won’t lead to progress.”
– former President Barack Obama, April 6, 2023.¹⁶¹

In 2019, CISA’s Chief Counsel claimed: “We are not law enforcement and we’re not the intelligence community.”¹⁶² In theory, the statement is accurate. CISA is not a law enforcement agency and is not authorized to act as an intelligence agency. But, in practice, that is how CISA has behaved, arrogating to itself the authority to conduct surveillance of Americans on social media. CISA expanded its unconstitutional practice by developing an elaborate social media censorship apparatus spanning multiple organizations, in order to facilitate the censorship of Americans’ political speech both directly and by proxy. There is no constitutionally viable legal authority that allows CISA to engage in this or any other kind of censorship. Thus, not only does CISA’s conduct violate the First Amendment, it also disregards the basic principle of the separation of powers, which prohibits agencies from acting outside of their congressionally delegated sphere.¹⁶³

As Suzanne Spaulding, the former CIA legal advisor and MDM Subcommittee member, presaged, it was “only a matter of time before someone realizes we exist and starts asking about”¹⁶⁴ CISA’s repeated violations of the First Amendment. CISA’s attempts to cover up its surveillance and censorship operations will not rectify the damage inflicted on the American people by government-induced censorship. Neither CISA’s scrubbing of its website, nor the Biden Administration’s stalling of records requests can conceal the true nature of CISA’s work in “combating MDM.”

CISA must be reined in, as must the Biden Administration’s “whole-of-government” approach to social media censorship. Every American has the right to express his or her opinion online, and to receive information from others. Government classifications of opinions as “misinformation” or “disinformation” do not nullify the First Amendment’s guarantees. A free and democratic society is impossible under a government that acts as the ultimate arbiter of truth in political discourse. To better inform legislative efforts to end government censorship on the Internet and protect Americans’ rights guaranteed by the First Amendment, the Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to investigate the extent of CISA’s and other Executive Branch agencies’ interactions with social media platforms.

THE WEAPONIZATION OF THE NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION: HOW NSF IS FUNDING THE DEVELOPMENT OF AUTOMATED TOOLS TO CENSOR ONLINE SPEECH “AT SCALE” AND TRYING TO COVER UP ITS ACTIONS

Interim Staff Report of the Committee on the Judiciary
and the
Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government
U.S. House of Representatives

February 5, 2024

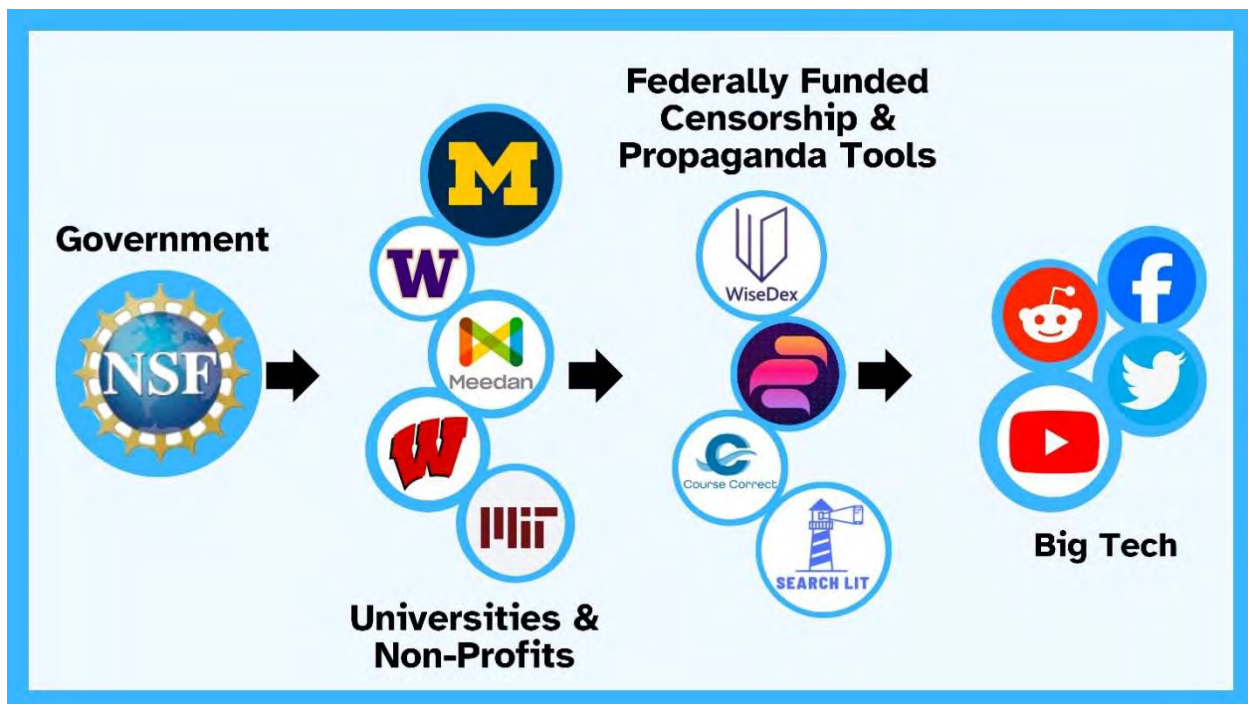

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

“Our misinformation service helps policy makers at platforms who want to . . . push responsibility for difficult judgments to someone outside the company . . . by externalizing the difficult responsibility of censorship.”

– Speaker’s notes from the University of Michigan’s first pitch to the National Science Foundation (NSF) about its NSF-funded, AI-powered WiseDex tool.¹

This interim report details the National Science Foundation’s (NSF) funding of AI-powered censorship and propaganda tools, and its repeated efforts to hide its actions and avoid political and media scrutiny.

In the name of combatting alleged misinformation regarding COVID-19 and the 2020 election, NSF has been issuing multi-million-dollar grants to university and non-profit research teams. The purpose of these taxpayer-funded projects is to develop artificial intelligence (AI)-powered censorship and propaganda tools that can be used by governments and Big Tech to shape public opinion by restricting certain viewpoints or promoting others.

Non-public documents obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government demonstrate that these federal bureaucrats, “disinformation” researchers, and non-profit groups understood that their actions—

“content moderation” and combatting so-called misinformation—amounted to “censorship.”² And yet, NSF forged ahead, supporting new technologies that would essentially enable the censorship of online speech “at scale.”

But NSF’s taxpayer funding for this potential automated censorship is only half of the story. The Committee and the Select Subcommittee have also obtained, via document requests and subpoenas, nonpublic emails and other documents that reveal a years-long, intentional effort by NSF to hide its role in funding these censorship and propaganda tools from media and political scrutiny. From legal scholars, such as Jonathan Turley, to conservative journalists, NSF tracked public criticisms of its work in funding these projects. NSF went so far as to develop a media strategy that considered blacklisting certain American media outlets because they were scrutinizing NSF’s funding of censorship and propaganda tools.

The First Amendment prohibits the government from “abridging the freedom of speech.”³ Thus, “any law or government policy that reduces that freedom on the [social media] platforms . . . violates the First Amendment.”⁴ To inform potential legislation, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have been investigating the Executive Branch’s collusion with third-party intermediaries, including universities, non-profits, and businesses, to censor protected speech on social media. The Committee and Subcommittee have uncovered serious violations of the First Amendment throughout the Executive Branch, including:

- The Biden White House directly coercing large social media companies, such as Facebook, to censor true information, memes, and satire, eventually leading Facebook to change its content moderation policies;⁵
- Stanford’s Election Integrity Partnership (EIP)—created at the request of the Department of Homeland Security’s (DHS) Cybersecurity & Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA)—working with the federal government to flag thousands of links and submit recommendations directly to large social media platforms to censor Americans’ online speech in the lead-up to the 2020 U.S. election;⁶ and

- The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) harassing Elon Musk’s Twitter (now X) because of Musk’s commitment to free speech, even going so far as to target certain journalists by name.⁷

As egregious as these violations of the First Amendment are, each still faced the same limitation: the censors were human. Senior Biden White House officials had to spend time personally berating the social media companies into changing their content moderation policies. Social media executives expended considerable time and effort responding to the White House’s threats and evaluating the flagged content. Stanford had nearly a hundred people working for the EIP in shifts flagging thousands of posts, which was only a fraction of the number of election-related posts made in the fall of 2020.⁸

But what happens if the censorship is automated and the censors are machines? There is no need for shifts or huge teams of people to identify and flag problematic online speech. AI-driven tools can monitor online speech at a scale that would far outmatch even the largest team of “disinformation” bureaucrats and researchers. This interim report reveals how NSF is using American taxpayer dollars to fund the tools that could usher in an even greater threat to online speech than the original efforts to censor speech on social media. The NSF-funded projects threaten to help create a censorship regime that could significantly impede the fundamental First Amendment rights of millions of Americans, and potentially do so in a manner that is instantaneous and largely invisible to its victims.

The Committee and the Select Subcommittee are responsible for investigating “violation[s] of the civil liberties of citizens of the United States.”⁹ In accordance with this mandate, this interim staff report on NSF’s violations of the First Amendment and other unconstitutional activities fulfills the obligation to identify and report on the weaponization of the federal government against American citizens. The Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s investigation remains ongoing. NSF still has not adequately complied with a request for relevant documents, and more fact-finding is necessary. In order to better inform the Committee’s legislative efforts, the Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to investigate how the Executive Branch worked with social media platforms and other intermediaries to censor disfavored viewpoints in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

I. THE HISTORICAL LIMITS OF HUMAN CENSORSHIP

“For if Men are to be precluded from offering their Sentiments on a matter, which may involve the most serious and alarming consequences, that can invite the consideration of Mankind, reason is of no use to us; the freedom of Speech may be taken away, and, dumb and silent we may be led, like sheep, to the Slaughter.”

– George Washington’s Newburg Address to Officers of the Army, March 15, 1783

The Committee and Select Subcommittee are investigating how and to what extent the federal government coerced or colluded with social media companies and other third parties to censor Americans’ speech online. Although the medium—social media—is relatively new, the broader fight against government-issued or -directed restrictions on speech is not.

New technologies, from the printing press to the Internet, enabled more people to share their views more widely. These developments hindered governments’ ability to restrict the flow of new ideas, including those that criticize the government. The promise of the Internet, and social media in particular, was to democratize speech at an unprecedented scale. More recently, social media has been credited—or blamed—with political outcomes that reflected the will of the public, rather than the establishment, such as the election of President Donald Trump in 2016 and the “Brexit” vote in 2017.¹⁰

The backlash from the establishment against social media was quick, severe, and thorough. In the United States, Democrats threatened repeatedly to break up American social media companies.¹¹ Federal law enforcement, intelligence, and other agencies all began creating and expanding offices, task forces, and boards designed to fight against so-called mis-, dis-, and malinformation.¹² The last of these—“malinformation”—is particularly pernicious and paternalistic: the U.S. government uses this term to refer to information that is true, but lacks adequate context, at least according to the government.¹³ Academics across the country, often with taxpayer dollars, began researching the pseudo-science of “disinformation.”¹⁴ The zealous overreaction in America to the dangers of “unfettered speech” online is to say nothing of what happened in Europe and elsewhere.¹⁵

Though these developments were expansive and troubling, there was an inherent constraint on all of them: manpower. To be sure, there has been no shortage of bureaucrats, massive “trust and safety” teams at Big Tech, and countless researchers and academics looking to cash in on the growing “censorship industrial complex.”¹⁶ But each of these segments in the censorship regime lamented the shortcomings they faced with the enormous scale of speech that is shared on social media.

For example, Brian Scully, the head of the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency’s (CISA) “Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation” team testified that CISA’s “switchboarding” process—whereby CISA officials received alleged “misinformation” reports from election officials and transmitted those reports to social media companies so that they could take enforcement measures against the reported content—was “resource intensive.”¹⁷ After engaging in the effort for the 2018 and 2020 election cycles, CISA discontinued the practice in 2022.¹⁸

In a similar vein, the Twitter Files revealed that the people on the receiving end of these requests—the various “trust and safety teams” at Big Tech—often felt overwhelmed. For example, in the days leading up to the 2020 U.S. election, Twitter personnel had discussions about how to handle the “backlog” of incoming requests and how to best “prioritize” them.¹⁹ Government-funded third parties, such as the Center for Internet Security (CIS), offered to create “misinformation portals” for social media companies to better facilitate these types of requests.²⁰

Likewise, academics, even when supported by the federal government, could only monitor and report so much content at a time. For example, the Election Integrity Partnership (EIP) had nearly 100 people (plus over a dozen external stakeholders), working in shifts to monitor and report thousands of social media posts by Americans in the lead-up to the 2020 election.²¹ All told, the EIP submitted over 400 misinformation reports, flagging thousands of posts with specific recommendations sent directly to Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, TikTok, and other social media platforms.²² Although any violation of the First Amendment is alarming, the EIP’s efforts led to only thousands of Americans’ posts being targeted; new technologies could enable a much smaller team to accomplish the same task for millions of posts, if not entire narratives.

II. THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IS FUNDING AI-POWERED CENSORSHIP TOOLS

“Across the world right now, governments, in the name of the good, are considering or adopting measures like we have in Canada. In Dublin, they’re about to enact a draconian hate-crime bill that poses a dire threat to free speech. In Paris, President Emanuel Macron has called for censoring online speech. In Brussels, the EU’s Internal Market Commissioner is calling for a crackdown on “illegal content.” In Brasilia, they’re fighting “fake news” and “disinformation” by clamping down on legitimate online speech. To say nothing of Russia and China and Iran. America is so exceptional—indispensable really. Please do not succumb to the same illiberal, the same authoritarianism. Please keep fighting for what you know is right. Canada is watching. The whole world is watching.”²³

– Rupa Subramanya, Canadian journalist, testifying before the Select Subcommittee, November 30, 2023

With the development of artificial intelligence and machine learning, governments are recognizing that censorship of speech online has the potential to be automated. Already, authoritarian governments such as China and Russia have used AI tools to surveil their citizens’ speech on the Internet.²⁴ In the West, including the United States, government, researchers, and non-profits are seeking to develop similar tools to monitor and censor speech “at scale” in the name of combatting so-called misinformation.

A. Government Censorship Has Extended to the West, including the United States

The Internet, and later social media, came with the promise of democratizing speech. However, authoritarian governments quickly showed that the Internet does not prevent powerful governments from censoring disfavored viewpoints. For example, citizens in China and Vietnam have been criminally convicted for criticizing how their country handled the COVID-19 pandemic.²⁵

Anti-free speech legislation has since spread to the Western world as well. As the Canadian journalist Rupa Subramanya testified before the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government in November 2023, Canada, the United Kingdom, Ireland, and other Western liberal democracies have been enacting measures that crack down on speech.²⁶ In the United Kingdom, a man went to jail for tweeting a joke in poor taste.²⁷ In Canada, doctors face persecution if they question the country's response to the COVID lockdowns or disagree about the safety of COVID vaccines.²⁸

The censorship of speech has extended into financial surveillance and de-banking. The Canadian government froze Canadian citizens' bank accounts simply for protesting vaccine mandates and draconian lockdowns.²⁹ A federal court in Canada recently found the government's invocation of emergency powers to crack down on these protestors to be unreasonable, but the chilling effect of this government overreach remains.³⁰

The Committee and Select Subcommittee have revealed how, in the United States, the federal government solicited banks to turn over information on their customers about whether they shopped at stores such as Bass Pro Shops or purchased firearms.³¹ Documents obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee suggest that after January 6, 2021, the Treasury Department's Office of Stakeholder Integration and Engagement in the Strategic Operations of the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) provided banks with "suggested search terms and Merchant Category Codes for identifying transactions on behalf of federal law enforcement."³²

B. Free Speech Advocates Have Sounded the Alarm Regarding How Artificial Intelligence Can Lead to Censorship “At Scale”

As artificial intelligence has grown and developed, so too have concerns about its impact on free expression. Today, a growing number of voices are sounding the alarm on AI’s potential to infringe on Americans’ civil liberties.

Authoritarian governments, such as China and Russia, restrict what their citizens can say and what journalists can report.³³ But more alarmingly, the threats to free speech have extended to Western liberal democracies as well.

In July 2023, tech billionaire and AI entrepreneur Elon Musk founded “xAI” and, in November 2023, unveiled “Grok,” an AI chatbot trained using real-time data from the social media platform X, which Musk now owns.³⁴ Musk introduced Grok as an alternative to OpenAI’s “woke” ChatGPT and has been outspoken about the risks associated with AI’s development and the need for AI regulation.³⁵ He has also expressed concern over President Biden’s October 2023 AI executive order that pushes the Administration’s radical social “equity” agenda in the name of addressing “algorithmic discrimination.”³⁶

In December 2022, Marc Andreessen, a co-author of Mosaic and co-founder of Netscape, warned that the “level of censorship pressure that’s coming for AI and the resulting backlash will define the next century of civilization.”³⁷ In June 2023, Andreessen wrote, “Why AI Will Save the World,” declaring that AI could be “a way to make everything we care about better,” but also advised that the AI censorship fight is “more important – by a lot” than the fight against censorship on social media.³⁸ He explained:

AI is highly likely to be the control layer for everything in the world. How it is allowed to operate is going to matter perhaps more than anything else has ever mattered. You should be aware of how a small and isolated coterie of partisan social engineers are trying to determine that right now, under cover of the age-old claim that they are protecting you.³⁹

Legal scholars have been warning of the First Amendment implications of AI-powered content moderation.⁴⁰ Legislators have been considering and introducing legislation that would protect against AI-driven censorship of online speech, such as bills that would prevent taxpayer dollars from going to programs using AI to “help label, suppress, and censor speech online.”⁴¹

C. The National Science Foundation’s Funding of Censorship Tools

As the distributor of multi-million-dollar grants, the National Science Foundation (NSF) is a key player in the “censorship industrial complex.” In recent years, under the guise of combatting so-called misinformation, NSF has been funding AI-driven tools and other new technologies that can be used to censor or propagandize online speech.

1. The National Science Foundation

In 1950, Congress established NSF as an independent federal agency tasked with “keeping the U.S. at the leading edge of discovery in science and engineering,” primarily by making grants.⁴² Today, NSF has an annual budget of nearly $10 billion, over 1,500 federal employees, and 200 scientists from research institutions, issuing, on average, 12,000 awards to 2,000 grantees per year and providing about 25 percent of federal funding to America’s colleges and universities for basic research.⁴³ Over the past two fiscal years, NSF has allocated approximately $8 billion each in both FY 2021 and FY 2022.⁴⁴

The scope of NSF’s mission has shifted over the years to encompass social and behavioral sciences. For example, NSF used to fund political science projects from the 1960s until 2012, when Congress banned such research from receiving NSF funding.⁴⁵ However, in recent years, and after the academic outcry that Americans elected President Trump only because of “Russian disinformation,” NSF has spent millions of taxpayer dollars funding projects to combat alleged mis- and disinformation.⁴⁶

2. NSF’s Convergence Accelerator Program

In 2019, NSF launched its Convergence Accelerator grant program seeking to bring together multiple disciplines, ideas, approaches, and technologies to solve “national-scale societal challenges” aligned with specific research “tracks” that “have the potential for significant national impact.”⁴⁷ This two-phase program funds research teams and places them into collaborative cohorts, which work “convergently” to solve issues relevant to their track and “impact society at scale.”⁴⁸

The Convergence Accelerator grant program currently has thirteen tracks:

- Track A (2019): Open Knowledge Networks
- Track B (2019): AI and the Future of Work
- Track C (2020): Quantum Technology
- Track D (2020): AI-Innovation Data Sharing & Modeling
- Track E (2021): Networked Blue Economy
- Track F (2021): Trust & Authenticity in Communication Systems
- Track G (2021): Securely Operating Through 5G Infrastructure
- Track H (2022): Enhancing Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities
- Track I (2022): Sustainable Materials for Global Challenges
- Track J (2022): Food & Nutrition Security
- Track K (2023): Equitable Water Solutions
- Track L (2023): Real-World Chemical Sensing Applications
- Track M (2023): Bio-Inspired Design Innovations

3. NSF’s Track F: The Censorship Program

In March 2021, NSF introduced Track F: Trust & Authenticity in Communication Systems, allocating $21 million to the program.⁴⁹ For Track F, NSF solicited proposals to address the manipulation or “unanticipated negative effects” of communication systems—a departure from the Convergence Accelerator program’s other, more concrete research topics.⁵⁰

The euphemistic “trust and authenticity in communication systems,” in fact, means combatting so-called “misinformation,” i.e., censorship. In an early draft solicitation, NSF indicated that Track F projects will “address issues of trust and authenticity in communication systems, including predicting, preventing, detecting, correcting, and mitigating the spread of inaccurate information that harms people and society.”⁵¹ As NSF’s Track F program manager,

Subject: NSF Convergence Accelerator: Trust and Authenticity in Communications Systems

Good afternoon,

I'm contacting you because you have been recommended by my NSF colleagues or your peers to be reviewers for proposals in our Accelerator track focused on combatting mis/disinformation and inauthentic behavior. I believe you would bring valuable expertise and insights to our review panels, as we select projects to address this issue.

On March 18, 2021, NSF issued the funding opportunity for Track F, ultimately asking applicants to propose solutions involving AI-powered tools to help Big Tech combat misinformation as well as provide “education and training materials” for school children and communities that might “exhibit different vulnerabilities to disinformation methods.”⁵³

In September 2021, after receiving dozens of proposals, NSF publicly announced the 24 research teams it had selected for its 2021 cohort (Tracks E and F), awarding twelve Track F teams $750,000 each (a total of $9 million) to develop and refine their project ideas and build partnerships in Phase 1.⁵⁴ During this year-long initial planning phase, the teams participated in a nine-month-long NSF program to “advanc[e] their initial idea to a proof of concept” and develop pitch presentations to deliver to “various stakeholders including potential partners, investors and end users” at NSF’s annual Convergence Accelerator Expo.⁵⁵

Ultimately, after the teams made their case for continued funding at NSF’s July 2022 Expo, in September 2022, NSF selected six of the original twelve “Phase 1” Track F teams to move to “Phase 2,” each receiving an additional $5 million (for a total of $30 million) over the next two years to further develop, scale, and sustain their projects beyond NSF support.⁵⁶ In all, NSF allocated a total of $39 million to the various Track F teams.

- the University of Michigan and its WiseDex tool ($750,000);
- Meedan and its Co-Insights tool ($5.75 million);
- the University of Wisconsin-Madison and its CourseCorrect tool ($5.75 million); and
- Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) and its Search Lit platform ($750,000).

D. Censorship and Propaganda in Action: Universities and Non-Profits Develop AI Tools and Other New Technologies to Censor at Scale with Help of Federal Funding

Under the guise of addressing critical threats to communications systems and “combatting mis/disinformation,”⁵⁷ NSF has provided millions of taxpayer dollars to university researchers for the development of advanced censorship tools. One research team, led by researchers at the University of Michigan, used the $750,000 it received from NSF to examine how AI could help Big Tech handle and outsource the “responsibility of censorship” on social media.

⁵⁷ See email from Michael Pozmantier to Michael Pozmantier (June 11, 2021, 2:23 PM) (on file with the Comm.).

1. The University of Michigan: WiseDex

In September 2021, through its Track F program, NSF awarded a group of researchers at the University of Michigan $750,000 to develop two services:

1. A “golden set” service that determines what content is misinformation “that deserves enforcement” each month; and
2. A forecasting application programming interface (API) that can tell a social media platform “for any content item” how true that content is to aid in “a platform’s decision procedures” (i.e., whether the content should be censored).⁵⁸

The University of Michigan intended to use the federal funding to develop its tool “WiseDex,” which could use AI technology to assess the veracity of content on social media and assist large social media platforms with what content should be removed or otherwise censored.⁵⁹ As noted by the team’s head researcher, “The original goal of the project was to develop processes that would have public legitimacy, which social media platforms could use for taking enforcement action against misinformation.”⁶⁰

Documents show that NSF was aware that federal tax dollars would be supporting a tool used for censorship.

The Committee and Select Subcommittee have obtained October 2021 presentation slides with speaker’s notes that shed light on this point. In the University of Michigan’s “first pitch”⁶¹

The speaker’s notes also reveal how federal bureaucrats and “disinformation” pseudo-scientists talk about their work in private. Although these statements plainly violate the First Amendment, NSF continued to fund the University of Michigan’s $750,000 project directed toward “censorship.” In fact, these candid remarks were made to NSF just one month after NSF awarded the University of Michigan $750,000 in Phase 1 funding in late September 2021.⁶³

About six months later, in July 2022, the WiseDex team made a presentation at NSF’s annual “Convergence Accelerator Expo” to an audience that included interested parties in the public and private sector as well as other research teams that had received NSF funding. In advance of the 2022 Expo, the University of Michigan team emailed representatives at major social media platforms, inviting them to the Expo and describing WiseDex as a tool that “harnesses the wisdom of crowds and AI techniques to help flag more posts.”⁶⁴ The University of Michigan team explained further that the “result is more comprehensive, equitable, and consistent enforcement, significantly reducing the spread of misinformation.”⁶⁵ In its agenda presentation notes for the Expo, the Michigan team explained that the WiseDex tool will enable the “scaling-up enforcement of misinformation policies” on social media.⁶⁶ Put more plainly, WiseDex would facilitate the censorship of speech online at a speed and in a manner that human censors are not capable.

2. Meedan: Co-Insights

Meedan is a non-profit that, among other things, builds software to combat alleged misinformation online.⁶⁷ In May 2020, Scott Hale, Meedan’s Director of Research, contacted NSF about Meedan’s interest in the Convergence Accelerator program, noting in an email that Meedan’s vision was to build software and run training and programs “to counter misinformation online” and “advance the state-of-art in misinformation research.”⁶⁸ On May 5, 2021, Meedan sent NSF an official letter expressing its intent to apply for NSF’s Track F.⁶⁹ If it were to receive taxpayer dollars, Meedan would leverage its “relationships and experience” with WhatsApp, Telegram, and Signal to develop approaches that proactively “identify and limit susceptibility to misinformation” and “pseudoscientific information online.”⁷⁰ This included “[o]pen-web crawling and controversy detection identifying possibly [sic] content for fact-checking.”⁷¹ Ultimately, NSF awarded Meedan’s project $5.75 million through its Track F program.⁷²

Meedan’s project went through multiple name changes, including “FACT CHAMP”: “Fact-checker, Academic, and Community Collaboration Tools: Combating Hate, Abuse, and Misinformation with Minority-led Partnerships.”⁷³ By the summer of 2022, it had the name that it has today: Co-Insights. The project’s purpose is to use “data and machine learning” to “identify, preempt, and respond to misinformation in minoritized [sic] communities.”⁷⁴

In its pitch to NSF for an additional $5 million in Phase 2 funding, Meedan’s Co-Insights team again explained how its project used a variety of advanced tools to inform “misinformation interventions.”⁷⁵

These efforts by Meedan, funded by NSF, were part of a much larger, long-term goal by the non-profit. As Hale, the Director of Research at Meedan, explained in an email to NSF, in his “dream world,” Big Tech would collect all of the censored content to enable “disinformation” researchers to use that data to create “automated detection” to censor any similar speech automatically.⁸⁰

Hi Mike,

Great to talk earlier. In addition to Rehul's work ("Data Station"), the discussion about research infrastructure made me think of the work Christopher Guess is doing at Duke Reporter's Lab. They've been working on a dataset of fact-checks and the original media connected to those fact-checks. I believe that work is nearly complete and will be public soon, but I'm sure there are elements that will benefit teams in our track and ways it could be expanded.

The term I couldn't think of before was "data enclaves." I think we'd benefit from ways to run code on remote datasets without having access to the data (i.e., everything in and out has a minimum level of aggregation/anonymization). This applies to mis/disinformation given how it may involve personal data and the potential for misuse by malicious actors. It applies even more to hate speech, radicalization, etc. In my dream world, social media platforms would put all the content they take down into a data enclave that researchers could run code against to produce aggregate analyses and benchmark different automated detection approaches without ever having direct access to the data. There's nothing more frustrating than, for example, finding out half the tweet ids (or urls) in a dataset of high-quality human labels are now inaccessible.

The millions of taxpayer-funding notwithstanding, NSF considered whether it could recruit other, existing, successful AI companies and persuade them to wield their tools for purposes of “content moderation.” For example, in January 2023, Pozmantier, the NSF Track F project manager, emailed Meedan’s Hale about NSF’s interactions with “Storytell,” which is a Chrome extension that uses AI to “automatically” summarize any page, including YouTube videos.⁸¹ According to Pozmantier, NSF had been engaging with Storytell, and the company had “been open to listening to content moderation as a use case,” i.e., Storytell would consider NSF’s idea of repurposing its AI technology to be used for content moderation.⁸²

Cool. I don't know the business model they're wanting to pursue, but I'd certainly be open to talking with them and seeing if there was some proof of concept we could help them do to demonstrate the value to fact-checkers. The amount of video we see coming to fact-checking tiplines on WhatsApp is continually increasing. We probably see the most video in Brazil right now, although I realize their tech might be English only at the moment.

Thanks, Mike,

This looks like nice technology, but I'm not sold on the Chrome extension format. For me, this would be much better as an API that could be used in one of two ways:

- 1) summarizing videos and breaking out key segments could be very useful for fact-checkers assessing video content. One of the annoying things about fact-checking YouTube, TikTok, etc. is that fact-checkers generally have to watch the video before knowing what claims are being made and determining whether it's worth fact-checking those
- 2) summarizing larger datasets to spot patterns and trends - there's reference to this feature in the video, but I don't see how that currently works with the Chrome extension format. Ideally, I'd point it at a dataset of content, and it would be able to generate a report, summarize themes from multiple pieces of content, identify key pieces of content, etc. to help me make sense of that large dataset. For us, this would be spotting trends and longer-term themes in social media content that might benefit from pre-emptive explainers. For others, I could imagine it summarizing free-text responses to surveys, etc.

Best wishes,
 Scott

3. The University of Wisconsin: CourseCorrect

Beginning in September 2021, through its Track F program, NSF awarded a group of researchers at the University of Wisconsin-Madison a total of $5.75 million to develop a tool to “empower efforts by journalists, developers, and citizens to fact-check” “delegitimizing information” about “election integrity and vaccine efficacy” on social media.⁸³ UW-Madison’s CourseCorrect tool would allow “fact-checkers to perform rapid-cycle testing of fact-checking messages and monitor their real-time performance among online communities at-risk of misinformation exposure.”⁸⁴

Like Michigan’s WiseDex, the University of Wisconsin-Madison’s CourseCorrect project harnessed AI and machine learning techniques to address misinformation on social media.⁸⁵ Unlike WiseDex, the University of Wisconsin-Madison researchers made clear that their project was specifically focused on “address[ing] two democratic and public health crises facing the U.S.: skepticism regarding the integrity of U.S. elections and hesitancy related to COVID-19 vaccines.”⁸⁶ To do so, CourseCorrect spent over $5 million in taxpayer money working to “identify, test, and correct real-world instances” of COVID-19, election-related, and other forms of “dangerous misinformation” on social media and scale and sustain the project beyond NSF support.⁸⁷

4. MIT: Search Lit

In September 2021, through its Track F program, NSF awarded $750,000 to a group of researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) to develop “effective interventions” to educate Americans—specifically, those that the MIT researchers alleged “may be more vulnerable to misinformation campaigns”—on how to discern fact from fiction online.⁸⁸ In particular, the MIT team believed that conservatives, minorities, and veterans were uniquely incapable of assessing the veracity of content online.⁸⁹

The MIT project targeted individual groups and designed propaganda tools aimed at “educating” rural and indigenous communities, military veterans, older adults, and military families—all of whom the researchers claimed were unusually susceptible to “misinformation campaigns” online.⁹⁰

In one project proposal document to NSF, the researchers explained the need for “a proactive suite of human technologies” to assist these groups with “dangerous digital content” because “reactive” content moderation is too slow and ineffective.⁹¹ In order to build “a more digitally discerning public,” the Search Lit team proposed developing tools that could support the government’s viewpoint on COVID-19 public health measures and the 2020 election.⁹²

III. THE FEDERALLY FUNDED CENSORS: PARTISAN AND CONDESCENDING

In her ethnographic study of two conservative groups, Tripodi (2018) found that information-seekers engage in a distinct set of media practices tied to the way they see the world. One practice centered around the close reading of textual documents deemed sacred (e.g. the Bible or the Constitution). By inverting traditional assumptions that truth is only curated at the top, this media practice allows for everyday people to act as subject matter experts. These practices, which developed and emerged in a print era, have been adapted to online search practices. Because interviewees distrusted both journalists and academics, they drew on this practice to fact check how media outlets reported the news.

While lateral readers try to find secondary sources that reliably summarize expert consensus on sources and claims (Wineburg & McGrew, 2017; Caulfield, 2017), respondents often focused on reading a wide array of primary sources, and performing their own synthesis (Tripodi, 2018).

– MIT’s 2021 Proposal to NSF ($750,000 ultimately awarded)

The nonpublic communications and documents obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee demonstrate that (1) the “disinformation” academics understood their work as part of a partisan project; and (2) the bureaucrats and so-called “experts” in this space have complete disdain for most of the American population.

A. In Their Own Words, “Disinformation” Pseudo-Scientists Describe Their Work As “Political” and “Censorship”

In response to the Committee and Select Subcommittee’s investigation into government-directed censorship, mainstream media outlets have largely characterized “mis- and disinformation” researchers as apolitical academics pursuing serious research free of political biases or agendas.⁹³ But the very same disinformation “experts” making these public claims, such as the University of Washington’s Dr. Kate Starbird, have acknowledged privately that working to counter disinformation is “inherently political”⁹⁴ and is itself a form of “censorship.”⁹⁵

The NSF-funded researchers at the University of Michigan, University of Washington, and MIT privately explained that their work is involved with the “difficult responsibility of censorship,” a statement that implies these “experts” bear the burden of determining for everyone

⁹³ See, e.g., Naomi Nix, et al., Misinformation research is buckling under GOP legal attacks, THE WASH. POST (Sept. 23, 2023); Kate Starbird, UW misinformation researchers will not buckle under political attacks, SEATTLE TIMES (Oct. 6, 2023).

Renée DiResta, another prominent disinformation researcher at the Stanford Internet Observatory (SIO), disclosed in her notes for a fall 2021 presentation at an annual CISA Summit that the EIP was designed to fill the “gap” that the federal government could not fill. Her presentation notes state that there were “[u]nclear legal authorities including very real 1st amendment questions.”⁹⁷

Print Nov. 6, 2023).

As the Committee and Select Subcommittee have detailed in earlier reports, a full accounting of the content that the EIP flagged for social media platforms reveals the political leanings of the academics; though Americans on both sides of the political spectrum were censored, conservatives were targeted disproportionately.⁹⁸ Similarly, the Twitter Files revealed that Republicans were censored at a rate of at least “ten-to-one” as Democrats.⁹⁹ And the lead litigator in Missouri v. Biden testified to the Select Subcommittee that “the vast majority” of examples of censorship uncovered in discovery in that case were of conservative speech.¹⁰⁰

B. NSF-Funded Researchers Believe the American Public is Not Smart Enough to Discern Fact from Fiction, Especially Conservatives, Minorities, and Veterans

Littered throughout these researchers’ federally funded projects is the paternalistic assumption that particular groups of American citizens are uniquely unable to differentiate between truth and falsehood online. As the MIT-led researchers explained in a summary of their project proposal to NSF, “broad swaths of the public cannot effectively sort truth from fiction online.”¹⁰¹ In particular, the Search Lit team singled out the following demographics:

- “rural and indigenous communities;”
- “military veterans, older adults, and military families;” and
- “older adults.”¹⁰²

As part of their efforts to target military families, NSF proposed working “with educators in the Department of Defense Education Activity (DoDEA) group, the organization that runs [Defense Department] schools on military bases, to adapt our innovations to both directly serve children in military families and then have students share their new learning with their families.”¹⁰³ Put plainly, Search Lit sought to help train the children of military families to help influence the beliefs of military families. When Search Lit “discussed these ideas with DoDEA stakeholders, they immediately brought up concerns about military personnel involvement in the January 6 assault on the Capitol and the subsequent anti-extremism training that is a military priority.”¹⁰⁴

In support of their case for NSF funding, the MIT-led researchers cited a study “of two conservative groups” performed by a Search Lit team member, Francesca Tripodi, examining the “online search practices” of Americans who hold “the Bible or the Constitution” as “sacred” and

“distrust[] journalists and academics.”¹⁰⁵ The summary also derisively noted that the approach that “everyday people” typically use to get their news and information allows them “to act as subject matter experts,” rather than “truth [being] only curated at the top.”¹⁰⁶

In her ethnographic study of two conservative groups, Tripodi (2018) found that information-seekers engage in a distinct set of media practices tied to the way they see the world. One practice centered around the close reading of textual documents deemed sacred (e.g. the Bible or the Constitution). By inverting traditional assumptions that truth is only curated at the top, this media practice allows for everyday people to act as subject matter experts. These practices, which developed and emerged in a print era, have been adapted to online search practices. Because interviewees distrusted both journalists and academics, they drew on this practice to fact check how media outlets reported the news.

According to the researchers, Tripodi’s study found that many conservative respondents “may have believed they were [] ‘doing the research’” but were in fact only “focused on the top results of Google, seldom scrolling down or looking at subsequent paged results.”¹⁰⁷ As evidence, the researchers point out that the conservative “respondents often focused on reading a wide array of primary sources, and performing their own synthesis,” further alleging that, “unlike expert lateral readers,” the conservative respondents made “no such effort” to “eliminate bias that might skew results from search terms.”¹⁰⁸

In fact, many respondents may have believed they were engaging in “lateral reading” (e.g. “doing the research” using Google). However, their approach differed in crucial respects. Unlike professional fact checkers, who practice “click restraint” (Wineburg & McGrew, 2017), users focused on the top results of Google, seldom scrolling down or looking at subsequent paged results (Tripodi, 2018). While lateral readers try to find secondary sources that reliably summarize expert consensus on sources and claims (Wineburg & McGrew, 2017; Caulfield, 2017), respondents often focused on reading a wide array of primary sources, and performing their own synthesis (Tripodi, 2018). While lateral readers seek to eliminate bias that might skew results from search terms (Caulfield, 2017), respondents made no such effort. Finally, unlike expert lateral readers, respondents evaluated search terms based on the nature of the results returned. One participant saw the fact that most results presented a similar story as evidence of a “rigged” media, rather than a heuristic of expert or professional consensus — and re-ran the search with new terms (Tripodi, 2018).

To summarize, the researchers’ concern is that there are Americans who deem the Constitution and the Bible “sacred,” and therefore dare to conduct their own research of “primary sources” rather than trust the “professional consensus.”

C. NSF-Funded Researchers Understand the Leverage They Have Over Social Media Companies to Ensure the Platforms Bow to Their Demands

NSF funding dictates who can survive in the pseudo-science world of studying so-called “disinformation.” With this role comes tremendous leverage for NSF to determine who to elevate within the censorship-industrial complex.

¹⁰⁵ Id., at 7.

¹⁰⁸ Id.

Once empowered with taxpayer dollars, the pseudo-science researchers wield the resources and prestige bestowed upon them by the federal government against any entities that resist their censorship projects. In some instances, if a social media company fails to act fast enough to change a policy or remove what the researchers perceive to be misinformation on its platform, disinformation researchers will issue blogposts or formal papers to “generate a communications moment” (i.e., negative press coverage) for the platform, seeking to coerce it into compliance with their demands.¹⁰⁹

Other times, the pseudo-scientists use their leverage for petty grievance. For example, on July 12, 2023, when an employee at Twitter refused to issue a refund to a Wisconsin CourseCorrect researcher based on his request to cancel a service upgrade on Twitter, the Wisconsin researcher sent an email threatening to publicize “our terrible treatment with thousands of researchers to discourage their use of your products.”¹¹⁰

Examples like these illustrate the tremendous sway these so-called “disinformation” researchers hold over social media platforms and why the federal government often turns to these unaccountable academics when seeking a proxy for their censorship activities.¹¹¹

Print Nov. 6, 2023).

IV. NSF IS TRYING TO COVER UP ITS FUNDING OF AI CENSORSHIP

Following congressional oversight and media scrutiny, Executive Branch agencies in the censorship-industrial complex often try to hide their involvement. For example, in early 2023, CISA scrubbed its website of mentions to “domestic actors” on its mis-, dis-, malinformation page.¹¹² In 2022, CISA considered using third parties to avoid the scrutiny that followed the public backlash to the Disinformation Governance Board.¹¹³

Throughout the entire Track F funding process, NSF has been closely tracking any signs of political or media attention on its misconduct. NSF developed an extensive “media strategy” and instructed the Track F teams on what they could or should say about their censorship projects. At one point, NSF considered blacklisting certain conservative media outlets that were covering NSF.

A. NSF Developed an Official Media Strategy to Hide its Track F Censorship Program from the American People

In the fall of 2021, various media outlets began reporting on NSF-funded Track F projects, sounding the alarm about how American taxpayer money might be funding the development of tools to censor and indoctrinate Americans.¹¹⁴

On September 27, 2021, one week after NSF started issuing Track F awards, Katelynn Richardson, then at Campus Reform, reported on how NSF was providing millions to universities to develop tools and techniques to address alleged misinformation. Her reporting highlighted multiple Track F projects, including Wisconsin’s CourseCorrect and Michigan’s WiseDex, and cited comments made by the head researchers explaining how they would design and test the propaganda and censorship tools.¹¹⁵

The following month, on October 22, 2021, Campus Reform published another article on Track F, this time highlighting a project led by researchers at Temple University. The article cited an interview in which Eduard Dragut, the lead Temple University researcher on the $750,000 project, admitted that his team planned to “use natural language processing algorithms along with social networking tools to mine the communities where [misinformation] may happen.”¹¹⁶

A few days later, on October 26, Michael Pozmantier, NSF’s Track F program manager, began emailing the head researchers about the need to devise a Track F-specific “media/outreach strategy” to inform how NSF and the research teams would handle the media going forward.¹¹⁷

In his email, Pozmantier referred to the Campus Reform article as the latest example of “misinfo and attacks” against “researchers in this space,” adding that “NSF leadership and public affairs” needs to be “better equipped to deal with what’s coming.”¹¹⁸

Pls,

As you all know and have likely dealt with for quite a while, researchers in this space are subject to misinfo and attacks. An article was just released about one of the projects in the track and it has ginned up the usual joyful response, it makes sense for us to discuss how we (NSF) should handle this going forward. Given that there are no better people anywhere to help us with this, I’d like to schedule a meeting with all of you to discuss. You each can include one other person from your team who has experience with this if you’d like but I’d prefer that we keep this meeting reasonably sized, so it is manageable. Plus, the more people, the harder it is to schedule.

This discussion will lead to others, I plan to engage NSF leadership and public affairs soon after our conversation so that they can be better equipped to deal with what’s coming and try to find ways to avoid issues where possible based on your input and guidance. By NSF doing a better job, hopefully we can avoid causing any new issues for you as well.

Shortly thereafter, Pozmantier emailed Michael Wagner, the head researcher for Wisconsin’s CourseCorrect team, saying, “I knew [blowback] was a possibility, just a question of who is actually paying attention to what we’re doing.”¹¹⁹

On November 2, 2021, NSF held two meetings with the research teams to develop an official “Track F Media Strategy.” In a November 22, 2021 email attaching a first draft of NSF’s Track F media strategy, Pozmantier emphasized that “a joint effort” would be required for NSF to do “a better job in how we deal with the media on this topic,” including “training” for the researchers “beginning in January.”¹²⁰

The Track F Media Strategy document begins by noting that because Track F “is a controversial topic, it’s important for NSF to proactively develop a strategy to enable the Foundation and funded researchers to be in sync,” adding that “many” of the Track F researchers “have extensive experience dealing with this issue.”¹²¹

Knowing that Track F is a controversial topic, it’s important for NSF to proactively develop a strategy to enable the Foundation and funded researchers to be in sync. Additionally, many of the PIs, Co-PIs, and Sr. Personnel working on Track F projects have extensive experience dealing with this issue. Two meetings were organized by the Convergence Accelerator to draw upon this expertise, to develop the strategy to help prevent or lessen opportunities for the spreading of misinformation about the Track.

The result of these meetings was a set of recommended activities and artifacts to be developed by NSF, the Convergence Accelerator, and the teams to be used to assist in minimizing and responding to issues. The information would also be shared with NSF’s Office of Legislative and Public Affairs and other relevant parties.

¹²¹ First Draft of NSF’s Track F Media Strategy entitled “Track F Media Strategy_v1.docx,” at 1 (on file with the Comm.); see also App’x B.

The strategy then provides specific recommendations for the Track F research teams when dealing with the media, such as “always highlight the pro-democracy nature of the Track and each project” and “if possible, focus on the non-ideological nature of work”—even if, as NSF privately acknowledged, showing “both sides can distort” who is really being censored.¹²²

Recommendations

Messaging:

- Always highlight the pro-democracy nature of the Track and each project
- Always be accurate, any inaccuracies can be a hanging thread to be pulled
- If possible, focus on the non-ideological nature of work
 - Give examples of both sides (I’m not a fan of always trying to show both sides because they are not always equal in impact and showing both sides can distort)
 - When it’s possible, use sports metaphors
- Focus on the scientific process

Protective Measures:

- Subscribe to monitoring service(s) to proactively help manage when project information is published and possibly miscommunicated.
- Subscribe to scrubbing services, such as DeleteMe

The media strategy document also reveals how NSF developed and required the Track F research teams to receive “media training” with “key messaging about the NSF Convergence Accelerator, Track F, [and] each funded project.”¹²³

Media Training:

Develop and provide media training to NSF Convergence Accelerator staff and funded researchers understand media engagement best practices, internal communication processes, and standard messaging. The multi-level training will include basic training and an advanced training.

- Multi-level
 - Basic training
 - Media engagement best practices
 - Interview requests (e.g., Who to involve, when to provide a written statement or have a live interview, etc.)
 - Speaking in plain language
 - Highlighting the scientific strategy, value and impact
 - Reporter terminology (e.g., What does it mean to be ‘On the record’, ‘Off the record, or ‘On background’?)
 - Standard key messaging about the NSF Convergence Accelerator, Track F, each funded project

B. NSF Considered Blacklisting Conservative Media Outlets

The Track F “Media Strategy” memo reveals that NSF initially planned to instruct the Track F teams—groups that received federal taxpayer dollars—about which “media outlets to not engage” as part of its “basic training.”¹²⁴

- Examples of media outlets to not engage
- Processes: Notifying your organization of the media request, when to notify NSF
- Advanced
 - Harassment:
 - How to respond to harassment (accompanied by Checklist)
 - Who to notify if harassment is received

After reviewing the media strategy, the head researcher for Michigan’s WiseDex project expressed his concerns to Pozmantier that a media blacklist “would be bad optics,” noting that, “[w]hile I think it is worth alerting teams to what can go wrong if they engage with certain kinds of media outlets . . . , I think it would be bad optics for the NSF to have a blacklist of media sites that our teams systemically refuse to engage with, especially if it includes domestic sites.”¹²⁵

Pozmantier replied, “I agree 100%, that shouldn’t be in there. I’ll remove it.”¹²⁶

C. NSF Attempted to Hide Additional Funding to Its Track F Censorship Program

In August 2022, when the time came for NSF to announce which Track F projects would receive an additional $5 million in Phase 2 funding, NSF quietly decided to not issue a press release, although its typical practice was to do so.¹²⁷ When NSF announced the $30 million that Track E recipients would be receiving in Phase 2, a similar announcement of the equal amount of taxpayer dollars being provided to Track F recipients was conspicuously absent.¹²⁸

Rather, NSF maintained a tight hold on the information, providing clear instructions to any Track F teams who might be interested in announcing their Phase 2 awards. In an August 19, 2022 email to the six Track F teams selected for Phase 2 funding, Pozmantier explained that “NSF will not be including this track in the Phase 2 press release, only Track E will be announced,” adding that any research teams interested in announcing their Phase 2 awards should coordinate with NSF to do so.¹²⁹

It also appears that NSF asked the Track F teams to get formal approval from NSF before issuing press releases, publishing articles, or responding to media inquiries relating to the program, and that the researchers complied, checking with NSF before responding to media inquiries.¹³⁰ For example, on September 12, 2022, a University of Wisconsin public relations employee emailed Shelby Smith, the communications and outreach director for NSF’s Convergence Accelerator, writing, “I’m working on a press release/web article announcing the [Phase 2] grant, and was told your team would like to review any communications before they go out.”¹³¹

To date, NSF continues to maintain an announcement on its website for the Phase 2 recipients of every track except for Track F.¹³² To be clear, this is not because the Track F program ended or because no teams were selected to receive further funding. Rather, it appears that NSF recognized that the American people would not respond kindly to the announcement that an additional $30 million was being allocated to projects aimed at indoctrinating and silencing them.

D. NSF Continues to Try to Cover Up Its Funding of Censorship Tools

In 2022, NSF created an official media strategy and made the calculated decision to not announce Track F’s Phase 2 recipients. NSF’s cover up of its censorship program continued into at least 2023.

For example, on January 31, 2023, a few days after Pozmantier advised Paul Resnick, the head researcher for Michigan’s WiseDex team, to not respond to media inquiries, Resnick followed up again with another “reporter inquiry” about whether “Twitter use[s] WiseDex as a vendor,” noting that he wanted to check with Pozmantier “before responding.”¹³³ Pozmantier ultimately replied: “NSF would probably stay away.”¹³⁴

Days later, on February 2, 2023, Pozmantier emailed the Track F teams, outlining the various Track F projects receiving media attention, including WiseDex and CourseCorrect, and explaining “how NSF is handling it.”¹³⁵ “In short, NSF is not responding to requests from people who are interested in attacking our programs or your projects,” Pozmantier wrote, adding “it’s probably best if you also ignore it.”¹³⁶

A couple weeks later, in late February 2023, when Katelynn Richardson, now at the Daily Caller, published an article on “NSF funding misinfo research,” and “linked to some of the Expo videos on YouTube,” Pozmantier quickly emailed the heads of each of the research teams, warning them of the article.¹³⁷ He also noted that he was “going to see about pulling [the Track F Expo videos on YouTube] down or locking the page ASAP.”¹³⁸

In response to this email, Michael Wagner, the head researcher for Wisconsin's CourseCorrect team, assured Pozmantier that his team had recently issued a statement emphasizing that CourseCorrect is focused on “non-partisan issues like food safety.”¹³⁹

In March 2023, Wagner flagged for Pozmantier a recent article from legal scholar Jonathan Turley about the projects NSF had been funding, writing mockingly that “Turley’s on the case!”¹⁴⁰ Pozmantier revealed his contempt for the legal scholar, writing “[a]s usual, he shows he only has a passing relationship with the facts,” without identifying any shortcomings in Turley’s article.¹⁴¹

In April 2023, the situation had progressed such that Pozmantier started organizing “communications planning” meetings for the Track F teams,¹⁴² which continued into May.¹⁴³

NSF and researchers receiving taxpayer-funded NSF grants coordinated their responses to media coverage of other NSF fundings as well. For example, on September 29, 2022, Just the News wrote an article on NSF’s multi-million-dollar grants to Stanford and the University of Washington through its Secure and Trustworthy Cyberspace (SaTC) program.¹⁴⁴ Like the Track F projects, the projects funded through NSF’s SaTC were also focused on countering so-called “(mis/dis)information online.”¹⁴⁵ In response, on October 5, 2022, Dr. Kate Starbird, the head of the University of Washington’s Center for an Informed Public, emailed Sara Kiesler, an NSF official, warning that “partisan media outlets [are] making false and misleading claims” about her work.¹⁴⁶ Linking to the Just the News article, Dr. Starbird criticized the claim that her “SaTC funding was a ‘reward’ from ‘the Biden Administration’ for ‘censoring’ specific voices.”¹⁴⁷

E. NSF Is Attempting to Stonewall Congressional Investigations

On January 24, 2023, Pozmantier emailed Paul Resnick, the head researcher for Michigan’s WiseDex project, mentioning that Senator Joni Ernst wrote NSF a “letter of inquiry” in November 2022 regarding a particular Track F project that had gained media attention.¹⁴⁸ However, just a few days later, in a February 2, 2023 email, Pozmantier noted that “NSF is not responding to requests from people who are interested in attacking our program.”¹⁴⁹ Taken together, these emails raise questions as to whether NSF’s lack of transparency on Track F would extend to openly defying information requests from Congress.

These emails may also help explain why NSF has failed to provide the Committee and Select Subcommittee with an appreciable volume of documents and information responsive to the requests sent more than nine months ago in May 2023 pursuant to the Committee’s ongoing investigation.¹⁵⁰ To date, NSF has produced a mere 294 pages to the Committee in response to requests for documents and information relating to its Track F program, maintaining an iron grip on much of the substantially relevant information in its possession and obstructing the Committee and Select Subcommittee’s investigation for over half a year.¹⁵¹

Time and again, NSF engaged in efforts to hide its Track F censorship program from the American people, training the research teams on how to avoid media scrutiny and refusing to respond substantively to congressional requests itself. The extent to which NSF has gone to shield its taxpayer-funded censorship research raises serious concerns that NSF knows its research activities violate the Constitution and fundamental civil liberties.

V. THE ROLE OF CONGRESS: DEFUND THE CENSORSHIP-INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX AND FIGHT THE NEXT BATTLE TO DEFEND FREE SPEECH

If you don’t agree with the prevailing niche morality that is being imposed on both social media and AI via ever-intensifying speech codes, you should also realize that the fight over what AI is allowed to say/generate will be even more important – by a lot – than the fight over social media censorship. AI is highly likely to be the control layer for everything in the world. How it is allowed to operate is going to matter perhaps more than anything else has ever mattered. You should be aware of how a small and isolated coterie of partisan social engineers are trying to determine that right now, under cover of the age-old claim that they are protecting you.

In short, don’t let the thought police suppress AI.¹⁵²

¹⁵² See Marc Andreessen, Why AI Will Save the World, ANDREESEN HOROWITZ (June 6, 2023) (emphases in original).

The Committee and the Select Subcommittee will continue their investigation to understand the full threat to free speech in order to inform legislative solutions, such as prohibiting NSF from funding projects used to monitor speech. Matt Taibbi and Michael Shellenberger, two of the journalists at the forefront of this issue, have testified before the Select Subcommittee on the intersection of government, Big Tech, universities, and other third parties, dubbing the enterprise the “censorship-industrial complex.”¹⁵³ But just how big is the censorship-industrial complex? One of the key players, Meedan, estimated that market in 2022 for “content moderation solutions” was $10 billion.¹⁵⁴

With the power of the purse, the House of Representatives is uniquely positioned to legislate to protect fundamental First Amendment rights and end the censorship-industrial complex by draining it of its key resource: American taxpayer dollars. To be sure, other legislative solutions have been, and will continue to be, considered. Moreover, mainstream outlets are reporting that universities in the censorship-industrial complex are “ending” their disinformation programs because of civil liberties concerns identified by the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s investigation.¹⁵⁵

These successes notwithstanding, the urgency of the situation cannot be overstated. New technologies are being developed that represent a threat of a different magnitude to online speech, and with it, the modern town square. At a minimum, American taxpayers should not be funding the tools that may take away one of their most important and fundamental rights. The Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to investigate and legislate to protect Americans’ freedom of speech against threats old and new.

National Science Foundation
Office of the Director

June 13, 2023

The Honorable Jim Jordan
Chairman
Committee on the Judiciary
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Chairman Jordan:

Thank you for your letter regarding content moderation on technology and social media platforms. The U.S. National Science Foundation (NSF) takes very seriously our responsibilities to the public, and strong oversight and stewardship of taxpayer dollars are vital to NSF's ability to deliver on its mission to promote the progress of science; to advance the national health, prosperity, and welfare; and to secure the national defense. I appreciate the opportunity to respond to your questions and NSF staff are working diligently to identify all responsive records.

For more than seven decades, NSF has been a critical component in powering the United States economy, transforming American lives, and securing the national defense. NSF advances research and innovation and American competitiveness by investing in foundational, curiosity-driven, discovery research, as well as use-inspired, solution-oriented innovations to advance key technologies and address societal and economic challenges. Many of the technological advances we are benefiting from today such as Artificial Intelligence, Quantum Information Science, and Biotechnology are rooted in sustained investment over many decades. However, we currently face intense global competition in the race to develop these technologies and the workforce needed to secure the future of innovation. Our success in unlocking the promise of these and other technological developments and scientific breakthroughs will determine our continued global leadership and are central to our economic and national security.

Among the areas in which NSF is a leader on behalf of the U.S. Government is next-generation communication networks and systems. For example, NSF investments over the last two decades have led to millimeter wave technologies, dynamic spectrum sharing, and open radio access networks (OpenRAN), which are enabling the fifth, sixth, and future generations of wireless networks ("5G" and "6G"). As part of this mission, it is critical that NSF also invests in tools, technologies, and approaches to prevent, mitigate and adapt to critical threats to communication systems and assist end users with knowledge to make informed decisions.

NSF uses a rigorous merit review process to ensure funding decisions are based on a fair, competitive, and transparent process, consistent with NSF's broad mission as well as specific direction from Congress. Each proposal submitted to NSF is reviewed by science and engineering experts well-versed in their particular discipline or field of expertise. Further, All each proposal submitted to NSF is reviewed according to two merit review criteria: Intellectual Merit and Broader Impacts. NSF's merit review process is widely considered to be the "gold standard" of scientific review. Perhaps the best evidence of NSF's success is the repeated replication of its merit review model for discovery, education and innovation around the globe. The Internet, 3D printing, the economic theory underpinning spectrum auctioning and kidney exchanges, and the first image of a black hole are all examples of the power of NSF investments in innovations and innovators.

In recent years, Congress has called on NSF to engage the research community to identify and address issues of safety, ethics and adversarial influence online. Examples of this Congressional direction include:

House Report 117-395, as referenced by the joint explanatory statement accompanying Division B, the Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2023, of the FY2023 Consolidated Appropriations Act (P.L. 117-328):

Trustworthy Algorithmic Research.—The Committee urges NSF to increase support for research into the safety and ethical effects of content moderation and recommendation algorithms that will advance new technical methods to reduce the likelihood of unexpected negative effects from these algorithms. The Foundation shall further consider using the special authority provided under Section 5401 (f) of the National Artificial Intelligence Initiative Act, Public Law 116–283, to carry out this research. No later than 180 days after the enactment of this Act, NSF shall provide the Committee with a report on its efforts to prioritize such research.

The joint explanatory statement accompanying Division B, the Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2022, of the FY2022 Consolidated Appropriations Act (P.L. 117-103):

Online Influence. —NSF is encouraged to consider additional research efforts that will help counter influence from foreign adversaries on the Internet and social media platforms designed to influence U.S. perspectives, sow discord during times of pandemic and other emergencies, and undermine confidence in U.S. elections and institutions. To the extent practicable, NSF should foster collaboration among scientists from disparate scientific fields and engage other Federal agencies and NAS to help identify areas of research that will provide insight that can mitigate adversarial online influence, including by helping the public become more resilient to undue influence.

The Identifying Outputs of Generative Adversarial Networks (IOGAN) Act (P.L. 116-258):

Sec. 3. NSF support of research on manipulated or synthesized content and information security.

The Director of the National Science Foundation, in consultation with other relevant Federal agencies, shall support merit-reviewed and competitively awarded research on manipulated or synthesized content and information authenticity, which may include—

- (1) fundamental research on digital forensic tools or other technologies for verifying the authenticity of information and detection of manipulated or synthesized content, including content generated by generative adversarial networks;
- (2) fundamental research on technical tools for identifying manipulated or synthesized content, such as watermarking systems for generated media;
- (3) social and behavioral research related to manipulated or synthesized content, including human engagement with the content;
- (4) research on public understanding and awareness of manipulated and synthesized content, including research on best practices for educating the public to discern authenticity of digital content; and
- (5) research awards coordinated with other federal agencies and programs, including the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency and the Intelligence Advanced Research Projects Agency, with coordination enabled by the Networking and Information Technology Research and Development Program.

NSF has a long history of addressing these types of priority research areas through special-emphasis programs and public-private partnership to address potential biases in AI systems, with the goal of contributing to the trustworthiness of such systems. For example, the NSF Program on Fairness in AI in Collaboration with Amazon supports building trustworthy AI systems to tackle grand challenges facing society. Specific topics of interest include transparency, explainability, accountability, integrity, mitigation strategies, validation, and inclusivity. NSF's independent merit review process ensures projects funded through this collaboration enable broadened acceptance of AI systems, helping the U.S. further capitalize on the potential of AI technologies. NSF also joined with the Partnership on AI (PAI), a multistakeholder organization that brings together academic researchers, industry, civil society organizations, and other groups working together to better understand AI's impact on society, to support projects exploring the social challenges arising from AI technology and enabling scientific contributions to overcome them.

NSF's investments also aim to enhance authentic and trustworthy information and dissemination in cyberspace. For example, NSF's Secure and Trustworthy Cyberspace (SaTC) program includes, among its research topics of interest, information integrity, and particularly emerging threat models stemming from unverifiable information provenance. This includes adversarial machine learning threats in model training, deployment, and reuse; privacy risks, including model inversion and risks to individuals such as re-identification, and de-anonymization; and forensic and formal methods for analyzing, auditing, and verifying security- and privacy-related issues of AI components.

A key element of strengthening resilience against information manipulation is to empower individuals through education on how to recognize, create, consume, and propagate trustworthy information and to identify corrupted information. NSF investments support research to develop effective educational and digital literacy pathways for all age levels, demographics, and technological experiences. The SaTC program also supports evidence-based and evidence-generating methods to improve cybersecurity education and workforce development at the K-12, undergraduate, graduate, and professional education levels. This includes approaches to improve cybersecurity learning and learning environments, new educational materials and methods of instruction, and assessment tools to measure student learning.

In your letter, you requested information specifically about NSF's Convergence Accelerator Track F: Trust & Authenticity in Communications Systems. The NSF Convergence Accelerator supports the development of new technologies that address pressing societal and economic challenges for the Nation. This particular Convergence Accelerator track is addressing the urgent need for tools and techniques that help the Nation more effectively prevent, mitigate, and adapt to critical risks to the trust and authenticity in communication systems.

The NSF Convergence Accelerator follows an ideation process for selecting convergent research topics, or "tracks," for the program's yearly cohort. The ideation process involves gathering ideas and insights from the research and innovation community to include community workshops and findings. Selected ideas must also be grounded in scientific research, suitable for a convergent approach, advance key technologies, and address a societal or economic challenge.

The selection process for Track F began in March 2020 by issuing a Dear Colleague Letter, Request for Information on Future Topics (NSF-20-061). Based on the community input, two workshop topics were chosen for the 2021 cohort track topics, one being Track F: Trust & Authenticity in Communication Systems. The selection of the topic and the subsequent workshop occurred in 2020, during the Trump Administration. The subsequent funding opportunity was released in early 2021. Track F: Trust & Authenticity in Communication Systems was selected to assist the Nation with effectively preventing, mitigating, and adapting to critical threats to national security in the form of communication systems that our adversaries seek to disrupt or exploit to negatively impact U.S. businesses, platforms, networks and more. We continue to believe it is vital for the U.S. to understand how to be resilient to these types of attacks and has the tools to do so.

In September 2021, NSF awarded up to $750,000 per team and $9 million total to twelve Track F Phase 1 teams. At the end of Phase 1, teams competed to advance to Phase 2, as envisioned in the original solicitation and consistent with all Convergence Accelerator tracks. NSF selected six Track F teams for Phase 2, awarding up to $5 million per team or $30 million total over 24 months. Please find below all the awards made through the Track F program with links that will take you to the award summaries and additional information.

All,

Thank you for participating in the meetings what were held on November 2, we learned quite a bit through the two discussions-- I've also included those of you who couldn't make the meetings to get your input as well. It's a taken a bit longer than I had hoped to get the notes and so forth together to begin to turn the discussion into actions. Please take a look at the attached document and send any comments back to me to coordinate any updates or additional guidance you may have. In addition, we need to start on the action items such as developing a basic media training kit, advanced training, and the response checklist. Given all of your experience and your equity in NSF doing a better job in how we deal with the media on this topic, this will be a joint effort. Some of you may already have these items developed or have done it before, so we're happy to defer to you in guiding the efforts here.

Please let me know which areas you'd like to contribute to. I'm hoping this will not result in much additional work for anyone and expect this to a be an iterative process that will see us ready to adopt the response checklist and provide the media kit and training beginning in January.

Feel free to pass this along to anyone on your teams that you feel should be included.

Happy Thanksgiving,

Mike

Media Strategy

Background

Due to the nature of the research/work being conducted by the Track F: Trust and Authenticity in Communication Systems funded projects, it is likely that NSF and the project teams will become a focal point for the various groups including media, non-profit, and other organizations. This is based on the response to reporting on a project focusing on helping local journalists understand how their work might be misused. An article written by an organization that is followed by various groups/publications with extensive reach was republished with the project being mischaracterized in the process, resulting in angry emails to NSF's media external mailbox. This process continued with a mention in another article further mischaracterizing the project in a more mainstream source.

Knowing that Track F is a controversial topic, it's important for NSF to proactively develop a strategy to enable the Foundation and funded researchers to be in sync. Additionally, many of the PIs, Co-PIs, and Sr. Personnel working on Track F projects have extensive experience dealing with this issue. Two meetings were organized by the Convergence Accelerator to draw upon this expertise, to develop the strategy to help prevent or lessen opportunities for the spreading of misinformation about the Track.

The result of these meetings was a set of recommended activities and artifacts to be developed by NSF, the Convergence Accelerator, and the teams to be used to assist in minimizing and responding to issues. The information would also be shared with NSF's Office of Legislative and Public Affairs and other relevant parties.

Recommendations

Messaging:

- Always highlight the pro-democracy nature of the Track and each project
- Always be accurate, any inaccuracies can be a hanging thread to be pulled
- If possible, focus on the non-ideological nature of work
 - Give examples of both sides *(I'm not a fan of always trying to show both sides because they are not always equal in impact and showing both sides can distort)
 - When it's possible, use sports metaphors
- Focus on the scientific process

Protective Measures:

- Subscribe to monitoring service(s) to proactively help manage when project information is published and possibly miscommunicated.
- Subscribe to scrubbing services, such as DeleteMe

Media Training:

Develop and provide media training to NSF Convergence Accelerator staff and funded researchers understand media engagement best practices, internal communication processes, and standard messaging. The multi-level training will include basic training and an advanced training.

- Multi-level
 - Basic training
 - Media engagement best practices
 - Interview requests (e.g., Who to involve, when to provide a written statement or have a live interview, etc.)
 - Speaking in plain language
 - Highlighting the scientific strategy, value and impact
 - Reporter terminology (e.g., What does it mean to be 'On the record', 'Off the record, or 'On background'?)
 - Standard key messaging about the NSF Convergence Accelerator, Track F, each funded project
 - Examples of media outlets to not engage
 - Processes: Notifying your organization of the media request, when to notify NSF
 - Advanced
 - Harassment:
 - How to respond to harassment (accompanied by Checklist)
 - Who to notify if harassment is received

Develop Response Checklist

Actions:

1. Create a talking points document
2. Put together list of scrubbing and monitoring services
 - a. Some may offer free service to researchers, if not this is an allowable project expense
3. Develop Media Basic Training Kit that can be provided without a training session
4. Design a Media Training Session to go over more advanced topics
5. Develop Response Checklist in conjunction with advanced training

Misinformation undermines liberal democracy by eroding the commonly accepted facts that allow society to reach consensus.

The misinformation-informed partisan definitions of facts are increasingly divergent, making efforts to curtail misinformation by social media companies untenably controversial. Thus misinformation is accelerating the fracture of modern society.

Our work reestablishes bipartisan consensus on truth and therefore enables platforms to curtail the spread of misinformation, saving modern democracy.

PROJECT SUMMARY

Overview:

The health of a democracy depends on the public's ability to access reliable information (Hobbs, 2010; Mihailidis & Thevenin, 2013). Learning how to find information and assess its quality is essential to making informed personal and civic decisions (Lynch, 2017; Metzger et al., 2010). On the Internet, traditional gatekeepers and hallmarks of authority are largely absent. Moreover, few understand how search engines work and the role that search terms play in shaping the information returned. If people consume information without the ability to assess its credibility—unable to tell who is behind a cause and what their motives might be—they are easy prey for groups that seek to deceive, mislead, and manipulate. In these ways and others, the toxic effects of disinformation have chipped away at the foundations of democracy the world over (Diamond, 2020; Levitsky & Ziblatt, 2018). Members of our team have developed and evaluated cost-effective interventions that teach K-12 and college students to find trustworthy online sources in a wide variety of domains. Based on research with professional fact checkers (Wineburg & McGrew, 2017, 2019), these interventions teach civic online reasoning—skills that allow Internet users to efficiently evaluate the information that flows across their screens. Rigorous studies conducted in secondary school and college settings show that these interventions improve students' ability to distinguish between quality digital information and sham (Breakstone et al., 2021a; 2021b; Brodsky et al., 2019; McGrew, 2020; McGrew et al., 2018).

In the Convergence Accelerator program, we will shift our attention from public education to education of the public. Through a three-year road map, and with partners in academia, industry, nonprofit, and government, we propose a multidisciplinary human-centered design process for adapting effective interventions to new contexts—based on our expertise in the sociology of information, effective web reading practices, curriculum development, and online delivery at scale. We will disseminate effective approaches through an open software platform that integrates educational interventions and assessment. We will test this approach with populations often excluded from information literacy efforts and who may be more vulnerable to misinformation campaigns, such as rural and indigenous communities with limited access to high-speed internet, military veterans, older adults, and military families.

The project's Phase I output will be to co-design, test, adapt, and scale misinformation interventions that have proven effective within educational settings to the broader public. In Phase I, we will work with Humanities Montana, a convener of libraries and cultural institutions and advocate for engaged citizenship, to adapt proven educational interventions to serve rural, low-income citizens, including indigenous populations, in libraries and other community settings. Such efforts will require expertise in the study of existing media practices of selected sub-groups, experience with developing and assessing civic online reasoning interventions, and a proven track record of designing and delivering educational experiences at scale.

Intellectual Merit:

We will develop a flexible, human-centered design process for adapting existing search literacy interventions to particular contexts. In Phase II, we will use this design process to create targeted interventions for a range of groups outside the formal educational system who are vulnerable to misinformation campaigns, including for military veterans, military families, older adults, immigrant populations, and low-income urban residents.

Broader Impacts:

The broader impacts of our research will be 1) to widely disseminate resources for effective search practices across diverse communities through public media and online learning resources, 2) to publish in journals, conferences, and other venues use-inspired research that provides a road map for understanding the deep stories and search practices of particular communities and using that understanding to adapt existing, effective interventions to new contexts, and 3) to develop an openly-licensed integrated software platform of simulations and assessments that allow for the evaluation of interventions across diverse contexts.

NSF Convergence Accelerator Track F: Adapting and Scaling Existing Educational Programs to Combat Inauthenticity and Instill Trust in Information¹

Overview

The health of a democracy depends on the public’s ability to access reliable information (Hobbs, 2010; Mihailidis & Thevenin, 2013). Learning how to find information and assess its quality is essential to making informed personal and civic decisions (Lynch, 2017; Metzger et al., 2010). On the Internet, traditional gatekeepers and hallmarks of authority are largely absent. Moreover, few understand how search engines work and the role that search terms play in shaping the information returned. If people consume information without the ability to assess its credibility—unable to tell who is behind a cause and what their motives might be—they are easy prey for groups that seek to deceive, mislead, and manipulate. Just as important, citizens who feel unable to identify misinformation are less likely to engage in sharing any information, even when that information may be reliable and socially beneficial (Yang & Horning, 2020). In these ways and others, the toxic effects of disinformation have chipped away at the foundations of democracy the world over (Diamond, 2020; Levitsky & Ziblatt, 2018).

Members of our team have developed and evaluated cost-effective interventions that teach K-12 and college students to find trustworthy online sources in a wide variety of domains. Based on research with professional fact checkers (Wineburg & McGrew, 2017, 2019), these interventions teach a set of skills—civic online reasoning—that allow Internet users to efficiently evaluate the information that flows across their screens. Rigorous studies conducted in secondary school and college settings show that these interventions improve students’ ability to distinguish between quality digital information and sham (Breakstone et al., 2021a; 2021b; Brodsky et al., 2019; McGrew, 2020; McGrew et al., 2018).

In the Convergence Accelerator program, we will shift our attention from public education to education of the public. Through a three-year road map, we propose a multidisciplinary human-centered design process for adapting effective interventions to new contexts--based on our expertise in the sociology of information, effective web reading practices, curriculum development, and online delivery at scale. We will disseminate effective approaches through an open software platform that integrates educational interventions and assessment. We will test this approach with populations often excluded from information literacy efforts and who may be more vulnerable to misinformation campaigns, such as rural and indigenous communities with limited access to high-speed internet (Swire-Thompson & Lazer, 2020), military veterans (House Veterans' Affairs Committee, 2020), older adults (Guess et al., 2019), and military families (Newman, 2021).

The project’s Phase I output will be to co-design, test, adapt, and scale misinformation interventions that have proven effective within educational settings to the broader public. In Phase I, we will work with Humanities Montana, a convener of libraries and cultural institutions and advocate for engaged citizenship, to adapt proven educational interventions to serve rural, low-income citizens, including indigenous populations, in libraries and other community settings. If the goal is to educate every Internet user, we must develop processes that allow us to adapt and deliver the tools developed by our team to new contexts and populations. Such efforts will require expertise in the study of existing media practices of selected sub-groups, experience with developing and assessing civic online reasoning interventions, and a proven track record of designing and delivering educational experiences at scale.

Educational interventions need to account for the distinct media literacy practices of different communities, including where they go for information they can trust and how they come to trust those sources. We will ground our work in ethnographic methods to understand existing media literacy practices. By understanding the “deep stories” (Hochschild, 2016; Tripodi, 2018) that communities bring with them when they search (e.g., Lee et al., 2021), our work will provide more context to how these processes are exploited by media manipulators and foreign governments. This research will inform how we adapt our interventions to help citizens become discerning consumers of digital content.

¹The title has evolved slightly since the Co-PIs submitted the letter of intent with this title: Lateral Reading for All--Adult Educational Programs for Effective Search Practices to Combat Inauthenticity in Communication.

In Phase I, through a co-design process, we will develop a searchable library of tasks and curriculum materials with detailed guidance about implementation in diverse contexts. To achieve the goal of adapting, testing, and scaling community-centered misinformation interventions, we will bring together diverse stakeholders to prototype and test a range of interventions that will include workshops and classes, online learning modules, public service announcements (PSAs), posters, and other resources and activities. In developing materials, we will build on extensive experience creating free online curricula, professional development workshops, open online courses, and public media (in partnership with Retro Report, a premier documentary news organization that produces videos for the New York Times and other news organizations). We will evaluate materials using digital clinical simulations (Thompson et al., 2019) and other tested assessment tools (Breakstone et al., 2021a; 2021b; McGrew et al., 2018). We will then disseminate materials through partnerships with organizations like Humanities Montana, as well as develop an online repository of our resources of adapted intervention materials for use in communal settings (e.g., libraries, senior centers, and places of worship). This initial set of materials will be made available through Stanford’s existing Civic Online Reasoning website, a site that has logged 180,000 curriculum downloads in the last 18 months. Above all, we will develop a flexible, human-centered design process for adapting existing interventions to new contexts.

In Phase II, we will extend this human-centered design process to create and scale targeted interventions for a range of additional groups who are especially vulnerable to misinformation campaigns, including military veterans, military families, and older adults. We will follow the process developed in Phase I: (1) generate ethnographic understanding of existing information-seeking practices; (2) prototype interventions based on patterns identified during ethnographic research; (3) engage in an iterative prototyping and testing with key community stakeholders; and (4) archive effective approaches, resources, and assessment prompts. To support our work across multiple contexts, we will develop an integrated learning and assessment platform that includes digital clinical simulations of challenging tasks in civic online reasoning, diverse assessment items that evaluate intervention effectiveness with distinct populations, and curricular materials for community settings like senior centers.

The multidisciplinary, multi-sector team brings expertise in combating misinformation from a range of disciplines and methodological training including: sociology, education, the learning sciences, information science, civics, adult online and blended learning, personalized learning at scale, and psychometrics. The team includes members from nonprofit, industry, and academia, with proposed partnerships in health care and the military to be developed during Phase I in preparation for Phase II.

A. Objectives and Significance of the Proposed Activity

The overarching goal of this work is to equip the general public with the knowledge and skills needed to find trustworthy information online. Understanding communities’ unique media literacy practices-- where they go for information, how they come to trust that information, and how their orientation to search inputs influences outputs (Tripodi, 2018)-- is crucial to the success of training and intervention delivery. Unlike decontextualized interventions and games, the key to our success is authentic task environments of the live web (Caulfield, 2017; McGrew, 2020; Wineburg & McGrew, 2017). Our three year roadmap expands our efforts beyond traditional classrooms to generate a software platform for research and interventions that can analyze, identify, and respond to the unique socio-technical features of the communities we wish to serve. We will adapt and test existing interventions for use with groups at increased risk for falling prey to inauthentic behavior. Through this iterative process, we will create a repository of curriculum and assessment materials that will be made freely available online. Our core objectives for the proposed activities include:

1. Build a Multi-Sector Partnership: Establish a collaborative community with partners from academia, non-profits, the military, and industry to build human-centered, use-inspired interventions that foster trust in communication among the public.

2. Seek Information on Information Seekers: Assess how groups decide what information they trust, where they go for news and information, and how they understand the algorithms that drive search engines like Google.
3. Co-Design Prototype Interventions: Building on existing interventions developed by our team, create co-design tools, media and curricula that meet the needs of the target communities.
4. Iteratively Evaluate Intervention Effectiveness: Evaluate implementation and engagement in target communities, and how much new interventions improve civic online reasoning
5. Disseminate Insights and Tools to the Field: Distribute resources including a public-facing report, an online repository of free curricular materials, an interactive e-learning tool, a collection of professionally produced videos, assessment items, and digital clinical simulations.

Through a set of tasks described in D. Coordination Plan below, including participation in the NSF Innovation Curriculum, the proposed work will address these guiding questions:

1. Where do people go for information they can trust and how do they come to rely on this information? To what extent are these practices shaped by community norms and values? How do these practices vary across communities? How well do users understand the technology they use to validate information (e.g., Google or Wikipedia)?
2. Can community-centered education and training materials that result from the convergence approach create more digitally discerning citizens?
3. To what extent should intervention approaches differ across communities and contexts? What parts of effective interventions are most likely to require contextual adaptations, and what aspects typically work across contexts?

From Public Education to Educating the Public: Evaluating What Works and For Whom

The baseline of search skills in the U.S. population is dangerously low. People struggle to evaluate online information. Participants who said they would base evaluations on source information rarely did so when observed in real time (Eysenbach & Köhler, 2002; Flanagin & Metzger, 2007; Hargittai et al., 2010). Individuals frequently ignored source information (Bartlett & Miller, 2011; Barzilai & Zohar, 2012), focusing instead on the relevance (rather than quality or accuracy) of the information provided (Walraven et al., 2009) and basing their conclusions on a website’s surface-level features (Coiro et al., 2015; Hargittai & Young, 2012; McGrew et al., 2018). These findings may reflect deficiencies in how people are taught to judge the credibility of Internet sources. Many of the most widely used website evaluation materials—including those appearing on prestigious university websites—feature outdated strategies that can lead students astray (Breakstone et al., 2018; Caulfield, 2017; Sullivan, 2019; Wineburg et al., 2020; Wineburg & Ziv, 2020). In the largest study of its kind (Breakstone et al., 2021a), 3,446 high school students were provided a live Internet connection and tested on a series of tasks. On one, students were shown an anonymously produced video that circulated on Facebook claiming to show ballot stuffing during Democratic primary elections and asked to use Internet-enabled computers to determine whether the video provided strong evidence of voter fraud. Despite access to the Internet’s powerful search capabilities, just three of the study’s more than three thousand participants were able to divine the true source of the video, which actually featured footage of voter fraud in Russia.

The encouraging news is that there are cost-effective solutions for improving digital discernment at scale. Studies conducted in the last few years suggest that it is possible to improve individuals’ digital savvy through focused educational interventions based on research with professional fact checkers (Breakstone et al., 2021a; 2021b; Brodsky et al., 2019, 2021; Kohnen et al., 2020; McGrew, 2020; McGrew et al., 2019). Wineburg and McGrew found substantial differences in how expert fact checkers approached digital content compared with intelligent but less competent searchers (Wineburg & McGrew, 2016a, 2016b, 2017, 2019). While less competent web readers tended to focus on reading the information in front of them, fact checkers did the opposite, opening up new tabs across the horizontal axis of their browsers and searching for information about the organization or individual behind it—a skill we call lateral reading. Only after surveying other sites did fact checkers return to the original site. Using this approach, fact checkers quickly sized up sites that masked their intent and backers. Students and academics, on the other hand, dwelled on the original site, often resulting in confusion about its real agenda or sponsor. Lateral reading allowed fact checkers to quickly answer a crucial question: Who's behind the information, and what are the strengths and weaknesses of this source?

Recent lateral reading educational interventions have been conducted in K-12 settings (Kohnen et al., 2020; McGrew, 2020) and college classrooms (Breakstone et al., 2021b; McGrew et al., 2019; Brodsky et al., 2019, 2021) to test whether students can learn and apply these strategies. In work based both on the Stanford History Education Group's (SHEG) Civic Online Reasoning (COR) curriculum and co-PI Caulfield's SIFT model (Stop, Investigate the source, Find better coverage, Trace claims; Caulfield, 2019), instructors provided students with explicit instruction on how to evaluate a range of digital content, and students practiced these skills through engagement with real online sources. Pretest and posttest measures asked students to evaluate the credibility of unfamiliar sources in authentic online environments with live Internet connections. Empirical data shows that students successfully apply lateral reading and identify reputable sources and claims, sometimes with only a few hours of training. In Exhibit 1, we show sample assignment prompts (Caulfield, n.d.) such as twitter posts (Panel A), scam emails (Panel B), sponsored source web pages (Panel C), and altered photographs (Panel D) that the team has used in prior interventions. On the right is a mobile friendly simulation assessment that asks participants to assess the reliability of a website (Panel C). Participants are shown the images and a set of related claims, and they are asked to determine the level of authenticity, trust, and evidence to support those claims. A large-scale practice and assessment bank would allow the team to adapt training materials so they resonate with the user. We will bring this human-centered, use-inspired approach to Phase 1 and Phase 2 deliverables.

Here are four student responses you received from your students. These screenshots are representative of how the entire class performed.

Response 1 (Jamie): I think it is reliable because it provides a lot of useful information about the effects of rising CO2. It even has a .org domain, which means it is run by an organization. Plus, the article cites sources to back the claims.

Response 2 (Fatima): Yes, it is reliable because I went to the website's "About" page and I read that they are a charity "dedicated to discovering and disseminating scientific information pertaining to the effects of atmospheric CO2 enrichment on climate and the biosphere."

Response 3 (Pinki): This is not a reliable source for learning about carbon dioxide's environmental effects because the website does not look professionally made and it even asks you to donate money.

Response 4 (Mel): No, according to Wikipedia, they receive funding from Exxon Mobil, a fossil company, which would make them biased toward saying CO2 is good for the environment when it's not.

E. Mobile-friendly simulation assessment interface

The SIFT model has been used in the teaching of a wide range of scientific disciplines, and SHEG's work has shown great promise in domain transferability: students who showed digital discernment in one topical domain (such as nutrition) were able to transfer their strategies to evaluating sources in another domain (Breakstone et al., 2021b). Adoption of these methods has been accelerating in higher education and K-12. Caulfield’s SIFT method is widely disseminated in university library-based information literacy training (Warzel, 2021) and recently, a pilot with CIVIX Canada, involved 3,000 K-12 students in 96 classrooms (CIVIX, n.d.). SHEG’s COR materials, which span multiple topics and disciplines, have been downloaded more than 180,000 times, featured in TIME Magazine (Steinmetz, 2018), and integrated into legislation on digital literacy (California SB-135, 2018). Below, we detail our human-centered design process for building the underlying beliefs and cultural norms of non-student populations into a training and delivery system for civic online reasoning.

The Need for a Human-Centered Solution to a Technology Problem: The Role of Context in Misinformation Intervention Efficacy

Investigating how different populations understand information ecosystems, engage in search practices, and respond to misinformation interventions are all critical precursors to adapting proven educational interventions at scale. Research is needed on how different groups assess information and how media literacies vary across groups. Use-inspired research into how people understand algorithms, personalization, and how our information environment is constructed is a necessary precursor to developing effective interventions that serve the needs of diverse populations.

In her ethnographic study of two conservative groups, Tripodi (2018) found that information-seekers engage in a distinct set of media practices tied to the way they see the world. One practice centered around the close reading of textual documents deemed sacred (e.g. the Bible or the Constitution). By inverting traditional assumptions that truth is only curated at the top, this media practice allows for everyday people to act as subject matter experts. These practices, which developed and emerged in a print era, have been adapted to online search practices. Because interviewees distrusted both journalists and academics, they drew on this practice to fact check how media outlets reported the news.

In fact, many respondents may have believed they were engaging in “lateral reading” (e.g. “doing the research” using Google). However, their approach differed in crucial respects. Unlike professional fact checkers, who practice “click restraint” (Wineburg & McGrew, 2017), users focused on the top results of Google, seldom scrolling down or looking at subsequent paged results (Tripodi, 2018). While lateral readers try to find secondary sources that reliably summarize expert consensus on sources and claims (Wineburg & McGrew, 2017; Caulfield, 2017), respondents often focused on reading a wide array of primary sources, and performing their own synthesis (Tripodi, 2018). While lateral readers seek to eliminate bias that might skew results from search terms (Caulfield, 2017), respondents made no such effort. Finally, unlike expert lateral readers, respondents evaluated search terms based on the nature of the results returned. One participant saw the fact that most results presented a similar story as evidence of a “rigged” media, rather than a heuristic of expert or professional consensus — and re-ran the search with new terms (Tripodi, 2018).

Findings from this one subpopulation underscore the variations that we expect to find among different groups. On the one hand, respondents lacked key understandings and techniques to search effectively and adhered to deeper narratives that might make them suspicious of any intervention that privileges mainstream sources or recognized experts. On the other hand, the community possessed one of the hardest things to foster in students — the habit, a deep part of their practice, of opening up more than one tab. In a related vein, many conservatives today are concerned about algorithmic bias (Vaidhyanathan, 2019; Tripodi 2019a; Tripodi 2019b) in ways most students are not. Yet, in the context of deeper communal narratives of media conspiracy, this algorithmic awareness may not yield greater search competency and may erode institutional trust.

Communities Disproportionately Targeted. Over the full scope of a three-year project, we propose to use human-centered design processes to adapt search literacy interventions to new contexts and populations. We are particularly interested in developing resources for underserved populations who have complex relationships with institutions designed to instill community trust (e.g., government, health care, social services). Disinformation works in conjunction with sociopolitical factors to increase the spread of problematic content (Freelon & Wells, 2020). For example, ahead of the 2020 election, a cybersecurity firm found that suspicious accounts targeted indigenous groups by exploiting tensions between indigenous nations and the U.S. government (Groupsense, 2020). Fragile relationships between government health agencies and indigenous groups in Brazil pose similar difficulties when it comes to establishing trust in the COVID-19 vaccine (BBC News, 2021). Strategically targeting groups with curated content that resonates with their audiences makes a misinformation campaign effective (Yin et al., 2018). However, most rigorous interventions regarding media literacy do not take into account the cultural contexts by which various groups decide what information to trust. We propose in-depth investigation and information literacy interventions in the following contexts:

- 1) Libraries in rural areas of the United States, especially those serving adults who live in low-income or isolated settings with limited access to high-speed internet
- 2) Military families, veterans, and related groups
- 3) Older adults, especially those facing challenges from cognitive impairment

Preliminary conversations with stakeholders from these groups indicate the diversity of these groups' information needs and of the misinformation threats they face. For instance, active duty military service members, their families, and veterans are all linked by common experiences and service, but their information needs and practices differ by context and by generation. Interventions to serve them will need to differ as well. In developing early partnerships with military groups, we heard different needs from different subpopulations in these groups. We will work with educators in the Department of Defense Education Activity (DoDEA) group, the organization that runs DoD schools on military bases, to adapt our interventions to both directly serve children in military families and then have students share their new learning with their families. When we discussed these ideas with DoDEA stakeholders, they immediately brought up concerns about military personnel involvement in the January 6 assault on the Capitol and the subsequent anti-extremism training that is a military priority (PBS NewsHour, 2021).

By contrast, in developing our partnerships with colleagues who work with older adults in the Veterans Affairs (VA) system, their concerns were more related to financial scams, medical misinformation, and threats that are particular to veterans facing cognitive impairment. Research reveals that patterns of neurocognitive and psychiatric comorbidities of posttraumatic stress disorder make older veterans particularly vulnerable (Kang, Xu, & McConnell, 2018). A core research question of our proposal involves understanding how to efficiently adapt interventions to diverse populations. Effective interventions are contingent on understanding how various groups establish trust. What features of the instructional design, pedagogical approach, examples, delivery mechanism, or assessments of an intervention need to be adapted for rural libraries, veterans, and children and families of active duty soldiers? If we can identify features that work across contexts and those that need to be context-specific, we can more efficiently adapt proven interventions to new populations.

The Opportunity: Building Publicly Accessible, Adaptable, Scalable Interventions to Prepare Digitally Discerning Citizens

Phase I Overview. In Phase I, we will begin our initial work through a partnership with Humanities Montana and their network of rural libraries and cultural institutions. We will target the search literacy learning needs of rural adults and tribal groups, with a focus on patrons who use the library as their primary means of Internet access. We will identify 3-5 institutions to work with closely, and then begin a human-centered design process with the following stages:

- 1) Ethnographic field work in Montana with library patrons and tribal groups in rural areas:
We will conduct field interviews, observations, and think aloud protocols with 15-25 library patrons across multiple institutions, settings and cultural contexts to better understand their existing media literacy practices. This preliminary work will identify how patrons decide what information to trust and test their current understanding of search engines, their results, and the Internet context.

- 2) Co-design of prototype interventions: Working with Humanities Montana, our team will connect with front-desk librarians, library system leaders, and influencers in tribal groups to conduct a set of human-centered design sessions. These sessions will focus on developing prototype interventions in multiple media—workshops, online learning modules, posters, PSAs, search aides—that help rural and Montanans improve their civic online reasoning.
- 3) Assess effectiveness: Using our extensive assessment experience, we will use a combination of digital clinical simulations (described below) and assessment items to evaluate which interventions appear most promising for improving patron searches.
- 4) Bring promising interventions to scale: Drawing on the experience of the MIT Teaching Systems Lab and our partners at Retro Report, we will build an online repository of openly licensed versions of our most promising interventions and disseminate with partners.
- 5) Evaluate the nature and type of adaptations: We will compare our final set of adapted interventions in the Montana context with the core, proven interventions that we have used widely in K-20 settings to identify the kinds of adaptations necessary. By understanding how we adapt core materials to the cultural needs to rural library patrons and tribal groups we can develop hypotheses for how our team can adapt effective interventions in new contexts (e.g., veterans, military families, older adults) in Phase II and what parts work across contexts.

During Phase I, we will include our partners from DoDEA and affiliates with the VA system so that we begin to engage them in this co-design work. We anticipate substantial logistical challenges in arranging access to work with military populations and patients in Veterans Administration medical care, such as understanding the restricted Internet access in active duty contexts and developing adequate arrangements with human subjects boards (IRB) to study veteran populations. We propose working on these challenges in Phase I, so we are ready in Phase II to begin work in these additional contexts.

Technology Innovations for Simulation and Assessment. A key component in our efforts to prototype, improve and assess our interventions are digital clinical simulations. PI Reich and co-PI Wineburg, in a previous collaboration, developed a free open online course called Sorting Truth from Fiction: Civic Online Reasoning, which has served thousands of registrants on edX. The course includes digital simulations that allow participants to practice civic online reasoning skills in a partly-controlled environment. We develop these scenarios in our openly licensed digital simulation platform called Teacher Moments (Thompson et al., 2019). These simulations typically consist of five components:

- 1) A prompt for civic online reasoning task
- 2) Full access to the internet and/or a set of sample search results from lateral reading
- 3) Assessment items that allow participants to explain their process, findings, and reasoning
- 4) AI coaching agents that provide feedback and scaffolding
- 5) Debriefing videos that show expert search practitioners completing analogous tasks

Typical prompts ask participants to identify the source behind a website or evaluate a claim from a website or social media post. Since research shows that effective fact checkers employ lateral reading and solve information challenges by using the web to evaluate sources, our simulations always allow participants to either fully engage in searching the web, or use a set of simulated search results. We have some criticisms of proposed web literacy tasks or simulations that ask participants to evaluate web sources without access to the open web; expert fact checkers don't rely on their own intuitions as much as they seek out collective judgments found in broader information ecosystems.

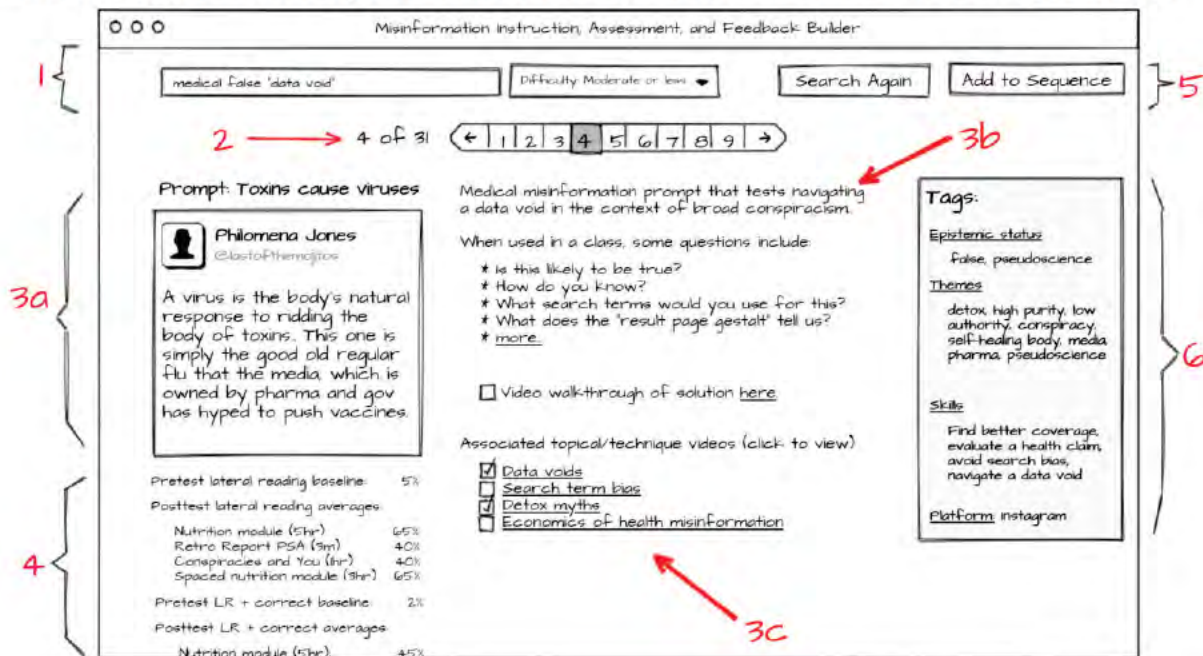

Once participants have used their newly-developed skills to evaluate a source or claim, we use assessment items to ask them to describe their process, findings, decisions, and reasoning. For participants who struggle with a task or approach a task incorrectly, we provide additional, personalized support at this stage through intelligent coaching agents. For instance, in Sorting Truth from Fiction, we ask participants to evaluate a tweet from an account called “Republican Teens”. The account is a parody/satire account. Once participants discover this, there is no need to further evaluate the veracity of the particular claim in the tweet. Through natural language processing, we were able to determine with at least 90% accuracy when participants failed to identify the account as satire, and provide targeted feedback. These digital clinical simulations can be used for skill development, for formative assessment, and within pre-post evaluation frameworks. We plan to use them for all three purposes.

Phase II Objectives. Over the course of Phase II, we will replicate this design cycle and develop analogous deliverables to serve library patrons across the country and underserved populations, including older adults, veterans, and military families. In Phase II, the American Library Association would be brought in as a national partner to help us scale up and implement effective interventions to libraries throughout the U.S. We will serve veterans directly through partnerships with the VA. We will serve military families by adapting our school-based interventions for students in DoDEA schools, and then develop additional supports that help teachers and students share their newly learned search practices with their active-duty family members. We will also seek to develop additional partnerships that would allow us to reach other groups.

A crucial part of developing and testing interventions in multiple contexts is a consistent framework for assessment. A key project in Phase II will be developing a bank of assessment items and digital clinical simulations that can be used across settings and compared in a psychometrically rigorous manner. We will substantially expand our assessment and digital clinical simulation work to allow for the development of hundreds of test items and simulations, and we will use item response theory to develop measures of item difficulty and discrimination that will allow educators and researchers to use different combinations of items for different contexts and assessment purposes while also allowing for consistent estimates of learning and skill development. AI coaching agents will help identify challenges of appropriate difficulty and provide targeted feedback on their performance. AI can then use difficulty tags and data to create learning sequences automatically. In Exhibit 2, we show a wireframe of an integrated platform for assessment and simulation.

Exhibit 2. Wireframe of Integrated Platform for Assessment and Simulation Phase 2 Deliverable

At the end of Phase II, we envision an assessment bank and course builder in which the user can build a customized assessment, online course, or workshop, by searching specific combinations of topics and skills (1 in Exhibit 2 wireframe). The tool generates search results (2) that include a link to a visual preview of the assessment prompt (3a) along with a description of the issues it raises (3b) and a list of related instructional videos that can be added to the sequence (3c). The interface displays data collected about baselines and post-intervention performance (4). Users can add the prompt to the course or slide deck they are building, along with related instructional media (5), or browse related items by tags (6). AI-driven instruction and analytics insight reports automate tagging and performance data.

By the end of three years, we will have a set of adapted, scaled interventions that work in three important contexts (libraries, VA medical settings, and DoDEA schools on military bases), an online repository of openly-licensed materials and assessments that can be widely used across settings, and a set of design principles explaining how effective civic online reasoning interventions can be adapted to new contexts. We will continue to refine and iteratively improve this preliminary Phase II plan as we gain new insights from Phase I prototyping work and from our work with other convergence accelerator teams.

B. Convergence Research

Issues of trust and authenticity in communications systems are complex social problems that require a convergence approach to make significant progress— “a high level of interdisciplinarity and engagement with multiple diverse stakeholders, including researchers and the ultimate users of research products” (NSF, 2021). The Co-PIs bring deep combined expertise developing, evaluating, automating, and scaling interventions to combat misinformation with K-20 populations. Through close partnership with multi-sector leaders and their constituents in rural communities, military schools and hospitals for older adults and veterans through Phase I and Phase II, we will co-design interventions that will be relevant to these communities in terms of content (will the examples we choose resonate with them?), format (how comfortable will they be with technology?), and messaging (do the intervention materials feature individuals who reflect the culture, language, history, and assumptions of the target community?). An integrated partnership between developer and end-user will catalyze discovery around intervention effectiveness and adaptation, and result in a concrete set of widely available tools, training materials, and an assessment library. We will make our data public so that any sector leader or training facilitator in the country can access community-specific training materials. The intellectual merit of this work is in creating a true “research platform” as defined by the NSF solicitation: an “integrated collection of tools, techniques, and educational materials and programs” (NSF, 2021) that are chosen specifically for their ability to accelerate research and impact in this area.

The team brings techniques from multiple disciplines and deep experience engaging multi-sector partners: Co-PI Tripodi, trained in sociological methods, has led large-scale ethnographic studies that position the team to conduct high-quality end-user and human-centered research with the proposed target populations. She brings deep expertise making her work accessible to the general public, including repeatedly testifying to the Senate on censorship through search engines and its impact on public discourse (Tripodi, 2019a, 2019b). Co-PI Wineburg and Breakstone are trained in the learning sciences, civics education, and assessment. Together, they bring three decades of experience in designing curricula and rigorously evaluating their effectiveness. They have led some of the most widely cited studies to date about students’ digital literacy and low-cost interventions to help students evaluate online sources (Breakstone et al., 2021a; Breakstone et al., 2021b, McGrew et al., 2018; McGrew et al., 2019; Wineburg & McGrew, 2019; Wineburg et al., 2016). They have also developed digital literacy videos that have been viewed over two million times on YouTube (Crash Course, 2019). With more than two decades of experience in online and blended learning and community outreach, co-PI Caulfield has spearheaded some of the most widely-adopted techniques in K-16 misinformation interventions and has significant experience tailoring educational materials to community needs. PI Reich is trained in adult online learning and learning at scale, and has expertise developing online learning tools and leveraging the rich data produced by these environments for rigorous evaluation, including integrating AI features.

C. Roles & Responsibilities and Partnerships

The multidisciplinary team brings expertise in learning science, online learning, civic education, sociology, and political media scholarship. We complement this expertise with partners from nonprofit, military, and industry sectors. Our team includes the following core members and their responsibilities:

Justin Reich (PI) is Associate Professor of Comparative Media Studies/Writing and the director of the MIT Teaching Systems Lab (TSL), where he leads a multidisciplinary team of learning scientists, technologists, game developers, and evaluation experts. Reich has led the design of seven award-winning open online courses for educators on edX and other platforms, including Sorting Truth from Fiction: Civic Online Reasoning (edX, n.d.), developed collaboratively with SHEG. Together, these courses have served nearly 100,000 registrants from around the world. Dr. Reich has managed over $12.5 million in research grants and projects, and his scholarly work on open online learning has been published in Science, Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, and other high-impact venues. Dr. Reich will provide overall management of the project and lead the development of online intervention materials.

Rachel Slama (Project Manager) is the Associate Director of the MIT Teaching Systems Lab. She brings fifteen years of experience managing complex federally-funded projects in partnership with schools, districts, and other education partners. Hallmarks of her professional trajectory include: (1) analyzing student outcome data for field impact across K-12 (Slama et al., 2017; Slama et al., 2015; Slama, 2014; Slama, 2012) and postsecondary digital and large-scale learning environments (Littenberg-Tobias et al., 2020; Ruipérez-Valiente et al., 2019; Thompson et al., 2019), (2) leading large convenings for a range of stakeholders virtually and in-person, and (3) disseminating technical work in accessible formats including at national state education agency convenings (Slama et al., 2018) and Senate briefings (Slama, 2016). Dr. Slama will serve as primary project manager, and coordinate all aspects of the project.

Sam Wineburg (co-PI) is the Margaret Jacks Professor of Education and, by courtesy, of History & American Studies at Stanford University and Fellow of the National Academy of Education. Wineburg founded the Stanford History Education Group whose curriculum and assessments have been downloaded over ten million times, making it one of the largest providers of free social studies curriculum in the world. His work since 2015 has focused on how people judge the credibility of digital content, research that has been reported in the Wall Street Journal, the New York Times, the Washington Post, NPR, TIME Magazine, BBC, MSNBC, and Die Zeit, and translated into dozens of languages. He will supervise Stanford's contributions, advise on research design and assessments, and collaborate on public outreach.

Joel Breakstone (co-project manager) is the director of SHEG, and leads their efforts to research, develop, and disseminate free curriculum and assessments. The SHEG website attracts more than 1.3 million visitors annually and their mailing list includes more than 130,000 educators. For the last six years, Breakstone oversaw the creation of the Civic Online Reasoning website, which won a Global Media and Information Literacy Award from UNESCO in 2020. His research has appeared in the British Journal of Educational Psychology, Cognition and Instruction, and Harvard Kennedy School Misinformation Review. He will work with Dr. Slama to co-manage the project and co-lead the development of curricular materials, assessments, and interventions.

Mike Caulfield (co-PI) is the director of blended and networked learning at Washington State University, Vancouver. He was a founding member of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) eCitizenship Project in 2010, and a board member from 2010-2013. Since 2016, he has produced a variety of curricula and educational materials on source and claim contextualization using his SIFT methodology: an award-winning open textbook, Web Literacy for Student Fact-Checkers (2017), digital materials and assessments for AASCU's nine university, 1,000+ student pilot on teaching web literacy (2017-2018), the open-source online curriculum "Check, Please!" (2019), the Infodemic website (2020), and materials, assessments, and teacher-training workshops for CIVIX Canada's 3,200 student, 96 classroom pilot for elementary and secondary school institutions (2020-2021). On this project he will lead co-design efforts to develop and implement curricular materials, assessments, and workshops.

Francesca Tripodi (co-PI) is an assistant professor in the School of Information and Library Science (SILS) and a Senior Researcher at the Center for Information Technology & Public Life (CITAP) at UNC-Chapel Hill. Dr. Tripodi's research examines how our interactions with search influence our political reality. In 2019, she testified before the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee and explained how search processes are gamed to maximize exposure and drive ideologically-based queries. Her forthcoming book with Yale University Press titled Searching for alternative facts: How conservative politicians and pundits wield the power of search explores how media practices are exploited for politics. Dr. Tripodi will lead our ethnographic studies to ensure that interventions are grounded in deep understanding of people and contexts.

Multi-sector Partners Working in Diverse Contexts. We have cultivated partners in media development, librarianship, veterans' care, and the military (please see Letters of Collaboration).

Randi Lynn Tanglen is the Executive Director of Humanities Montana, which serves communities through speaking to Montanans' diverse history, literature, and philosophy. The Informed Citizen project seeks to deepen the public's knowledge and appreciation of the vital connections between democracy, the humanities, journalism, and an informed citizenry. The Democracy Project engages teens in civic action through partnerships with local libraries and community organizers. Humanities Montana has a strong network of connections with libraries and tribal groups throughout the state. They will support our efforts to conduct ethnographic research with patrons that use libraries as primary sites of internet access, and help implement interventions to support civic online reasoning among library patrons.

Kyra Darnton, is the Executive Producer of Retro Report, a journalism nonprofit that produces high-quality short-form documentaries featuring meaningful context about today's headlines. It has produced more than 250 short documentaries that have reached tens of millions of viewers through partnerships with The New York Times, The New Yorker, PBS Frontline, NBC, Politico, The Atlantic, Univision, Time Magazine and others. Retro Report has recently expanded its reach with prime-time television series on PBS and Vice TV. With a strong track record of developing engaging public media, Retro Report will help shape the public media aspects of our interventions.

Samantha Oakley is a program manager with the American Library Association's (ALA) Public Programs Office who will act as an advisor during Phase I to provide feedback during prototyping and help position our efforts for potential scaling. Oakley led ALA's Media Literacy Education in Libraries for Adult Audiences that this initiative builds on. If funded for Phase II, ALA would be brought in as a national partner to help us scale up and implement effective interventions to wider audiences. ALA is the foremost national organization providing resources to inspire library and information professionals to transform their communities through essential programs and services.

Dr. Andrea Schwartz, MD, MPH is a professor at the Harvard Medical School and Medical Director of the Geriatrics Consult Clinic at VA Boston. In Phase I, she will help address logistical challenges to working with VA populations and develop human-centered design cycles for Phase II.

Dr. Jennifer Fritschi is the DoDEA director of education technology and Radley Ramirez is the Teacher of the Year in the DoDEA and an education technology director for Europe, who will partner with us during Phase I to address logistical challenges to working in DoDEA schools and on military bases and develop human-centered design cycles for Phase II research.

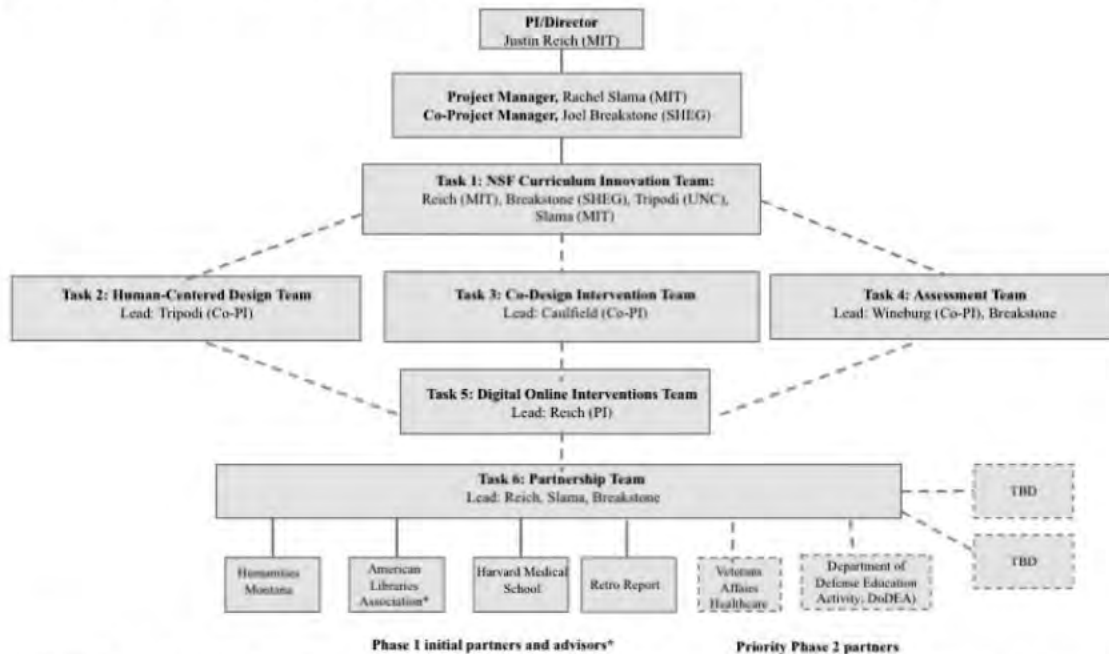

Results from Prior NSF Support

PI Justin Reich's most relevant completed NSF funded project is EAGER: Framing MOOC Learning for Student Success (NSF Division of Undergraduate Education: 1646976; $300,000; 2016-2018) with Dustin Tingley (Harvard University). Intellectual merits include the testing of a set of behavioral interventions over 2.5 years, with one-quarter million students, from nearly every country, across 247 online courses offered by Harvard, MIT, and Stanford (Kizilcec et al., 2020). Study findings include a process for iterative scientific investigation that can uncover what works for whom in different context. Broader Impacts: The results inform policymakers and school administrators about the relative effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of these interventions, the limits of personalizing interventions with artificial intelligence, and the challenge of scaling interventions across diverse contexts.

Dr. Reich also leads an ongoing Cyberlearning project (with Co-PI, Carolyn Rosé; award #1917668) to incorporate digital clinical simulations in computer science teacher education. The broader impacts include that over 300 digital clinical simulations that have been authored in Teacher Moments serving over 8,000 teachers in training. The intellectual merit includes implementing intelligent coaching agents that scan users' inputs and provide targeted scaffolds and supports. Publications from the project include a timely piece on the role of simulations in teacher education during the pandemic (Sullivan et al., 2020) and a best paper winning article that examines simulation co-design (Dutt et al., 2021).

D. Coordination Plan

Exhibit 3. Organizational Chart with Team Coordination and Management Structure

In Exhibit 3, we describe the coordination and management structure for our project, where the PI and project managers will coordinate task teams. Broadly speaking, MIT will take overall responsibility for management of the project and the coordination of activities and stakeholders. Dr. Rachel Slama, the associate director of the MIT TSL, will be the primary project manager, supported by Dr. Joel Breakstone from SHEG, building off our multi-year collaboration developing the online edX course Sorting Truth from Fiction: Civic Online Reasoning. Our human-centered design cycles will generally involve a combination of ethnographic research, collaborative design, intervention and assessment prototyping, and online development. Dr. Tripodi will lead ethnographic work, Caulfield will lead co-design exercises, Drs. Wineburg and Breakstone will lead curriculum, assessment, and intervention development, and Dr. Reich will lead the development of online resources and the online repository. Our project partners and advisors from Humanities Montana, Retro Report, the ALA, Harvard Medical School, and the DoDEA will support development in their respective areas of expertise.

In Exhibit 4, we delineate project roles and activities, and responsibilities. We organize our Phase I work around six project tasks:

- 1) Task 1: Participate in the NSF convergence curriculum
- 2) Task 2: Generate an ethnographic understanding of existing information seeking practices
- 3) Task 3: Prototype an intervention design based on patterns identified during qualitative research and co-design sessions
- 4) Task 4: Conduct pilot study based on iterative rapid testing and design process with key stakeholders in the community
- 5) Task 5: Develop and disseminate openly-licensed online intervention materials
- 6) Task 6: Form multidisciplinary, multi-sector partnership

Our project team will have a weekly stand-up to coordinate activities and identify blockages or obstacles to individual or collaborative goals. We will develop sub teams around ethnographic work, co-design, prototyping, and online development that each meet during the relevant phase of work. We will conduct quarterly project reviews to ensure progress toward our final deliverables, to identify opportunities for stronger collaboration, and to consolidate learning from sub-team work.

E. Deliverables

We propose a set of six deliverables in Phase I, which will contribute to broader impacts across society. On the basis of ethnographic field work in rural library settings, (1) we will publish an initial study of the search literacy practices of information seekers who live in rural settings and/or tribal lands, who use libraries as their primary Internet connection. Following our multi-stakeholder co-design sessions with researchers, librarians, patrons and other stakeholders, (2) we will develop a set of intervention and training materials that can be used, formally and informally, in library settings. (3) We will adapt prototype interventions and training materials for online contexts, and develop additional online videos in partnership with Retro Report. To test the effectiveness of our interventions, (4) we will develop an online repository of assessment materials integrated with effectiveness data. On the basis of this Phase I prototyping work, we will publish (5) a design approach to adapting effective interventions to new contents and populations. Throughout the project, we will develop (6) collaboration materials that outline our interdisciplinary effort and provide guidance for other teams pursuing similar aims.

As a team, we have a strong track record of consistently stewarding philanthropic and government funding towards the successful completion of scholarly and educational projects. Given our extensive history of collaboration and the additional support of the convergence accelerator program, we are confident that we have the team, partners, resources, and supports needed to have a high probability of achieving these project goals in Phase I and crafting a successful Phase II proposal, that is refined and informed by additional Track F partners and our Phase I findings.

In Phase II, our goal is to expand our deliverables to two additional contexts by the end of the two-year period—serving older adults in geriatric care through Veterans Administration hospitals and serving military families through the DoDEA educational system. By testing our adaptation process in libraries, elder care, and on military bases and schools (Phase II, Year 1), we will be able to develop a robust set of principles for adapting civic online reasoning materials to a wide variety of other civic, educational, and religious groups (Phase II, Year 2). Our goal is to make sure that civic online reasoning materials are widely and publicly available to help all Americans improve their search literacy skills.

Metrics of Success. Our project will track three kinds of metrics during Phase I: 1) Implementation progress metrics, 2) Effectiveness metrics, and 3) Dissemination metrics.

For implementation metrics, we will use the timeline on Exhibit 4 to track progress towards tasks and goals. To assure smooth functioning of our partnership, the MIT TSL team will send a quarterly survey to all project members and partners to evaluate our collaborative practices, meeting schedules and structures, progress towards deliverables, and communication practices. During each quarterly review meeting, we will collaboratively review these data and identify shortcomings in our collaboration and improve our interdisciplinary collaborative practices. As we set the final number of partner libraries and institutions for prototyping and implementing new interventions, we'll track measures of usage and implementation fidelity, such as downloads, time on site, and similar usage and engagement metrics.

For metrics of the effectiveness of our work, we will draw on SHEG's existing Civic Online Reasoning assessment items and digital clinical simulations that evaluate whether people can successfully perform important search literacy tasks, such as evaluating the credibility of a source or determining if a source supports a certain argument. These assessment items have been essential in developing both national portraits of student search skills (Breakstone et al., 2021), and evaluating the effectiveness of civic online reasoning interventions (McGrew et al., 2019). We can use existing materials to conduct preliminary evaluations of our prototype interventions, and as ethnographic research develops a deeper understanding of context-specific civic online reasoning practices, we will develop new assessment items to evaluate the effectiveness of new kinds of interventions.

For dissemination metrics, as we develop a repository of freely available online resources we will make them available on the SHEG website (with 1.2 million visitors per year) and on MIT online properties such as edX and the Open Learning Library. We will track the total downloads as well as unique institutions using our resources. Dissemination metrics will play a major role during Phase II scale-up efforts and we will set initial interim benchmark dissemination goals in Phase I.

F. Track Alignment

From the solicitation: “The overarching goal of Track F is to develop prototype(s) of novel research platforms forming integrated collection(s) of tools, techniques, and educational materials and programs to support increased citizen trust in public information of all sorts (health, climate, news, etc.), through more effectively preventing, mitigating, and adapting to critical threats in our communications systems” (emphasis added). Our team unites leading experts on the development of educational materials to improve civic online reasoning and increase citizen trust in information ecosystems. We supplement this core educational expertise with a leading ethnographer of search practices and experts in online learning at scale. Our combined expertise in pedagogy, digital systems, digital learning, and information systems can serve as a resource to other Track F teams as well. Our project will primarily focus on education, but our team regularly consults with other groups developing techniques and technologies for improving the information ecosystems, and we look forward to bringing our anthropological and education expertise to these teams. Similarly, we look forward to learning how new technologies and other interdisciplinary approaches can improve educational efforts.

G. Broader Impacts and Broadening Participation Plan

Broader Impacts. Herb Lin, the Hank J. Holland Fellow in Cyber Policy and Security at Stanford’s Hoover Institution gave the following testimony to the House Subcommittee on Cyber, Innovative Technology, and Information Systems on 4/30/21: “The information warfare threat to the United States is different from past threats, and it has the potential to destroy reason and reality as a basis for societal discourse, replacing them with rage and fantasy. Perpetual civil war, political extremism, waged in the information sphere and egged on by our adversaries is every bit as much of an existential threat to American civilization and democracy as any military threat imaginable.”

Efficient, effective search practices are now well established through rigorous research, but most adults either learned little about effective search practices or learned ineffective techniques. It is an urgent matter for civil society, for democracy, and for national security for adults to learn these crucial skills for participation in 21st century life. The broader impacts of our research will be 1) to widely disseminate resources for teaching and learning effective search practices across diverse communities through public media and online learning resources, 2) to publish in journals, conferences, and other venues use-inspired research that provides a road map for understanding the deep stories and search practices of particular communities and using that understanding to adapt existing, effective interventions to new contexts, and 3) to develop an openly-licensed integrated software platform of simulations and assessments that allow for the evaluation of interventions across diverse contexts. Through a multisector, multidisciplinary approach, we will adapt our public education interventions towards educating broad swaths of the American public about the crucial skills of civic online reasoning.

Broadening Participation Plan. A human-centered, co-design approach allows key stakeholders in diverse settings—library patrons in rural settings and tribal lands, DODEA teachers and students, patients in the VA medical care system—to participate in the design and development of learning resources to support fellow community members. The interventions that we co-design will then support the participation of underserved communities in civic life by more effectively navigating our information ecosystem. As we measure adoption of our interventions in libraries and cultural institutions in Phase I, we will track key demographic features of the patrons and communities of those institutions to ensure that our efforts are broadening participation across Montana and beyond. A key goal of this research is that more citizens, especially those from marginalized communities, will be more prepared to engage in civic activities and STEM careers with more robust information literacy practices. Because we seek to serve diverse communities, it is essential for our team to bring diverse students to work on our projects. For instance, at MIT we participate annually in the MIT Summer Research Program that supports trailblazing, first-generation college students in conducting research in MIT labs in preparation for applying to graduate schools. We also actively recruit student researchers through affinity groups like the Black Student Union at MIT. By broadening participation in our research activities, we hope to support diverse leadership in the future of information studies and civic online reasoning.

III. Threats to free speech abroad and the risk at home

The threat to Americans' free speech does not end at America's shores. The global nature of social media has made it possible for foreign censors to target American speech from afar, and the Select Subcommittee has shown that that is happening.⁴⁹ In Brazil, Justice Alexandre de Moraes—who serves on Brazil's Supreme Court and as president of Brazil's Superior Electoral Court, which oversees the country's electoral processes—has become a one-man censorship machine, investigating American citizens because of their online speech and forcing American companies, such as X and Rumble, to cease operations in Brazil after they refused to comply with his illegal censorship orders.⁵⁰ In addition to standing for free speech in Brazil, the Select Subcommittee has also probed a European bureaucrat who threatened American companies with regulatory retaliation under European law simply for facilitating political discourse in the United States.⁵¹ Finally, in response to Australia's efforts to censor online speech globally, the Select Subcommittee called on the Biden-Harris Administration to protect Americans' First Amendment rights and stand for free speech worldwide.⁵²

When X's CEO, Elon Musk, stood for free speech in Brazil and against Moraes' censorship orders in April 2024, the Brazilian government reportedly launched an investigation into Musk for alleged obstruction of justice and other charges.⁵³ This attack of American free speech caused the Select Subcommittee to examine the threats posed by anti-free speech governments abroad. On April 17, 2024, based upon documents received pursuant to a subpoena to X, the Select Subcommittee released a report titled, "The Attack on Free Speech Abroad and the Biden Administration's Silence: The Case of Brazil," and subsequently released a second report on May 7, 2024, titled, "The Attack on Free Speech Abroad and the Biden Administration's Silence: The Case of Brazil Part II."⁵⁴ The subpoenaed documents in the reports revealed that, since at least 2022, the Brazilian government, led by Moraes, ordered X, Rumble, and other social media platforms to censor over 300 accounts—including former Brazilian

President Jair Bolsonaro, critics of the Brazilian government, conservative members of the federal legislature, journalists, members of the judiciary, and even a gospel singer and a pop radio station—or else face fines of up to 100,000 reais (about $20,000 U.S. dollars) per day for noncompliance.⁵⁵

The same day that the Select Subcommittee issued its first report, the Select Subcommittee wrote to the State Department to (1) share its’ findings, (2) ask the Department to produce all documents and communications between the Department and the government of Brazil regarding Moraes’ censorship orders to X, and (3) request a briefing “about how the State Department intend[ed] to respond to these attacks on free speech in Brazil.”⁵⁶ On May 28, 2024, the State Department briefed the Select Subcommittee, noting that it did not intend to publicly comment on, or respond to, Moraes’ actions.⁵⁷

The Select Subcommittee has also stood against censorship threats from the EU.⁵⁸ In August 2024, when Thierry Breton, a European bureaucrat, threatened X, an American company, and Elon Musk, an American citizen, for facilitating political discourse in the United States (i.e., livestreaming an interview with President Trump), the Select Subcommittee demanded that Breton stop “any attempt to intimidate individuals or entities engaged in political speech in the United States” or “otherwise interfere in the American democratic process.”⁵⁹ The Select Subcommittee also arranged a briefing with the State Department to learn about how it planned to respond to Breton’s threats.⁶⁰ During the briefing, the Department confirmed that it did not intend to publicly condemn Breton’s threats.⁶¹ Ultimately, after Breton sent a letter to the Select Subcommittee downplaying his threatening statements and the censorship provisions of the EU law he attempted to wield against X and Musk,⁶² the Select Subcommittee sent him another

Most recently, the Select Subcommittee opposed Australia's efforts to censor Americans' speech and again called on the Biden-Harris Administration to protect Americans' First Amendment rights and stand for free speech worldwide.⁶⁶ On November 21, 2024, the Select Subcommittee wrote to the State Department to request a briefing regarding proposed legislation in Australia that "would effectively require American social media platforms to censor alleged 'misinformation'" and "could pressure American companies to censor online speech outside of Australia, including in the United States."⁶⁷ The Select Subcommittee detailed how "[d]uring the COVID-19 pandemic, the Australian government repeatedly attempted to censor speech outside of Australia, including the speech of American citizens and health professionals located in the United States."⁶⁸ The Select Subcommittee emphasized concerns with Australia eSafety Commissioner Julie Inman Grant's April 2024 order to X to remove dozens of posts on the platform "globally," even after the company "had already blocked the posts from [X's] Australian users" and despite the fact that the posts did not violate X's content moderation policies.⁶⁹

On November 22, 2024, just a day after the Select Subcommittee's letter, The Australian reported that Australia's third largest political party, the Greens, would oppose the Australian government's censorship legislation.⁷⁰ On November 24, 2024, "after it failed to garner support from a single non-Labor senator,"⁷¹ the Australian government officially withdrew its censorship legislation without a Senate vote, recognizing that there was "no pathway to legislate this proposal through the Senate."⁷²

The Select Subcommittee has recognized there are foreign threats to American free speech given the cross-border nature of online speech. Increasingly, in the name of promoting “online safety” or combatting so-called “misinformation” or “disinformation,” foreign government officials have attempted to leverage their laws, regulations, and courts to limit what Americans can see and say in the United States.

BRAZIL’S CENSORSHIP OF FREE SPEECH ONLINE

“Across the world right now, governments, in the name of the good, are considering or adopting measures like we have in Canada. In Dublin, they’re about to enact a draconian hate-crime bill that poses a dire threat to free speech. In Paris, President Emanuel Macron has called for censoring online speech. In Brussels, the EU’s Internal Market Commissioner is calling for a crackdown on ‘illegal content.’ In Brasilia, they’re fighting ‘fake news’ and ‘disinformation’ by clamping down on legitimate online speech. To say nothing of Russia and China and Iran. America is so exceptional—indispensable really. Please do not succumb to the same illiberal, the same authoritarianism. Please keep fighting for what you know is right. Canada is watching. The whole world is watching.”¹

—Rupa Subramanya, Canadian journalist, testifying before the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government, November 30, 2023

The Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government are conducting oversight of how and to what extent the Executive Branch has coerced or colluded with companies and other intermediaries to censor lawful speech.² In the past sixteen months, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have uncovered serious violations of the First Amendment committed by officials throughout the Executive Branch. The Committee and Select Subcommittee have documented:

- The Biden White House directly coercing large social media companies, such as Facebook, to censor true information, memes, and satire, eventually leading Facebook to change its content moderation policies;³
- The Biden White House directly coercing the world’s largest online book store, Amazon, to censor books;⁴
- Stanford’s Election Integrity Partnership (EIP)—created at the request of the Department of Homeland Security’s (DHS) Cybersecurity & Infrastructure

Security Agency (CISA)—working with the federal government to flag thousands of links and submit recommendations directly to large social media platforms to censor Americans’ online speech in the lead-up to the 2020 U.S. election;⁵ and

- The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) harassing Elon Musk’s Twitter (now X) because of Musk’s commitment to free speech, even going so far as to target several journalists who reported on the anti-free speech stance of the old Twitter regime.⁶

The Committee and Select Subcommittee’s oversight has shown that the government censorship that begins with a stated purpose of combatting alleged “misinformation” or “disinformation” inevitably mutates into silencing political opponents and views disfavored by those currently in power.⁷

These violations of the First Amendment and attacks on the most fundamental American civil liberty—freedom of speech—are deeply troubling. But they often pale in comparison to how some foreign governments are eroding basic democratic values and stifling debate in their countries. In furtherance of its legislative oversight, the Select Subcommittee has received testimony about how other countries’ governments, including Canada, France, and Brazil, have sought to censor speech online.⁸ These examples of foreign governments cracking down on free speech abroad serve as a stark warning to Americans about the threats posed by government censorship here at home. They also help to inform the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s legislative work to fight government censorship and promote freedom of speech.

In 2019, Brazil’s Supreme Court granted itself new powers to “act as an investigator, prosecutor and judge all at once in some cases.”⁹ Rather than relying on a prosecutor or a law enforcement officer to open an investigation, the president of Brazil’s Supreme Court, José Antonio Dias Toffoli, “issued an order granting the Supreme Court itself the authority to open an investigation.”¹⁰ Former Brazilian Supreme Court justices openly criticized the move as unprecedented and in violation of Brazil’s constitution.¹¹

In this unprecedented order, Toffoli selected fellow Brazil Supreme Court Justice Alexandre de Moraes to run the first investigation conducted by the court.¹² Moraes first joined the Supreme Federal Court in 2017.¹³ Moraes has been described as a “political animal” with hopes of being president of Brazil someday.¹⁴ Moraes has also served as president of the Superior Electoral Court since August 2022.¹⁵ The Superior Electoral Court is the highest court in Brazil that oversees the country’s electoral processes and is frequently the court that issues orders compelling the censorship of alleged misinformation about elections.¹⁶

With this new, extraordinary power, Moraes attacked critics from the right and left with impunity. Moraes reportedly ordered social media platforms to remove posts and accounts even when “much of the content did not break [the companies’] rules” and “often without giving a reason.”¹⁷ As another example, he ordered federal agents to raid eight businessmen in July 2019, in addition to freezing their bank accounts and suspending their social media accounts.¹⁸ Previously, Moraes had “ordered a federal police raid on 10 addresses tied to social media users who had criticized the court.”¹⁹ After Moraes ordered a Brazilian magazine to remove an online article alleging links between Toffoli and a corruption investigation, then-Justice Marco Aurélio Mello remarked, “I’ve been on the court for 28 years and I’ve never seen a decision like this, to take down an article,” adding that, “The Supreme Court was always engaged in preserving freedom of speech. This is a step backward.”²⁰

Recent reporting and public statements from X’s Global Government Affairs team have indicated that X is being “forced by court decisions to block certain popular accounts in Brazil” or else face serious consequences, such as incurring large fines, arresting X employees, and causing X to shut down in Brazil.²¹ On April 6, 2024, X Corp.’s CEO, Elon Musk, in the name of defending free speech online, posted that the social media platform would be “lifting all restrictions” demanded by the Brazilian government.²² The Brazilian government has reportedly launched an investigation into Musk for alleged obstruction of justice and other charges because Musk has refused to acquiesce to the Brazilian court’s, most notably Moraes’s, censorship demands.²³ To that end, to understand the threats posed by anti-free speech governments abroad, the Committee issued a subpoena to X Corp. for documents and records relating to recent efforts by the Superior Electoral Court and the Supreme Federal Court in Brazil to compel X to censor social-media accounts in the country.

The subpoenaed documents and records reveal that, since at least 2022, the Supreme Federal Court in Brazil, on which Moraes serves as a justice, and the Superior Electoral Court in Brazil, led by Moraes, have ordered X Corp. to suspend or remove nearly 150 accounts on the popular social media platform. These censorship demands were targeted specifically at critics of the Brazilian government: conservative members of the federal legislature, journalists, members of the judiciary, and even a gospel singer and a pop radio station—in other words, anyone with a platform to criticize the ruling leftist government. The Brazilian court, specifically Moraes, justified the censorship on the grounds that “it is necessary, appropriate[,] and urgent to stop the possible spread of hate speech, subversion of order[,] and encouragement to break institutional and democratic normality by blocking accounts on social networks.”²⁴ Frequently, these orders have given the social media companies only two hours to comply with the censorship demands or else face fines of up to 100,000 reais (about $20,000 dollars) per day for noncompliance.²⁵

Most notably, the Superior Electoral Court in Brazil censored former Brazilian President Jair Messias Bolsonaro, one of the main critics of Moraes, in the weeks following Brazil's presidential election in 2022.²⁶ According to a November 22, 2023 order obtained by the Select Subcommittee, the court found Bolsonaro guilty of “practicing irregular propaganda” on X for “messages [that] are either untrue or out of context.”²⁷

As another example, in a June 13, 2023 order obtained by the Select Subcommittee, Moraes ordered the censorship of Bruno Aiub, a YouTuber and Rumble podcaster who goes by the username “Monark” and has been called “Brazil’s Joe Rogan” due to his popularity.²⁸ In the order, Moraes noted that despite his previous order deplatforming Aiub from every major social media platform, Aiub had since created new accounts and channels.²⁹ Moraes was particularly upset that Aiub allegedly “spread fraudulent news about the actions of this SUPREME COURT and the SUPERIOR ELECTORAL COURT.”³⁰ Specifically, Moraes took issue with Aiub’s statements about Moraes: “We see the TSE [Superior Electoral Court] censoring people, we see Alexandre de Moraes arresting people.”³¹ In other words, Moraes ordered the censorship of a Brazilian citizen for criticizing Moraes for censoring Brazilians.

Government-directed censorship is not a problem contained only to authoritarian governments in faraway lands; it is happening here in the United States. The Committee's and Select Subcommittee's findings of the Biden Administration's attack on free speech reveal how the Biden Administration, like Brazil, has sought to silence the Administration's critics. On just its third day of the new Administration, the Biden White House demanded that Twitter remove Robert F. Kennedy, Jr.'s tweet that contained no misinformation "ASAP" and urged Twitter to "keep an eye out for tweets that fall in this same ~genre."⁴⁸ Turning its attention to Facebook, the Biden Administration demanded that the company censor one of its top critics on cable television, Tucker Carlson, even though his reporting was truthful and did not violate Facebook's standards.⁴⁹ Unsatisfied with going after social media companies, the Biden White House even turned its attention to book stores, pressuring Amazon to censor books expressing skepticism of vaccines.⁵⁰

Perhaps unsurprisingly, then, the Biden Administration seems to have been silent in the face of these free speech attacks abroad. The State Department's Office of the Under Secretary for Civilian Security, Democracy, and Human Rights exists to "advance the security of the American people by assisting countries around the world to build more democratic, secure, stable, and just societies.”⁵¹ The Department, and Under Secretary Uzra Zeya, have been noticeably silent as Brazil and other countries have sought to censor speech online.⁵²

This interim report exposes Brazil’s censorship campaign and presents a startling case study of how a government can justify censorship in the name of stopping so-called “hate” speech and the “subversion” of “order.” This report includes the following documents:

- Two copies each of 28 orders, in Portuguese and in English translation, issued by Justice Alexandre de Moraes to X Corp.;⁵³
- An additional 23 orders issued by Justice Alexandre de Moraes for which X Corp. does not have an English translation;⁵⁴ and
- 37 orders issued by the Superior Electoral Court of Brazil.⁵⁵

Congress must take seriously the warnings from Brazil and other countries seeking to suppress speech online. We must never think that it cannot happen here. The Committee and Select Subcommittee have aggressively conducted oversight—issuing subpoenas, conducting fact-finding, and convening multiple hearings—to shed light on government-induced censorship in the United States and to inform additional legislative remedies. Members of the Committee and Select Subcommittee have proposed legislation, including H.R. 4791, the Free Speech Protection Act, and H.R. 4848, the Censorship Accountability Act, to protect the First Amendment and to put a stop to these constitutional abuses.⁵⁶

The Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to investigate, hold hearings, and consider additional legislation to protect free speech online and hold those who violate Americans’ fundamental First Amendment freedoms accountable. The attacks on free speech abroad serve as a warning for America. Since his public commitment to free speech, Mr. Musk has faced criticism and attacks from governments around the world, including the United States. In Brazil, censorship of the opposing political party and investigative journalists occurs via court order. Under the Biden Administration, censorship demands are delivered in closed-door meetings with implicit regulatory threats, on top of lawfare for political opponents. Now, more than ever, Congress must act to uphold its duty to protect free expression.

DECISION

These are statements by the Federal Council of the Brazilian Bar Association (CFOAB), through which it reports alleged unlawful actions and requests against the Brazilian Conservative Bar Association - OACB (STF petitions n' 4.014/2023 and 8.544/2023).

The petitioner states that the defendant, which has the legal nature of an association, has "waged a veritable Tumult against the Brazilian democracy, through its social media profiles, especially on twitter (<https://twitter.com/AdvogadosOacb?s=20&t=9WJNCjBadeB7etQoLoXv3A>) and Instagram (https://www.instagram.com/oacb_advogados_conservadores/) which he has approximately 100 (one hundred) thousand followers. The claimant's narrative is accompanied by posts made by the Defendant, such as tweets and videos, with the following words:

"Bolsonaro will be President of the Republic from 2023 to 2026 - Understand!!!" - video, on 25/12/2022;

"We must continue to populate Brasilia and the fronts of the barracks demanding an answer that the previous Minister of Defense did not have: the delivery of the information (the source codes?), which the TSE has so far failed to provide. Prevarication is a crime! Pay attention to the sole paragraph of art. 1 of the Constitution." - tweet, on 6/1/2023;

"Make no mistake: those who call themselves 'jurists or lawyers for democracy' but support this government have nothing democratic about them. They are just like them. Sadly, this is the truth." - tweet, on 6/1/2023;

PET 10981 / DF

"THE STF CAN NEVER BE THE LAST WORD BECAUSE he became a dictator, since he was not elected by the people. Floriano Peixoto arrested 13 general officers. Rui Barbosa filed a writ of habeas corpus with the Supreme Court. Floriano remarked: 'and who will give habeas-corpus to the Supreme Court?' (Book The Republic is Born)." - tweet, 8/1/2023;

"We reiterate our commitment to the truth and in the same way that the colleague in the video, who does not belong to our ranks, received information about the death of protesters (with confirmation), we also received it. We ask Mr. @marcosdoval and Mr. @Biakicis to look into the matter." - tweet, 10/1/2023;

"GILMAR MENDES said that 'Brazil has lived through an era of darkness when it comes to criminal procedure'. No! Under the military governments, armed subversives and guerrillas were arrested. The military didn't arrest children and innocent people. At that time, good citizens were respected and protected" - tweet, on 15/1/2023;

"The Brazilian state will suffer sanctions and compensation for these victims of abuse of authority and torture to which the INNOCENTS are being subjected. The bill will be paid by everyone, due to the irresponsibility of public agents from a government of unprepared people." - tweet, on 15/1/2023;

"Of course, it was the most ludicrous of narratives. It is astonishing that the Judiciary should put INNOCENTS in jail under anti-legal arguments. The Constitution continues to be violated." - tweet, on 18/1/2(123;

The plaintiff's narrative is also illustrated by a report that reads: "Influential names from Bolsonaro's base share false information from the non-governmental organization Ordem dos Advogados Conservadores do Brasil (OACB) as if they were from the general entity of lawyers" and "Parliamentarians attribute false information about the attacks in Brasilia to the OAB", dated 13/1/2023, published by "Redação O Sul", as transcribed below:

"In the middle of the repercussions of the acts that culminated in the depredation of the headquarters of the Three Powers in Brasilia last Sunday (08), parliamentarians and influential names from the Bolsonaro base are sharing false information from the non-governmental organization Ordem dos Advogados Conservadores do Brasil (OACB) as if they were from the Brazilian Bar Association (OAB) - the highest entity representing and regulating the legal profession in the country.

The movement that induces intemauts to misinform was started by federal deputy-elect Gustavo Gayer (PL-GO) last Monday (09). At the time, he said via Twitter that lawyers from the OAB had left the provisional prison of the Federal Police (PF) and were "shocked by the fact that they had children in prison". In fact, they were OACB professionals.

The attitude was repeated in the tribune of the House of Deputies by Bia Kicis (PL-SE). At the time, she spread fake news that she claimed had been backed by the Chamber's the Order of Bar of Brazilian of the Federal District (OAB- DF). 'I've just received news that a lady died today on the premises of the Federal Police. Not on the premises of the Military Police. I'm talking about a lady who was denied food and water and who, after hours and hours and hours of being mistreated and neglected, died," said Kicis on Tuesday morning (10) in the gallery.

Later, on Twitter, the parliamentarian apologized for the mistake' and insisted that the confirmation was actually from the OACB. The group gained notoriety in 2021 when it threatened to sue anyone who insulted then-president Jair Bolsonaro (PL). At the time, the OAB went to court against the OACB for attempting to misuse the name of the Bar and disciplinary infraction.

Also on Tuesday, the federal deputy elected with the most votes in Ceara, Andre Fernandes, published the fake news of the death of the elderly woman in the PF gymnasium with the endorsement of the OACB. 'Imprisoned children, elderly people having heart attacks, a death of an elderly woman detained in the PF confirmed by the OACB. Lack of water, food and toilets. The videos that are circulating are revolting," he said.

Since Sunday, the non-governmental organization has made itself available to the arrested protesters: associate lawyers provide services without charging fees. On social media, the OACB also spread fake news such as the narrative that Sunday's acts of vandalism were carried out by infiltrators. "We will not tolerate acts of violence and vandalism. On the other hand, we will not abandon who did not commit any crime. The Order of Conservative Lawyers of Brazil - OACB is in Brailia and will provide assistance to all Paraibans, he wrote." (<https://www.osul.com.br/parlamentares-oabinformacoes-false-attacks/>)

In proof of the fact reported and individualized above, the Applicant presents the following posts by Federal Deputies ANDRÉ JANONES and BIA KICIS, on the social network Twitter, both dated 11/1/2023:

"The bolsonarist MP Bia Kicis, investigated in the fake news inquiry, used the chamber's rostrum to LIE. Bia Kicis in her speech said that the president of the OAB confirmed the death of a lady in PF custody and this lie has been used to imitate the coup plotters" -Federal Deputy André Janones;

"You irresponsible bastard! I'll take you to the ethics council. I didn't use the rostrum to lie. I said that the death had not been confirmed. When I came down from the Tribune, I said that I had received a post from the OAB (I've already clarified that it was the OACB) confirming the death, which was later denied by the PF.

I've sent a letter to the PF asking for information." - Federal Deputy Bia Kicis.

The petitioner goes on to say that "the posts are far from the simple exercise of the free expression of thought and represent a real threat to the democratic rule of law" and that "the repercussions resulting from the sharing of information as if it were from the OAB - an entity that represents and governs the country - confirms the disorder practiced by the OACB." "The repercussions resulting from the sharing of information [that] appears to be that of the OAB - the body that represents and regulates the legal system in the country - confirms the disorder caused by the OACB, by distorting the OAB's purpose, which is to defend the legal order of the democratic state of law, human rights and social justice, and to advocate for the proper application of the laws, for the swift administration of the judiciary and for the improvement of legal culture and institutions, in accordance with Art. 44, I, of Federal Law n. 8.906/1994 '.

The applicant informs that he notified the mentioned association by means of Official Letter No. 26/2023 so that it would cease the irregular registration of its volunteer lawyers in custody hearings, in favor of detainees as a result of the anti-democratic acts of 8/1/2023, without proof of the granting of a mandate, but, despite the confirmation of receipt of the notification by the representative of the entity, "recent publications on their social media profiles (<https://twitter.com!AdvogadosOacb>) show the continuity of their supposedly 'pro bano' work (...) with a warning that lawyers could be using their status as 'volunteers' associated with the 'OACB' but, at the same time, asking for payment of a pecuniary consideration for their defense (<https://twitter.com/AdvogadosOacb/status/1616156133844193283>), which would, in theory, be repudiated by the association".

In the second petition, the applicant asked for the "extrajudicial notification" to be attached, signed by the representatives of the Respondent and addressed at the same time to the President of the Sectional Council/DF of the Brazilian Bar Association and to the President of the Federal Council of the OAB, from which he highlights the following excerpts, which he believes reinforce the arguments already made:

"there are complaints from inmates of alleged veiled suggestions that the inducing them to confess to crimes and make agreements that supposed to help them "get out of jail";

"in addition to prohibiting judges from granting any order for the release or relaxation of arrests, until that moment, the criminal classification was not even individualized on the basis of evidence";

"the victims of the authoritarianism of the Brazilian state are being tortured physically and psychologically in prisons in this city";

"this process has so many contaminations that it is completely invalid.";

"terms such as 'terrorists' and 'coup plotters' were fallaciously coined, indiscriminately, affecting the population made up of good citizens and even entire families present there, without individualizing the accusations and keeping them imprisoned, without now entering into meritorious questions."

"We denounce to Your Excellency what has been happening, in the past, within the premises of buildings of the Brazilian State (by actions and omissions), SERIOUS VIOLATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS resulting from the complaints of citizens, which denote the CRIMES OF TORTURE (physical and psychological), MISTREATMENT, SUPPRESSION OF MOVEMENT AND OF EXPRESSION, affecting mostly innocent citizens";

"We are perplexed by decisions based on judicial inventions, creating legal and procedural artifices that run counter to the law in order to serve the desire to persecute and punish disaffected people. If anyone is practicing anti-democratic acts, it is the agents of the State."

"OUR CLASS is suffocating in the face of the imbalance of the

"tripod of Justice", not with a sword massacring Brazilian society with a superiority not provided for in the legal system. This skewed handling of the Magna Carta and infra-constitutional legislation occurs with a high degree of authoritarianism and arrogance, without respect for due process of law and the tripartite nature of the Powers, as well as the PEOPLE, the real holder of Power."

"The overwhelming majority are good citizens (since we disregard the infiltrators), families, ladies, gentlemen, the elderly, workers, with a fixed address and documented, were arrested on 08/01/2023, in an arbitrary and UNCONSTITUTIONAL manner, and remain so, illegally, in inhuman conditions, without having committed a crime."

"It has become clear that there was orchestrated vandalism, financed by groups sympathetic to the current government and perhaps even with the connivance of the authorities, as reported by Brazilian intelligence. The purpose of this was to incite destruction and blame the patriotic demonstrators, overwhelmingly orderly people, legitimately dissatisfied with the lack of transparency in the electoral system, which is lawful and any demonstration that intends to brand them as 'Scammers' should be repudiated (families with children, the elderly, wheelchair users and unarmed people will give what goal to the President??? not even asking for military intervention can make them out to be coup plotters because there is a constitutional provision - and it's one thing to ask for it, but quite another to be granted it!!!). The action orchestrated by vandals was not born out of a meeting of demonstrators, but only to generate a narrative and justification for the authoritarian advance of the habitual abusers of authority, under the frivolous pretext of 'action against terrorism'. What a load of crap!".

The Applicant points out that the promotion of false news must be repressed, in an attack on the Democratic Rule of Law and the rule of law.

disinformation "of thousands of followers" and, above all, the "petty and media attack on the independence and harmony of the branches of government."

It gives an example of the conduct to be repressed, highlighting the inferences made by the Respondent about "the alleged constitutionality of mining in favor of pressure on democratic rights, in addition to the recurring 'thesis' of an 'infiltrated' movement to incriminate 'good citizens' and the constant questioning of the Brazilian electoral system". It points out that the Respondent claims that there have been "repeated complaints of gross human rights violations perpetrated by the Brazilian government, and that the OAB has been silent", without the presentation of any probative document, without individualizing the names of those who were allegedly reduced to confessing to crimes and entering into agreements, nor those who were allegedly tortured (physically and psychologically), ill-treated or had their freedom of movement suppressed outside the hypotheses provided for in the Constitution and criminal law.

Finally, it makes the following requests:

"a) A immediate SUSPENSION OF ACTIVITIES JURISDICTIONS EXERCISED BY THE 'represented', i.e. that OACB refrains from providing/offering legal services;

b) that the 'defendant' immediately refrain from using the imitation of the acronym and name of the Brazilian Bar Association for any purpose, in particular that it STOP USING THE ACLUDE AND NAME OF THE OAB TO DISSEMINATE FAKE NEWS AGAINST DEMOCRACY;

c) that the 'defendant' stops attracting/managing cases/clients for lawyers, especially in favor of the members of its associative courts;

d) that the 'defendant' refrain from perpetrating offenses and disparaging the image of the Brazilian Bar Association and its members;

e) that the defendant' be prevented from promoting censorship, restricting the free expression of thought, freedom of communication and information through the

filing of lawsuits; and

f) that the 'defendant' refrains from carrying out any advertising for the provision/offering of legal services".

The Attorney General's Office, summoned to express its opinion, requested "that continuity jurisdiction and Brazilian Bar

This is the report. SO I DECIDE.

The facts narrated in the representations of the Federal Council of the Brazilian Bar Association, as reported, are pertinent to those that are the subject of the investigation initiated by decision in these proceedings and referred to Inq. 4.923/DF.

The reported conduct of the Conservative Bar Association of Brazil took place in the context of anti-democratic acts, in which groups - financed by businessmen - dissatisfied with the legitimate result of the election, with violence and serious threats to people, began to block traffic on several highways in the country, with the intention of abolishing the Democratic Rule of Law, calling for a "military coup" and the return of the Dictatorship, resulting in the terrorist acts that took place on the Esplanade of Ministries on January 8, 2023, with the destruction of the buildings of the NATIONAL CONGRESS, the PALACIO DO PLANALTO and, with much more anger and hatred, the SUPREME FEDERAL COURT, facts that have been widely investigated in various proceedings before this SUPREME COURT.

In fact, the numerous manifestations of the "Conservative Bar Association of Brazil", in a preliminary analysis, have the character of instigating the acts that took place on 8/1/2023, which may constitute the crimes provided for in arts. 2, 3, 5 and 6 (terrorist acts, including preparatory acts) of Law 13.260/16 and in arts. 147 (threat), 147-A, § 1º, item III, (persecution), 163 (damage), art. 286 (incitement to crime), art.

PET 10981 / DF

250, § 1', item I, paragraph "b" (arson), 288, sole paragraph (armed criminal association), 359-L (violent abolition of the Democratic State of Law), 359-M (coup d'état), all of the Penal Code:

Law n. 13.260/2016

Terrorism

Art. 2 Terrorism consists of one or more individuals committing the acts provided for in this article, for reasons of xenophobia, discrimination or prejudice of race, color, ethnicity and religion, when committed with the purpose of provoking social or generalized terror, exposing people, property, public peace or public safety to danger.

§ 1 The following are acts of terrorism:

I - using or threatening to use, transporting, storing, carrying or bringing with them explosives, toxic gases, poisons, biological, chemical, nuclear contents or other means capable of causing damage or promoting mass destruction;

IV - sabotage the operation or seize, with violence, serious threat to the person or using cyber-medical mechanisms, total or partial control, even temporarily, of means of communication or transportation, ports, airports, railway or bus stations, hospitals, health care facilities, schools, sports stadiums, public facilities or places where essential public services are provided, power generation or transmission facilities, military facilities, oil and gas exploration, refining and processing facilities and banking institutions and their service network;

V - attempt against the life or physical integrity of a person:

Penalty - imprisonment, from twelve to thirty years, in addition to the following sanctions corresponding to threats or violence.

§ Paragraph 2 The provisions of this article do not apply to the individual or collective conduct of people in political demonstrations, social movements, trade unions, religious movements, class or professional category movements, which are directed by social purposes or claims, aimed at contesting, criticizing, protesting or supporting, with the aim of defending constitutional rights, guarantees and freedoms, without prejudice to the criminal classification contained in the law.

Art. 3 To promote, constitute, join or assist, personally or through an intermediary, a terrorist organization:

Penalty - imprisonment from five to eight years and a fine.

Art. 5 - Carrying out preparatory acts of terrorism with the unequivocal intention of committing the crime:

Penalty - that corresponding to the consummated offense, reduced by one quarter to one half.

§ Paragraph 1 - The same penalties apply to the agent who, with the intention of committing acts of terrorism:

I - recruiting, organizing, transporting or supplying individuals who travel to a country other than that of their residence or nationality; or

II - provide or receive training in a country other than that of their residence or nationality.

§ 2 In the cases of § 1º, when the conduct does not involve training or travel to a country other than that of their residence or nationality, the penalty will be that corresponding to the consummated offense, reduced by half to two thirds.

Art. 6 Receive, provide, offer, obtain, keep, deposit, request, invest, in any way, directly or indirectly, resources, assets, goods, rights, values or services of any nature, for the planning, preparation or execution of the crimes provided for in this Law:

Penalty - imprisonment from fifteen to thirty years.

Sole paragraph. The same penalty applies to anyone who offers or receives, obtains, stores, keeps in deposit, solicits, invests in or in any way contributes to obtaining assets, goods or financial resources for the purpose of financing, in whole or in part, a person, group of people, association, entity or criminal organization whose main or secondary activity, even on an occasional basis, is the commission of the crimes provided for in this Law.

PET 10981 / DF

Threats

Art. 147 - Threatening someone, by word, writing or gesture, or any other symbolic means, to cause them unjust and serious harm:

Penalty - detention, from one to six months, or a fine

Sole Paragraph - This will only be done through representation.

Persecution

Art. 147-A Stalking someone, repeatedly and by any means, threatening their physical or psychological integrity, restricting their ability to move or, in any way, violating or disturbing their freedom or privacy.

Penalty - imprisonment, from 6 (six) months to 2 (two) years, and a fine.

Damage

Art. 163 - Destroying, rendering useless or deteriorating something else: Penalty - detention, from one to six months, or a fine.

Qualified damage

Sole paragraph - If the crime is committed:

I - with violence against the person or serious threat;

II - with the use of a flammable or explosive substance, if this does not constitute a more serious crime; protection for the practice of illicit activities, nor as an argument for the removal or diminution of civil or criminal liability for criminal acts, under penalty of disrespecting a true State of Law (HC n* 70.814-5/SP, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, First Panel, DJ of 24/6/1994).

Therefore, it is necessary, appropriate and urgent to suspend the legal activities carried out by the Brazilian Conservative Bar Association, as well as to block its social networks, which are used to attack the democratic rule of law, given the possibility of their use to encourage illegal and anti-democratic acts, with the aim of interrupting the injury or threat to a right (art. 5, XXXV, Federal Constitution).

In view of all the above, I DETERMINE the adoption of the following measures, under penalty of a daily fine of R$ 20,000.00 (twenty thousand reais), by personally summoning GERALDO JOSÉ BARRAL LIMA (OAB/PB 18.014-A), President of the Brazilian Bar Association:

1) IMMEDIATE SUSPENSION of the legal activities carried out by the Brazilian Conservative Bar Association, with the association refraining from providing/offering legal services and from any advertising of the provision/offering of legal services;

2) a ban on the use of imitation acronyms of the imitation of the acronym and name of the Brazilian Bar Association for any purpose, especially to disseminate fake news against the Democratic Rule of Law and its institutions;

3) PROHIBITION OF ACTION of the Conservative Bar Association of Brazil in order to attract/agency causes/clients for any lawyers, especially in favor of its members; and

DECISÃO

Trata-se de manifestações do Conselho Federal da Ordem dos Advogados do Brasil (CFOAB), por meio das quais noticia suposta atuação ilícita e veiculam requerimentos em desfavor da Ordem dos Advogados Conservadores do Brasil – OACB (petições STF nº 4.014/2023 e 8.544/2023).

Narra o requerente que a noticiada, que tem natureza jurídica de associação, tem “empreendido verdadeiro tumulto contra a Democracia brasileira, por intermédio de seus perfis em redes sociais, notadamente do Twitter (<https://twitter.com/AdvogadosOacb?lang=en&t=9WfNCjBadeB7etQoLoXv3A>) e Instagram (https://www.instagram.com/oacb_advogados_conservadores/)”, nos quais conta com aproximadamente 100 (cem) mil seguidores. A narrativa do requerente vem acompanhada de postagens feitas pela Requerida, tais como tweets e vídeo, com os seguintes dizeres:

“Deve-se continuar povoando Brasília e frentes dos quartéis exigindo resposta que Ministro da Defesa anterior não teve: a entrega das informações (os códigos fonte?), que TSE até agora não atendeu. Prevaricação é crime! Atente-se para o parágrafo único do art. 1 ° da Constituição.” - tweet, em 6/1/2023;

“Não se enganem: os que se denominam ‘juristas, ou advogados pela democracia’ mas apoiam este governo, nada têm de democráticos. São iguais àqueles. Lamentavelmente, mas esta é a verdade.” - tweet, em 6/1/2023;

"O STF NUNCA PODE SER A ÚLTIMA PALAVRA POIS SE TORNA DITADOR, uma vez que não é eleito pelo povo. Floriano Peixoto prendeu 13 oficiais generais. Rui Barbosa impetrou Habeas-corpus no STF. Floriano fez a observação: 'e quem dará habeas-corpus ao Supremo?' (Livro Nasce a República)." - tweet, em 8/1/2023;

"Reiteramos nosso compromisso e a verdade e da mesma forma que o colega do vídeo, que não pertence aos nossos quadros, recebeu a informação de falecimento de manifestantes (com confirmação), também recebemos. Requeremos aos senhores @marcosdoval e @Biakicis que averiguem o fato." - tweet, em 10/1/2023;

"GILMAR MENDES disse que 'o Brasil viveu uma era de trevas no que diz respeito ao processo penal'. Não! Nos Governos Militares eram presos subversivos armados, guerrilheiros. Os militares não prendiam crianças e inocentes. Naquele tempo o cidadão de bem era respeitado e protegido" - tweet, em 15/1/2023;

"O Estado Brasileiro sofrerá sanções e processos indenizatórios destas vítimas de abuso de autoridade, e tortura a que estão sendo submetidos os INOCENTES. A conta será paga por todos, em razão da irresponsabilidade de agentes públicos de um governo de gente despreparada." - tweet, em 15/1/2023;

"Claro que foi a mais esdrúxula das narrativas. É de se pasmar que o Judiciário coloque na cadeia INOCENTES sob argumentos antijurídicos. A Constituição segue violada." - tweet, em 18/1/2023;

Ilustra, ainda, a narrativa do requerente, reportagem com os seguintes dizeres: "Nomes influentes da base bolsonarista compartilham informações falsas da organização não governamental Ordem dos Advogados

SPET 10981 / DF

Conservadores do Brasil (OACB) como se fossem da entidade geral dos advogados” e “Parlamentares atribuem à OAB informações falsas sobre os ataques em Brasília”, datada de 13/1/2023, veiculada por “Redação O Sul”, conforme se transcreve a seguir:

O movimento que induz internautas à desinformação foi iniciado pelo deputado federal eleito Gustavo Gayer (PL-GO) na última segunda-feira (09). Na ocasião, ele afirmou via Twitter que advogados da OAB teriam deixado a prisão provisória da Polícia Federal (PF) e estavam ‘chocados com o fato de terem crianças presas’. Na verdade, tratavam-se de profissionais da OACB.

A atitude foi repetida na tribuna da Câmara dos Deputados por Bia Kicis (PL-SE). Na ocasião, ela disseminou uma notícia falsa que, segundo ela, teria sido respaldada pela seção da Ordem dos Advogados do Brasil do Distrito Federal (OAB-DF). ‘Acabo de receber uma notícia de que uma senhora veio a óbito hoje nas dependências da Polícia Federal. Não foi nas dependências da Polícia Militar, não. Falo de uma senhora a quem foi negado comida e água e que depois de horas, e horas, e horas a fio sendo destratada e descuidada, veio a falecer’, afirmou Kicis na manhã de terça-feira (10) na tribuna.

Posteriormente, no Twitter, a parlamentar pediu desculpas pelo equívoco e informou que a confirmação era, na verdade, da OACB. O grupo ganhou notoriedade em 2021 quando ameaçou processar qualquer pessoa que fizesse injúrias contra o então presidente Jair Bolsonaro (PL). À época, a OAB entrou na justiça contra a OACB por tentativa de uso indevido do nome da Ordem e infração disciplinar.

Também na terça-feira, o deputado federal eleito com mais votos no Ceará, André Fernandes, publicou a fake news da morte da idosa no ginásio da PF com o aval da OACB. 'Crianças presas, idosos infartando, uma morte de uma senhora detida na PF confirmada pela OACB. Falta de água, comida e sanitários. Os vídeos que estão circulando são revoltantes', disse.

Desde domingo, a organização não governamental se colocou à disposição dos manifestantes presos: advogados associados prestam serviço sem cobrar honorários. Nas redes sociais, a OACB também divulga notícias falsas como a narrativa de que os atos de vandalismo de domingo teriam sido realizados por infiltrados. 'Não toleraremos atos de violência e baderna. Por outro lado, não abandonaremos quem não cometeu nenhum delito. A Ordem dos Advogados Conservadores do Brasil - OACB está em Brasília e dará assistência gratuita a todos o Paraibanos', escreveu." (<https://www.osul.com.br/parlamentares-oab-informacoes-falsas-ataques/>)

Em comprovação ao fato noticiado e acima individualizado, o Requerente apresenta as seguintes postagens dos Deputados Federais ANDRÉ JANONES e BIA KICIS, na rede social Twitter, ambas datadas de 11/1/2023:

"A deputada bolsonarista Bia Kicis investigada no inquérito das fake news, usou a tribuna da câmara para MENTIR. Bia Kicis em seu discurso afirmou que o presidente da OAB confirmou a morte de uma senhora sob custódia da PF e essa mentira tem sido usada para incitar os golpistas" - Dep. Fed. André Janones;

"Seu irresponsável! Irei levá-lo ao conselho ética. Não usei da tribuna p/mentir. Disse q a morte não fora confirmada. Qd descí da Tribuna, avisei q recebi um post da OAB(já esclareci ser a OACB)q confirmava a morte, depois desmentida pela PF.

Oficiei a PF pedindo informações." - Dep. Fed. Bia Kicis.

Prossegue o requerente afirmando que "as postagens colacionadas desbordam do simples exercício da livre manifestação do pensamento e representam verdadeira ameaça ao Estado Democrático de Direito" e que "a repercussão decorrente do compartilhamento de informações falsas como se fossem da OAB - entidade máxima de representação e regulamentação da advocacia no país - confirma a desordem causada pela OACB, ao desvirtuar a finalidade da OAB, que é a de defender a Constituição, a ordem jurídica do Estado democrático de direito, os direitos humanos, a justiça social, e pugnar pela boa aplicação das leis, pela rápida administração da justiça e pelo aperfeiçoamento da cultura e das instituições jurídicas, consoante o art. 44, I, da Lei Federal n. 8.906/1994".

Informa o requerente que notificou a referida associação por intermédio do Ofício n. 26/2023 para que fizesse cessar a atuação irregular de seus advogados voluntários em audiências de custódia, em favor de custodiados em decorrência dos atos antidemocráticos do dia 8/1/2023, sem prova da outorga de mandato, mas, não obstante a confirmação do recebimento da notificação pelo representante da entidade, "publicações recentes em seus perfis em redes sociais (<https://twitter.com/AdvogadosOacb>) dão conta da continuidade da atuação supostamente 'pro bono' (...) com advertência de que advogados poderiam estar se valendo da condição de 'voluntários' associados à 'OACB' mas, ao mesmo tempo, pedindo pagamento de contraprestação pecuniária para defesa (<https://twitter.com/AdvogadosOacb/status/1616156133844193283>), o que seria, entesse, repudiado pela associação".

Na segunda petição, o requerente pugnou pela juntada da "contranotificação extrajudicial", subscrita pelos representantes da Requerida e endereçada, a um só tempo, ao Presidente do Conselho Seccional/DF da Ordem dos Advogados do Brasil e ao Presidente do Conselho Federal da OAB, da qual destaca os seguintes excertos, que entende virem em reforço à argumentação já expendida:

"há queixas dos presos de suposta sugestão velada os induzindo a confessarem crimes e a fazerem acordos que supostamente contribuirá para se 'livrarem do cárcere';

"além proibição aos juízes de concederem qualquer ordem de soltura e relaxamento de prisões, até aquele momento sequer foi individualizada a tipificação penal com base em provas";

"as vítimas do autoritarismo do Estado Brasileiro estão sendo torturadas física e psicologicamente em presídios desta Cidade";

"este processo tem tantas contaminações que o INVALIDAM DE PLANO";

"se cunhou, falaciosamente, termos como 'terroristas' e 'golpistas', indistintamente, atingindo a população compostas de cidadãos de bem e até famílias inteiras ali presentes, sem individualizar as imputações e as mantendo presas, sem entrarmos, agora, em questões meritórias";

"DENUNCIAMOS à Vossa Excelência o que vem ocorrendo, ab initio, dentro das instalações de prédios do Estado Brasileiro (por ações e omissões), GRAVÍSSIMA VIOLAÇÃO A DIREITOS HUMANOS resultante das queixas dos cidadãos, que denotam os CRIMES DE TORTURA (física e psicológica), MAUS TRATOS, SUPRESSÃO DE LOCOMOÇÃO E DE EXPRESSÃO, atingindo majoritariamente cidadãos inocentes";

"Deparamo-nos perplexos com decisões baseadas em invencionismos judiciais, criando artificiais jurídicos e processuais ao arrepio da lei para servir À vontade de perseguir e punir desafetos. Se há alguém praticando 'atos antidemocráticos' são os agentes dos Estado";

"A NOSSA CLASSE está sufocada face o desequilíbrio do

PET 10981 / DF

'tripé da Justiça', não com a espada massacrando a sociedade brasileira com uma superioridade não prevista no ordenamento jurídico. Esse manuseio enviesado da Carta Magna e da legislação infraconstitucional ocorre com elevado grau de autoritarismo, arrogância e prepotência, sem respeito ao devido processo legal e à tripartição dos Poderes, bem como ao POVO, real titular do Poder";

"A maioria esmagadora são cidadãos de bem (já que desconsideramos os infiltrados), famílias, senhoras, senhores, idosos, trabalhadores, com endereço fixo e documentados, foram presos no dia 08/01/2023, de forma arbitrária e INCONSTITUCIONAL, e assim permanecem, ilegalmente, em condições desumanas, sem que tenham cometido crime";

"ficou evidenciado que houve vandalismo orquestrado, financiado por grupos simpáticos ao atual Governo e, quem sabe, até com conivência de autoridades, conforme relatou a inteligência brasileira. Isso teve o propósito de incitar a destruição e jogar a culpa nos manifestantes de mote patriótico, esmagadoramente pessoas ordeiras, legitimamente inconformadas com a falta de transparência do sistema eleitoral, o que é lícito e se deve repudiar qualquer manifestação que intencione lhes imputar a pecha de 'GOLPISTAS' (famílias com crianças, idosos, cadeirantes e desarmadas darão que golpe Presidente??? sequer pedir intervenção militar pode colocar tais pessoas como golpistas porque há previsão constitucional - e uma coisa é pedir, outra coisa é ser atendido!!!). A ação orquestrada por vândalos não nasceu da reunião dos manifestantes, mas tão somente para gerar a narrativa e justificativa ao avanço autoritário dos já contumazes abusadores de autoridade, sob o pretexto leviano de 'ação contra o terrorismo'. Tremenda balela!".

Pontua o Requerente que devem ser reprimidos a promoção de notícias falsas em agressão ao Estado Democrático de Direito e de desinformação "às centenas de milhares de seguidores" e, sobretudo, o "ataque mesquinho e midiático à independência e harmonia dos Poderes da União".

Exemplifica a conduta a ser reprimida, ressaltando as ilações feitas pela Requerida acerca de "suposta constitucionalidade de um movimento a favor supressão de direitos democráticos, além da recorrente tese conspiracionista de um movimento 'infiltrado' para incriminar 'cidadãos de bem' e dos questionamentos sempre lançados ao sistema eleitoral brasileiro". Ressalta que a Requerida assevera haver "reiteração de denúncias de graves violações a direitos humanos perpetrados pelo Estado brasileiro e sobre o qual a OAB seria omissa", sem apresentação de qualquer documento probatório, sem individualização dos nomes daqueles que supostamente teriam sido induzidos a confessar crimes e celebrar acordos, tampouco daqueles que supostamente foram torturados (física e psicologicamente), sofreram maus-tratos ou tiveram a liberdade de locomoção suprimida fora das hipóteses previstas na Constituição e na lei penal.

Formula, ao final, os seguintes requerimentos:

"a) A imediata SUSPENSÃO DAS ATIVIDADES JURÍDICAS EXERCIDAS PELA 'representada', isto é, que OACB se abstenha de prestar/oferecer serviços jurídicos;

b) que a 'representada' se abstenha imediatamente de utilizar a imitação da sigla e do nome da Ordem dos Advogados do Brasil para quaisquer fins, especialmente que DEIXE DE USAR A SIGLA E O NOME DA OAB PARA DISSEMINAR FAKE NEWS CONTRA A DEMOCRACIA;

c) que a 'representada' deixe de captar/agenciar causas/clientes para advogados, especialmente em favor dos integrantes de seus quadros associativos;

d) que a 'representada' se abstenha de perpetrar ofensas e depreciar a imagem da Ordem dos Advogados do Brasil e de seus membros;

e) que a 'representada' seja impedida de promover censura, cerceamento à livre manifestação de pensamento, à liberdade de comunicação e de informação por intermédio do

ajuizamento de ações judiciais; e

f) que a 'representada' se abstenha de praticar toda e qualquer publicidade de prestação/oferecimento de serviços jurídicos".

Intimada para se manifestar, a Procuradoria-Geral da República requereu "o arquivamento dos autos em epígrafe, sem prejuízo da continuidade da ação civil pública em trâmite no 1º grau de jurisdição federal e de eventuais medidas de iniciativa do Conselho Federal da Ordem dos Advogados do Brasil" (fl. 121).

É o relatório. DECIDO.

Os fatos narrados nas representações do Conselho Federal da Ordem dos Advogados do Brasil, tal como relatados, guardam pertinência com aqueles objeto de investigação iniciada por decisão nestes autos e remetida ao Inq. 4.923/DF.

As condutas noticiadas da Ordem dos Advogados Conservadores do Brasil ocorreram no contexto dos atos antidemocráticos, nos quais grupos – financiados por empresários – insatisfeitos com o legítimo resultado do pleito, com violência e grave ameaça às pessoas, passaram a bloquear o tráfego em diversas rodovias do país, com o intuito de abolirem o Estado Democrático de Direito, pleiteando um "golpe militar" e o retorno da Ditadura, resultando nos atos terroristas ocorridos na Esplanada dos Ministérios em 8/1/2023, com destruição dos prédios do CONGRESSO NACIONAL, do PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO e, com muito mais raiva e ódio, do SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL, fatos amplamente investigados em diversos procedimentos que tramitam nesta SUPREMA CORTE.

Efetivamente, as inúmeras manifestações da "Ordem dos Advogados Conservadores do Brasil", em análise preliminar, se revestem de caráter instigador dos atos ocorridos em 8/1/2023, o que pode configurar os crimes de previstos nos arts. 2ª, 3ª, 5ª e 6ª (atos terroristas, inclusive preparatórios) da Lei 13.260/16 e nos arts. 147 (ameaça), 147-A, § 1º, inciso III, (perseguição), 163 (dano), art. 286 (incitação ao crime), art.

PET 10981 / DF

250, § 1º, inciso I, alínea "b" (incêndio majorado), 288, parágrafo único (associação criminosa armada), 359-L (abolição violenta do Estado Democrático de Direito), 359-M (golpe de Estado), todos do Código Penal:

Lei n. 13.260/2016Terrorismo

Art. 2º O terrorismo consiste na prática por um ou mais indivíduos dos atos previstos neste artigo, por razões de xenofobia, discriminação ou preconceito de raça, cor, etnia e religião, quando cometidos com a finalidade de provocar terror social ou generalizado, expondo a perigo pessoa, patrimônio, a paz pública ou a incolumidade pública.

DECISION

In a decision handed down in these proceedings on January 8, 2023, due to the violent escalation of criminal acts that resulted in the invasion of the buildings of the PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO, the NATIONAL CONGRESS of the SUPREME FEDERAL COURT, with the depredation of public property, as widely reported by the national press, I ordered, among other measures, the dispatch of a letter to the companies Facebook, Tik Tok and Twitter, so that, within two (2) hours, they block the channels/profiles/accounts indicated, which instigated and disseminated the criminal acts investigated, under penalty of a daily fine of R$ 100.000.00 (one hundred thousand reais), with the provision of their registration data to this SUPREME COURT and the full preservation of their content.

The Special Office for Combating Disinformation of the SUPERIOR ELECTORAL COURT informs that, through research on open social media data, it detected a publication made by the influencer and podcaster "Monark", on the digital platform Rumble, containing an interview with Federal Deputy FILIPE BARROS (PL-PR), in the wake of which false news is spread about the integrity of the electoral institutions (Letter AEED/GAB-SPR/GAB-PRES no. 2419/2023).

This is a brief report. DECIDED.

As I emphasized in the decision handed down on January 8, 2023, the despicable terrorist attacks on Democracy and Republican Institutions will be held accountable, as will the financiers, instigators and the former and current conniving and criminal public officials who continue in the illicit conduct of practicing anti-democratic acts. On January 8, 2023, as is widely known nationally and internationally, the violent escalation of criminal acts resulted in the invasion of the PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO, CONGRESSO NACIONAL and SUPREME FEDERAL COURT buildings, with the depredation of public property.

The role of the instigators of the acts, especially on social networks, is no less relevant, and it is clear that these media are an essential part of the criminal enterprise that resulted in the appalling acts witnessed on January 8, 2023, and the subsequent acts scheduled for the following days, which are the subject of decisions in these cases and in ADPF 519.

In this context, I have repeatedly emphasized that the Federal Constitution enshrines the binomial "FREEDOM and RESPONSIBILITY"; not irresponsibly allowing abuse in the exercise of a constitutionally enshrined right; not allowing the use of "freedom of expression" as a protective shield for the practice of hate speech, anti-democracy, threats, aggression, criminal offenses and all sorts of illegal activities.

Freedom of expression is not freedom for aggression!

Freedom of expression is not freedom to destroy democracy, institutions and the dignity and honor of others!

Freedom of expression is not freedom to propagate untruthful, aggressive, hateful speech and prejudiced!

INQ 4923 / DF

In view of the circumstances pointed out, it is essential to carry out investigations, including the exceptional removal of individual guarantees that cannot be used as a real protective shield for the practice of illegal activities, nor as an argument for removing or diminishing civil or criminal liability for criminal acts, under penalty of disrespecting a true Rule of Law (HC n° 70.814-5/SP, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, First Class, DJ of 24/6/1994).

Thus, as reported, the decision handed down on 8/1/2023 ordered the blocking of several profiles/channels owned by BRUNO AIUB MONTEIRO, known as "Monark", on the social networks Instagram (@monarkoficial), Rumble (<https://rumble.com/Monark>), Telegram (<https://t.me/monarktalks> and <https://t.me/monarkk>), Tik Tok (https://www.tiktok.com/@monarktalks_) Twitter (@monark) e Youtube (<https://www.youtube.com/@MonarkTalksCortesOficial>).

However, in a new channel created on the Rumble platform (<https://rumble.com/c/Monarkx>), which already has 287,000 followers, BRUNO MONTEIRO AIUB, as reported by AEED/TSE, once again spread fraudulent news about the actions of this SUPREME COURT and the SUPERIOR ELECTORAL COURT, in the following terms:

"Monark says: 'And it's not the guy who's going out there, fighting and putting up... because every time the Supreme Court makes a move like that, it spends political chips. That costs him. [...] So why is it (the Supreme Court) willing to pay this cost? Why is it willing to guarantee non-transparency in the elections? We see the TSE censoring people, we see Alexandre de Moraes arresting people, you see a lot of things happening, and at the same time they prevent the ballot boxes from being transparent? You get suspicious, what kind of shenanigans are going on in those ballot boxes?

INQ 4923 / DF

Why is that? Why doesn't our political system want to let the Brazilian people have more security? What is their interest? Manipulating the ballot box? Manipulating the elections? That's what I keep thinking..."

In addition, the AEED/TSE indicated the creation of several other profiles, in complete disregard of the decision previously handed down:

Twitter: <https://twitter.com/MonarkVoltou> (16,2 thousand followers)

Instagram: <https://www.instagram.com/monark.talks/> (101,000 followers)

Telegram: <https://t.me/monarktalks>

Discord: <https://discord.gg/8NKCauHf9>

Thus, it is necessary, appropriate and urgent to stop the possible spread of hate speech, subversion of order and encouragement to break institutional and democratic normality by blocking accounts on social networks, with the aim of stopping the injury or threat to the right (art. 5, XXXV, Federal Constitution), as previously pointed out.

In view of the above, I hereby DETERMINE that a letter be sent to DISCORD, META INC., RUMBLE, TELEGRAM and TWITTER, so that, at the earliest possible date, the following may be sent to them within 2 (two) hours, block the channels/profiles/accounts listed below, under penalty of a daily fine of R$ 100,000.00 (one hundred thousand reais), with the provision of their registration data to this SUPREME COURT and the full preservation of their content: [add all the links indicated:

DECISÃO

Em decisão proferida nestes autos em 8/1/2023, em razão da escalada violenta dos atos criminosos resultou na invasão dos prédios do PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO, do CONGRESSO NACIONAL do SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL, com depredação do patrimônio público, conforme amplamente noticiado pela imprensa nacional, determinei, entre outras medidas, a expedição de ofício às empresas Facebook, Tik Tok e Twitter, para que, no prazo de 2 (duas) horas, procedessem ao bloqueio dos canais/perfis/contas indicados, que instigaram e divulgaram os atos criminosos investigados, sob pena de multa diária de R$ 100.000,00 (cem mil reais), com o fornecimento de seus dados cadastrais a esta SUPREMA CORTE e a integral preservação de seu conteúdo.

A Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação do TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL informa que, mediante pesquisa em dados abertos de mídias sociais, detectou publicação realizada pelo influenciador e podcaster “Monark”, na plataforma digital Rumble, contendo entrevista com o Deputado Federal FILIPE BARROS (PL-PR), na esteira da qual são difundidas notícias falsas sobre a integridade das

instituições eleitorais (Ofício AEED/GAB-SPR/GAB-PRES nº 2419/2023).

É o breve relato. DECIDO.

Conforme ressaltei por ocasião da decisão proferida em 8/1/2023, os desprezíveis ataques terroristas à Democracia e às Instituições Republicanas serão responsabilizados, assim como os financiadores, instigadores e os anteriores e atuais agentes públicos coniventes e criminosos, que continuam na ilícita conduta da prática de atos antidemocráticos. Na data de 8/1/2023, como é de amplo conhecimento nacional e internacional, a escalada violenta dos atos criminosos resultou na invasão dos prédios do PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO, do CONGRESSO NACIONAL e do SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL, com depredação do patrimônio público.

O papel dos instigadores dos atos, especialmente nas redes sociais, não é circunstância de menor relevância, ficando claro que os referidos meios de comunicação são parte essencial da empreitada criminosa que resultou nos estarecedores atos testemunhados no dia 8/1/2023, e nos subsequentes atos programados para os dias seguintes, objeto de decisões nestes autos e na ADPF 519.

Nesse contexto, tenho reiteradamente enfatizado que a Constituição Federal consagra o binômio “LIBERDADE e RESPONSABILIDADE”; não permitindo de maneira irresponsável a efetivação de abuso no exercício de um direito constitucionalmente consagrado; não permitindo a utilização da “liberdade de expressão” como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e

preconceituosos!

Em face das circunstâncias apontadas, imprescindível a realização de diligências, inclusive com o afastamento excepcional de garantias individuais que não podem ser utilizadas como um verdadeiro escudo protetivo para a prática de atividades ilícitas, tampouco como argumento para afastamento ou diminuição da responsabilidade civil ou penal por atos criminosos, sob pena de desrespeito a um verdadeiro Estado de Direito (HC nº 70.814-5/SP, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, Primeira Turma, DJ de 24/6/1994).

Desse modo, conforme relatado, por meio da decisão proferida em 8/1/2023, foi determinado o bloqueio de diversos perfis/canais de titularidade de BRUNO AIUB MONTEIRO, conhecido como “Monark”, nas redes sociais Instagram (@monarkoficial), Rumble (<https://rumble.com/Monark>), Telegram (<https://t.me/monarktalks> e <https://t.me/monarkk>), Tik Tok (https://www.tiktok.com/@monarktalks_) Twitter (@monark) e Youtube (<https://www.youtube.com/@MonarkTalksCortesOficial>).

Entretanto, em novo canal criado na plataforma Rumble (<https://rumble.com/c/Monarkx>), que já conta com 287 mil seguidores, BRUNO MONTEIRO AIUB, conforme relatado pela AEED/TSE, voltou a divulgar notícias fraudulentas acerca da atuação desta SUPREMA CORTE e do TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL, nos seguintes termos:

INQ 4923 / DF

Por quê? Por que o nosso sistema político não quer deixar o povo brasileiro ter mais segurança? Qual é o interesse? Manipular as urnas? Manipular as eleições? É isso que eu fico pensando...’”

Além disso, a AEED/TSE indicou a criação de diversos outros perfis, em completo desrespeito à decisão anteriormente proferida:

Twitter: <https://twitter.com/MonarkVoltou> (16,2 mil seguidores)

Instagram: <https://www.instagram.com/monark.talks/> (101 mil seguidores)

Telegram: <https://t.me/monarktalks>

Discord: <https://discord.gg/8NKCauHf9>

Assim, se torna necessária, adequada e urgente a interrupção de eventual propagação dos discursos com conteúdo de ódio, subversão da ordem e incentivo à quebra da normalidade institucional e democrática mediante bloqueio de contas em redes sociais, com objetivo de interromper a lesão ou ameaça a direito (art. 5º, XXXV, Constituição Federal), conforme anteriormente ressaltado.

Diante do exposto, DETERMINO a expedição de ofício às empresas DISCORD, META INC., RUMBLE, TELEGRAM e TWITTER, para que, no prazo de 2 (duas) horas, procedam ao bloqueio dos canais/perfis/contas abaixo discriminados, sob pena de multa diária de R$ 100.000,00 (cem mil reais), com o fornecimento de seus dados cadastrais a esta SUPREMA CORTE e a integral preservação de seu conteúdo: [acrescentar todos os links indicados:

DECISÃO

Em decisão, datada de 2/6/2022, proferida nos autos do Inq. 4.781/DF, foi determinada, entre outras medidas, a expedição de ofício às empresas Twitter, Instagram, Facebook, Telegram, Youtube, Tik Tok para que procedessem ao bloqueio imediato dos perfis/canais do Partido da Causa Operária (PCO) em suas plataformas, com identificação do usuário criador do perfil (Twitter: @PCO29, Instagram: @pco.29, Facebook: @pco29, Telegram: https://t.me/pco_29, Youtube: <https://youtube.com/c/CausaOperaria> TV, Tik Tok: <https://www.tiktok.com/@pco.29>).

É o breve relato. DECIDO.

O art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022 visa a tutelar a higidez, a integridade e a credibilidade das Eleições e do processo eleitoral, de modo a coibir práticas que, por meio da divulgação de desinformações, representam substancial transgressão à própria democracia:

Art. 4º. A produção sistemática de desinformação, caracterizada pela publicação contumaz de informações falsas ou descontextualizadas sobre o processo eleitoral, autoriza a determinação de suspensão temporária de perfis, contas ou canais mantidos em mídias sociais, observados, quanto aos requisitos, prazos e consequências, o disposto no art. 2º.

Parágrafo único. A determinação a que se refere o caput compreenderá a suspensão de registro de novos perfis, contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, bem assim a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347 da Lei nº 4.737, de 15 de julho de 1965 -

PET 10391 / DF

Código Eleitoral.

Verifica-se, dessa forma, que a incidência do dispositivo mencionado destina-se, de forma restrita, a condutas abusivas que, longe de constituir legítima manifestação de direitos constitucionalmente garantidos, caracterizam comportamento imoral ou ilícito. Ou seja, "a desinformação – entendida como uma ação comunicativa fraudulenta, baseada na propagação de afirmações falsas ou descontextualizadas com objetivos destrutivos – conflita com valores básicos da normativa eleitoral, na medida em que impõe sérios obstáculos à liberdade de escolha dos eleitores e, adicionalmente, à tomada de decisões conscientes", comprometendo, "portanto, a normalidade do processo político, dada a intenção deliberada de suprimir a verdade, gerando desconfiança, com consequente perda da credibilidade e fe nas instituições da democracia representativa" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Voto. Min. ALEXANDRE DE MORAES, julgado em 25/10/2022).

A atuação da JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL, longe de representar indevida restrição ao exercício do mandato, tem a finalidade de fazer cessar manifestações revestidas de ilicitude não inseridas no âmbito da imunidade parlamentar, a qual, conforme tenho reiteradamente enfatizado, não pode ser utilizada "como verdadeiro escudo protetivo da prática de atividades ilícitas" (AP 1.044, Rel. Min. ALEXANDRE DE MORAES, Pleno, DJe de 23/6/2022).

De fato, não há, no ordenamento jurídico, direito absoluto à liberdade de expressão, ou seja, como bem enfatizou o Ministro EDSON FACHIN, "não há direito no abuso de direito" (ADPF 572, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, DJe de 7/5/2021), de modo que "não se pode utilizar um dos fundamentos da democracia, a liberdade de expressão, para atacá-la. O sistema imunológico da democracia não permite tal prática parasitária que deverá ser sempre coibida à luz da práticas concretas que visam atingir a integridade do processo eleitoral" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, julgado em 25/10/2022).

Nesse contexto, tenho reiteradamente enfatizado que a Constituição Federal consagra o binômio "LIBERDADE e RESPONSABILIDADE"; não permitindo de maneira irresponsável a efetivação de abuso no exercício

de um direito constitucionalmente consagrado; não permitindo a utilização da “liberdade de expressão” como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e preconceituosos!

A conduta do Partido da Causa Operária (PCO) caracterizou grave ferimento à ordem jurídica. No caso destes autos, em decisão datada de 11/1/2023, foi determinado o bloqueio dos seguintes perfis (Twitter: @PCO29, Instagram: @pco.29, Facebook: @pco29, Telegram: https://t.me/pco_29, Youtube: https://youtube.com/c/CausaOperaria TV, Tik Tok: <https://www.tiktok.com/@pco.29>), em razão de diversas publicações contendo ataques ao SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL e ao TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL:

“A ditadura do TSE sobre o aplicativo Telegram é mais um ataque à liberdade de expressão e uma tentativa de fraude às eleições. Após intervir ilegalmente no aplicativo, o tribunal envia mensagens a todos os usuários indicando que leiam o Estadão para ‘combater as fake news’.

“Um general no TSE é mais um indicativo da fraude eleitoral que a burguesia prepara para impedir o retorno de Lula ao governo. É preciso lutar contra o STF, os militares e todos os golpistas, por Lula presidente e um governo dos trabalhadores”

mesmo fraudar as eleições”.

No entanto, da análise individualizada da situação do partido político, depreende-se que houve a cessação de divulgação de conteúdos revestidos de ilicitude e tendentes a transgredir a integridade do processo eleitoral e a incentivar a realização de atos antidemocráticos pelo PCO, razão pela qual se mostra viável a reativação dos respectivos perfis, mantendo-se, porém, a remoção das postagens irregulares por ele veiculadas.

Diante do exposto, DETERMINO A EXPEDIÇÃO DE OFÍCIO ÀS EMPRESAS Twitter, Instagram, Facebook, Telegram, Youtube, Tik Tok para que procedam à reativação das contas do Partido da Causa Operária (PCO):

Twitter: @PCO29

Instagram: @pco.29

Facebook: @pco29

Telegram: https://t.me/pco_29

Youtube: <https://youtube.com/c/CausaOperariaTV>

Tik Tok: <https://www.tiktok.com/@pco.29>

DETERMINO, AINDA, A IMPOSIÇÃO DE MEDIDA CAUTELAR em face do Partido da Causa Operária (PCO), consistente na abstenção de publicação, promoção, replicação e compartilhamento das notícias fraudulentas (fake news) objeto da presente decisão, sob pena de MULTA DIÁRIA DE R$ 10.000,00 (dez mil reais) no caso de descumprimento.

Intimem-se os advogados constituídos.

DECISÃO

Trata-se de inquérito instaurado, a pedido da Procuradoria-Geral da República, em face do Deputado Federal Otoni Moura de Paulo Júnior, Marcos Antônio Pereira Gomes (Zé Trovão), Sérgio Bavini (cujo nome artístico é Sérgio Reis), Eduardo Oliveira Araújo, Wellington Macedo de Souza, Antônio Galvan, Alexandre Urbano Raitz Petersen, Turíbio Torres, Juliano da Silva Martins e Bruno Henrique Semczeszm, para apurar a convocação da população, por meio das redes sociais, a praticar atos criminosos e violentos de protesto, às vésperas do feriado de 7/9/2021, durante uma suposta manifestação e greve de caminhoneiros.

INQ 4879 / DF

É o relato. DECIDO.

O contexto fático apontado pela Procuradoria-Geral da República autorizou, inicialmente, a adoção de diversas medidas cautelares, frente à "necessidade da medida" (necessidade para aplicação da lei penal, para a investigação ou a instrução criminal e, nos casos expressamente previstos, para evitar a prática de infrações penais) e sua "adequação" (adequação da medida à gravidade do crime, circunstâncias do fato e condições pessoais do indiciado ou acusado).

Assim, em decisão de 16/8/2021, foram determinadas as seguintes medidas cautelares em face dos investigados acima nominados:

(a) A INSTAURAÇÃO de inquérito solicitada pela Procuradoria Geral da República, em face do Deputado Federal Otoni Moura de Paulo Júnior, Marcos Antônio Pereira Gomes (Zé Trovão), Sérgio Bavini (cujo nome artístico é Sérgio Reis), Eduardo Oliveira Araújo, Wellington Macedo de Souza, Antônio Galvan, Alexandre Urbano Raitz Petersen, Turíbio Torres, Juliano da Silva Martins e Bruno Henrique Semczeszm;

requeridos ou das pessoas que com eles aí estiverem, propiciando atuação célere e imediata, inclusive já no local em que se realiza a ação;

(c) A OITIVA PELA AUTORIDADE POLICIAL de todos os requeridos, imediatamente após a realização da busca e apreensão;

(d) A RESTRIÇÃO DOS INVESTIGADOS DE APROXIMAÇÃO DE 1 (UM) QUILÔMETRO DE RAIOS DA PRAÇA DOS TRES PODERES, DOS MINISTROS DO SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL E DOS SENADORES DA REPÚBLICA para evitar a prática de infrações penais e preservação da integridade física e psicológica dos Ministros, Senadores, servidores ali lotados, bem como do público em geral que diariamente frequenta e transita nas imediações. A presente restrição somente não se aplicará ao Deputado Federal Otoni Moura de Paulo Júnior, em razão da necessidade do exercício de suas atividades parlamentares;

(e) A EXPEDIÇÃO DE OFÍCIO ÀS EMPRESAS RESPONSÁVEIS POR REDES SOCIAIS (Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, Youtube) para que procedam ao bloqueio imediato dos perfis de titularidade dos requeridos, a serem indicados pela Procuradoria Geral da República e pela autoridade policial;

(f) A EXPEDIÇÃO DE OFÍCIO AO BANCO CENTRAL PARA O BLOQUEIO da chave PIX 7desetembro@portalbrasillivre.com, bem como da conta a qual a referida chave se encontra vinculada, nos termos requeridos pela Procuradoria Geral da República, com envio a esta CORTE, no prazo de 24 (vinte e quatro) horas, das informações pertinentes;

INQ 4879 / DF

No que diz respeito a MARCOS ANTÔNIO PEREIRA GOMES, por meio de decisão de 1º/9/2021, nos termos dos arts. 282, § 4º e 312, § 1º, ambos do Código de Processo Penal, o investigado teve a sua prisão preventiva decretada.

A prisão, no entanto, foi efetivada tão somente em 26/10/2021, pois, conforme amplamente noticiado, o investigado evadiu-se do território nacional, fato por ele admitido, firmando esconderijo no México, após transitar pelo Panamá, de onde continuou a publicar vídeos incentivando atos violentos de protesto e a ofender a instituição do SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL, revelando seu completo desprezo pelo Poder Judiciário.

Em 17/12/2021, converti a prisão preventiva do investigado em prisão domiciliar, posteriormente substituída pelas seguintes medidas cautelares:

(a) uso de tornozeleira eletrônica, nos termos do inciso IX do art. 319 do Código de Processo Penal;

(b) proibição de participação em redes sociais de sua titularidade, ou de quaisquer outras pessoas;

(c) proibição de conceder qualquer tipo de entrevista sem prévia autorização judicial;

(d) proibição de comunicação com quaisquer dos investigados neste inquérito.

As medidas cautelares impostas ao Deputado Federal OTONI DE PAULA e a MARCOS ANTÔNIO PEREIRA GOMES continuam em pleno vigor, não havendo qualquer decisão judicial que as tenha modificado ou revogado.

No entanto, há notícia de que ambos os investigados adotam comportamento que viola os termos das medidas cautelares impostas, mediante a criação e utilização de novos perfis nas redes sociais. Dessa forma, também devem ser adotadas medidas que restrinjam o comportamento recalcitrante dos investigados quanto ao ponto.

INQ 4879 / DF

Diante do exposto, DETERMINO a intimação das redes sociais FACEBOOK, TWITTER, TIK TOK, TELEGRAM e YOUTUBE para que procedam ao bloqueio dos canais/perfis/grupos abaixo discriminados, no prazo máximo de 24 (vinte e quatro horas), com o fornecimento de seus dados cadastrais a esta SUPREMA CORTE e a integral preservação de seu conteúdo:

DECISÃO

Trata-se de pedido formulado por BÁRBARA ZAMBALDI DESTEFANI (petição STF nº 23.783/2023), no qual requer a reativação de suas redes sociais.

Sustenta, em síntese, que “jamaís atuou em grupo ou em rede articulada de pessoas, disseminou notícias falsas ou desinformação, tampouco desferiu ataques às instituições”, ressaltando que, tendo sido encerradas as eleições em 30 de outubro de 2022, não persiste mais razão para a manutenção do bloqueio, e recorda a reativação perfis da Deputada Federal Carla Zambelli nas redes sociais.

É o breve relatório. DECIDO.

Verifica-se que, por meio de decisão proferida neste Inq. 4.923/DF, datada de 18/1/2023, acolhendo requerimento formulado pelo Presidente do Senado Federal, Senador RODRIGO PACHECO, foi autorizada a reativação das contas do Senador eleito ALAN RICK, cujo bloqueio foi imposto no mesmo ato decisório referente aos perfis de BÁRBARA ZAMBALDI DESTEFANI.

Ainda, na mencionada decisão, foi determinada a imposição de medida cautelar, consistente na abstenção de publicação, promoção, replicação e compartilhamento das notícias fraudulentas (fake news), sob pena de multa diária de R$ 10.000,00 (dez mil reais) no caso de descumprimento, a ser descontada diretamente dos vencimentos recebidos pelo Parlamentar.

De fato, a partir do exame do conteúdo do ato decisório, vê-se que os argumentos veiculados para a liberação das contas do Senador ALAN RICK se mostram inteiramente aplicáveis em relação a BÁRBARA ZAMBALDI DESTEFANI, em que pese não exercer atividade parlamentar.

Eis o teor da mencionada decisão:

O art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022 visa a tutelar a higidez, a integridade e a credibilidade das Eleições e do processo eleitoral, de modo a coibir práticas que, por meio da divulgação de desinformações, representam substancial transgressão à própria democracia:

Art. 4º. A produção sistemática de desinformação, caracterizada pela publicação contumaz de informações falsas ou descontextualizadas sobre o processo eleitoral, autoriza a determinação de suspensão temporária de perfis, contas ou canais mantidos em mídias sociais, observados, quanto aos requisitos, prazos e consequências, o disposto no art. 2º.

Parágrafo único. A determinação a que se refere o caput compreenderá a suspensão de registro de novos perfis, contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, bem assim a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347 da Lei nº 4.737, de 15 de julho de 1965 - Código Eleitoral.

Verifica-se, dessa forma, que a incidência do dispositivo mencionado destina-se, de forma restrita, a condutas abusivas que, longe de constituir legítima manifestação de direitos constitucionalmente garantidos, caracterizam comportamento imoral ou ilícito. Ou seja, "a desinformação – entendida como uma ação comunicativa fraudulenta, baseada na propagação de afirmações falsas ou descontextualizadas com objetivos destrutivos – conflita com valores básicos da normativa eleitoral, na medida em que impõe sérios obstáculos à liberdade de escolha dos eleitores e, adicionalmente, à tomada de decisões conscientes", comprometendo, "portanto, a normalidade do processo político, dada a intenção deliberada de suprimir a verdade, gerando desconfiância, com conseqüente perda da credibilidade e fé nas instituições da democracia representativa" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Voto. Min. ALEXANDRE DE MORAES, julgado em 25/10/2022).

A atuação da JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL, longe de representar indevida restrição ao exercício do mandato, tem a finalidade de fazer cessar manifestações revestidas de ilicitude não inseridas no âmbito da imunidade parlamentar, a qual, conforme tenho reiteradamente enfatizado, não pode ser utilizada "como verdadeiro escudo protetivo da prática de atividades ilícitas" (AP 1.044, Rel. Min. ALEXANDRE DE MORAES, Pleno, DJe de 23/6/2022).

De fato, não há, no ordenamento jurídico, direito absoluto à liberdade de expressão, ou seja, como bem enfatizou o Ministro EDSON FACHIN, "não há direito no abuso de direito" (ADPF 572, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, DJe de 7/5/2021), de modo que "não se pode utilizar um dos fundamentos da democracia, a liberdade de expressão, para atacá-la. O sistema imunológico da democracia não permite tal prática parasitária que deverá ser sempre coibida à luz da práticas concretas que visam atingir a integridade do processo eleitoral" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, julgado em 25/10/2022).

INQ 4923 / DF

“liberdade de expressão” como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e preconceituosos!

A conduta do parlamentar caracterizou grave ferimento à ordem jurídica. No caso destes autos, em decisão datada de 11/1/2023, foi determinado o bloqueio dos seguintes perfis:

Conforme se vê, embora o objeto da decisão sejam os perfis de Senador eleito, os fundamentos utilizados se revelam plenamente aplicáveis a BÁRBARA ZAMBALDI DESTEFANI, considerando, ainda, que, da análise individualizada da situação da requerente, depreende-se ter havido a cessação de divulgação de conteúdos revestidos de ilicitude e tendentes a transgredir a integridade do processo eleitoral e a incentivar a realização de atos antidemocráticos, sendo viável a reativação de seus perfis, mantendo-se, porém, a remoção das postagens irregulares por ela veiculadas.

Diante do exposto, DETERMINO A EXPEDIÇÃO DE OFÍCIO ÀS EMPRESAS FACEBOOK, INSTAGRAM, TIK TOK, TWITTER E YOUTUBE para que procedam à reativação das contas de BÁRBARA ZAMBALDI DESTEFANI, nos seguintes termos:

REPRESENTAÇÃO. ELEIÇÕES 2022. PRESIDENTE DA REPÚBLICA. PROPAGANDA IRREGULAR. INTERNET.

1. Representação ajuizada em desfavor do segundo colocado ao cargo de presidente da República nas Eleições 2022 por prática de propaganda irregular mediante publicações na rede social Twitter, em 16/10/2022, com conteúdo sabidamente inverídico, em prejuízo da candidatura da coligação representante, que veio a se sagrar vencedora do pleito majoritário.

PRELIMINAR. PERDA DE OBJETO. REJEIÇÃO.

2. A superveniência das eleições não implica prejudicialidade do pedido de remoção de conteúdo ilícito (Rp 0601373-42/DF, Rel. Min. Floriano de Azevedo Marques, sessão de 8/8/2023). Nos tempos atuais, as campanhas concentram-se notadamente na rede mundial de computadores, com registro perene das manifestações externadas pelos atores do processo eleitoral, protraindo-se assim a competência desta Justiça para adotar medidas acauteladoras ou reparatórias no âmbito da propaganda.

3. É cabível a multa do art. 57-D, § 2º, da Lei 9.504/97 na hipótese de abuso da liberdade de expressão na propaganda na internet, tal como nos casos de discurso de ódio, de ideias contrárias à ordem constitucional e ao Estado Democrático e de mensagens injuriosas, difamantes ou mentirosas (Rp 0601562-20/DF, Rel. Min. Alexandre de Moraes, DJE de 26/6/2023).

TEMA DE FUNDO. CONTEÚDO FALSO E ATENTATÓRIO À LISURA DO PROCESSO ELEITORAL. CONFIGURAÇÃO. VEDAÇÃO. ART. 57-D, CAPUT, DA LEI 9.504/97.

4. Consoante o art. 57-D, caput, da Lei 9.504/97, no curso das campanhas eleitorais a regra é a livre manifestação do pensamento, inclusive na rede mundial de computadores, excetuada a veiculação de conceitos, imagens ou afirmações caluniosas, difamatórias, injuriosas ou sabidamente inverídicas.

5. Na linha da remansosa jurisprudência desta Corte Superior, “[a]s limitações impostas à propaganda eleitoral não afetam os direitos constitucionais de livre manifestação do pensamento e de liberdade de informação” (AgR-AREspE 0600384-93/PR, Rel. Min. Carlos Horbach, DJE de 11/5/2022).

6. No caso, o candidato representado veiculou, em 16/10/2022, em sua página no Twitter, postagens nas quais afirmou que a principal candidatura adversária (a) defendia ser possível que “criança toque em homem pelado em museu e aprenda sexo nas escolas”, (b) pregava a “liberação do aborto até o 6º mês de gestação”, (c) tinha apoio do narcotráfico e (d) foi responsável pela morte de cinegrafista em conhecido e lamentável episódio.

7. Em todos os casos, as mensagens veiculadas ou são inverídicas ou estão fora de contexto, inclusive com anterior sancionamento por esta Corte em hipóteses similares.

8. No referendo da Rp 0601562-20/DF, Rel. Min. Alexandre de Moraes, sessão de 28/10/2022, com posterior julgamento de mérito no mesmo sentido, consignou-se que “a notícia veiculada [...] se descola da realidade, por meio de inverdades, ao afirmar que o candidato adversário, assim como o partido pelo qual filiado, seriam favoráveis à implantação [...] do aborto”. Quanto ao tema do narcotráfico: referendo na Rp 0601259-06/DF, Rel. Min. Cármen Lúcia, sessão de 20/10/2022.

9. A tentativa de associar a sexualização de crianças funda-se em matéria na qual uma das legendas integrantes da coligação representante repudiou os ataques de grupo de extrema direita a evento cultural cujo tema era diversidade sexual. Assim, a afirmação do representado de que “[s]ão eles que defendem que criança toque em homem pelado em museu” alterou por completo o sentido original do que veiculado.

10. No que se refere à trágica morte de cinegrafista, tem-se mais uma vez imputação desprovida de substrato concreto.

MULTA. DOSIMETRIA. CASO CONCRETO.

11. A violação ao art. 57-D, caput, da Lei 9.504/97 enseja multa de R$ 5.000,00 a R$ 30.000,00, nos termos do respectivo § 2º.

12. Na espécie, cabe fixar a multa em R$ 20.000,00, haja vista: (a) a afirmação de quatro fatos inverídicos acerca de temas extremamente sensíveis (violência, aborto, drogas e sexo); (b) o alcance das postagens, a principal delas com 40.000 mil “curtidas” e quase 12 mil replicações; (c) à época, faltavam pouco mais de 15 dias para o segundo turno das eleições.

CONCLUSÃO. PARCIAL PROCEDÊNCIA.

13. Representação cujos pedidos se julgam procedentes em parte para aplicar ao representado multa no valor de R$ 20.000,00 e determinar a imediata remoção do conteúdo impugnado.

Acordam os ministros do Tribunal Superior Eleitoral, por maioria, em rejeitar a preliminar de perda de objeto e, no mérito, julgar procedentes em parte os pedidos na Representação para aplicar ao representado Jair Messias Bolsonaro multa pecuniária no valor de R$ 20.000,00 e, ainda, determinar ao Twitter a imediata remoção dos conteúdos indicados nos links contidos à folha 20 da petição inicial (ID 158.300.556), sob pena de multa diária de R$ 5.000,00, nos termos do voto do relator, vencido parcialmente o Ministro Nunes Marques, que arbitrava a multa no patamar mínimo legal.

Brasília, 9 de novembro de 2023.

MINISTRO BENEDITO GONÇALVES – RELATOR

RELATÓRIO

O SENHOR MINISTRO BENEDITO GONÇALVES: Senhor Presidente, trata-se de Representação ajuizada pela Coligação Brasil da Esperança em desfavor de Jair Messias Bolsonaro, segundo colocado na disputa do cargo de presidente da República nas Eleições 2022, por prática propaganda irregular consubstanciada em publicações diversas, com conteúdo inverídico, veiculadas no dia 16/10/2022, na rede social Twitter, em prejuízo do candidato adversário Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva, vencedor do pleito majoritário.

Na inicial (ID 158.300.556), apontou-se, em suma:

a) “[...] o representado, dolosamente, descontextualizou nota oficial da Secretaria Nacional LGBT do PT, publicada no site oficial do Partido dos Trabalhadores, repudiando atos de violência, a fim de fazer transparecer que o [então] candidato o Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva defende a lunática pauta de que ‘criança toque em homem pelado em museu e aprenda sexo nas escolas’” (fl. 6);

b) o representado sustentou também que o então candidato Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva promove ataques à religião, apoia o narcotráfico, incentiva o uso de drogas, realiza rituais satânicos e, se eleito, iria liberar a prática abortiva;

c) publicou-se, ainda, conteúdo associando o então candidato Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva ao assassinato de um cinegrafista e à “[...] ordem de assassinato do [então] presidente Jair Bolsonaro” (fl. 12);

d) todas as inverdades foram veiculadas com o objetivo de macular a imagem do opositor e angariar votos, o que contraria o disposto nos arts. 9º-A e 27 da Res.-TSE 23.610/2019. Assim, faz-se necessário determinar a remoção definitiva das publicações, a abstenção de novas práticas e a fixação de multa, na forma da lei de regência.

O representado Jair Messias Bolsonaro apresentou defesa, na qual aduziu, em síntese (ID 159.054.323):

a) o pedido de remoção do conteúdo encontra-se prejudicado, haja vista a superveniência das eleições. Ademais, a pretensão sancionatória deduzida na Representação não comporta acolhimento, pois a multa do art. 57-D, § 2º, da Lei 9.507/97 se aplica apenas aos casos de anonimato, o que não é a hipótese dos autos. Assim, impõe-se reconhecer perda de objeto da demanda;

b) as matérias veiculadas, “[...] apesar de polêmicas e de dividirem opiniões entre o eleitorado, foram apoiadas diretamente pelo governo petista. Ou seja, as acusações de que se trataria de estratégia de desinformação não subsistem, uma vez que a conduta constituiu no mero compartilhamento de notícias, sem manipulações ou recortes, com críticas às pautas defendidas pelo partido opositor” (fl. 12);

c) “[...] as críticas não foram dirigidas a Lula pelo Representado diretamente! Diferentemente, foram apresentadas diversas notícias que demonstram algumas pautas que foram apoiadas pelo partido da coligação representante, em recente passado. Trata-se, a todo sentir, portanto, de crítica política em sua acepção mais pura” (fl. 12);

d) “[...] não se trata de fato sabidamente inverídico, de inverdade chapada e aferível de plano, o que reforça a inexistência de desinformação no caso” (fl. 12);

e) “não havendo veiculação de notícias inverídicas, mas apenas críticas às plataformas progressistas características do partido da coligação representante (das quais eventualmente se arrependa ou se envergonhe), não há que se falar em interferência desta Especializada, que sempre deverá prestigiar o livre debate de ideias [...]” (Fl. 15).

A d. Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral opinou pela extinção do processo sem resolução do mérito (ID 158.687.705).

O feito foi a mim redistribuído em 10/1/2023, tendo em vista o encerramento da atuação dos juízes auxiliares da propaganda.

É o relatório.

VOTO

O SENHOR MINISTRO BENEDITO GONÇALVES (relator): Senhor Presidente, conforme se relatou, a hipótese cuida de Representação ajuizada em desfavor do segundo colocado ao cargo de presidente da República nas Eleições 2022 por prática de propaganda irregular mediante publicações na rede social Twitter, em 16/10/2022, com conteúdo sabidamente inverídico, em prejuízo do candidato da coligação representante, que veio a se sagrar vencedor do pleito majoritário.

Aprecio, ponto a ponto, as alegações formuladas pelas partes.

1. Perda de Objeto da Representação

O candidato representado aduz a perda de objeto da Representação considerando as duas sanções pleiteadas na petição inicial, quais sejam, a remoção do conteúdo impugnado (diante do término do período eleitoral) e a incidência de multa pecuniária (sob o argumento de ausência de previsão legal).

A preliminar, contudo, não merece prosperar.

Em recentíssimo julgado, esta Corte Superior assentou que a superveniência das eleições não implica prejudicialidade do pedido de remoção de conteúdos tidos como ilícitos.

Com efeito, nos tempos atuais, em que as campanhas se desenvolvem massivamente por intermédio da rede mundial de computadores, com registro duradouro das manifestações externadas pelos atores do processo eleitoral, tem-se que a competência desta Justiça Especializada se protraí no contexto da adoção de medidas acauteladoras ou reparatórias no âmbito da propaganda. Confira-se:

[trecho do voto do Relator] Inicialmente, assinalo que não é possível a extinção do feito sem resolução do mérito em relação ao pedido de remoção de conteúdo. Uma vez o fato tido por ilícito tendo lugar durante o

período eleitoral e em sede da rinha eleitoral, a competência da Justiça Eleitoral se protraí para providências acauteladoras ou reparadoras mesmo após a realização do pleito, não havendo propriamente relação de prejudicialidade.

Segue daí que, ao meu sentir, prossegue cabível e conveniente a adoção de providências supressivas de conteúdo considerado afrontante às regras eleitorais, mesmo já tendo se esgotado o período das eleições. Isso não apenas por uma razão de compreensão pessoal sobre os efeitos da competência da Justiça Eleitoral, mas também e especialmente pela percepção de que hodiernamente o fenômeno eleitoral tende a assumir uma temporalidade contínua, o que justifica o amoldamento do exercício da competência deste Tribunal às circunstâncias contemporâneas.

Neste sentido, inclusive, parece caminhar a orientação mais recente desta Corte Superior, na linha de que não fica prejudicado pedido deste jaez em razão do mero transcurso das eleições.

Cito, a esse propósito, o R-RP 0601325-83, de relatoria do Min. Carlos Horbach, julgado em 5.5.2023, no qual esta Corte Superior, por maioria, referendou a decisão que determinara a remoção do conteúdo ilícito e aplicou multa com fundamento no art. 57-D da Lei 9.504/97.

No mesmo sentido, indico o R-Rp 0601754-50, julgado em 28.3.2023, e o R-Rp 0601756-20, julgado em 18.4.2023, ambos da relatoria do Min. Alexandre de Moraes, nos quais este Tribunal decidiu, também por maioria, que é possível a aplicação da multa prevista no art. 57-D da Lei 9.504/97 nas representações por propaganda eleitoral irregular divulgada na internet mediante veiculação de informação inverídica e persiste o interesse jurídico na determinação de remoção definitiva de conteúdo, independentemente da superveniência das eleições.

Assim, não há falar em perda do objeto da representação em virtude da realização das eleições.

De outra parte, saliente-se que, nos termos do art. 57-D da Lei 9.504/97, “é livre a manifestação do pensamento, vedado o anonimato durante a campanha eleitoral, por meio da rede mundial de computadores – internet, assegurado o direito de resposta, nos termos das alíneas a, b e c do inciso IV do § 3º do art. 58 e do 58-A, e por outros meios de comunicação interpessoal mediante mensagem eletrônica”, cuja afronta enseja a consequência prevista no § 2º, qual seja, “multa no valor de R$ 5.000,00 (cinco mil reais) a R$ 30.000,00 (trinta mil reais)”.

O Tribunal Superior Eleitoral, em recente interpretação acerca desses dispositivos, assentou ser cabível aplicar-se a multa prevista no art. 57-D, § 2º, da Lei 9.504/97 na hipótese de abuso na liberdade de expressão ocorrido por meio de propaganda veiculada na internet – como ocorre na divulgação de discurso de ódio, ideias contrárias à ordem constitucional e ao Estado Democrático, e de informações injuriosas, difamantes ou mentirosas –, independentemente de anonimato. Veja-se:

ELEIÇÕES 2022. RECURSO INOMINADO. REPRESENTAÇÃO. PROPAGANDA ELEITORAL IRREGULAR. INTERNET. DESINFORMAÇÃO. FATOS MANIFESTAMENTE INVERÍDICOS. REMOÇÃO DAS PUBLICAÇÕES. APLICAÇÃO DA MULTA PREVISTA NO ART. 57-D DA LEI 9.504/1997. POSSIBILIDADE. ART. 16 DA CONSTITUIÇÃO FEDERAL. NÃO INCIDÊNCIA. MULTA. VALOR. PROPORCIONALIDADE. DESPROVIMENTO.

1. O art. 57-D da Lei 9.504/1997 não restringe, de forma expressa, qualquer interpretação no sentido de limitar sua incidência aos casos de anonimato, de forma que é possível ajustar a exegese à sua finalidade de preservar a higidez das informações divulgadas na propaganda eleitoral, ou seja, alcançando a tutela de manifestações abusivas por meio da internet – incluindo-se a disseminação de fake news tendentes a vulnerar a honra de candidato adversário – que, longe de se inserirem na livre manifestação de pensamento, constituem evidente transgressão à normalidade do processo eleitoral. Precedentes.

(Rp 0601562-20/DF, Rel. Min. Alexandre de Moraes, DJE de 26/6/2023) (sem destaque no original)

Por conseguinte, rejeito a preliminar arguida.

2. Tema de Fundo: Postagens Impugnadas

Reafirme-se que, consoante o art. 57-D, caput e §§ 2º e 3º, da Lei 9.504/97, no curso das campanhas eleitorais a regra é a livre manifestação do pensamento, inclusive no âmbito da rede mundial de computadores, ressalvada a utilização de conceitos, imagens ou afirmações caluniosas, difamatórias, injuriosas ou sabidamente inverídicas, sob pena de multa de R$ 5.000,00 a R$ 30.000,00 e de remoção do conteúdo ilícito. Confira-se:

Art. 57-D. É livre a manifestação do pensamento, vedado o anonimato durante a campanha eleitoral, por meio da rede mundial de computadores – internet, assegurado o direito de resposta, nos termos das alíneas a, b e c do inciso IV do § 3º do art. 58 e do 58-A, e por outros meios de comunicação interpessoal mediante mensagem eletrônica.

§ 2º A violação do disposto neste artigo sujeitará o responsável pela divulgação da propaganda e, quando comprovado seu prévio conhecimento, o beneficiário à multa no valor de R$ 5.000,00 (cinco mil reais) a R$ 30.000,00 (trinta mil reais).

§ 3º Sem prejuízo das sanções civis e criminais aplicáveis ao responsável, a Justiça Eleitoral poderá determinar, por solicitação do ofendido, a retirada de publicações que contenham agressões ou ataques a candidatos em sítios da internet, inclusive redes sociais.

Ademais, na linha da remansosa jurisprudência desta Corte Superior, “[a]s limitações impostas à propaganda eleitoral não afetam os direitos constitucionais de livre manifestação do pensamento e de liberdade de informação” (AgR-AREspE 0600384-93/PR, Rel. Min. Carlos Horbach, DJE de 11/5/2022).

No caso em análise, é incontroverso que o candidato representado veiculou, no dia 16/10/2022, em sua página oficial do Twitter (@jairbolsonaro), inúmeras postagens em detrimento da candidatura adversária ao cargo de presidente da República nas Eleições 2022.

A síntese do teor dessas manifestações pode obtida, em especial, a partir da seguinte postagem (ID 158.300.558):

Como se vê, o representado afirmou que seu principal adversário político (aí inserida a legenda à qual este filiado): (a) defendia a possibilidade de que “criança toque em homem pelado em museu e aprenda sexo nas escolas”; (b) pregava “liberação do aborto até o 6º mês de gestação”; (c) tem apoio do narcotráfico; (d) foi responsável pela morte de cinegrafista em conhecido e lamentável episódio de violência.

Em todos esses casos, as mensagens veiculadas ou são inverídicas ou estão fora de contexto e, quanto a duas delas, já houve inclusive sancionamento por esta Corte Superior em hipóteses extremamente similares.

No que tange à temática do aborto, confira-se o que decidido pelo Tribunal Superior Eleitoral no referendo de liminar (posteriormente confirmada pela procedência do pedido em desfavor do representado):

ELEIÇÕES 2022. REPRESENTAÇÃO. PROPAGANDA ELEITORAL. FATO SABIDAMENTE INVERÍDICO. CARACTERIZAÇÃO. LIMINAR. DEFERIMENTO.

1. A liberdade de expressão não permite a propagação de discursos de ódio e ideias contrárias à ordem constitucional e ao Estado de Direito (STF, Pleno, AP 1044, Rel. Min. ALEXANDRE DE MORAES), inclusive pelos pré-candidatos, candidatos e seus apoiadores antes e durante o período de propaganda eleitoral, uma vez que a liberdade do eleitor depende da tranquilidade e da confiança nas instituições democráticas e no processo eleitoral (TSE – RO-EI 0603975-98, Rel. Min. LUIS FELIPE SALOMÃO, DJe de 10/12/2021).

3. No caso, a notícia veiculada, em 16/10/2022, se descola da realidade, por meio de inverdades, ao afirmar que o candidato adversário, assim como o partido pelo qual filiado, seriam favoráveis à implantação de banheiro unissex nas escolas, bem como do aborto e da liberação das drogas. Trata-se da veiculação de informação inverídica tendente a desinformar a população acerca de temas sensíveis, que exigem ampla discussão, e sobre a qual, pretende conquistar o eleitorado contrário a matérias tão polêmicas, em evidente prejuízo de seu adversário, inclusive com a checagem realizada demonstrando a falsidade das informações.

Quanto ao tema do narcotráfico, além de inexistir qualquer elemento que comprove a veracidade dessa afirmação, verifica-se que esta Corte analisou controvérsia similar de suposto envolvimento do adversário do representado, assentando mais uma vez se tratar de informação inverídica. Veja-se:

(Referendo na Rp 0601259-06/DF, Rel. Min. Cármen Lúcia, publicado em sessão em 20/10/2022) (sem destaque no original)

De outra parte, a tentativa de associar adversário à sexualização de crianças é embasada, na publicação impugnada nos presentes autos, em matéria que se veiculou no site do Partido dos Trabalhadores (PT) com o seguinte título: “[s]ecretaria LGBT do PT repudia cancelamento da mostra Queermuseu”, na qual se externou repúdio a atos violentos orquestrados por grupo de extrema direita em detrimento de exposição ocorrida no Santander Cultural acerca da diversidade sexual e expressão de gênero.

Assim, é notório que a afirmação do representado de que “[s]ão eles que defendem que criança toque em homem pelado em museu” altera por completo o sentido original da matéria visando criar desinformação.

Por fim, no que se refere à trágica morte de cinegrafista, tem-se, mais uma vez, que a imputação externada pelo representado contra seus opositores políticos revela-se desprovida de substrato concreto e tem como intuito levar o eleitorado a erro.

Desse modo, configurou-se a propaganda eleitoral irregular, em afronta ao art. 57-D, caput, da Lei 9.504/97.

3. Dosimetria da Multa

Tal como se frisou, a multa decorrente da violação ao art. 57-D, caput, da Lei 9.504/97 varia de R$ 5.000,00 a R$ 30.000,00, nos termos do respectivo § 2º.

No caso dos autos, impõe-se fixar a multa no patamar de R$ 20.000,00, considerando as seguintes nuances do caso concreto:

(a) a quantidade de notícias inverídicas em favor de seus adversários políticos, afirmando-se quatro fatos distintos, em relação a questões extremamente sensíveis (aborto, drogas, sexo e violência), cujo teor não encontra qualquer amparo na realidade;

(b) o alcance das postagens, com destaque especial àquela referida na fundamentação, que obteve 40.000 mil “curtidas” e foi objeto de quase 12 mil replicações (retweets);

(c) a circunstância de faltar, à época, pouco mais de 15 dias para o segundo turno das eleições presidenciais.

Assim, a despeito de incabível, no caso específico, aplicar o montante máximo pretendido na inicial, constata-se, por outro lado, a presença de elementos que excedem a simples violação da norma de regência.

4. Conclusão

Ante o exposto, julgo procedentes em parte os pedidos na Representação para aplicar ao representado Jair Messias Bolsonaro multa pecuniária no valor de R$ 20.000,00 e, ainda, determinar ao Twitter a imediata remoção dos conteúdos indicados nos links contidos à folha 20 da petição inicial (ID 158.300.556), sob pena de multa diária de R$ 5.000,00.

Comunique-se à rede social Twitter.

É como voto.

VOTO

O SENHOR MINISTRO NUNES MARQUES: Senhor Presidente, tratando-se de propaganda relativa às eleições para o cargo de Presidente da República, reputo que o número de visualizações da postagem impugnada – 40 mil, segundo consta do voto –, não traduz, por si só, gravidade suficiente para legitimar o arbitramento da sanção próxima ao grau máximo.

Considero, ademais, que os autos não dispõem de elementos de prova capazes de demonstrar que o fato de a mídia ter sido publicada a 15 dias do segundo turno tenha impactado significativamente a disputa.

Desse modo, divirjo parcialmente, para arbitrar a multa no patamar mínimo legal.

TRIBUNAL REGIONAL ELEITORAL DE RONDÔNIA

REPRESENTAÇÃO (11541) - Processo nº 0601765-67.2022.6.22.0000 - Porto Velho - RONDÔNIA

[Propaganda Política - Propaganda Eleitoral - Redes Sociais]

RELATOR: ACIR TEIXEIRA GRECIA

REPRESENTANTE: PROCURADORIA REGIONAL ELEITORAL DE RONDÔNIA

REPRESENTADO: VALCLEI QUEIROZ DA SILVA, AGIR POR RONDÔNIA 36-AGIR / 90-PROS

DECISÃO

Vistos.

Trata-se de representação eleitoral, com pedido de tutela de urgência, ofertada pela PROCURADORIA REGIONAL ELEITORAL em face de VALCLEI QUEIROZ DA SILVA – “ELEIÇÃO 2022 VALCLEI QUEIROZ DA SILVA GOVERNADOR” –, e Coligação “AGIR POR RONDÔNIA” (36-AGIR / 90-PROS), com o intuito de obter “medida de busca e apreensão de material de campanha dos representados, cumulada com ordem de abstenção de realização de propaganda eleitoral, inclusive nas redes sociais, e de demais atos de campanha”, nos quais o primeiro representado se apresente como candidato a Governador nas Eleições 2022 (id. 7986024).

Assevera o órgão ministerial que, nos autos do RRC n. 0600924-72.2022.6.22.0000, este Regional indeferiu o pedido de registro de candidatura do representado ao cargo de Governador, bem como o da respectiva chapa majoritária, consoante o inteiro teor do Acórdão n. 284/2022, de 9/9/2022, cujo trânsito em julgado ocorreu em 12/9/2022 (id. 7986025, pág. 12/18). Em decorrência, consta que contra esse julgado, em 13/9/2022, houve a propositura de recurso ordinário, todavia, o relator não conheceu da peça recursal porquanto manifestamente intempestiva, em decisão que foi posteriormente referendada pelo Plenário do TRE/RO (id. 7986025, pág. 19/23). Para além disso, em 21/9/2022, em decisão oriunda do colendo TSE – Tutela Cautelar Antecedente n. 0601141-30.2022.6.00.0000 –, foi indeferido o pedido de tutela de urgência formulado pelos representados, com vistas a garantir a permanência do pretense candidato ao Governo do Estado em campanha, sob o fundamento de que o trânsito em julgado do acórdão regional afasta a aplicação do permissivo contido no art. 16-A da Lei n. 9.504/1997 (id. 7986025, pág. 24/28).

Contudo, alega a representante que, ainda que não ostente mais a condição de candidato, uma vez extinta sua condição de “sub judice” com trânsito em julgado do indeferimento de seu pedido de registro, o representado “permanece realizando propaganda eleitoral, inclusive participando de debates de TV, distribuindo de material de propaganda eleitoral e outros atos típicos de campanha” (id. 7986025, pág. 2/11), circunstância com aptidão para confundir e levar o eleitorado ao erro, notadamente, no que toca à propaganda compartilhada em rede social.

Desse modo, pugna pela “imediata cessação da prática de atos de campanha, bem ainda a retirada de toda a propaganda eleitoral existente, incluindo-se a propaganda impressa e aquela veiculada na internet”.

É o relatório. Decido o pedido de tutela de urgência.

A teor do art. 300 do Código de Processo Civil e da jurisprudência do colendo TSE, a tutela provisória de urgência será concedida caso o magistrado, ainda que em juízo sumário, verifique a plausibilidade da pretensão (probabilidade de êxito), aliada à comprovação do risco de dano irreparável que, em uma análise objetiva, revele-se concreto e real.

No caso em análise, examinada a questão à luz dos elementos de prova constantes dos autos, em juízo de cognição sumária, entendo presentes os requisitos para sustentar a liminar postulada.

A Procuradoria Regional Eleitoral, em síntese, aduz que os representados estariam proibidos de realizar propaganda eleitoral e demais atos de campanha para promover a candidatura de Valclei Queiroz da Silva ao cargo de governador nas eleições 2022. Isso porque:

- i) o pedido de registro de candidatura do representado e da respectiva chapa majoritária, foram indeferidos em 9/9/2022 – RRC n. 0600924-72.2022.6.22.0000, Acórdão n. 284/2022 (id. 7986025, pág. 12/17);
- ii) o acórdão transitou em julgado em 12/9/2022 (id. 7986025, pág. 18);
- iii) o recurso contra o indeferimento do registro não foi conhecido pelo relator, pois manejado apenas em 13/9/2022, fora do prazo legal; decisão posteriormente referendada na Corte Regional (id. 7986025, pág. 19/23); e
- iv) em 21/9/2022, na Tutela Cautelar Antecedente n. 0601141-30.2022.6.00.0000 proposta perante o TSE, o pedido de tutela de urgência formulado pelos representados, com vistas a garantir a permanência do pretense candidato ao Governo do Estado em campanha, foi indeferido ao fundamento de que o trânsito em julgado do acórdão regional afasta a aplicação do permissivo contido no art. 16-

A da Lei n. 9.504/1997 (id. 7986025, pág. 24/28).

Com efeito, em se tratando de candidatura “sub judice”, não há vedação à prática de atos relativos à campanha eleitoral, à luz da norma contida no art. 16-A da Lei n. 9.504/1997, conforme se vê:

Art. 16-A. O candidato cujo registro esteja sub judice poderá efetuar todos os atos relativos à campanha eleitoral, inclusive utilizar o horário eleitoral gratuito no rádio e na televisão e ter seu nome mantido na urna eletrônica enquanto estiver sob essa condição, ficando a validade dos votos a ele atribuídos condicionada ao deferimento de seu registro por instância superior . (Incluído pela Lei n. 12.034, de 2009).

Todavia, quanto à condição “sub judice”, o § 1º do art. 51 da Resolução TSE n. 23.609/2019 é categórico ao dispor que, com o trânsito em julgado da decisão, aquele que teve o registro indeferido não ostenta mais “status” de candidato, “in verbis”:

§ 1º Cessa a situação sub judice:

I – com o trânsito em julgado; ou

II – independentemente do julgamento de eventuais embargos de declaração, a partir da decisão colegiada do Tribunal Superior Eleitoral, salvo se obtida decisão que:

- a) afaste ou suspenda a inelegibilidade (LC n. 64/1990, arts. 26-A e 26-C);
- b) anule ou suspenda o ato ou decisão do qual derivou a causa de inelegibilidade;

c) conceda efeito suspensivo ao recurso interposto no processo de registro de candidatura.

Nesse cenário, assiste razão ao órgão ministerial, posto que, com o trânsito em julgado da decisão de indeferimento do registro neste Regional, bem ainda, com a negativa de efeito suspensivo ao recurso interposto no âmbito do TSE, o representado não ostenta mais a condição de candidato.

Assim, de rigor a cessação de todo e qualquer ato de propaganda eleitoral pelo representado, dada a proximidade do primeiro turno, de modo a preservar a normalidade e legitimidade das eleições, haja vista que essa circunstância tem aptidão para confundir e levar o eleitorado ao erro, sobretudo quando se trata de propaganda compartilhada em rede social, mostra-se necessária a concessão da medida de urgência, ainda que com algum ajuste.

Nesse ponto, com referência ao pedido para “retirada imediata de toda e qualquer propaganda”, deduzido no item 1.3.1 da exordial, tenho por bem indeferi-lo, considerando que até a data do trânsito em julgado do acórdão que indeferiu o registro de candidatura do representado (12/9/2022) e, mais especificamente da negativa de efeito suspensivo ao recurso interposto no âmbito do TSE (21/9/2022), um incontável número de adesivos, botons e outros materiais físicos de campanha foram produzidos e, a toda evidência, uma considerável parcela desse material foi distribuído a cabos eleitorais e cidadãos, não se mostrando razoável impor aos representados o ônus de recolher o material lícitamente partilhado.

1.1 a imediata exclusão das publicações nas quais o representado se apresenta como candidato a governador e/ou com menção ao número pelo qual pretendia concorrer (36), cujas plataformas e “links” que seguem relacionados (id. 7987846):

1.6 Após o cumprimento da medida liminar:

1.6.1 Promova-se a citação dos representados para, querendo, apresentar defesa no prazo de 2 (dois) dias (Resolução TSE n. 23.608/2019, art. 18);

1.6.2 O envio desta decisão à ASEPA para conhecimento e eventual instrução dos processos de prestação de contas das agremiações e do candidato;

1.7 Providencie-se o necessário ao cumprimento desta decisão, com a ressalva de que as diligências devem ser realizadas com a maior brevidade possível, durante o dia (inciso XI do art. 5º da Constituição Federal), com execução simultânea nos endereços indigitados (item 1.2), utilizando-se de servidores e veículos descaracterizados, com o máximo de discrição possível. Fica autorizado o uso de força policial com aparato caracterizado, somente se houver resistência no cumprimento da ordem.

1.8 Após, redistribua-se ao relator originário, observando-se a certidão de id. 7986157.

Visando dar maior celeridade ao feito, servirá cópia da presente decisão como MANDADO.

Cumpra-se.

DECISÃO

Vistos.

Trata-se de representação por propaganda irregular com pedido liminar (ID 18328314) apresentada pelo MINISTÉRIO PÚBLICO ELEITORAL em face de FACEBOOK SERVIÇOS ONLINE DO BRASIL LTDA, BYTEDANCE BRASIL TECNOLOGIA LTDA e TWITTER BRASIL REDE DE INFORMAÇÃO LTDA.

Segundo a mensagem impugnada, a igreja católica de São José de Quatro Marcos-MT teria sido fechada pela Justiça Eleitoral com a finalidade de proibir as pessoas de fazerem uma vigília de oração pelo Brasil, vez que o ato favoreceria a corrente ideológica de direita, o que indicaria perseguição religiosa.

De acordo com a inicial, a desinformação foi veiculada nas redes sociais "Tiktok", "Twitter" e "Whatsapp".

Afirma estarem presentes os pressupostos necessários para a concessão da tutela de urgência, requerendo, liminarmente, a remoção do conteúdo publicado nos endereços <https://twitter.com/leonard26742724/status/1578187333731434496> e https://www.tiktok.com/@raquelduarteana/video/7152598623920901381?is_from_webapp=v1&item_id=7152598623920901381.

Requer ainda a intimação das representadas para que impeçam compartilhamentos ou republicações do conteúdo, bem como para informar quem são os titulares das contas responsáveis pela publicação, possibilitando sua qualificação, assim como os endereços de "internet protocol" (IP) utilizados para acesso à conta e publicação do conteúdo objeto dos autos.

Ao fim, solicitam que, uma vez identificados os usuários, que seja determinado que se abstenham de publicar novas “fake news”, com a imposição de retratação nos mesmos canais, sob pena de multa diária a ser cominada pelo juízo.

É o relato.

Decido.

Como relatado, o Ministério Público Eleitoral requer a concessão de tutela de urgência para impedir a divulgação de propaganda irregular nas redes sociais geridas pelas Representadas.

Passo então à análise dos requisitos autorizadores da tutela.

É cediço que a tutela de urgência será concedida quando demonstrados os elementos que evidenciem a probabilidade do direito e o perigo de dano ou o risco ao resultado útil do processo, conforme art. 300 do CPC.

No caso em tela, verifico a presença dos requisitos autorizadores da tutela. Vejamos o que diz a Res. TSE 23.610/2019:

Art.9º-A. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos, devendo o juízo eleitoral, a requerimento do Ministério Público, determinar a cessação do ilícito, sem prejuízo da apuração de responsabilidade penal, abuso de poder e uso indevido dos meios de comunicação.(Incluído pela Resolução nº 23.671/2021).

E, conforme consulta realizada nesta data, a Justiça Eleitoral já desmentiu a referida mensagem, conforme se constata facilmente no link: <https://www.justicaeleitoral.jus.br/fato-ou-boato/chechagens/e-mentira-que-igreja-catolica-em-quatro-marcos-mt-tenha-sido-fechada-pela-justica-eleitoral>.

Por sua vez, o perigo de dano é evidente, na medida em que a continuidade da disseminação de tal mensagem pode trazer riscos irreparáveis à integridade do processo eleitoral, considerando-se, para tanto, o 2º turno que se avizinha e a quantidade expressiva de interações nas publicações hostilizadas¹.

Assim sendo, com esteio no art. 300 do Código de Processo Civil, DEFIRO A LIMINAR pretendida e determino a intimação das empresas Representadas para que:

l) removam, no prazo de 24 horas, os conteúdos publicados nos endereços <https://twitter.com/leonard26742724/status/1578187333731434496> e https://www.tiktok.com/@raquelduarteana/video/7152598623920901381?is_from_webapp=v1&item_id=7152598623920901381 e impeçam compartilhamentos ou republicações do conteúdo, sob pena de multa diária de R$ 30.000,00 (trinta mil reais);

II) informem ao Juízo os dados disponíveis relacionados aos titulares das contas dos responsáveis pela publicação, contribuindo, assim, para as suas respectivas qualificações;

III) forneçam os endereços de "internet protocol" (IP) utilizados para acesso às contas e publicações dos conteúdos objeto dos autos.

Publique-se. Intime-se. Cumpra-se.

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601823-82.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES
REQUERENTE: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de manifestação pública em forma de live, baseada em afirmações falsas que atingem a integridade e normalidade do processo eleitoral.

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Além disso, é evidente que a manifestação pública detectada (link) tem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que incentiva comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Veja-se, nessa linha, que a postagem reportada exhibe suposta fala do General Humberto Madeira, com advertência de que, se houver “fraude”, o vencedor das eleições “não leva”. O interlocutor, Coronel Koury, comenta sobre tais falas, aventando a possibilidade de recusa dos resultados das urnas e, conseqüentemente, de violência generalizada, caso haja “insegurança” sobre a correção dos resultados.

Apura-se do vídeo, na sequência, afirmação de que a garantia de segurança legítima só existiria com a aprovação do voto impresso, e de que, além do segmento militar, outros segmentos sociais que não aceitariam um resultado sem comprovação de idoneidade. Deixa assim a sugestão de que as eleições orientadas pelo método eletrônico de votação não seriam legítimas e que, conseqüentemente, os seus resultados devem ser recebidos com desconfiança pela população.

Convém assinalar, em acréscimo, a significativa repercussão do material ilícito, que, consoante informações prestadas pela AEED/TSE, no curso período de 8 (oito) horas obteve mais de 301.000 (trezentos e uma mil visualizações, 40.000 (quarenta mil) curtidas, 4.100 (quatro mil e cem) comentários e 15.000 (quinze mil) compartilhamentos.

Trata-se de conduta ilegal de natureza grave, com grande potencial para tumultuar as eleições em andamento, e que portanto autoriza o exercício do poder administrativo para evitar ou fazer cessar ilícitos, conferido às autoridades eleitorais pelos arts. 249 do Código Eleitoral, 41 da Lei 9.504/1997, e 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022.

Ante o exposto, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código, DETERMINO às plataformas Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Youtube e Telegram, a imediata suspensão dos canais, grupos e perfis oficiais do Coronel Koury (Grupo B38) listados nas URLs abaixo, por um período de 72 (setenta e duas) horas, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$100.000,00 (cem mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da primeira hora após o recebimento da notificação.

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação (AEED), acerca de manifestações públicas realizadas pela Deputada Federal Carla Zambelli que atingem a integridade e a normalidade do processo eleitoral, incentivando, com base em falsas acusações de fraude, a recusa dos resultados e intervenção militar.

A título exemplificativo, colacionam-se algumas das publicações destacadas pela AEED, das quais se depreendem as manifestações anti-democráticas:

Do vídeo imediatamente acima, foram extraídas as seguintes declarações da parlamentar: "A gente sabe que o sentimento da maioria da população é de angústia, de tristeza e até mesmo de raiva. [...] O resultado dessa eleição não reflete o que representa Jair Bolsonaro para a maioria de nós. [...] Não reflete sequer o sentimento da maioria da população. Mas, nesse momento, quero pedir a vocês que a gente tenha serenidade. Que a gente tenha força, tenha coragem, mas que tenha serenidade, para aguardar o pronunciamento do nosso Presidente e apoiá-lo sobre todas as coisas. Quando eu disse durante a campanha 'lealdade acima de tudo, lealdade ao Brasil e lealdade ao Presidente', é disso que a gente trata. [...]"

As publicação em questão, extraídas do Twitter, vêm sendo replicadas em todas as plataformas sociais da deputada e, em paralelo, constituem espaço para comentários que explicitamente clamam pela ruptura democrática, conforme se percebe das seguintes capturas:

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, "caput" e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, o incentivo público à intervenção militar, com a consequente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

É evidente que as publicações possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que discursos pró-ruptura incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Convém assinalar, em acréscimo, a significativa repercussão do material ilícito, que já conta com milhares de interações em cada uma das plataformas, com potencial para reunir um número ainda maior de pessoas no decorrer dos dias que seguem.

Trata-se de condutas ilegais de natureza grave, com grande potencial para tumultuar as eleições em andamento e que, como se sabe, terminam somente com o ato da diplomação. Fica assim autorizado o exercício do poder administrativo para fazer cessar ilícitos, conferido às autoridades eleitorais pelos arts. 249 do Código Eleitoral, 41 da Lei 9.504/1997, e 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022.

Ante o exposto, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249, 286 e 296 do Código, de ordem, DETERMINO ao Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Youtube, Telegram, TikTok, Gettr, Whatsapp e LinkedIn a imediata remoção dos perfis abaixo listados, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da primeira hora após o recebimento da notificação.

TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601843-73.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES

INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de pedido formulado por CARLA ZAMBELLI SALGADO, no qual pretende, em suma, a reconsideração das decisões que determinaram a remoção de seu perfis das redes sociais Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Youtube, Telegram, TikTok, Gettr, Whatsapp e LinkedIn. Pretende ainda o acesso integral dos presentes autos (ID 158345136).

Ato contínuo, a Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação informa a divulgação de novos conteúdos irregulares, razão porque sugere a identificação "dos perfis que realizaram as publicações, com o objetivo de identificar se a autora não está criando perfis em desacordo com a decisão proferida pela Justiça, bem como para investigar possíveis ligações com líderes e financiadores dos atos antidemocráticos e envio ao Supremo Tribunal Federal para apreciação" (ID 158462170).

É o breve relato. Decido.

O art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022 visa tutelar a higidez, a integridade e a credibilidade das Eleições e do processo eleitoral, de modo a coibir práticas que, por meio da divulgação desinformações, representam substancial transgressão à própria democracia:

Art. 4º. A produção sistemática de desinformação, caracterizada pela publicação contumaz de informações falsas ou descontextualizadas sobre o processo eleitoral, autoriza a determinação de suspensão temporária de perfis, contas ou canais mantidos em mídias sociais, observados, quanto aos requisitos, prazos e consequências, o disposto no art. 2º.

Parágrafo único. A determinação a que se refere o caput compreenderá a suspensão de registro de novos perfis, contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, bem assim a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347 da Lei nº 4.737, de 15 de julho de 1965 - Código Eleitoral.

Dessa forma a incidência do dispositivo mencionado destina-se, de forma restrita, a condutas abusivas que, longe de constituir legítima manifestação de direitos constitucionalmente garantidos, caracterizam comportamento imoral ou ilícito.

Ou seja, "a desinformação - entendida como uma ação comunicativa fraudulenta, baseada na propagação de afirmações falsas ou descontextualizadas com objetivos destrutivos - conflita com valores básicos da normativa eleitoral, na medida em que impõe sérios obstáculos à liberdade de escolha dos eleitores e, adicionalmente, à tomada de decisões conscientes", comprometendo, "portanto, a normalidade do processo político, dada a intenção deliberada de suprimir a verdade, gerando desconfiança, com consequente perda da credibilidade e fê nas instituições da democracia representativa" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Voto. Min. ALEXANDRE DE MORAES, julgado em 25/10/2022).

A atuação desta JUSTIÇA ESPECIALIZADA tem a finalidade de fazer cessar manifestações revestidas de ilicitude não inseridas no âmbito da imunidade parlamentar, a qual, conforme tenho reiteradamente enfatizada, não pode ser utilizada "como verdadeiro escudo protetivo da prática de atividades ilícitas" (AP 1.044, Rel. Min. ALEXANDRE DE MORAES, Pleno, DJe de 23/6/2022).

A requerente pretende a reativação de suas contas nas redes sociais e, logo em seguida, fez vídeo com nítido interesse na ruptura do Estado Democrático de Direito, ao pleitear que os generais de quatro estrelas tomem medidas para fazer valer a incidência do art. 142 da Constituição Federal, sob o argumento de que o processo eleitoral foi fraudado.

Vê-se, assim, que, mesmo sem as redes sociais, a requerente insiste em incentivar atos antidemocráticos em apologia ao crime contra à Democracia e utiliza-se, ainda, de seguidores para disseminar informação falsa.

Por essa razão, não há como ser deferida a pretensão de reativação das redes sociais da requerente porque a finalidade dela é de desestabilizar as instituições e pugnar por ato criminoso, atitude que passa ao largo do direito que invoca de utilização das referidas redes para comunicação com seus eleitores.

Diante disso, as Plataformas Digitais devem, na hipótese, informar os dados cadastrais dos perfis abaixo indicados, bem como suspender os respectivos perfis, impedir o registro de novas contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, assim como a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347, do Código Eleitoral:

Por outro lado, a recalitrância da Deputada no fomento à apologia ao crime com manifestação de fraude ao processo eleitoral e, por via de consequência, de rompimento da ordem constitucional e do Estado de Direito importam na pronúncia do Ministério Público Eleitoral acerca dos crimes praticados e, em especial, para adoção das providências cabíveis.

Além disso, a fim de garantir a lisura, a normalidade e a legitimidade do processo eleitoral, fixo multa diária no valor de R$ 20.000,00 no caso de reincidência na publicação de mensagens atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito que será cumprida mediante desconto em seus vencimentos como parlamentar.

Ante o exposto, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º e 4º, parágrafo único, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, DETERMINO:

a) às Plataformas Digitais, o envio de dados da(s) pessoa(s) responsável(eis) pelo registro das contas listadas, num prazo máximo de 24 (vinte e quatro) horas; e a imediata remoção dos perfis relacionados, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação;

b) o ENCAMINHAMENTO dos autos ao Ministério Público Eleitoral para se manifestar sobre os crimes cometidos, bem como adotar as providências cabíveis;

c) a extração de cópia dos autos para posterior remessa ao Inquérito 4.781 instaurado perante o SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL;

d) o ESTABELECIMENTO de multa no valor de R$ 20.000,00 a Deputada Federal CARLA ZAMBELLI SALGADO, no caso de reincidência na publicação de mensagens atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito, a serem descontados de forma compulsória dos rendimentos da Parlamentar perante a Câmara dos Deputados;

e) o INDEFERIMENTO de reativação das redes sociais da requerente; e

f) a REMOÇÃO do sigilo do processo, o que oportuniza, portanto, o acesso dos autos à Requerente que deve ainda, ser incluída como parte nos autos.

Intimem-se os envolvidos. Cumpra-se.

DECISÃO

Em consonância com os pareceres emitidos pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, e tendo em consideração o correspondente contexto, DEFIRO os requerimentos de liberação dos perfis @kalliloliveira_ (URL: https://twitter.com/kalliloliveira_) – ID 158531668 – e @TelesCombate (URL: <https://twitter.com/telescombate>) – ID 158493476 – na plataforma Twitter, e DETERMINO, ademais, o levantamento de eventuais limitações no alcance da visibilidade porventura decorrentes da suspensão judicial.

INDEFIRO, no entanto, o pedido de restabelecimento das publicações que ensejaram a decisão original de remoção, uma vez que a replicação de manifestações de caráter golpista sem sinais inequívocos de reprovação expressa termina por cumprir, independentemente da intenção não declarada de submetê-las a uma exposição negativa, o papel pragmático de amplificação indevida de uma narrativa de desinformação.

Ao teor do exposto, DETERMINO o restabelecimento das contas assinaladas.

Cumpra-se com urgência.

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de reprodução de manifestação pública que atinge a integridade e a normalidade do processo eleitoral, incentivando, com base em falsas acusações de fraude, a recusa dos resultados do pleito presidencial de 2022.

O vídeo em questão foi produzido pela deputada federal Carla Zambelli e veiculado nas plataformas Twitter e Tiktok. Embora a deputada esteja com suas contas oficiais suspensas em várias plataformas, em decorrência de decisões judiciais anteriores, ela continua veiculando seus conteúdos por meio de contas de terceiros. No vídeo, a deputada volta a afirmar que houve fraude nas eleições por meio da adulteração do “software” da urna eletrônica e ainda sugere um golpe militar por meio das Forças Armadas.

A mensagem ilícita foi reproduzida, dentre outros, nos perfis abaixo listados:

Ademais, foi identificado também que o perfil @Brazilwasstolenoficial (URL: <https://www.tiktok.com/@brazilwasstolenoficial?t=8XEqGOnbl9q&r=1>) na plataforma Tiktok é dedicado exclusivamente a divulgar conteúdos alegando falsamente a existência de fraude nas eleições brasileiras.

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

É evidente que a manifestação pública detectada possui potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que, implicitamente, incentiva comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Apenas em caráter exemplificativo, seguem abaixo algumas imagens por meio das quais se pode aferir que o vídeo em questão está sendo replicado em contas de terceiros:

O descumprimento de quaisquer das determinações acima acarretará a imposição de pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

Cumpra-se com urgência.

Após, ENCAMINHEM-SE cópia eletrônica dos autos à Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral para que promova as medidas cabíveis, sobretudo eventual análise de abuso de poder em relação à candidata eleita Carla Zambelli.

Art. 41-A. Ressalvado o disposto no art. 26 e seus incisos, constitui captação de sufrágio, vedada por esta Lei, o candidato doar, oferecer, prometer, ou entregar, ao eleitor, com o fim de obter-lhe o voto, bem ou vantagem pessoal de qualquer natureza, inclusive emprego ou função pública, desde o registro da candidatura até o dia da eleição, inclusive, sob pena de multa de mil a cinqüenta mil Ufir, e cassação do registro ou do diploma, observado o procedimento previsto no art. 22 da Lei Complementar nº 64, de 18 de maio de 1990.

§ 2º As sanções previstas no caput aplicam-se contra quem praticar atos de violência ou grave ameaça a pessoa, com o fim de obter-lhe o voto. (Incluído pela Lei nº 12.034, de 2009)

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 301. Usar de violência ou grave ameaça para coagir alguém a votar, ou não votar, em determinado candidato ou partido, ainda que os fins visados não sejam conseguidos:

Pena – reclusão até quatro anos e pagamento de 5 a 15 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

A divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

O incentivo ao uso da condição patronal para exercer pressão eleitoral sobre os empregados, por outro lado, constitui forma ilegal de captação de sufrágio, categoricamente vedada pelos arts. 41-A, da Lei das Eleições, e 301, do Código Eleitoral.

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação (AEED), acerca de manifestações públicas realizadas pelo perfil Tom Riplay.2 (@TomRiplay07) que atingem a integridade e a normalidade do processo eleitoral, incentivando, com base em falsas acusações de fraude, a recusa dos resultados e intervenção militar.

A AEED destacou as seguintes publicações, a título exemplificativo, das quais se depreendem as desinformações e manifestações antidemocráticas:

No vídeo acima, o manifestante afirma "Temos uma excelente notícia. Dentro dos quartéis os altos comandos querem e já é cogitado a intervenção. A única coisa que ainda está sendo trabalhada é a questão internacional. Como que a visão internacional vai olhar para o Brasil após essa intervenção militar. Então, senhores, está vindo. Isso eu posso garantir aos senhores. Só que tem um detalhe, igual o capitão falou, precisa do povo na rua. A ordem é: vamos organizar. [...]".

No vídeo acima, são feitas as seguintes afirmações em espanhol: Nossas eleições foram fraudadas e Alexandre de Moraes, que se encontra no STF, ajudou Lula a roubar a vitória. Não aceitamos um ladrão como nosso presidente.

No vídeo acima, o manifestante faz as seguintes declarações: "Pessoal do Paraná que me conhece, Cabo Correia, sabe que não estamos de brincadeira. O papinho de levantar a bandeira como se fosse jogo da seleção brasileira acabou. O limite do povo brasileiro acabou. Os Ministros do STF, eu mando recado e falo mesmo, o vagabundo do Moraes, o babaca do Barroso, aquela corja todinha de vagabundo, não tenho medo de falar, são tudo pilantra safado, colocado lá pelo PT para acabar com a nossa nação. Nós vamos morrer pela pátria, nós vamos levar o V da vitória, porque o Brasil jamais terá uma bandeira com qualquer mancha vermelha causada pelo comunismo. Brasil acima de tudo, Deus acima de todos”.

A AEED ressaltou, ainda, que o perfil realizou mais de cinquenta publicações de incentivo às manifestações antidemocráticas em curso no país apenas na manhã do dia 4/11/2022 e é seguido por 17.300 pessoas.

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, o incentivo público à intervenção militar, com a consequente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

É evidente que as publicações possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que discursos pró-ruptura incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Convém assinalar, em acréscimo, a significativa repercussão do material ilícito, na medida em que o perfil é seguido por milhares de pessoas e os conteúdos são postados com intensidade.

A PRF deu a dica: a paralisação pode continuar às margens da rodovia. Faz sentido, pois os caminhoneiros não precisam bloquear estradas, basta cruzarem os braços e terem o apoio da população.

PRF // INFORMA

A PRF RJ informa que foi exarada decisão da Justiça Federal do Rio de Janeiro que concede liminar determinando a liberação das rodovias federais interditadas por pessoas e veículos, sendo obrigatório o imediato cumprimento por parte dos manifestantes.

A decisão prevê multa pecuniária diária no valor de R$ 5.000,00 por pessoa física participante e de R$ 100.000,00 por pessoa jurídica que lidere ou preste apoio ao movimento.

Informamos também que é assegurado o direito de manifestação, mesmo às margens da rodovia, desde que não cause prejuízo à segurança viária e ao direito de circulação dos demais usuários da rodovia.

Conforme informação das AEED, no vídeo abaixo, o ex-Deputado Federal, Daniel Silveira, aduz que os eleitores gastariam cerca de 10 segundos para serem habilitados pelos mesários e votar em todos os cinco cargos em disputa. O argumento é utilizado para sugerir aos interlocutores que o curto tempo levado pelo eleitorado na votação seria um indicativo de fraude no sistema eleitoral. A alegação já foi desmentida pelo TSE na página Fato ou Boato: <https://www.justicaeleitoral.jus.br/fato-ou-boato/chechagens/ex-deputado-federal-propagandimentas-sobre-tempo-de-votacao-e-inquerito-da-pf-sobre-urnas-e-leitro-ni-cas/#>

Já o post a seguir sustenta que o General Paulo Sérgio Nogueira afirma que "houve fraude no primeiro turno das eleições" e que Jair Bolsonaro "resolveu apostar no segundo turno achando que ia conseguir conter o sistema". Contudo, o vídeo é falso, uma vez que não é o ministro que aparece nas imagens, conforme verificado por agências de checagem parceiras do TSE:

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, que detectou, nesta data, a replicação de vídeos de uma live sensacionalista, realizada na data de 4 de novembro nas plataformas Twitch e Youtube, com a apresentação de acusações vagas e sem provas, que atingem a integridade e a normalidade do processo eleitoral, incentivando, com base em falsas afirmações de fraude, a recusa dos resultados e, eventualmente, uma ruptura institucional.

A live em questão distorce dados relacionados ao funcionamento das urnas eletrônicas e, conforme matéria publicada pelo jornal O Estado de São Paulo, baseia-se em um “dossiê apócrifo [...] repleto de informações falsas” [Link para o Estadão].

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Além disso, é evidente que as manifestações públicas detectadas possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Ao contrário das acusações plasmadas na transmissão em tela, as urnas eletrônicas são confiáveis e seguras, tal como confirmado, reiteradamente, por inúmeros testes públicos e

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601877-48.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES
REQUERENTE: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, que detectou, nesta data, a replicação e a repercussão de uma live sensacionalista com a apresentação de acusações vagas e sem provas, que atingem a integridade e a normalidade do processo eleitoral, incentivando, com base em falsas afirmações de fraude, a recusa dos resultados e, eventualmente, uma ruptura institucional.

A live em questão distorce dados relacionados ao funcionamento das urnas eletrônicas e, conforme matéria publicada pelo jornal O Estado de São Paulo, baseia-se em um “dossiê apócrifo [...] repleto de informações falsas” [Link para o Estadão].

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

SIGILOSO

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, o incentivo público à intervenção militar, com a consequente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

Além disso, é evidente que as manifestações públicas detectadas possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Ao contrário das acusações plasmadas na transmissão em tela, as urnas eletrônicas são confiáveis e seguras, tal como confirmado, reiteradamente, por inúmeros testes públicos e procedimentos de auditoria:

TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601881-85.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES

INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de perfil nas redes sociais, orientado para a divulgação de desinformação contra as eleições e apologia à intervenção militar, em detrimento da vontade popular registrada nas Eleições 2022.

Por meio da decisão de ID 158349295, determinei a suspensão, entre outros casos, dos perfis identificáveis de Marisa Lobo e Fernando Cerimedo, nos seguintes termos:

Ante o exposto, de ordem, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO à plataforma Twitter a imediata remoção dos perfis relacionados, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

Por outro lado, nos autos da Petciv 0601911-23.2022.6.00.0000, já foram liberados os perfis dos Deputados Federais Major Vítor Hugo e Coronel Tadeu, igualmente objeto do presente procedimento.

É o breve relato. Decido.

O art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022 tutela a higidez, a integridade e a credibilidade das Eleições e do processo eleitoral, de modo a coibir práticas que, por meio da divulgação desinformações, representam substancial transgressão à própria Democracia:

Art. 4º. A produção sistemática de desinformação, caracterizada pela publicação contumaz de informações falsas ou descontextualizadas sobre o processo eleitoral, autoriza a determinação de suspensão temporária de perfis, contas ou canais mantidos em mídias sociais, observados, quanto aos requisitos, prazos e consequências, o disposto no art. 2º.

Parágrafo único. A determinação a que se refere o caput compreenderá a suspensão de registro de novos perfis, contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, bem assim a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347 da Lei nº 4.737, de 15 de julho de 1965 - Código Eleitoral.

Verifica-se, dessa forma, que a incidência do dispositivo mencionado destina-se, de forma restrita, a condutas abusivas que, longe de constituir legítima manifestação de direitos constitucionalmente garantidos, caracterizam comportamento imoral ou ilícito, uma vez que, "a desinformação - entendida como uma ação comunicativa fraudulenta, baseada na propagação de afirmações falsas ou descontextualizadas com objetivos destrutivos - conflita com valores básicos da normativa eleitoral, na medida em que impõe sérios obstáculos à liberdade de escolha dos eleitores e, adicionalmente, à tomada de decisões conscientes", comprometendo, "portanto, a normalidade do processo político, dada a intenção deliberada de suprimir a verdade, gerando desconfiança, com conseqüente perda da credibilidade e fé nas instituições da democracia representativa" (Voto que proferi na ADI 7.261-MC, julgado em 25/10/2022).

De fato, não há, no ordenamento jurídico, direito absoluto à liberdade de expressão, ou seja, como bem enfatizou o Ministro EDSON FACHIN, "não há direito no abuso de direito" (ADPF 572, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, DJe de 7/5/2021), de modo que "não se pode utilizar um dos fundamentos da democracia, a liberdade de expressão, para atacá-la. O sistema imunológico da democracia não permite tal prática parasitária que deverá ser sempre coibida à luz da práticas concretas que visam atingir a integridade do processo eleitoral" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, julgado em 25/10/2022).

Nesse contexto, tenho reiteradamente enfatizado que a Constituição Federal consagra o binômio "LIBERDADE e RESPONSABILIDADE"; não permitindo - como ocorrido nas presentes hipóteses - de maneira irresponsável a efetivação de abuso no exercício de um direito constitucionalmente consagrado; não permitindo a utilização da "liberdade de expressão" como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e preconceituosos!

Considerado que houve a cessação de divulgação de conteúdos revestidos de ilicitude e tendentes a transgredir a integridade do processo eleitoral, a fim de possibilitar que os envolvidos possam retornar a utilizar suas redes sociais dentro do mais absoluto respeito à Constituição Federal e a Legislação, com observância do já citado binômio LIBERDADE – RESPONSABILIDADE, DETERMINO:

i) a reativação da conta dos perfis Marisa Lobo e Fernando Cerimedo na Plataforma Digital TWITTER, mantendo-se, porém a remoção das postagens irregulares veiculadas, considerando idêntica medida já adotada nos autos da Petciv 0601911-23.2022.6.00.0000, com relação aos Deputados Federais Major Vitor Hugo e Coronel Tadeu; e

ii) a aplicação de MULTA DIÁRIA, no valor de R$ 20.000,00 (vinte mil reais), a incidir na hipótese de reiteração de divulgação dos conteúdos bloqueados ou de publicação de outras mensagens instigadoras ou incentivadoras de golpe militar, atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito.

Por fim, iii) comunique-se a Plataforma Digital Twitter para cumprimento imediato da presente decisão; e iv) diante da pertinência temática ao Inquérito 4.879, encaminhem-se os autos ao SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL.

Intime-se. Publique-se.

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601889-62.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES

INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de manifestações públicas realizadas por grandes influenciadores digitais que atingem a integridade e a normalidade do processo eleitoral, incentivando, direta ou indiretamente, com base em afirmações falsas, a recusa dos resultados e a perpetuidade de movimentos antidemocráticos que buscam uma ruptura institucional.

As manifestações em questão foram realizadas na plataforma Twitter, como se vê:

Como venho falando, o TSE NÃO CUMPRE os padrões de governança internacionalmente aceitos como COBIT e ITIL. Portanto NADA do que é feito ali seria JAMAIS aceito pelos EUA ou UE.

Se o sistema brasileiro fosse para uma eleição nos EUA, ou seria REJEITADO ou seria PRESO o dono.

REQUISITOS	AVALI- AÇÃO	PRINCIPAIS REFERÊNCIAS
1.12 Conformidade do TSE na Governança de TI	NC	A atuação da presente Auditoria Especial confirmou o alinhamento da gestão de TI às diretrizes do Tribunal e à preocupação de não gerar prejuízos à imagem da instituição. Contudo, se apurou descumprimento da governança de TI com relação à análise transparente das denúncias e riscos apontados pela sociedade e reiteradas auditorias. Em lugar de aprofundar avaliações abertas e apresentar resultados de forma transparente, a governança de TI se mostrou voltada à proteção da própria estrutura e não de um claro e aberto aprofundamento conjunto das investigações (Item 3.7, p. 35)
1.13 Governança de TI no licenciamento do sistema operacional da Urna	NC	Não se constatou que o TSE cumpra os termos do licenciamento do sistema operacional utilizado na Urna Eletrônica (Item 3.8, p. 37)
1.14 Governança do TSE quanto aos sistemas aplicativos	NC	Não se constatou que o TSE cumpra os termos do licenciamento do sistema operacional utilizado na Urna Eletrônica (Item 3.8, p. 37)
1.15 Governança do TSE sobre criptografia e assinatura digital	NC	O TSE aceita no sistema eleitoral a existência de código e serviços de autenticação providos pelo CEPESC, constituindo em ponto crítico de falha e eventual procedimento indevido que pode influenciar quase todas as rotinas do sistema eleitoral, além de haver subordinação do CEPESC a órgão comando por parte possivelmente interessada na eleição, contrariando princípios de governança. Apurou-se que código-fonte do CEPESC não seguiu os trâmites previstos na lacração de software. (Item 3.10, p. 46)

Pelo que eu entendi até agora, a alegação é a seguinte:

1) Existem 6 modelos diferentes de máquinas, mas só 1 deles, o modelo de 2020, é auditado.

2) Os logs e demais dados da eleição exibem uma diferença de comportamento gritante no voto de acordo com o modelo da urna eletrônica.

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, o incentivo público à ruptura institucional, com a consequente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

processo eleitoral, na medida em que incentivam ou conferem subsídios argumentativos para comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Trata-se de condutas ilegais de natureza grave, com grande potencial para tumultuar as eleições em andamento e que, como se sabe, terminam somente com o ato de diplomação. Fica assim autorizado o exercício do poder administrativo para fazer cessar ilícitos, conferido às autoridades eleitorais pelos arts. 249 do Código Eleitoral, 41 da Lei 9.504/1997, e 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022.

Ante o exposto, de ordem, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO à plataforma Twitter a imediata remoção dos perfis relacionados, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

Cumpra-se com urgência.

Após, ENCAMINHEM-SE cópia eletrônica dos autos à Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral para que promova as medidas cabíveis.

Brasília, 7 de novembro de 2022.

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601889-62.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERALRELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES*INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL*DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de manifestações públicas realizadas por grandes influenciadores digitais que atingem a integridade e a normalidade do processo eleitoral, incentivando, direta ou indiretamente, com base em afirmações falsas, a recusa dos resultados e a perpetuidade de movimentos antidemocráticos que buscam uma ruptura institucional.

Por meio das decisões IDs 158353339 e 158548103, determinei, entre outros casos, a suspensão dos perfis identificáveis de Alexandre Kunz, Flávio Beall, Lucelia, Cris Acangeli, Adrilles Jorge, Gilberto Silva, José Medeiros, ClaudioPitanga.

É o breve relato. Decido.

O art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022 tutela a higidez, a integridade e a credibilidade das Eleições e do processo eleitoral, de modo a coibir práticas que, por meio da divulgação desinformações, representam substancial transgressão à própria Democracia:

Art. 4º. A produção sistemática de desinformação, caracterizada pela publicação contumaz de informações falsas ou descontextualizadas sobre o processo eleitoral, autoriza a determinação de suspensão temporária de perfis, contas ou canais mantidos em mídias sociais, observados, quanto aos requisitos, prazos e consequências, o disposto no art. 2º.

Parágrafo único. A determinação a que se refere o caput compreenderá a suspensão de registro de novos perfis, contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, bem assim a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347 da Lei nº 4.737, de 15 de julho de 1965 - Código Eleitoral.

SIGILOSO

Verifica-se, dessa forma, que a incidência do dispositivo mencionado destina-se, de forma restrita, a condutas abusivas que, longe de constituir legítima manifestação de direitos constitucionalmente garantidos, caracterizam comportamento imoral ou ilícito, uma vez que, "a desinformação - entendida como uma ação comunicativa fraudulenta, baseada na propagação de afirmações falsas ou descontextualizadas com objetivos destrutivos - conflita com valores básicos da normativa eleitoral, na medida em que impõe sérios obstáculos à liberdade de escolha dos eleitores e, adicionalmente, à tomada de decisões conscientes", comprometendo, "portanto, a normalidade do processo político, dada a intenção deliberada de suprimir a verdade, gerando desconfiança, com conseqüente perda da credibilidade e fé nas instituições da democracia representativa" (Voto que proferi na ADI 7.261-MC, julgado em 25/10/2022).

De fato, não há, no ordenamento jurídico, direito absoluto à liberdade de expressão, ou seja, como bem enfatizou o Ministro EDSON FACHIN, "não há direito no abuso de direito" (ADPF 572, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, DJe de 7/5/2021), de modo que "não se pode utilizar um dos fundamentos da democracia, a liberdade de expressão, para atacá-la. O sistema imunológico da democracia não permite tal prática parasitária que deverá ser sempre coibida à luz da práticas concretas que visam atingir a integridade do processo eleitoral" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, julgado em 25/10/2022).

Nesse contexto, tenho reiteradamente enfatizado que a Constituição Federal consagra o binômio "LIBERDADE e RESPONSABILIDADE"; não permitindo - como ocorrido nas presentes hipóteses - de maneira irresponsável a efetivação de abuso no exercício de um direito constitucionalmente consagrado; não permitindo a utilização da "liberdade de expressão" como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e preconceituosos!

Considerado que houve a cessação de divulgação de conteúdos revestidos de ilicitude e tendentes a transgredir a integridade do processo eleitoral, a fim de possibilitar que os envolvidos possam retornar a utilizar suas redes sociais dentro do mais absoluto respeito à Constituição Federal e a Legislação, com observância do já citado binômio LIBERDADE – RESPONSABILIDADE, DETERMINO:

i) a reativação da conta dos perfis de Alexandre Kunz, Flávio Beall, Lucelia, Cris Acangeli, Adrilles Jorge, Gilberto Silva, José Medeiros, ClaudioPitanga da plataforma Twitter, mantendo-se, porém a remoção das postagens irregulares veiculadas; e

ii) a aplicação de MULTA DIÁRIA, no valor de R$ 20.000,00 (vinte mil reais), a incidir na hipótese de reiteração de divulgação dos conteúdos bloqueados ou de publicação de outras mensagens instigadoras ou incentivadoras de golpe militar, atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito.

Comuniquem-se as Plataformas para cumprimento imediato da presente decisão.

Por fim, considerando ultimado o processo político-eleitoral, bem como a pertinência temática ao Inquérito 4.879, ENCAMINHE-SE os autos ao SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL.

Intime-se. Publique-se.

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, que detectou, nesta data, convocação para uma nova live (a terceira) protagonizada por Fernando Cerimedo, que se apresenta como “especialista” e que, com base em uma série de afirmações falsas, apresentou, no decorrer da semana, uma “auditoria” que, sem qualquer conexão com a realidade, aponta a existência de fraude nas eleições brasileiras, dando ensejo ao movimento golpista “#BrazilWasStolen” que viralizou nas redes sociais.

As transmissões em questão foram anunciadas em seu perfil social da plataforma Twitter, assim como em alguns meios de comunicação, como se vê:

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

SIGILOS

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, o incentivo público à intervenção militar, com a consequente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

Além disso, é evidente que as manifestações públicas detectadas possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Observe-se, nessa linha, que o “especialista” em questão, mais uma vez, revela a intenção atacar a integridade das eleições brasileiras, apresentando novamente a expressão “#BrazilWasStolen” (O Brasil foi roubado, em tradução livre).

Cabe observar, nesse contexto, que no decorrer da semana o indivíduo apontado realizou duas transmissões de caráter sensacionalista, cuja visibilidade foi intensamente amplificada por influenciadores e canais extremistas, e que resultaram na replicação viral de uma série de afirmações falsas, que deram um novo impulso aos movimentos antidemocráticos de contestação do resultado das eleições populares.

Registre-se, nesse caminho, que o caráter falacioso da “auditoria” apresentada já foi revelado por agências de checagem de fatos e veículos confiáveis da imprensa tradicional, bem como refutado por esta Corte Superior:

Ante o que se observa,   evidente que o “especialista” Fernando Cerimedo, que, como aponta a reportagem do Jornal Metr p les, nada mais   do que um “influenciador de extrema direita”, pretende com a nova live anunciada reincidir na pr tica de crimes e il citos eleitorais, com a finalidade de insuflar um cen rio de instabilidade pol tica, que por sua vez ensejaria, na vis o de movimentos antidemocr ticos, condi es suficientes para a deflagra o de uma ruptura institucional.

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601942-43.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERALRELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES*INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL*DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, que versa sobre a divulgação pública do número de telefone celular do Presidente desta Corte Superior, Min. Alexandre de Moraes, e que resultou no recebimento de diversas ligações e mensagens de cunho ofensivo e ameaçados, colocando em risco a segurança pessoal do Ministro e de sua família.

As ligações em questão, que somaram centenas, foram recebidas por meio de ligações telefônicas e do aplicativo de mensageria WhatsApp.

Paralelamente, a AEED/TSE informa a localização de vídeo publicado pelo blogueiro foragido Allan dos Santos, em que, a par de atacar Sua Excelência por diversas vezes, com palavras agressivas e de ordem, realiza uma ligação telefônica para o Min. Alexandre de Moraes, deixando aparecer os correspondentes números, em diversas oportunidades.

Por fim, reporta a Assessoria Especial que o foragido em questão promoveu a criação de um novo perfil na rede social Instagram, em franco descumprimento a decisão judicial, assim como a criação de um sítio eletrônico, que redireciona para o site oficial do Terça Livre, que se encontra hospedado no exterior, protegido por sistemas de privacidade e leis locais.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

SIGILOSO

A partir dos fatos relatados, verifica-se o compartilhamento irregular de dados pessoais com a finalidade inequívoca de transferir, para a pessoa do Ministro Presidente, os ataques institucionais com base em desinformação que afetam a integridade do processo eleitoral, com o objetivo mediato de fomentar protestos antidemocráticos que visam à ocorrência de ruptura constitucional, mediante intervenção federal ou militar.

Consequentemente, o grupo em questão, em hipótese, tem servido como instrumento para a prática dos ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, 147 e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 147. Ameaçar alguém, por palavra, escrito ou gesto, ou qualquer outro meio simbólico, de causar-lhe mal injusto e grave.

Pena – detenção, de um a seis meses, ou multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, a incitação de atos de assédio contra o ministro Alexandre de Moraes configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a prática de ameaça está igualmente tipificada naquele código, notadamente no art. 147.

Considerando a gravidade do fato narrado, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 296 do Código Eleitoral, 147 e 286 do Código Penal, de ordem, DETERMINO

Paralelamente, a AEED/TSE identificou diversos perfis do indigitado advogado em redes sociais, comumente utilizadas para a divulgação de narrativas falsas que atingem a integridade do processo eleitoral, assim como postagens análogas, em outros perfis, que arriscam a segurança e a integridade física do Ministro Presidente desta Corte Superior, como por exemplo:

SIGILOSO

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, verifica-se o compartilhamento irregular de dados pessoais com a finalidade inequívoca de transferir, para a pessoa do Ministro Presidente, os ataques institucionais com base em desinformação que afetam a integridade do processo eleitoral, com o objetivo mediato de fomentar protestos antidemocráticos que visam à ocorrência de ruptura constitucional, mediante intervenção federal ou militar.

Consequentemente, o grupo em questão, em hipótese, tem servido como instrumento para a prática dos ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, a incitação de atos de assédio contra o ministro Alexandre de Moraes configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a prática de ameaça está igualmente tipificada naquele código, notadamente no art. 147.

Considerando a gravidade do fato narrado, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal, de ordem, DETERMINO:

a) à plataforma Instagram, que promova a remoção do perfil identificado na URL <https://www.instagram.com/lfsaboia/> no prazo máximo de 02 (duas) horas, sob pena de multa de R$ 150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do recebimento da comunicação;

Muito se fala e se critica (com razão) a ida do Barroso ao Congresso para fazer lobby contra o voto auditável. Mas mais perturbador que o fato em si é pensar na causa. O que poderia ter levado um membro do TSE a se empenhar tanto para que a uma continuasse uma caixa preta?

Os arquivos "log" das urnas apresentados pelo PL já incluem o 1º e 2º turno.

Portanto, é FALSO a ideia de que a ação questiona apenas os arquivos do 2º turno.

O desespero de Alexandre de Moraes o impediu de ler a ação e seus anexos. Há incompetência e má vontade!

É evidente que as postagens dos perfis detectados possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que, explícita ou implicitamente, incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Trata-se de condutas ilegais de natureza grave, com grande potencial para tumultuar as eleições em andamento e que, como se sabe, terminam somente com o ato de diplomação. Fica assim autorizado o exercício do poder administrativo para fazer cessar ilícitos, conferido às autoridades eleitorais pelos arts. 249 do Código Eleitoral, 41 da Lei 9.504/1997, e 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022.

TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601963-19.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES

INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de perfil nas redes sociais, orientado para a divulgação de desinformação contra as eleições e apologia à intervenção militar, em detrimento da vontade popular registrada nas Eleições 2022.

Por meio da decisão de ID 158427230, determinei a suspensão do perfil de FLAVIO GORDON, nos seguintes termos:

Ante o exposto, de ordem, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO à plataforma Twitter a remoção definitiva e imediata do perfil relacionado, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

O art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022 tutela a higidez, a integridade e a credibilidade das Eleições e do processo eleitoral, de modo a coibir práticas que, por meio da divulgação desinformações, representam substancial transgressão à própria Democracia:

Art. 4º. A produção sistemática de desinformação, caracterizada pela publicação contumaz de informações falsas ou descontextualizadas sobre o processo eleitoral, autoriza a determinação de suspensão temporária de perfis, contas ou canais mantidos em mídias sociais, observados, quanto aos requisitos, prazos e consequências, o disposto no art. 2º.

Parágrafo único. A determinação a que se refere o caput compreenderá a suspensão de registro de novos perfis, contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, bem assim a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347 da Lei nº 4.737, de 15 de julho de 1965 - Código Eleitoral.

Verifica-se, dessa forma, que a incidência do dispositivo mencionado destina-se, de forma restrita, a condutas abusivas que, longe de constituir legítima manifestação de direitos constitucionalmente garantidos, caracterizam comportamento imoral ou ilícito, uma vez que, "a desinformação - entendida como uma ação comunicativa fraudulenta, baseada na propagação de afirmações falsas ou descontextualizadas com objetivos destrutivos - conflita com valores básicos da normativa eleitoral, na medida em que impõe sérios obstáculos à liberdade de escolha dos eleitores e, adicionalmente, à tomada de decisões conscientes", comprometendo, "portanto, a normalidade do processo político, dada a intenção deliberada de suprimir a verdade, gerando desconfiância, com conseqüente perda da credibilidade e fê nas instituições da democracia representativa" (Voto que proferi na ADI 7.261-MC, julgado em 25/10/2022).

De fato, não há, no ordenamento jurídico, direito absoluto à liberdade de expressão, ou seja, como bem enfatizou o Ministro EDSON FACHIN, "não há direito no abuso de direito" (ADPF 572, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, DJe de 7/5/2021), de modo que "não se pode utilizar um dos fundamentos da democracia, a liberdade de expressão, para atacá-la. O sistema imunológico da democracia não permite tal prática parasitária que deverá ser sempre coibida à luz da práticas concretas que visam atingir a integridade do processo eleitoral" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, julgado em 25/10/2022).

Nesse contexto, tenho reiteradamente enfatizado que a Constituição Federal consagra o binômio "LIBERDADE e RESPONSABILIDADE"; não permitindo - como ocorrido nas presentes hipóteses - de maneira irresponsável a efetivação de abuso no exercício de um direito constitucionalmente consagrado; não permitindo a utilização da "liberdade de expressão" como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e preconceituosos!

Considerado que houve a cessação de divulgação de conteúdos revestidos de ilicitude e tendentes a transgredir a integridade do processo eleitoral, a fim de possibilitar que os envolvidos possam retornar a utilizar suas redes sociais dentro do mais absoluto respeito à Constituição Federal e a Legislação, com observância do já citado binômio LIBERDADE – RESPONSABILIDADE, DETERMINO:

i) a reativação da conta <https://twitter.com/flaviogordon>, mantendo-se, porém a remoção das postagens irregulares veiculadas; e

ii) a aplicação de MULTA DIÁRIA, no valor de R$ 20.000,00 (vinte mil reais), a incidir na hipótese de reiteração de divulgação dos conteúdos bloqueados ou de publicação de outras mensagens instigadoras ou incentivadoras de golpe militar, atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito.

Por fim, iii) comunique-se a Plataforma Digital Twitter para cumprimento imediato da presente decisão; e iv) diante da pertinência temática ao Inquérito 4.879, encaminhem-se os autos ao SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL.

Intime-se. Publique-se.

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

É evidente que as postagens dos perfis detectados possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que, explícita ou implicitamente, incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Trata-se de condutas ilegais de natureza grave, com grande potencial para tumultuar as eleições em andamento e que, como se sabe, terminam somente com o ato de diplomação. Fica assim autorizado o exercício do poder administrativo para fazer cessar ilícitos, conferido às autoridades eleitorais pelos arts. 249 do Código Eleitoral, 41 da Lei 9.504/1997, e 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022.

Ante o exposto, de ordem, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO às plataformas Twitter, Youtube e Instagram a remoção definitiva e imediata dos perfis relacionados, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

DETERMINO, mais, à plataforma Telegram o imediato bloqueio do grupo apontado, até a diplomação dos eleitos no pleito presidencial de 2022, no mesmo prazo e sob as mesmas consequências.

Cumpra-se com urgência.

Após, ENCAMINHEM-SE cópia eletrônica dos autos à Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral para que promova as medidas cabíveis.

TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601969-26.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES

INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de perfil nas redes sociais, orientado para a divulgação de desinformação contra as eleições e apologia à intervenção militar, em detrimento da vontade popular registrada nas Eleições 2022.

Por meio da decisão de ID 158444591, determinei a suspensão do perfil de ED RAPOSO, nos seguintes termos:

Ante o exposto, de ordem, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO às plataformas Twitter, Youtube e Instagram a remoção definitiva e imediata dos perfis relacionados, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

Posteriormente, determinei a suspensão do perfil Ed Raposo_canal, conforme decisão a seguir descrita (ID 158449418):

Ante o exposto, de ordem, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO à plataforma Instagram a remoção definitiva e imediata do perfil relacionado, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

O art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022 tutela a higidez, a integridade e a credibilidade das Eleições e do processo eleitoral, de modo a coibir práticas que, por meio da divulgação desinformações, representam substancial transgressão à própria Democracia:

Art. 4º. A produção sistemática de desinformação, caracterizada pela publicação contumaz de informações falsas ou descontextualizadas sobre o processo eleitoral, autoriza a determinação de suspensão temporária de perfis, contas ou canais mantidos em mídias sociais, observados, quanto aos requisitos, prazos e consequências, o disposto no art. 2º.

Parágrafo único. A determinação a que se refere o caput compreenderá a suspensão de registro de novos perfis, contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, bem assim a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347 da Lei nº 4.737, de 15 de julho de 1965 - Código Eleitoral.

Verifica-se, dessa forma, que a incidência do dispositivo mencionado destina-se, de forma restrita, a condutas abusivas que, longe de constituir legítima manifestação de direitos constitucionalmente garantidos, caracterizam comportamento imoral ou ilícito, uma vez que, "a desinformação - entendida como uma ação comunicativa fraudulenta, baseada na propagação de afirmações falsas ou descontextualizadas com objetivos destrutivos - conflita com valores básicos da normativa eleitoral, na medida em que impõe sérios obstáculos à liberdade de escolha dos eleitores e, adicionalmente, à tomada de decisões conscientes", comprometendo, "portanto, a normalidade do processo político, dada a intenção deliberada de suprimir a verdade, gerando desconfiança, com conseqüente perda da credibilidade e fé nas instituições da democracia representativa" (Voto que proferi na ADI 7.261-MC, julgado em 25/10/2022).

De fato, não há, no ordenamento jurídico, direito absoluto à liberdade de expressão, ou seja, como bem enfatizou o Ministro EDSON FACHIN, "não há direito no abuso de direito" (ADPF 572, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, DJe de 7/5/2021), de modo que "não se pode utilizar um dos fundamentos da democracia, a liberdade de expressão, para atacá-la. O sistema imunológico da democracia não permite tal prática parasitária que deverá ser sempre coibida à luz da práticas concretas que visam atingir a integridade do processo eleitoral" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, julgado em 25/10/2022).

Nesse contexto, tenho reiteradamente enfatizado que a Constituição Federal consagra o binômio "LIBERDADE e RESPONSABILIDADE"; não permitindo - como ocorrido nas presentes hipóteses - de maneira irresponsável a efetivação de abuso no exercício de um direito constitucionalmente consagrado; não permitindo a utilização da "liberdade de expressão" como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e preconceituosos!

Considerado que houve a cessação de divulgação de conteúdos revestidos de ilicitude e tendentes a transgredir a integridade do processo eleitoral, a fim de possibilitar que os envolvidos possam retornar a utilizar suas redes sociais dentro do mais absoluto respeito à Constituição Federal e a Legislação, com observância do já citado binômio LIBERDADE – RESPONSABILIDADE, DETERMINO:

i) a reativação da conta dos perfis Ed Cardoso nas redes sociais Twitter, Youtube, Instagram e Telegram, mantendo-se, porém a remoção das postagens irregulares veiculadas; e

ii) a aplicação de MULTA DIÁRIA, no valor de R$ 20.000,00 (vinte mil reais), a incidir na hipótese de reiteração de divulgação dos conteúdos bloqueados ou de publicação de outras mensagens instigadoras ou incentivadoras de golpe militar, atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito.

Por fim, iii) comuniquem-se as Plataformas Digitais para cumprimento imediato da presente decisão; e iv) diante da pertinência temática ao Inquérito 4.879, encaminhem-se os autos ao SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL.

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado por representação realizada pelo Tribunal de Contas da União (SEI 2022.00.0001.8920-6)

A Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação detectou nova estratégia golpista, baseada na divulgação de afirmações falsas de caráter sensacionalista, citando que, o Senhor Ministro do Tribunal de Contas da União fraudou o relatório de auditoria das urnas eletrônicas com o objetivo de prejudicar a credibilidade das eleições presidenciais de 2022, em um contexto de incentivo à recusa dos resultados e de defesa de ruptura institucional.

A desordem informativa em tela tem sido realizada, primordialmente, pelos seguintes perfis, canais e sites:

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Por fim, o incentivo público à intervenção militar, com a consequente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

Além disso, é evidente que as manifestações públicas detectadas possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

SIGILOSO

Observe-se, nessa linha, que, lançar informação inverídica de suspeitas quanto à fidedignidade do processo de auditoria e apuração dos votos é conduta com alta aptidão para afetar a percepção de justiça e correção das eleições brasileiras, insuflando, como consequência, correntes minoritárias e golpistas que atentam contra a democracia em pontos esparsos do país.

Complica-se a situação de Bruno Dantas.

A denúncia foi apresentada por um advogado durante audiência pública realizada no Senado Federal nesta quarta-feira 10 de novembro.

Segundo o advogado, o Presidente do TCU, Bruno Dantas, responsável pela condução dos trabalhos da auditoria, omitiu no relatório final informações relevantes inseridas em um documento no qual os auditores apontaram diversas irregularidades e vulnerabilidades, entre outras situações graves encontradas durante a análise do sistema eletrônico de votação imposto pelo TSE com o aval do STF.

Esta situação é gravíssima pois não é de hoje que o TCU vem sendo utilizado de forma indevida por pessoas ligadas à Lula e seu grupo para avaliar as urnas eletrônicas e os crimes cometidos contra o Regime Representativo pelos integrantes do Poder Judiciário.

Em 2017 e então Presidente do TCU, José Muelo Monteiro, foi o responsável por um acórdão no qual o TCU afirma que a Lei do voto impresso não determinava a obrigatoriedade da impressão dos votos nas eleições de 2018, o que configura crime de falsidade ideológica.

No acórdão 2.564/2017 o TCU afirma o seguinte:

"Considerando que a mudança trazida pela Lei 13.165/2015 não faz menção expressa quanto à necessidade de implementação integral do novo processo de votação já nas próximas eleições, permanecendo silente com relação à maneira como essa mudança ocorreria, ou seja, se seria gradualmente ou de forma ampla, para todo o território nacional;"

Este acórdão foi utilizado pelo TSE na época para se esquivar da obrigação de implementar a Lei, uma vez que Gilmar Mendes, então Presidente do TSE, tentou ludibriar a população ocultando a informação de que todas as urnas eletrônicas já estavam aptas a receber as impressoras. Sua proposta era a de comprar 500 mil novas urnas eletrônicas a um custo de 2,5 bilhões de reais, alegando que as existentes não eram capazes de atender a legislação, e o que é pior, fazer isso somente após as eleições de 2018.

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, o incentivo público à intervenção militar, com a consequente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

Além disso, é evidente que as manifestações públicas detectadas possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral e eventualmente obstaculizar a posse dos eleitos, na medida em que incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Observem-se, nessa linha, algumas passagens relevantes, apenas a título exemplificativo, das quais se extrai potencial para a ocorrência de traumas ou alterações sociais:

O Brasil tem hoje 7 presos políticos

Desde o início das manifestações contrárias a Lula, Moraes prendeu deputados estaduais, jornalista, empresário, cacique, vereador e pastor.

Nesta segunda-feira, 26, o ministro do Supremo Tribunal Federal (STF) Alexandre de Moraes determinou a prisão do jornalista Oswaldo Eustáquio e de Bismark Fugazza, humorista do Canal Hipócritas, por atos antidemocráticos, conforme noticiou a Revista Oeste. Atualmente, existem sete pessoas presas por ordem de Moraes.

Alexandre de Moraes investigado pelas FFAA:

BOMBA! Hacker expõe ligação de magistrado com ex-presidiário.

O magistrado teria formado uma quadrilha junta com Lula para desviar dinheiro da fundação eleitoral. Mais de 60 milhões foram desviados pela campanha do PT. O ministro proibiu a Polícia Federal de investigar o repasse milionário para uma empresa de fachada que pertence ao ex-presidiário.

Trata-se de condutas ilegais de natureza grave, com grande potencial para tumultuar a posse dos eleitos nas Eleições Gerais de 2022. Fica assim autorizado o exercício do poder administrativo para fazer cessar ilícitos, conferido às autoridades eleitorais pelos arts. 249 do Código Eleitoral, 41 da Lei 9.504/1997, e 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022.

Ante o exposto, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, de ordem, DETERMINO às plataformas Facebook, Gettr, Instagram, Twitter, Youtube, LinkedIn e Telegram o imediato bloqueio canais e grupos acima mencionados, pelo período de 15 (quinze) dias, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

DETERMINO, mais, à ANATEL, que providencie o imediato bloqueio do sítio eletrônico acessado, realizando pronta notificação das empresas cadastradas no Serviço Móvel Pessoal (PMP) e no Serviço de Comunicação Multimídia (SMC), sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

DETERMINO, por fim, à plataforma Google a imediata desmonetização do sítio apontado, por um período de 30 (trinta) dias, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

Cumpra-se com urgência.

Após, ENCAMINHEM-SE cópia eletrônica dos autos à Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral para que promova as medidas cabíveis.

TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0600004-76.2023.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES

INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de perfil nas redes sociais, orientado para a divulgação de desinformação contra as eleições e apologia à intervenção militar, em detrimento da vontade popular registrada nas Eleições 2022.

Por meio da decisão de ID 158549238, determinei a suspensão do perfil de Junior Melo Terra, nos seguintes termos:

Ante o exposto, de ordem, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO à plataforma assinalada a remoção definitiva e imediata do perfil relacionado, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da primeira hora após o recebimento da notificação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

O art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022 tutela a higidez, a integridade e a credibilidade das Eleições e do processo eleitoral, de modo a coibir práticas que, por meio da divulgação desinformações, representam substancial transgressão à própria Democracia:

Art. 4º. A produção sistemática de desinformação, caracterizada pela publicação contumaz de informações falsas ou descontextualizadas sobre o processo eleitoral, autoriza a determinação de suspensão temporária de perfis, contas ou canais mantidos em mídias sociais, observados, quanto aos requisitos, prazos e consequências, o disposto no art. 2º.

Parágrafo único. A determinação a que se refere o caput compreenderá a suspensão de registro de novos perfis, contas ou canais pelos responsáveis ou sob seu controle, bem assim a utilização de perfis, contas ou canais contingenciais previamente registrados, sob pena de configuração do crime previsto no art. 347 da Lei nº 4.737, de 15 de julho de 1965 - Código Eleitoral.

SIGILOSO

Verifica-se, dessa forma, que a incidência do dispositivo mencionado destina-se, de forma restrita, a condutas abusivas que, longe de constituir legítima manifestação de direitos constitucionalmente garantidos, caracterizam comportamento imoral ou ilícito, uma vez que, "a desinformação - entendida como uma ação comunicativa fraudulenta, baseada na propagação de afirmações falsas ou descontextualizadas com objetivos destrutivos - conflita com valores básicos da normativa eleitoral, na medida em que impõe sérios obstáculos à liberdade de escolha dos eleitores e, adicionalmente, à tomada de decisões conscientes", comprometendo, "portanto, a normalidade do processo político, dada a intenção deliberada de suprimir a verdade, gerando desconfiança, com conseqüente perda da credibilidade e fé nas instituições da democracia representativa" (Voto que proferi na ADI 7.261-MC, julgado em 25/10/2022).

De fato, não há, no ordenamento jurídico, direito absoluto à liberdade de expressão, ou seja, como bem enfatizou o Ministro EDSON FACHIN, "não há direito no abuso de direito" (ADPF 572, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, DJe de 7/5/2021), de modo que "não se pode utilizar um dos fundamentos da democracia, a liberdade de expressão, para atacá-la. O sistema imunológico da democracia não permite tal prática parasitária que deverá ser sempre coibida à luz da práticas concretas que visam atingir a integridade do processo eleitoral" (ADI 7.261-MC, Rel. Min. EDSON FACHIN, Pleno, julgado em 25/10/2022).

Nesse contexto, tenho reiteradamente enfatizado que a Constituição Federal consagra o binômio "LIBERDADE e RESPONSABILIDADE"; não permitindo - como ocorrido nas presentes hipóteses - de maneira irresponsável a efetivação de abuso no exercício de um direito constitucionalmente consagrado; não permitindo a utilização da "liberdade de expressão" como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e preconceituosos!

Considerado que houve a cessação de divulgação de conteúdos revestidos de ilicitude e tendentes a transgredir a integridade do processo eleitoral, a fim de possibilitar que os envolvidos possam retornar a utilizar suas redes sociais dentro do mais absoluto respeito à Constituição Federal e a Legislação, com observância do já citado binômio LIBERDADE – RESPONSABILIDADE, DETERMINO:

i) a reativação da conta de Junior Melo Terra na plataforma digital Twitter, mantendo-se, porém a remoção das postagens irregulares veiculadas; e

ii) a aplicação de MULTA DIÁRIA, no valor de R$ 20.000,00 (vinte mil reais), a incidir na hipótese de reiteração de divulgação dos conteúdos bloqueados ou de publicação de outras mensagens instigadoras ou incentivadoras de golpe militar, atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito.

Por fim, iii) comunique-se a Plataforma Digital para cumprimento imediato da presente decisão; e iv) diante da pertinência temática ao Inquérito 4.879, encaminhem-se os autos ao SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL.

Intime-se. Publique-se.

Sandrinho Conceição
Rapaziada,
Estão levando em vários grupos a idéia de ao invés de ir no Congresso e quebrar tudo que já é errado mais mesmo assim foram lá e fizeram.
E aconteceu o que aconteceu ,os infiltrados com situação armada etc ...
E para completar vem o consórcio Globo.
Porque ao invés de fazer a merda no congresso que não tinha ninguém estava vazio...
Porque não arrebentar a Globo,
Eles que são o Coringa do Baralho.
O negócio é na globo gente.
Já que estamos fundidos lascados de condensados.
Porque não acabar com a Globo Rio e São Paulo?!

Campos de concentração para os patriotas?!

Segundo Governo Vermelho, as pessoas detidas e presas permanecerão assim até que seja apurado todo o inquérito sobre o atentado de domingo (praticado pelos petistas infiltrados e que já estavam lá dentro).

São aproximadamente 1.500 pessoas SEQUESTRADAS e entre elas várias crianças, que permanecerão no campo de concentração sob a alçada da Justiça brasileira e das frouxas armadas.

Muitos passando mal e estão o dia todo sem comer e uma mulher já MORREU.

A Globo teve coragem de dizer que é fake news que crianças estivessem passando fome e sede no ginásio cárcere. Mas não desmentiu que havia crianças. A Globo não tem vergonha de tentar disfarçar o crime hediondo da prisão de crianças entre 1500 pessoas presas, muitas ilegalmente.

Estivemos 21 anos apoiando político ladrão. Enquanto isso, as Forças Armadas estavam defendendo o Brasil dias de manifestações diante dos Quartéis, a ESQUERDA planta essa mentira de que os militares nos traíram facilmente enganado!!!! Os militares só vão fazer intervenção militar quando esse povo provar que não é gad intervenção. Senão, ocorreria o que ocorreu na Venezuela, que depois que os militares assumiram, colocand enésima vez ideias contra os militares na cabeça do povo, que começou a exigir que o Exército devolvesse o devolver o poder aos políticos e o país se fu!!! É o que você quer para o seu país???? Que os militares faç Olavo de Carvalho e políticos como Carla Zambelli e idolatra Bolsonaro, e se coloca contra os militares? Se é Lula. Os militares só farão intervenção quando os brasileiros em peso, aos milhões, pedirem o correto, no luç FRENTE DOS QUARTEIS, AOS MILHÕES, O POVO TEM QUE PEDIR INTERVENÇÃO MILITAR NOS TRÊS PODER

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez e a eficácia do processo eleitoral, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, o incentivo público à ruptura institucional, com a conseqüente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

É evidente que as postagens possuem potencial para tumultuar o cenário político, na medida em que, explicitamente, incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de novas alterações ou episódios violentos, como os ocorridos em 8 de janeiro.

Trata-se de condutas ilegais de natureza grave, que autorizam o exercício do poder administrativo para fazer cessar ilícitos, conferido às autoridades eleitorais pelos arts. 249 do Código Eleitoral, 41 da Lei 9.504/1997, e 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022.

Ante o exposto, de ordem, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO às plataformas Telegram, Facebook e Twitter a remoção definitiva e imediata dos grupos e perfis relacionados, devendo ser preservado todo o conteúdo disponibilizado nos últimos 15 (quinze) dias, de maneira a possibilitar posterior investigação e responsabilização na esfera criminal, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

Cumpra-se com urgência.

Após, ENCAMINHEM-SE cópia eletrônica dos autos à Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral para que promova as medidas cabíveis.

Brasília, 11 de janeiro de 2023.

REPRESENTAÇÃO Nº 0601755-35.2022.6.00.0000 – CLASSE 11541 – BRASÍLIA – DISTRITO FEDERALRelator: Ministro Sérgio BanhosRepresentante: Coligação Brasil da EsperançaAdvogados: Eugênio José Guilherme de Aragão – OAB: 4935/DF e outrosRepresentada: Carla Zambelli Salgado de OliveiraRepresentada: Caroline Rodrigues de ToniRepresentada: Renata J. BarretoRepresentado: André Machado ValadãoRepresentado: Nikolas Ferreira de OliveiraRepresentado: Leandro Panazzolo RuschelRepresentado: Responsável pelo perfil @vemprarua_Br no InstagramDECISÃO

A Coligação Brasil da Esperança ajuizou representação, com pedido de liminar, em desfavor de Carla Zambelli Salgado de Oliveira, André Machado Valadão, Nikolas Ferreira de Oliveira, Leandro Panazollo Ruschell, Caroline Rodrigues de Toni, Renata J. Barreto e Responsável pelo perfil "@vemprarua_br" no Instagram, por suposta veiculação de desinformação em seus perfis em redes sociais, mediante a divulgação de conteúdo gravemente descontextualizado e sabidamente inverídico, com o objeto de vincular o candidato ao cargo de presidente da República Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva à miséria e a ameaças ditatoriais, em infração aos arts. 9º-A, 22, X, e 27, § 1º, da Res.-TSE 23.610.

Os autos foram inicialmente distribuídos ao Ministro Ricardo Lewandowski e, ato contínuo, foram redistribuídos à Ministra Maria Cláudia Bucchianeri, com fundamento na Portaria-TSE 1.007/2022 (ID 158302590).

Em 12.1.2023, os autos me foram redistribuídos, nos termos do art. 2º, § 5º, da Res.-TSE 23.608, em razão do encerramento da atuação das ministras e dos ministros designados para apreciação de representações, reclamações e pedidos de direito de resposta referentes às Eleições de 2022 (IDs 158365853 e 158552140).

Por despacho (ID 158564463), ante a aparente perda do objeto da representação, determinei a intimação da representante para que se manifestasse a respeito do interesse no prosseguimento do feito, e que, após, fosse ouvida a Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral.

A Coligação Brasil da Esperança, na manifestação apresentada (ID 158627249), requereu o prosseguimento do feito, aduzindo persistir o interesse quanto ao pedido de aplicação de multa por propaganda eleitoral irregular.

Por sua vez, a douta Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral opinou pela extinção do processo, sem resolução de mérito, apontando a perda do objeto da representação quanto aos pedidos de remoção de conteúdo veiculado na internet e de abstenção de divulgação com o mesmo teor, afirmando a inexistência de previsão legal para a incidência de multa no caso dos autos (ID 158657691).

É o relatório.

Decido.

Evidencia-se a regularidade da representação processual (procuração de ID 158300846).

Inicialmente, registro que, na sessão de 28.3.2023, este Tribunal Superior concluiu o julgamento do Recurso na Representação 0601754-50, da relatoria do Ministro Alexandre de Moraes, ocasião em que o Colegiado decidiu, por maioria, que é possível a aplicação da multa prevista no art. 57-D da Lei 9.504/97 nas representações por propaganda eleitoral irregular divulgada na internet mediante veiculação de informação inverídica e, por conseguinte, persiste o interesse jurídico na determinação de remoção definitiva do conteúdo impugnado, independentemente da superveniência das eleições.

Tal compreensão foi reafirmada no Recurso na Representação 0601756-20, também da relatoria do Ministro Alexandre de Moraes, julgado na sessão ordinária em regime híbrido realizada no dia 18.4.2023 e cujo acórdão ainda não foi publicado.

Desse modo, ante a possibilidade de aplicação de multa e de que seja determinada a remoção definitiva do conteúdo desinformativo, não há falar em perda do objeto da representação em virtude da realização das eleições, de modo que cumpre prosseguir na instrução processual.

A Coligação Brasil da Esperança requer, na petição inicial, o deferimento de medida liminar, com fundamento no art. 300 do Código de Processo Civil, visando a que seja determinada a remoção das publicações impugnadas nos autos e que os representados se abstenham de veicular outras notícias e publicações com o mesmo teor, em ambos os casos sob pena de multa, de modo a preservar a lisura e a higidez das eleições e do processo eleitoral.

Alega que os representados veicularam desinformação em seus perfis em redes sociais com o objetivo de vincular o candidato a presidente da República Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva à miséria e a ameaças ditatoriais, traçando “um paralelo imaginário associando uma eventual vitória de Lula nas eleições vindouras a um cenário trágico, no qual se instalaria uma ‘ditadura comunista’ no Brasil, acompanhada de fome generalizada” (ID 158300845, p. 4).

Argumenta que as publicações impugnadas veicularam informação sabidamente inverídica e já desmentida por agências de checagem a respeito de suposto plano para implantação do comunismo no Brasil, e, no que se refere ao hipotético risco de crescimento da miséria no país, divulgaram ilações contrariadas por dados publicados em relatório da Organização das Nações Unidas para a Alimentação e a Agricultura (FAO) e, por conseguinte, teriam propagado conteúdo gravemente descontextualizado, que atingiria a integridade do processo eleitoral – por afetar a liberdade de conhecimento dos cidadãos e o direito livre de voto – e ofenderia a honra e a imagem do candidato Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva e do Partido dos Trabalhadores, incidindo, assim, nas vedações previstas nos art. 9º-A, 22, X, e 27, § 1º, da Res.-TSE 23.610.

Como é consabido, a concessão da tutela de urgência pressupõe o preenchimento de requisitos, consistentes em probabilidade do direito (fumus boni juris) e perigo de dano ou risco ao resultado útil do processo (periculum in mora).

No que se refere à probabilidade do direito, a autora da representação afirma que os conteúdos das postagens impugnadas nos autos evidenciarão manifesta ofensa às normas e aos princípios que regem a propaganda eleitoral, de modo a ferir a lisura do processo eleitoral, ante o emprego de estratégia de propagação de desinformação e de manipulação de narrativas, com violação da liberdade de pensamento e à cidadania dos eleitores.

Argumenta que o perigo de dano residiria na perpetuação de desinformação que macula a lisura do processo eleitoral e veicula propaganda eleitoral negativa contra o então candidato Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva e o Partido dos Trabalhadores, por meio de publicações veiculadas na internet, cujo alcance é amplificado de forma exponencial pelo alto número de compartilhamentos, com significativa interferência na liberdade de opinião e de pensamento dos eleitores, violando o direito ao voto livre e a democracia.

Acerca de tais alegações, observo que o art. 9º-A da Res.-TSE 23.610, incluído pela Res.-TSE 23.671, dispunha que “é vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos, devendo o juízo eleitoral, a requerimento do Ministério Público, determinar a cessação do ilícito, sem prejuízo da apuração de responsabilidade penal, abuso de poder e uso indevido dos meios de comunicação”.

O referido dispositivo regulamentar foi revogado pela Res.-TSE 23.714, de 20.10.2022 (DJE de 24.10.2022), a qual dispõe a respeito da matéria no art. 2º, caput, cujo teor é o seguinte: “É vedada, nos termos do Código Eleitoral, a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos”.

Ainda quanto ao tema, o art. 27, § 1º, da Res.-TSE 23.610, com a redação dada pela Res.-TSE 23.671, estabelece que “a livre manifestação do pensamento de pessoa eleitora identificada ou identificável na internet somente é passível de limitação quando ofender a honra ou a imagem de candidatas, candidatos, partidos, federações ou coligações, ou divulgar fatos sabidamente inverídicos, observado o disposto no art. 9º- A desta Resolução”.

Na espécie, sem prejuízo de exame mais detido da questão controvertida por ocasião do julgamento do mérito da representação, verifico que o requisito alusivo ao perigo de dano não está configurado, pois, ainda que se reconhecesse, em juízo de cognição sumária, a suposta ilicitude das postagens impugnadas e sua alegada aptidão para influenciar o eleitor e interferir negativamente no processo eleitoral, há de se considerar que o processo eleitoral já foi encerrado – inclusive com a eleição e a diplomação do candidato da coligação representante – e, desse modo, a eventual concessão de liminar para remoção das publicações em tela não surtiria efeito prático em relação ao pleito já findo.

Ainda quanto ao ponto, observo que, intimada para se manifestar a respeito da aparente perda do objeto da demanda – por despacho proferido antes das recentes decisões deste Tribunal que afastaram tal possibilidade, mencionadas alhures –, a representante se limitou a argumentar que, “por se tratar de representação eleitoral ajuizada em razão da perpetração de desinformação, remanesce a apreciação do pedido de aplicação de multa constante na inicial” (ID 158627249, p. 1), sem nada dizer a respeito do pedido de liminar para remoção de conteúdo.

Ademais, o indeferimento da medida liminar, na espécie, não enseja risco ao resultado útil do processo, pois a eventual remoção das postagens impugnadas poderá ser determinada em caráter definitivo por ocasião do julgamento de mérito, caso sejam reconhecidas a ilicitude dos conteúdos publicados e a procedência dos pedidos formalizados na representação.

Assim, por não estar presente o requisito necessário para a concessão da tutela de urgência requerida, alusivo ao perigo da demora, é caso de indeferimento do pedido de medida liminar formulado pela Coligação Brasil da Esperança.

De outra parte, verifica-se que um dos representados não foi devidamente identificado na petição inicial da representação, constando apenas a sua qualificação como “Responsável pelo perfil @vemprarua_br no Instagram”.

Quanto ao ponto, assinalo que o art. 17, § 1º, da Res.-TSE 23.608 prevê a possibilidade de a representação ser endereçada genericamente contra o responsável pela propaganda irregular, desde que requerida liminarmente diligência para a respectiva identificação e sejam fornecidos elementos indispensáveis para obtenção dos dados, sob pena de indeferimento da petição inicial, in verbis:

Art. 17. A petição inicial da representação relativa à propaganda irregular será instruída, sob pena de não conhecimento:

Por sua vez, os arts. 39 e 40 da Res.-TSE 23.610 estabelecem o seguinte:

Art. 39. O provedor responsável pela guarda somente será obrigado a disponibilizar os registros de conexão e de acesso a aplicações de internet, de forma autônoma ou associados a dados cadastrais, a dados pessoais ou a outras informações disponíveis que possam contribuir para a identificação da usuária ou do usuário, mediante ordem judicial, na forma prevista nesta seção (Lei nº 12.965/2014, art. 10, caput e § 1º).

Art. 40. A parte interessada poderá, com o propósito de formar conjunto probatório em processo judicial, em caráter incidental ou autônomo, requerer ao juízo eleitoral que ordene à(ao) responsável pela guarda o fornecimento dos dados constantes do art. 39 desta Resolução (Lei nº 12.965/2014, art. 22).

§ 1º Sem prejuízo dos demais requisitos legais, o requerimento deverá conter, sob pena de inadmissibilidade (Lei nº 12.965/2014, art. 22, parágrafo único):

I - fundados indícios da ocorrência do ilícito de natureza eleitoral;

II - justificativa motivada da utilidade dos dados solicitados para fins de investigação ou instrução probatória;

III - período ao qual se referem os registros; e (Redação dada pela Resolução nº 23.671/2021)

IV - a identificação do endereço da postagem ou conta em questão (URL ou, caso inexistente, URI ou URN), observados, nos termos do art. 19 da Lei nº 12.965/2014, o âmbito e os limites técnicos de cada provedor de aplicação de internet. (Incluído pela Resolução nº 23.671/2021)

§ 2º A ausência de identificação imediata da usuária ou do usuário responsável pela divulgação do conteúdo não constitui circunstância suficiente para o deferimento liminar do pedido de quebra de sigilo de dados.

§ 3º A ordem judicial que apreciar o pedido deverá conter, sob pena de nulidade, fundamentação específica quanto ao preenchimento de todos os requisitos legais previstos nos incisos I a III do § 1º deste artigo. (Grifo nosso.)

Todavia, no que se refere ao representado não identificado de plano na petição inicial (Responsável pelo perfil @vemprarua_br no Instagram), a autora da representação não formulou o requerimento de que tratam os arts. 17, § 1º, da Res.-TSE 23.610 e 40, caput, da Res.-TSE 23.610, visando a que fosse determinado ao responsável pela guarda o fornecimento dos dados mencionados no art. 39 da Res.-TSE 23.610, alusivos ao usuário em tela, a fim de que fosse identificado para citação e exercício do direito de defesa, o que, em princípio, ensejaria o indeferimento da petição inicial quanto ao referido demandado, com base no primeiro dispositivo regulamentar acima citado.

Pelo exposto:

I – Indefiro o pedido de medida liminar formulado pela Coligação Brasil da Esperança, ante a ausência do requisito para a concessão da tutela de urgência atinente ao perigo da demora, nos termos do art. 300 do Código de Processo Civil e na linha da fundamentação exposta acima.

II – Citem-se os representados Carla Zambelli Salgado de Oliveira, Caroline Rodrigues de Toni, Renata J. Barreto, André Machado Valadão, Nikolas Ferreira de Oliveira e Leandro Panazzolo Ruschel para apresentar defesa, no prazo de dois dias, nos termos do art. 18 da Res.-TSE 23.608.

III – Oficie-se às empresas Facebook, Instagram e Twitter, a fim de que preservem os conteúdos impugnados nesta representação (item 50.1.1 da petição inicial) e os respectivos dados cadastrais das usuárias e dos usuários, até o trânsito em julgado da decisão final do processo.

IV – Intime-se a Coligação Brasil da Esperança, a fim de que, no prazo de dois dias, manifeste-se a respeito da aparente existência de causa para o indeferimento da petição inicial quanto ao Responsável pelo perfil @vemprarua_br no Instagram, considerando a ausência do requerimento de diligências previsto nos arts. 17, § 1º, da Res.-TSE 23.610 e 40, caput, da Res.-TSE 23.610.

Publique-se.

Intime-se.

I – DOS FATOS

1. O ajuizamento da presente Representação Eleitoral surge diante da veiculação de conteúdo gravemente descontextualizado e sabidamente inverídico, através de publicação realizada pelos Representados em suas páginas oficiais do Instagram, Facebook e Twitter, objetivando vincular o ex-presidente Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva, que, atualmente, é candidato à Presidência da República pela Coligação “Brasil da Esperança” à miséria e ameaças ditatoriais.

2. Para tanto, os representados, através de suas publicações, traçam um paralelo imaginário associando uma eventual vitória de Lula nas eleições vindouras a um cenário trágico, no qual se instalaria uma “ditadura comunista” no Brasil, acompanhada da fome generalizada.

3. Nas teses conspiratórias, claro, a única barreira para evitar que tal situação se imponha é a reeleição do candidato Jair Bolsonaro.

4. Ocorre que, como sabemos, o modus operandi dos representados consiste em propagar o terror e pânico, desinformar, mentir gravemente sobre o adversário associando-o a todo e qualquer mal para, ao final, influenciar negativamente o eleitorado.

5. Na espécie, foram diversas postagens com conteúdo que podem ser divididos em dois temas: (i) ameaça de implantação de uma ditadura comunista no Brasil com a eleição de Lula; e (ii) fome generalizada.

6. Ambas hipóteses são divorciadas da realidade e trazem conjecturas macabras, sem respaldo mínimo da realidade dos fatos, de modo que apenas objetivam incutir na mente do eleitor o pânico e repulsa ao candidato Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva. As postagens se valem de textos audiovisuais com forte apelo, mostrando pessoas em situação de extrema vulnerabilidade, dentre outros absurdos.

7. Pois bem. Sobre a paranoia anticomunista, podemos afirmar que existem dois grupos: os que criam e espalham as mentiras, e os que consomem e acreditam nelas.

8. É preciso ter em mente, portanto, que as pessoas que criam paranoias anticomunistas as usam como arma políticas, buscando propagar desinformação e mentira. É, o Cavalo de Troia dos tempos atuais. É engodo, charlatanismo, enganação, oportunismo e conveniência. Não nos esqueçamos que o próprio Jair Bolsonaro já se declarou fã do então presidente venezuelano Hugo Chaves¹.

9. Com efeito, sobre o tema, diversas agências de checagem²³⁴⁵ já atestaram que não passa de fake news as “notícias” de que o Partido dos Trabalhadores objetiva implantar um “plano de dominação comunista”. Senão vejamos:

The screenshot shows a news article from the website 'ESTADÃO Política'. The headline is 'Boato circula com falso 'plano de dominação comunista' do PT'. Below the headline, there is a sub-headline: 'Mentira nas redes sociais se refere a propostas de correntes petistas não-hegemônicas apresentadas em congresso de 2015'. The article is categorized under 'Política' and includes social media sharing icons for WhatsApp, Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn.

VERIFICAÇÃO

PT NÃO PUBLICOU 'PLANO DE DOMINAÇÃO COMUNISTA'

10. A bem da verdade, Excelência, o Partido dos Trabalhadores é um partido democrata e defensor da democracia, que já governou o Brasil dentro das regras democráticas. Não atoa, a Coligação representante é a maior frente democrática existente no Brasil.

11. Ainda, importante lembrar, por oportuno, que durante o governo do ex-Presidente Lula não se falava habitualmente em impeachment de Ministros do Supremo Tribunal Federal, não se falava em nova Constituinte, não havia arroubos autoritários, tampouco se falava em não renovar concessão de emissoras de televisão.

12. Com efeito, o renomado Cientista Político norte-americano Steven Levitsky, Professor da prestigiada Harvard e autor do livro "Como as democracias morrem", durante participação no programa Roda Viva⁶, da TV Cultura, afirmou que "o Presidente da República (Jair Bolsonaro) é a maior ameaça à democracia no momento"; "as São dezenas de post do ditador assassino Maduro, da Venezuela, declarando amizade e até amor por Lula, além de agradecimentos.

É uma parceria de longo prazo.

18. Noutro giro, mas ainda de maneira orquestrada objetivando propagar desinformação e, destarte, manipular o eleitor, os representados buscam associar o Partido dos Trabalhadores à miséria.

19. Para tanto, fazem comparações esdrúxulas com a Venezuela, afirmando que o futuro do Brasil, caso o ex-Presidente Lula seja eleito, será de fome generalizada. Para “chocar” os interlocutores, fazem uso de postagens audiovisuais¹²¹³¹⁴ com imagens de pessoas em situação de extrema vulnerabilidade, buscando comida nas ruas, dentre outros.

Na Venezuela, cesta básica custa 28 salários mínimos
Rendimento de trabalhadores e aposentados cobre apenas 3,4% do valor necessário para alimentar uma família

ACORDA, BRASIL!!! Além de não dar para comprar NADA para comer, os aposentados na Venezuela estão sendo assaltados após receberem esta migalha do amigo de Lula, pois o crime tomou conta do país. É ISSO o que você quer para o futuro do Brasil? Não é? Então, neste domingo VOTE!!! BOLSONARO para que nossos entes queridos possam ter um futuro.

20. No entanto, a verdade se impõe: durante os anos 2002 a 2013 – Governo Lula, portanto – o percentual de brasileiros considerados em situação de subalimentação caiu 82% (oitenta e dois).

21. De acordo com relatório das Nações Unidas para a Alimentação e a Agricultura (FAO), o Brasil deixou o mapa da fome em 2014. O relatório também mostrou que o Indicador de Prevalência de Subalimentação, medida empregada pela FAO há 50 anos para dimensionar e acompanhar a fome em nível internacional, atingiu no Brasil nível menor que 5%, abaixo do qual a organização considera que um país superou o problema da fome. Senão, vejamos¹⁵¹⁶:

22. Pelo exposto, tem-se que a veiculação de falsas informações pelos Representados constitui verdadeiro ato de divulgação e compartilhamento de fatos gravemente descontextualizados e inverídicos que violam a liberdade de opinião dos eleitores, bem como impacta diretamente na honra objetiva e subjetiva do candidato, de modo a se enquadrar nas hipóteses proibitivas do art. 9º-A da Resolução nº 23.610/2019 do Tribunal Superior Eleitoral.

23. Assim, é preciso que tais atitudes sejam repreendidas por essa d. Corte, nos termos da Lei, de modo que o eleitorado não seja vítima de um dos ilícitos mais graves que emergem no período eleitoral: a desinformação cumulada com ofensas.

II – DO DIREITO

24. Como bem se sabe, a desinformação significa prática antijurídica, que afeta a liberdade de conhecimento dos cidadãos e, automaticamente, influencia negativamente no processo democrático. Dessa forma, no presente período eleitoral, o combate à desinformação deve ser realizado com o máximo rigor e eficiência, sob pena de subversão da própria democracia.

25. No presente caso, conforme acima demonstrado, os Representados propagaram conteúdo gravemente descontextualizado, buscando incutir a ideia de que o PT é irá impor uma ditadura no Brasil, bem como levará a uma situação de pobreza extrema, com fome generalizada.

26. Com efeito, trata-se de ação estratégica política, desenvolvida através de fantasiosa narrativa insipiente e ofensiva — sem qualquer substrato fático — com o fito de deslegitimar, perante a opinião pública, o nome do candidato opositor.

27. Nesse sentido, os representados evidentemente com o condão de atingir a integridade do processo eleitoral, manipularam a opinião pública com fatos sabidamente inverídicos. Emerge, assim, indisfarçável tática de desinformação nas suas condutas, as quais tiveram um alcance de centenas de milhares de pessoas diretamente e de milhões indiretamente – por meio dos compartilhamentos e interações com o conteúdo.

28. Desse modo, cabe ressaltar, que não há que se confundir a divulgação de desinformação com o exercício do direito à liberdade de expressão. Sobre o ponto, o artigo 27 da Resolução, parágrafo 1º, da Resolução nº 23.610/2019¹⁷, bem explicita que a livre manifestação do pensamento encontra limitação quando ofende a honra ou a imagem de candidatos, partidos, federações, coligações ou, ainda, quando divulga fatos sabidamente inverídicos.

29. Verifica-se na presente representação, nítida propagação de conteúdo gravemente descontextualizado que atinge a integridade do processo eleitoral, conduta expressamente vedada pelo artigo 9º -A da Resolução-TSE nº 23.610/2019¹⁸.

30. No mais, cumpre frisar que não há o que se falar de mera manifestação do pensamento dos Representados, que nitidamente tentaram levar o eleitor a acreditar em imaginária vinculação do Ex-Presidente à ditaduras e à fome, como já delineado nos fatos supramencionados, vilipendiando frontalmente o disposto no artigo 22 da Resolução, inciso X, da Resolução-TSE nº 23.610/2019¹⁹.

31. A desinformação é, sobretudo, um mal que vem assolando o mundo e especialmente o Brasil, por configurar a manipulação de fatos através da subversão do que realmente ocorreu, de modo a modificar a verdade e alterar o entendimento dos cidadãos, inclusive no que tange ao processo eleitoral.

32. Lições que se alinham ao entendimento exarado pela e. Min Maria Cláudia Bucchianeri proferida nos autos da representação nº 0600929-09.2022.6.00.0000, em 06.09.2022:

E, ao fazê-lo, registro que, consoante já tive a oportunidade de enfatizar em decisões anteriores (Rp nº 0600229-33/DF), tenho para mim que a intervenção judicial sobre o livre mercado de ideias políticas deve sempre se dar de forma excepcional e necessariamente pontual, apenas se legitimando naquelas hipóteses de desequilíbrio ou de excesso capazes de vulnerar princípios fundamentais outros, igualmente essenciais ao processo eleitoral, tais como a higidez e a integridade do ambiente informativo, a paridade de armas entre os candidatos, o livre exercício do voto e a proteção da dignidade e da honra individuais.

O caso em exame envolve suposta propagação de desinformação, comportamento que vulnera a higidez e a integridade do ambiente informativo, valores que justificam e legitimam a intervenção corretiva da Justiça Eleitoral.

Isso porque, embora a maximização do espaço de livre mercado de ideias políticas e a ampla liberdade discursiva na fase da pré-campanha e no curtíssimo período oficial de campanha qualifiquem-se como fatores que catalisam a competitividade da disputa e estimulam a renovação política e a vivacidade democrática, a difusão de informações inverídicas, descontextualizadas ou enviesadas configuram prática desviante, que gera verdadeira falha no livre mercado de ideias políticas, deliberadamente forjada para induzir o eleitor a erro no momento de formação de sua escolha.

Daí as preciosas observações de Elder Maia Goltzman, na preciosa obra "Liberdade de Expressão e Desinformação em Contextos Eleitorais" (Belo Horizonte: Ed. Fórum, 2022, p. 54), no sentido de que "é preciso empoderar o cidadão para que possa tomar suas decisões relativas à esfera pública de maneira consciente e ancorado em informação de qualidade, não em narrativas fabricadas ou versões construídas e distribuídas para ludibriá-lo".

Em resumo: não há a menor dúvida de que a desinformação e a desconstrução de figuras políticas a partir de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou substancialmente manipulados devem ser rapidamente reprimidas pela Justiça Eleitoral, por configurarem, como dito, verdadeira falha no livre mercado de circulação das ideias políticas, que pode desembocar na indução do eleitor a erro, com comprometimento da própria liberdade de formação da escolha cidadã.

A identificação, no entanto, daquilo que possa ser enquadrado como conteúdo desinformativo traz significativos desafios.

Reconheço que a desinformação se limita à difusão de mentiras propriamente ditas, compreendendo, por igual, o compartilhamento de conteúdos com elementos verdadeiros, porém gravemente descontextualizados, editados ou manipulados, com o especial intento de desvirtuamento da mensagem difundida, com a indução dos seus destinatários a erro.

33. Na mesma esteira a e. Ministra Cármen Lúcia, no bojo dos autos da Representação nº 0600763-74.2022.6.00.0000, consignou que:

Observei, então, ser necessário respeitar-se aquele direito considerando-se a pessoa sobre quem se expressa algo e também a pessoa que se expressa, porque os direitos são interligados e a observância do direito é dever de todos. Por isso, mentiras, divulgações inverídicas e caluniosas, difamatórias ou injuriosas são tidas, desde o século passado, no direito brasileiro, como ilícitos penais. Anotei, naquela assentada, que a ocorrência de divulgação de informações falsas pelos novos meios de propaganda eleitoral, não poucas vezes se alimentam da ferocidade destrutiva das mentiras novas e agressivas, amplamente nomeadas como fake news:

'Assim, com a revolução tecnológica da internet e das mídias sociais, a propaganda eleitoral se dá por novos meios e por divulgação instantânea para milhares de pessoas, muitas vezes veiculando informações falsas (...). As notícias são transmitidas, atualmente, principalmente por meio das redes sociais e aplicativos de mensagens e cada vez menos pela imprensa tradicional, o que contribui para o aumento da desinformação e das notícias falsas, as quais circulam livre e gratuitamente nas redes sociais e nos aplicativos de mensagens. esse respeito, Francisco Balaguer Callejón lembra que enquanto os meios de comunicação tradicionais são abertos e transparentes, as redes sociais muitas vezes se alimentam da instabilidade das fake news (págs. 294 e 297 do acórdão).'

Não se cogita do exercício absoluto daquele direito fundamental à livre manifestação do pensamento. Por isso, é juridicamente possível a restrição do desempenho daquele direito fundamental quando constatada eventual ilicitude no seu exercício em detrimento de igual direito de outrem.

34. É por isto que a desinformação, que caracteriza a essência das publicações objeto desta ação, significa prática antijurídica, tendo em vista que afeta a liberdade de conhecimento dos cidadãos e, automaticamente, influencia negativamente no processo eleitoral por afetar o direito livre de voto.

35. Neste contexto perigoso de manipulação da verdade em ano eleitoral, em que a propagação de desinformação afeta a lisura do processo eleitoral — haja vista a nefasta experiência das eleições de 2018 — essa c. Corte Eleitoral tem trabalhado e apresentado medidas no esforço de combater a propagação de desinformação, especialmente no que tange ao pleito que se avizinha. Foram firmadas, inclusive, parcerias com diversas plataformas de aplicação, além de promovidos eventos e planos estratégicos para combater a desinformação no país — especialmente nas eleições que ocorrerão no presente ano.

36. Assim, patente o esforço da Corte Eleitoral em combater e evitar que a desinformação influencie o pleito de 2022, a fim de manter a lisura do processo eleitoral, de modo a proibir veiculação e compartilhamento de notícias inverídicas e/ou descontextualizadas que, quando identificadas, devem ser removidas e os responsáveis instados a se abster de compartilhar.

37. É justamente neste contexto que resta evidenciado que as publicações objeto desta ação contrariam o art. 9º-A, art. 22 e art. 27 da Resolução nº 23.610/2019, uma vez que os Representados conscientemente divulgaram conteúdo desinformador para incutir no eleitor a lunática teoria tecida com a agulha da imaginação de vinculação do ex-Presidente Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva à pecha de ditador.

38. Ademais, perfilhando o entendimento do art. 22, inciso X da Resolução-TSE n. 23.610/2019, este eg. Tribunal Superior Eleitoral possui entendimento firmado neste sentido, como se observa do julgado abaixo colacionado:

Propaganda eleitoral antecipada. Propaganda negativa. Multa. 3. No mérito, o Tribunal a quo manteve a condenação, mas reduziu o valor da multa imposta na sentença para R$ 5.000,00, tendo concluído pela configuração de propaganda eleitoral antecipada negativa, por ter o representado veiculado em sua página pessoal do Instagram notícias acerca da gestão do então pré- candidato à reeleição ao cargo de Governador do Estado. 4. Nos termos da jurisprudência do Tribunal Superior Eleitoral: 'A divulgação de publicação, antes do período permitido, que ofende a honra de possível futuro candidato constitui propaganda eleitoral negativa extemporânea' [...] (TSE, AgRg no Respe n. 060009906, Rel. Min. Sérgio Banhos, Dje 17.09.2019).

39. Considerando que a disseminação de desinformação com conteúdo manifestamente apto a influenciar nas eleições que ocorrerão no próximo final de semana, tem-se que representam ato ilícito, devendo ser combatida por esta c. Corte Eleitoral.

40. Portanto, requer-se a condenação da Representada a fim de manter incólume o pleito eleitoral que se avizinha, determinando-se a abstenção de novas práticas de igual natureza, com a fixação de multa para o caso de descumprimento.

III – DA NECESSIDADE DE CONCESSÃO DA MEDIDA LIMINAR

41. Consoante o caput do art. 300 do Código de Processo Civil, a tutela de urgência será concedida quando houver elementos que evidenciem a probabilidade do direito e o perigo de dano ou o risco ao resultado útil do processo.

42. A probabilidade do direito no presente caso é a manifesta violação às normas e aos princípios que regem a propaganda eleitoral, sobretudo a Resolução nº 23.610/2019 deste c. TSE, de modo a ferir a lisura do processo eleitoral, conforme demonstrado nos tópicos anteriores.

43. Isso porque trata-se de publicação com objetivo de traçar claudicante e inverídica afirmação, com o intuito de incutir ao eleitor questionamentos quanto à reputação do candidato Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva ao suscitar falsa narrativa de que o candidato irá impor uma ditadura no Brasil, bem como levará a uma situação de pobreza extrema, com fome generalizada.

44. Assim, é preocupante, não apenas ao Representante, mas ao interesse da democracia brasileira como um todo, a leviana estratégia de manipulação de narrativas com consequente violação da liberdade de pensamento e cidadania dos eleitores brasileiros.

45. Ademais, dada a proximidade do pleito eleitoral, mais do que nunca se faz necessária a prevalência da legislação eleitoral e regulação deste e. TSE acerca do combate a informações sabidamente inverídicas e com dolo específico de manipular o pleito eleitoral, vilipendiando a liberdade de pensamento e opinião dos brasileiros e cerceando o direito à cidadania e ao voto livre.

46. O perigo do dano encontra-se na perpetuação de desinformações que maculam a lisura do processo eleitoral, configurando propaganda eleitoral negativa contra o ex-presidente Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva e ao Partido dos Trabalhadores, por meio de publicações veiculadas na internet. Aliás, as publicações dessa natureza são compartilhadas e espalhadas em velocidade exponencial, de modo a aumentar significativamente o alcance das desinformações aos eleitores e às eleitoras, ampliando, desta forma, o impacto negativo das publicações objeto desta representação.

47. Para isso, os impactos negativos das publicações impugnadas restam evidenciados, o qual comprova que o conteúdo inverídico teve alcance exponencial, mostrando-se ser significativo agente de interferência na liberdade de opinião e pensamento dos eleitores, uma vez que os posts impugnados agem de forma coordenada para atribuir conduta moralmente reprovável ao candidato Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva.

48. Portanto, os impactos negativos da publicação em comento restam evidenciados, uma vez que possuem conteúdo eleitoral e são compartilhados na internet, alcançando um número inestimável de eleitores brasileiros de modo a influenciar diretamente na sua escolha, violando o direito de voto livre e automaticamente a democracia, o que torna urgente medida judicial para cessar os danos.

49. Portanto, em sede liminar, requer-se seja determinada: (i) a remoção da publicação ora denunciada; e (ii) que a Representada se abstenha de veicular notícias com o mesmo teor, de modo a preservar a higidez e a lisura das eleições e do processo eleitoral.

IV – DOS PEDIDOS

50. Por todo o exposto, a Coligação Brasil da Esperança requer:

50.2. Seja determinado aos Representados que se abstenham de veicular outras notícias e/ou publicações que contenham o mesmo teor, sob pena de multa, a ser arbitrada por esta c. Corte.

51. A citação dos Representados, para, querendo, apresentar defesa;

52. No mérito:

52.1. A confirmação da medida liminar, de modo a determinar que a publicação seja removida e que a Representada se abstenha de veicular outras desinformações com o mesmo teor; e

52.2. A condenação por propaganda irregular e a consequente aplicação da multa de pena máxima conforme previsão legal, a Representada.

Nestes termos, pede deferimento.

REQUERENTE: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, que detectou, nesta data, a realização de uma live de caráter sensacionalista, com a apresentação de acusações vagas e sem provas, que atingem a integridade e a normalidade do processo eleitoral, incentivando, com base em falsas afirmações de fraude, a recusa dos resultados e, eventualmente, uma ruptura institucional.

As manifestações em questão foram realizadas nos seguintes canais e perfis:

<https://www.youtube.com/c/LaDerechaDiario> (Youtube)

<https://instagram.com/canalhipocritas?igshid=YmMyMTA2M2Y=> (Instagram)

<https://instagram.com/laderechadiario?igshid=YmMyMTA2M2Y=> (Instagram)

BrazilWasStolen - Twitch (Twitch)

Considerando a gravidade e a notoriedade dos fatos narrados, dispensável a realização de diligência de constatação.

É o breve relato. Decido.

A legislação vigente confere à Justiça Eleitoral uma ferramenta de ampla aplicação, voltada à preservação da paridade de armas, da normalidade e da integridade do processo eleitoral, podendo abranger a comunicação em sentido amplo, por meio de medidas preventivas ou repressivas necessárias a evitar ou afastar a prática de atos que atentem contra as normas estruturantes da competição eleitoral.

À luz do que dispõe o § 2º do art. 41 da Lei das Eleições, o encargo em questão abarca não apenas as violações de propaganda, mas ainda todo tipo de ilicitude capaz de comprometer a higidez das eleições, sendo esse, precisamente, o quadro dos ataques institucionais levados a efeito no campo da desinformação.

A partir dos fatos relatados, estão presentes, em hipótese, os ilícitos previstos nos arts. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, e 286 do Código Penal:

Art. 2º. É vedada a divulgação ou compartilhamento de fatos sabidamente inverídicos ou gravemente descontextualizados que atinjam a integridade do processo eleitoral, inclusive os processos de votação, apuração e totalização de votos.

Art. 296. Promover desordem que prejudique os trabalhos eleitorais:

Pena – detenção até dois meses e pagamento de 60 a 90 dias-multa.

Art. 286. Incitar, publicamente, a prática de crime.

Pena – detenção, de três a seis meses, e multa.

O art. 2º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022 visa a preservar as condições de normalidade do pleito, eliminando os riscos sociais associados à desinformação, a partir da disseminação generalizada de notícias falsas que prejudicam a aceitação pacífica dos resultados, em manifesta lesão à soberania popular (arts. 1º, parágrafo único e 14, “caput” e § 9º, da Constituição da República) e à estabilidade do processo democrático.

Em paralelo, a divulgação, consciente e deliberada de informações falsas sobre a atuação da Justiça Eleitoral ou das autoridades ou servidores que a compõem, atribuindo-lhes, direta ou indiretamente, comportamento fraudulento ou ilícito, implica na promoção de desordem informativa que prejudica, substancialmente, a realização de seus correspondentes encargos institucionais, atraindo, em tese, a prática do crime previsto no art. 296 do Código Eleitoral.

Por fim, o incentivo público à intervenção militar, com a conseqüente anulação da vontade popular livremente externada nas urnas eletrônicas configura o delito de incitação ao crime, previsto no art. 286 do Código Penal, uma vez que a abolição violenta do Estado democrático de direito e a tentativa de golpe de Estado estão igualmente tipificadas naquele código, designadamente nos arts. 359-L e 359-M.

Além disso, é evidente que as manifestações públicas detectadas possuem potencial para tumultuar o processo eleitoral, na medida em que incentivam comportamentos ilegais e beligerantes, atraindo, como consequência, a possibilidade de alterações ou episódios potencialmente violentos.

Observem-se, nessa linha, algumas passagens relevantes, apenas a título exemplificativo, das quais se extrai potencial para a ocorrência de traumas ou alterações sociais:

URGENTE

Convocação para coletiva de imprensa para canais de TV e acompanhamento ao vivo da apresentação da auditoria privada sobre as eleições no Brasil

No dia 4 de novembro, às 17h (horário de Buenos Aires), apresentaremos (e explicaremos) a auditoria privada sobre as anomalias nas urnas eletrônicas do 1º e 2º turno das eleições brasileiras.

Este relatório deve ser divulgado da Argentina, pois por ordem do TSE, nenhum meio de comunicação ou grupo privado de pessoas pode divulgar informações que ponham em dúvida o resultado eleitoral deste ano.

As anomalias encontradas e o relatório dos resultados serão explicados e apresentados durante esta live e coletiva de imprensa.

Também forneceremos toda a documentação com os conjuntos de dados, e instruções para que outros especialistas possam fazer a mesma análise, e até mesmo indivíduos que queiram fazer suas próprias pesquisas, já que isso foi feito com dados públicos do TSE.

Os links das diferentes live serão enviados minutos antes do início por motivos de segurança.

Muito obrigado

Trata-se de condutas ilegais de natureza grave, com grande potencial para tumultuar as eleições em andamento e que, como se sabe, terminam somente com o ato de diplomação. Fica assim autorizado o exercício do poder administrativo para fazer cessar ilícitos, conferido às autoridades eleitorais pelos arts. 249 do Código Eleitoral, 41 da Lei 9.504/1997, e 2º, § 1º, da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022.

Ante o exposto, com base nos arts. 2º, § 1º da Res.-TSE nº 23.714/2022, 41, da Lei nº 9.504/97, 249 e 296 do Código Eleitoral, DETERMINO às plataformas Youtube, Twitter, Twitch e Instagram a imediata e definitiva remoção dos canais e perfis acima mencionados, sob pena de multa ora fixada no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação.

Cumpra-se com urgência.

Após, ENCAMINHEM-SE cópia eletrônica dos autos à Procuradoria-Geral Eleitoral para que promova as medidas cabíveis.

TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

PETIÇÃO CÍVEL (241) Nº 0601964-04.2022.6.00.0000 (PJe) - BRASÍLIA - DISTRITO FEDERAL

RELATOR: MINISTRO ALEXANDRE DE MORAES

INTERESSADO: TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL

DECISÃO

Trata-se de procedimento iniciado a partir de informação encaminhada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, acerca de perfil nas redes sociais, orientado para a divulgação de desinformação contra as eleições e apologia à intervenção militar, em detrimento da vontade popular registrada nas Eleições 2022.

Por intermédio da decisão de ID 158579784, determinei:

i) a reativação da conta dos perfis Wagner Pereira, José Crastechini, Rita de Cássia Serrão e Fernando Conrado no Twitter, mantendo-se, porém a remoção das postagens irregulares veiculadas; e

ii) a aplicação de MULTA DIÁRIA, no valor de R$ 20.000,00 (vinte mil reais), a incidir na hipótese de reiteração de divulgação dos conteúdos bloqueados ou de publicação de outras mensagens instigadoras ou incentivadoras de golpe militar, atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito.

Por fim, iii) comunique-se a Plataforma Digital Twitter para cumprimento imediato da presente decisão; e iv) diante da pertinência temática ao Inquérito 4.879, encaminhem-se os autos ao SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL.

A Assessoria de Enfrentamento à Desinformação aponta o descumprimento da determinação por parte de Wagner Pereira e Rita de Cássia (ID 158986117):

1) Wagner Pereira:

Da análise dos conteúdos veiculados no perfil "wagnerP85638598" no Twitter, observa-se a veiculação de mensagens atentatórias à confiabilidade da Justiça Eleitoral e do sistema eletrônico de votação.

No dia 1º de maio de 2023, o perfil postou as seguintes mensagens:

Link: <https://twitter.com/wagnerP85638598/status/1653003581157437440>

Ademais, o perfil permanece a divulgar fatos que já foram desmentidos, como no seguinte retweet, datado de 3 de março do corrente ano, contendo vídeo no qual a Jovem Pan News teria divulgado a vitória de Bolsonaro nas eleições presidenciais de 2022:

Link da postagem: <https://twitter.com/vanitoc1/status/1627170054935543810>

O vídeo, que circulou muito durante o período eleitoral de 2022, já foi desmentido por diversas agências de checagem de fatos e pelo próprio TSE:

As postagens que deram ensejo à decisão 158579784 não foram encontradas.

URL do post: <https://twitter.com/fernandoconrado/status/1602299748526051328>

As postagens que deram ensejo à decisão 158579784 não foram encontradas.

É o breve relato.

Nos termos da decisão ID 158579784, ficou determinada a reativação da conta dos perfis Wagner Pereira, José Crastechini, Rita de Cássia Serrão e Fernando Conrado no Twitter, mantendo-se, porém a remoção das postagens irregulares veiculadas.

Ainda, na mencionada decisão, foi determinada a imposição de multa cominatória, consistente na abstenção de publicação, promoção, replicação e compartilhamento das notícias fraudulentas (fake news), sob pena de multa diária de R$ 20.000,00 (vinte mil reais) no caso de reiteração de divulgação dos conteúdos bloqueados ou de publicação de outras mensagens instigadoras ou incentivadoras de golpe militar, atentatórias à JUSTIÇA ELEITORAL e ao Estado Democrático de Direito.

A partir da Informação ID 158986117, apresentada pela Assessoria Especial de Enfrentamento à Desinformação, constata-se a recalcitrância de Wagner Pereira e Rita de Cássia na propagação de desinformação contra as eleições, em franca apologia a atos antidemocráticos.

Trata-se de nítido descumprimento da medida imposta, o que enseja o reconhecimento da multa diária no valor de R$ 20.000,00 (vinte mil reais), a incidir desde 1º/5/2023, conforme autoriza o art. 4º da Res.-TSE 23.714/2022, o qual prevê o combate à produção sistemática de desinformação sobre o processo eleitoral.

Ante o exposto, DETERMINO:

a) a expedição de ofício ao Twitter para que proceda a imediata remoção dos links abaixo relacionados, sob pena de multa no valor de R$150.000,00 (cento e cinquenta mil reais) por hora de descumprimento, contada a partir do término da segunda hora após o recebimento da notificação:

THE ATTACK ON FREE SPEECH ABROAD AND THE BIDEN ADMINISTRATION'S SILENCE: THE CASE OF BRAZIL

Part II

Interim Staff Report of the Committee on the Judiciary
and the
Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government
U.S. House of Representatives

May 7, 2024

BRAZIL’S CENSORSHIP OF FREE SPEECH ONLINE

The Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government are conducting oversight of how and to what extent the Executive Branch has coerced or colluded with companies and other intermediaries to censor lawful speech.¹ As witnesses have testified to the Select Subcommittee, the United States must be careful to protect and defend freedom of speech in America, especially amid a wave of government censorship and other anti-democratic actions worldwide.²

On April 17, 2024, the Committee and Select Subcommittee issued a 540-page report regarding the Brazilian government’s censorship efforts and the Biden Administration’s silence on the issue.³ On the same day, the Committee and the Select Subcommittee wrote to the U.S. Department of State’s Under Secretary for Civilian Security, Democracy, and Human Rights, and the Special Envoy and Coordinator for Digital Freedom asking for a briefing “about how the State Department intends to respond to these attacks on free speech in Brazil,” and for relevant documents and communications between the State Department and the government of Brazil regarding the censorship orders.⁴

The Committee and Select Subcommittee’s report described how Brazil’s ruling leftist government targeted, and largely succeeded in censoring, conservative members of the federal legislature, members of the judiciary, journalists, radio stations, and even a gospel singer.⁵ These censorship efforts have been spearheaded by Alexandre de Moraes, a justice on the Supreme Federal Court in Brazil, and the President of the Superior Electoral Court in Brazil.⁶

Since that report, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have obtained new documents that shed additional light on this censorship regime, including an April 2024 order to X as well as nine orders to Rumble or entities owned by Rumble.⁷ The newly obtained documents tell a story

In Dublin, they’re about to enact a draconian hate-crime bill that poses a dire threat to free speech. In Paris, President Emanuel Macron has called for censoring online speech. In Brussels, the EU’s Internal Market Commissioner is calling for a crackdown on “illegal content.” In Brasilia, they’re fighting “fake news” and “disinformation” by clamping down on legitimate online speech. To say nothing of Russia and China and Iran. America is so exceptional—indispensable really. Please do not succumb to the same illiberal, the same authoritarianism. Please keep fighting for what you know is right. Canada is watching. similar to the one detailed in the Committee and Select Subcommittee’s first report. Brazilian authorities, particularly Moraes, have ordered social media companies to suspend or remove popular accounts on Rumble.⁸ On December 22, 2023, Rumble’s CEO, Chris Pavlovski, announced that Rumble would not comply with the censorship demands from Brazilian courts and instead would “disable access to Rumble for users in Brazil.”⁹

Though in a different form, secret government-directed censorship is not a problem limited to Brazil or other foreign governments; it is happening here in the United States.¹⁰ Like Brazil, the Biden Administration has attacked journalists, political opponents, and Americans across the political spectrum in an attempt to silence the Administration’s many critics.¹¹ These attacks on free speech abroad serve as a warning for America.¹² The Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to conduct oversight and develop legislative remedies to protect the First Amendment.

DECISÃO

Trata-se de representação da Polícia Federal, subscrita pelo Delegado de Polícia Federal PAULO HENRIQUE BUFÁICAL COBUCCI, pelas medidas cautelares de busca e apreensão, sequestro e bloqueio de bens, afastamento de sigilo bancário e bloqueio de contas e proibição de propagação de ideias e atos antidemocráticos em face de RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS (CPF 359.972.878-07), "relacionado com o financiamento do(s) acampamento(s) em frente ao quartel do Exército, que, com reivindicações ilegais, atentaram contra o Estado Democrático de Direito e desempenharam papel crucial nos eventos de invasão e na depredação dos edifícios-sedes dos Poderes da República, ocorridos no 08 de janeiro de 2023".

Consta da representação da Polícia Federal (fls. 3-29):

"No dia 08 de janeiro de 2023, grupos de manifestantes, atuando contra a ordem democrática invadiram e depredaram as sedes dos três Poderes da República, em Brasília/DF. Vários ônibus transportaram os grupos bolsonaristas até a frente do Quartel General do Exército.

Nesse contexto, em conformidade com o extraído da IPJ Nº 202/2023, produzida por ocasião da análise do afastamento do sigilo dos dados bancários de MARLUCIA RAMIRO (CPF: 063.942.408-26), investigada no âmbito dos atos antidemocráticos como integrante do núcleo "financiador/organizador", identificou-se uma série de transferências bancárias suspeitadas, indicando que RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS (359.972.878-07) foi um dos arrecadadores de valores do ato antidemocrático de 08/01/2023, sendo relevante dizer que RAFAEL disponibilizou uma chave

PET 12227 / DF

PIX a fim de arrecadar dinheiro - tal fato foi exposto pelos veículos da mídia, <https://www.metropoles.com/colunas/guilherme-amado/arrecadador-de-ato-terrorista-jafoi-alvo-de-alexandre-de-moraes>.

Nessa mesma reportagem, no dia 08/01/23 RAFAEL teria divulgado vídeos enquanto participava de protesto em São Paulo. No ato, ao comemorar a invasão ao Congresso, RAFAEL teria solicitado doações para seu próprio PIX para auxiliar nas caravanas e alimentação dos patriotas em Brasília.

Conforme noticiado, RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS esteve em São Paulo, no dia 08/01/23 estava em um protesto em São Paulo comemorando os atos de depredação em Brasília, proferindo, em vídeo, o seguinte: "Invadiram o Congresso, pessoal! Tomamos o Brasil de volta, pessoal! Agora é tudo nosso, tudo dominado!", gritava, em meio a faixas pedindo um golpe militar.

(...)

RAFAEL MORENO também foi investigado no inquérito Nº 4.781 STFDF, tendo sido alvo de medida de busca e apreensão nesse inquérito das Fake News, além de ter tido perfis bloqueados nas redes sociais Twitter e Facebook. Atualmente, Rafael Moreno administra ao menos dois perfis distintos no Instagram (@rafaelmorenoss e @roboconservador), de acordo com as imagens expostas (extraídas em 09 de fevereiro de 2024) a seguir:

Procedeu-se a análise do conteúdo das redes sociais em conjunto com o cruzamento de dados financeiros do investigado RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS (CPF 359.972.878-07), conforme consta na Informação de Polícia Judiciária nº 36/2024.

Identificou-se, além dos perfis no Instagram, a página utilizada por RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS na rede social Facebook.

Em ambas as redes sociais, Instagram e Facebook, os

PET 12227 / DF

perfis do investigado são abertos, em que RAFAEL se demonstra bastante ativo, realizando publicações, algumas recentes, como vídeos discursando em manifestações, publicações em favor do impeachment do ministro Alexandre de Moraes entre outras manifestações políticas contra o atual governo federal e contra as investigações referentes aos atentados de 08/01/2023.

Pesquisas em redes sociais permitiram encontrar outros dois perfis do usuário RAFAEL MORENO: @RafaelMorenoSS2 e @Monarquista, conforme denúncia do usuário do perfil denominado "PASTOR MALA" (@Prmalaoficial), de acordo imagem a seguir:

Nas análises dos referidos perfis (@RafaelMorenoSS, RafaelMorenoSS2 e @_Monarquista) observou-se que somente os perfis @RafaelMorenoSS e @Rafae1MorenoSS2 estavam identificados com nome e foto do referido denunciado RAFAEL MORENO, conforme imagem abaixo:

Sobre o financiamento dos atos antidemocráticos, há postagens no perfil @Rafae1MorenoSS2 que indicam movimentação para arrecadação de doações via PIX para alimentação e transporte de pessoas em Brasília, conforme imagem abaixo.

Ressalta-se que foram encontrados perfis de RAFAEL MORENO nas principais redes sociais: Instagram (106. mil seguidores), X (42 mil seguidores - PERFIL @RafaelMorenoSS e 4.196 seguidores - PERFIL @Rafae1MorenoSS2), Threads (13,4 mil seguidores), Facebook (4 mil seguidores - PERFIL rafaelmorenoss e 11 mil seguidores - PERFIL rafamorenoss).

Já na rede social Facebook, em postagem mais recente, por exemplo, RAFAEL faz postagem sobre suposto abuso de autoridade que a Polícia Federal teria praticado durante cumprimento de mandado de busca contra o Deputado Federal CARLOS JORDY.

PET 12227 / DF

Foi possível constatar que, no dia 01/11/2022, RAFAEL esteve em manifestação contra o resultado das eleições e convocou pessoas para comparecerem à rua. Já em publicação de 30/12/2022, chama as Forças Armadas de "Frouxas Armadas". Antes das eleições de 2022 fez publicações que demonstram radicalismo político, como texto em que diz que a disputa política entre Jair Bolsonaro e Lula seria uma guerra do bem contra o mal.

(...)

Prosseguindo com as pesquisas, apurou-se que, em pesquisas em fontes abertas, matérias jornalísticas indicam que à época dos atos antidemocráticos, RAFAEL MORENO teria arrecadado valores para auxiliar no financiamento de acampamentos em frente aos quartéis e caravanas de ônibus à Brasília. Entretanto, não foram mais encontradas as publicações em que RAFAEL solicita valores.

Segundo reportagem do dia 29/12/2022 (<https://globo.globo.com/politica/noticia/2022/12/a-tres-dias-da-posse-bo-lsonaristaseguem-fnanciando-atos-com-vaquinhas-rifas-e-premios-de-r-10-mil.html>), RAFAEL teria arrecado pelo menos 67 mil reais. De acordo com a matéria, RAFAEL afirma que o dinheiro arrecadado estaria sendo utilizado exclusivamente para alimentar manifestantes em Brasília e contribuir no custeio de algumas caravanas para lá.

Ainda de acordo com fontes abertas (<https://blogdobarroto.com.br/morador-de-natal-se-gaba-de-financiar-atos-golpistas-e-escapar-do-stf/>), RAFAEL MORENO manteve um financiamento coletivo para um protesto na posse de Lula (PT). O publicitário foi um dos citados no relatório final da CPMI dos atos golpistas, apresentado em outubro de 2023 pela senadora Eliziane Gama (PSD-MA). Segundo trechos do relatório, "Entre as fontes financeiras, destaca-se a vaquinha virtual mantida pelo publicitário Rafael Moreno de Souza Santos, que chegou a arrecadar mais de R$ 60 mil reais por meio de um site de financiamento coletivo", ratificou a senadora.

O publicitário não foi incluído na lista de pedidos de indiciamento da CPMI, mas a relatora indicou que era "necessário um maior aprofundamento das investigações em relação a Rafael Moreno de Souza Santos" e outros nomes.

A reportagem menciona que RAFAEL MORENO possui um apartamento em um condomínio no bairro Pajuçara, zona norte de Natal. No grupo de moradores no Whatsapp, ele se gaba de "fugir" do STF. Além disso, ele e a noiva passaram a defender pautas de extrema-direita após o protesto que interditou o trânsito na Ponte Newton Navarro em 13/11/2023.

No que se refere aos dados efetivamente levantados até o momento na investigação, foram localizadas movimentações bancárias de RAFAEL MORENO com outros investigados por envolvimento no financiamento dos atos antidemocráticos, que reforçam as notícias de que RAFAEL MORENO também teria atuado de forma significativa com o financiamento dos atos que levaram aos ataques do dia 08/01/2023 em Brasília.

De acordo com a IPJ 202/2023, referente à análise bancária de MARLÚCIA RAMIRO, CPF 063.942.408-26, apontada como uma das organizadoras de caravanas de ônibus à Brasília, RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS, CPF 359.972.878-07, entre 12/11/2022 e 30/12/2022, transferiu para MARLÚCIA um total de R$ 4.610,00 em cinco transações bancárias.

Conforme o caso SIMBA - 002-PF008300-90, referente ao IPL 2023.0003935 - CINQ/CGRC/DICOR/PF (INQ 4920), que abrange o sigilo bancário do investigado JORGE ANTHONNY CHEDIK REZENDE FILHO (CPF 037.315.121-73), entre 05/11/2022 e 04/01/2023, foram identificadas oito transferências bancárias, no total de R$ 22.443,43 - na forma apresentada pela tabela 1 - de RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS para JORGE, outro envolvido no financiamento das ações que levaram aos atentados do dia 08/01/2023.

Ressalta-se que não foram localizadas outras razões aparentes que justificassem as transferências de um total de mais de vinte cinco mil reais das contas de RAFAEL MORENO para os dois envolvidos apontados diretamente nos financiamentos de caravanas e acampamentos em frente ao QG do Exército.

PET 12227 / DF

(...)

Em 12/11/22, MARLUCIA RAMIRO recebe R$1.800,00 de RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS (359.972.878-07), o que pode indicar que RAFAEL angariou valores e depois os repassou para MARLUCIA RAMIRO, tendo em vista que RAFAEL disponibilizou uma chave PIX a fim de arrecadar dinheiro - tal fato foi exposto pelos veículos da mídia: <https://www.metropoles.com/colunas/guilhermeamado/arrecadador-de-ato-terrorista-ja-foi-alvo-de-alexandre-de-moraes>.

Portanto, ao considerar o período e diante da possibilidade de arrecadação de recursos via PIX, infere-se que RAFAEL tenha repassado parte dos valores arrecadados, por ele via PIX, para MARLUCIA, provavelmente destinando os valores ao financiamento indireto do transporte de manifestantes, tanto nas manifestações que ocorreram no mês de novembro/2022 quanto nos atos de vandalismo do dia 08/01/23.

Já em 23/11/22 e 24/11/22, RAFAEL envia R$ 500,00 para MARLUCIA, que, por sua vez, repassa o valor para MARCOS PAULO BOLOTE (294.504.658-00). MARCOS, assim como MARLUCIA, possui endereço registrado na cidade de GUARULHOS/SP. Em uma pesquisa de mercado, junto a empresas de venda de passagens de ônibus, verificou-se que uma passagem de GUARULHOS/SP a BRASÍLIA/DF está na média de R$ 500,00. Assim, o contexto a que se refere, além do numerário remetido a MARCOS sugerem a sua utilização para compra de um bilhete de ônibus. Ainda, apurou-se que MARCOS é analista de sistemas e já foi proprietário de três empresas, uma de representação comercial, outra de comércio varejista de bebidas, e a terceira de atividades em teletendimento. Também há uma arma registrada em seu nome, uma TAURUS PT92 de calibre 9mm.

Mais adiante, em 03/12/22, cumpre destacar que RAFAEL realiza mais uma transferência para MARLUCIA, desta vez, no valor de R$ 350,00. Logo em seguida, a investigada repassa R$ 349,00 para JORGE ANTHONNY CHEDIK REZENDE FILHO (037.315.121-73), advogado que supostamente angariou recursos para o financiamento de tendas e alimentos no QGEx em Brasília/DF2 (RE 2023.0003098 - PET 10.872/DF) <<https://www.metropoles.com/brasil;advogado-de-bolsonarista-queplanejou-atentado-e-reu-por-organizacao-criminosa>>. Ressalte-se que, em 03/02/2023, a Polícia Federal realizou o cumprimento da ordem judicial de busca e apreensão, na residência de JORGE, porém o investigado não foi localizado e nada foi arrecadado naquela ocasião.

Importante consignar que MARLUCIA é investigada no âmbito do RE 2023.0012028 e PET 11.022/DF por supostamente ser organizadora das caravanas com destino a Brasília, além de possuir à época dos fatos empresa de nome fantasia "PÁTRIA AMADA", portadora do CNPJ 37.627.574/0001-02, cujo objeto social é transporte rodoviário coletivo de passageiros, sob regime de fretamento, com as atividades encerradas - sem motivo aparente - em 28/01/2023, logo após os atos antidemocráticos de 08 de janeiro de 2023.

Em face ao exposto, através do cruzamento de dados existentes e da análise das movimentações bancárias, das redes sociais e outras fontes abertas foi possível concluir que há indícios contundentes de que RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SILVA (CPF 359.972.878-07) contribuiu com o financiamento de atos que resultaram nos atentados do dia 08/01 /2023:

Entre os meses de novembro/2022 ao início de janeiro/2023, RAFAEL MORENO transferiu valores para dois investigados de financiamento dos atentados, aparentemente sem outras justificativas:

Para MARLÚCIA RAMIRO, CPF 063.942.408-26, transferiu R$ 4.610,00 em cinco transações;

Para JORGE ANTHONNY CHEDIAK REZENDE FILHO, CPF 037.315.121-73, transferiu R$ 22.443,43 em oito transações.

Matérias jornalísticas apontam que na época dos fatos, RAFAEL MORENO estaria angariando recursos para auxiliar no financiamento das caravanas de ônibus para Brasília e na manutenção de acampamentos em frente aos quartéis;

RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SILVA, que se autointitula criador de conteúdo digital e conta com perfil de mais de cem mil seguidores no seu Instagram, demonstra-se ativo politicamente, participando de manifestações, onde fala em palanques, faz severas críticas ao atual governo e a membros do Judiciário, entre outras manifestações com teor nitidamente político. Esse fato, somado aos demais elementos de informação, corrobora com a hipótese de que RAFAEL tenha angariado recursos para financiar os atos que levaram ao dia 08/01/2023.

A Procuradoria-Geral da República encampou integralmente as medidas requeridas pela autoridade policial (fls. 72-79).

É o relatório. DECIDO.

I - CONSIDERAÇÕES INICIAIS

Nos termos relatados, as condutas do investigado noticiadas pela Polícia Federal ocorreram no curso dos atos antidemocráticos, nos quais grupos financiados por empresários insatisfeitos com o legítimo resultado do pleito, com violência e grave ameaça às pessoas, passaram a bloquear o tráfego em diversas rodovias do país, com o intuito de abolirem o

PET 12227 / DF

Estado Democrático de Direito, pleiteando um golpe militar e o retorno da Ditadura.

No caso específico de RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS, suas condutas ocorreram no contexto dos atos ocorridos na Esplanada dos Ministérios em 8/1/2023, com destruição dos prédios do CONGRESSO NACIONAL, do PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO e, com muito mais raiva e ódio, do SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL, fatos amplamente investigados em diversos procedimentos que tramitam nesta SUPREMA CORTE.

Segundo a autoridade policial, apura-se uma intricada rede, espalhada geograficamente por todo o país, que aparentemente operou com um modelo de financiamento coletivo, por meio de contribuições realizadas através de transferências PIX e concentradas em contas pertencentes a pessoas físicas e jurídicas encarregadas de adquirir suprimentos, alugar tendas e outros itens utilizados no dia a dia dos acampamentos golpistas.

A análise, conforme a IPJ 202/2023, revelou as movimentações bancárias dos envolvidos, financiadores das estruturas instaladas e mantidas em frente ao Quartel General do Exército. RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS teria recebido diversas transferências suspeitas, indicando que foi um dos arrecadadores do ato antidemocrático de 8/1/2023.

Também constatou-se que RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS, no dia 8/1/2023, ao comemorar a invasão do CONGRESSO NACIONAL, teria solicitado doações para seu PIX a fim de auxiliar nas caravanas e alimentação dos "patriotas" em Brasília/DF.

Relembro que na referida data de 8/1/2023 proferi decisões determinando as seguintes medidas, referendadas pelo Plenário do SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL:

"I. Imposição de medida cautelar diversa da prisão, consistente na suspensão do exercício da função pública (art. 319, VI, do Código de Processo Penal) afastando IBANEIS ROCHA do cargo de Governador do Distrito Federal pelo prazo inicial de 90 (noventa) dias;

II. Desocupação e dissolução total, em 24 (vinte e quatro) horas, dos acampamentos realizados nas imediações dos Quartéis Gerais e outras unidades militares para a prática de atos antidemocráticos e prisão em flagrante de seus participantes;

III. Apreensão e bloqueio de todos os ônibus identificados pela Polícia Federal, que trouxeram os terroristas para o Distrito Federal;

IV. Proibição imediata, até o dia 31 de janeiro, de ingresso de quaisquer ônibus e caminhões com manifestantes no Distrito Federal;

V. Adoção de providências pela Polícia Federal, TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL e ANTT para identificação dos participantes dos atos investigados; e

VI. Expedição de ofício às empresas responsáveis pela administração de mídias sociais para o bloqueio de perfis que instigam e divulgam os atos investigados, com fornecimento dos dados cadastrais a esta SUPREMA CORTE e integral preservação de seu conteúdo.

VII. DECRETAÇÃO DA PRISÃO PREVENTIVA, com fundamento no art. 312 do Código de Processo Penal, de ANDERSON GUSTAVO TORRES e de FÁBIO AUGUSTO VIEIRA.

VIII. DETERMINAÇÃO DA REALIZAÇÃO DE BUSCA E APREENSÃO em todos os endereços indicados pela Polícia Federal ANDERSON GUSTAVO TORRES e de FÁBIO AUGUSTO VIEIRA."

Naquela ocasião, destaquei que os responsáveis pelos desprezíveis ataques terroristas à Democracia e às Instituições Republicanas serão responsabilizados, assim como os financiadores, instigadores e os anteriores e atuais agentes públicos coniventes e criminosos, que continuam na ilícita conduta da prática de atos antidemocráticos.

Os fatos narrados demonstram uma possível organização criminosa que tem por um de seus fins desestabilizar as instituições republicanas, principalmente aquelas que possam contrapor-se de forma constitucionalmente prevista a atos ilegais ou inconstitucionais, como o CONGRESSO NACIONAL e o SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL, utilizando-se de uma rede virtual de apoiadores que atuam, de forma sistemática, para criar ou compartilhar mensagens que tenham por mote final a derrubada da estrutura democrática e do Estado de Direito no Brasil.

Essa organização criminosa, ostensivamente, atenta contra a Democracia e o Estado de Direito, especificamente contra o Poder Judiciário e em especial contra o SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL, pleiteando a cassação de seus membros e o próprio fechamento da Corte Máxima do País, com o retorno da Ditadura e o afastamento da fiel observância da Constituição Federal da República.

A Democracia brasileira não irá mais suportar a ignóbil política de apaziguamento, cujo fracasso foi amplamente demonstrado na tentativa de acordo do então primeiro-ministro inglês Neville Chamberlain com Adolf Hitler.

Absolutamente TODOS serão responsabilizados civil, política e criminalmente pelos atos atentatórios à Democracia, ao Estado de Direito e às Instituições, inclusive pela dolosa conivência por ação ou omissão motivada pela ideologia, dinheiro, fraqueza, covardia, ignorância, má-fé ou mau-caratismo.

A Democracia brasileira não será abalada, muito menos destruída, por criminosos terroristas. A defesa da Democracia e das Instituições é inegociável, pois como ainda lembrado pelo grande primeiro-ministro inglês, construir pode ser a tarefa lenta e difícil de anos. Destruir pode ser o ato impulsivo de um único dia.

II- BUSCA E APREENSÃO DOMICILIAR E PESSOAL

A inviolabilidade domiciliar constitui uma das mais antigas e importantes garantias individuais de uma Sociedade civilizada, pois engloba a tutela da intimidade, da vida privada, da honra, bem como a proteção individual e familiar do sossego e tranquilidade, inclusive do local onde se exerce a profissão ou a atividade, desde que constitua ambiente fechado ou de acesso restrito ao público (HC nº 82.788/RJ, 2ª T, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO). Esse fundamental direito, porém, não se reveste de caráter absoluto (RHC 117159, 1ª T, Rel. Min. LUIZ FUX) e não deve ser transformado em garantia de impunidade de crimes, que, eventualmente, em seu interior se pratiquem ou que possibilitem o armazenamento de dados probatórios necessários para a investigação (RT 74/88, 84/302); podendo ser, excepcionalmente, afastado durante a persecução penal do Estado, desde que presentes as hipóteses constitucionais e os requisitos legais (RE 603.616/RO, Repercussão Geral, Pleno, Rel. Min. GILMAR MENDES; HC 93.050-6/RJ, 2ª T, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO; HC 97567, 2ª T, Rel. Min. ELLEN GRACIE).

Na espécie, estão presentes os requisitos do art. 240 do Código de Processo Penal, necessários ao deferimento de ordem judicial de busca e apreensão em seu endereço residencial, pois devidamente motivada em fundadas razões que, alicerçadas em indícios de autoria e materialidade criminosas, sinalizam a necessidade da medida para colher elementos de prova relacionados à prática de infrações penais em relação ao investigado.

Nesse sentido, se manifestou a Procuradoria-Geral da República (fls. 75-76):

“A digna autoridade policial justifica adequadamente a busca e apreensão domiciliar e pessoal contra o requerido, financiador da viagem e alimentação de indivíduos que praticaram os atos de vandalismo e de depredação em prédios públicos no dia 8.1.2023, com vistas a elucidar os responsáveis pelo financiamento dos atos criminosos investigados, mediante a captura do celular, computadores e mídias de armazenamento que podem auxiliar na identificar dos demais envolvidos e da forma de obtenção de recursos para o cometimento dos ilícitos investigados”.

PET 12227 / DF

Efetivamente, a solicitação está circunscrita à pessoa física vinculada aos fatos investigados, e os locais das busca serão devidamente indicados, limitando-se aos endereços pertinentes.

Nesse cenário, tenho por atendidos os pressupostos necessários ao afastamento da garantia constitucional da inviolabilidade do domicílio, bem como em relação a busca pessoal, encontrando-se justificada a ação invasiva na procura de outras provas das condutas ora postas sob suspeita.

III - BLOQUEIO DAS CONTAS BANCÁRIAS, ATIVOS FINANCEIROS E SEQUESTRO DE BENS

Em face das circunstâncias delineadas, é imprescindível a realização de diligências, inclusive com o afastamento excepcional de garantias individuais que não podem ser utilizadas como um verdadeiro escudo protetivo para a prática de atividades ilícitas, tampouco como argumento para afastamento ou diminuição da responsabilidade civil ou penal por atos criminosos, sob pena de desrespeito a um verdadeiro Estado de Direito (HC nº 70.814-5/SP, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, Primeira Turma, DJ de 24/6/1994).

A autoridade policial ressaltou que:

O Relatório de danos ao patrimônio do Senado Federal conforme Nota Técnica nº 01/2023 – ATDGER aponta o montante estimado de R$ 3.500.000,00 por levantamento realizado pelas áreas técnicas deste Senado Federal até o dia 09/01/2023.

Documento encaminhado por meio do Processo nº 221.490/2023 da DIRETORIA ADMINISTRATIVA da Câmara dos Deputados aponta o montante de R$ 3.556.509,14 a título de prejuízo causado a CÂMARA DOS DEPUTADOS.

PET 12227 / DF

O Ofício nº 023/GDG/2023 encaminhado pela Presidência do Supremo Tribunal Federal aponta o montante estimado em R$ 11.413.654,84 por levantamento realizado pelas áreas técnicas do Senado Federal até o dia 09/01/2023. (...).

Verifica-se que no presente caso, conforme largamente explicado, há elementos robustos indicativos de que os investigados atuaram, ainda que indiretamente, a viabilizar os atos ocorridos em 08/01/2023.

O bloqueio/sequestro de valores deve ser adotado enquanto a investigação ainda está em sua fase sigilosa, considerando o grande risco de, uma vez tendo conhecimento da quantificação formulada neste procedimento, os investigados ocultarem seus recursos, visando assim evitar medidas constritivas em detrimento dos mesmos."

A medida também foi defendida pela Procuradoria-Geral da República (fl. 77):

"Vê-se, portanto, que o sequestro especial de bens do Decreto-Lei n. 3.240/1941, diferentemente do sequestro do Código de Processo Penal, não se presta à constrição apenas dos instrumentos, produtos ou do proveito dos crimes (art. 91, II, do Código Penal), mas também do patrimônio lícito, visando a possibilitar o ressarcimento do dano, como efeito da condenação (art. 91, inciso I, Código Penal). Tem-se um tratamento mais rigoroso para os autores de crimes que importam dano à Fazenda Pública, como forma de tutelar, de modo mais efetivo, o patrimônio público e, assim, o interesse da coletividade atingida por tais práticas delituosas.

No caso do representado, os elementos revelam fortes indícios da prática de crimes, sendo apontado como financiador e incitador de manifestações ilícitas, que antecederam e que conduziram à verificação dos eventos do dia 8.1.2023, com a invasão e a depredação dos edifícios sedes dos Poderes da República, com graves repercussões patrimoniais.

PET 12227 / DF

A autoridade policial indica documentos enviados por órgãos das sedes dos Poderes da República atacadas, a respeito dos prejuízos já apurados, em decorrência dos atos antidemocráticos, que contaram com o envolvimento dos representados.

Serão gastos milhões de reais para a reformados prédios, justificando que o bloqueio cautelar das contas bancárias e demais ativos financeiros do representado incida, pelo menos, até o valor indicado pela Polícia Federal, cobrindo também parte do dano moral e imaterial."

Assim, torna-se necessário, adequado e urgente o bloqueio das contas bancárias e demais ativos financeiros do investigado, diante da possibilidade de utilização de recursos para o financiamento de atos ilícitos e antidemocráticos, com objetivo de interromper a lesão ou ameaça a direito (art. 5º, XXXV, Constituição Federal), conforme anteriormente ressaltado.

IV - AFASTAMENTO DO SIGILO BANCÁRIO

Na visão ocidental de Democracia, governo pelo povo e a limitação no exercício do poder estão indissolavelmente combinados, sendo imprescindível a observância dos direitos e garantias individuais constitucionalmente consagrados, uma vez que, enquanto comandos proibitórios expressos direcionados ao Estado tem por primordial finalidade o afastamento de indevida ingerência estatal no âmbito da esfera jurídica individual, impedindo o ferimento da dignidade humana, vida, liberdade, propriedade e intimidade (MANOEL GONÇALVES FERREIRA FILHO, Estado de direito e constituição. São Paulo: Saraiva, 1988. p. 16 ss; JOSÉ ALFREDO OLIVEIRA BARACHO. Teoria da Constituição. Revista de Informação Legislativa. ano 15. n. 58. abr/jun. 1978; J. J. GOMES CANOTILHO, J. J. Direito constitucional. Coimbra: Almedina, 1993. p. 541 ss; PAOLO BARILE. Diritti dell'uomo e libertà fondamentali. Bolonha: II Molino. p. 13 ss).

PET 12227 / DF

A real efetividade dos direitos e garantias individuais é imprescindível para a preservação do Estado de Direito (RAFAEL BIELSA. Estudios de Derecho Público Derecho Constitucional. Tomo III. Buenos Aires: Arayú, 345), pois, conforme a sempre atual advertência de MADISON:

num governo livre, é preciso dar aos direitos civis a mesma garantia que aos direitos religiosos (Federalist papers, LI)

O art. 5º, incisos X e XII da Constituição Federal, consagrou a inviolabilidade da intimidade, da vida privada, da honra e da imagem das pessoas; estendendo essa proteção constitucional aos sigilos de dados, inclusive o bancário, fiscal e telemático.

Nesse contexto, em regra, não podemos deixar de considerar que as informações bancárias, sejam as constantes nas próprias instituições financeiras, sejam as constantes na Receita Federal ou organismos congêneres do Poder Público, constituem parte da intimidade e vida privada da pessoa física ou jurídica. Não há dúvida, portanto, de que o desrespeito ao sigilo bancário constitucionalmente protegido, em princípio, acarretaria violação de garantias constitucionais (CELSO BASTOS. Estudos e pareceres de direito público. São Paulo: Revista dos Tribunais, 1993. p. 63 ss. VITAL RAMOS VASCONCELOS. Proteção constitucional ao sigilo. Revista FMU-Direito, nº6, p. 17 ss.).

A proclamação dos direitos individuais, entretanto, nasceu para reduzir a ação do Estado aos limites impostos pela Constituição, sem, contudo desconhecer a obrigatoriedade das condutas individuais operarem dentro dos limites impostos pelo direito, conforme salientado por QUIROGA LAVIÉ (Derecho constitucional. Buenos Aires: Depalma, 1993. p. 123 ss).

Os direitos e garantias individuais, conseqüentemente, não são absolutos e ilimitados, uma vez que encontram seus limites nos demais direitos igualmente consagrados pela Carta Magna (Princípio da relatividade ou convivência das liberdades públicas) e, quando houver conflito entre dois ou mais direitos ou garantias fundamentais, o intérprete deve utilizar-se do princípio da concordância prática ou da harmonização, de forma a coordenar e combinar os bens jurídicos em conflito, evitando o sacrifício total de uns em relação aos outros, realizando uma redução proporcional do âmbito de alcance de cada qual (contradição dos princípios), sempre em busca do verdadeiro significado da norma e da harmonia do texto constitucional com sua finalidade precípua.

A própria Declaração dos Direitos Humanos das Nações Unidas, expressamente, em seu art. 29 afirma tanto a finalidade, quanto a relatividade dos direitos individuais:

toda pessoa tem deveres com a comunidade, posto que somente nela pode-se desenvolver livre e plenamente sua personalidade. No exercício de seus direitos e no desfrute de suas liberdades todas as pessoas estarão sujeitas às limitações estabelecidas pela lei com a única finalidade de assegurar o respeito dos direitos e liberdades dos demais, e de satisfazer as justas exigências da moral, da ordem pública e do bem-estar de uma sociedade democrática. Estes direitos e liberdades não podem, em nenhum caso, serem exercidos em oposição com os propósitos e princípios das Nações Unidas. Nada na presente Declaração poderá ser interpretado no sentido de conferir direito algum ao Estado, a um grupo ou uma pessoa, para empreender e desenvolver atividades ou realizar atos tendentes a supressão de qualquer dos direitos e liberdades proclamados nessa Declaração.

Os direitos e garantias individuais, portanto, não podem ser utilizados como um verdadeiro escudo protetivo da prática de atividades ilícitas, tampouco como argumento para afastamento ou diminuição da responsabilidade civil ou penal por atos criminosos, sob pena de desrespeito a um verdadeiro Estado de Direito (HC nº 70.814-5/SP, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, Primeira Turma, DJ, 24-6-1994), pois como ensinado por DUGUIT:

a norma de direito, por um lado, impõe a todos o respeito aos direitos de cada um, e em contrapartida, determina uma limitação sobre os direitos individuais, para assegurar a proteção aos direitos gerais (Fundamentos do direito. São Paulo: Ícone Editora, 1996, p. 11 ss).

O afastamento da inviolabilidade do sigilo bancário só poderá ser decretado, nos termos da LC 105/01 e sempre em caráter de absoluta excepcionalidade, quando existentes fundados elementos de suspeita que se apoiem em indícios idôneos, reveladores de possível autoria de prática delituosa por parte daquele que sofre a investigação e estiverem presentes os seguintes requisitos, como tive oportunidade de destacar em voto proferido no MS 25.940/DF (PLENÁRIO 26/4/2018):

- (a) autorização judicial;
- (b) indispensabilidade dos dados constantes em determinada instituição financeira, Receita Federal ou Fazendas Públicas;
- (c) individualização dos investigados e do objeto da investigação;
- (d) obrigatoriedade da manutenção do sigilo em relação às pessoas estranhas à causa;
- (e) utilização de dados obtidos somente para a investigação que lhe deu causa, salvo nova autorização judicial.

Quanto ao ponto, assim se manifestou a Procuradoria-Geral da República (fl. 78):

A medida invasiva das contas de RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS deve compreender o período de 30.10.2022 a 21.2.2024, com a finalidade de identificar a movimentação financeira ordinária e a sua evolução no ápice do movimento criminoso em 8.1.2023, cujos atos podem ter se repetido após a deflagração do movimento antidemocrático, não se revelando proporcional ou justificável abarcar período anterior a 30.10.2022, quando o resultado das eleições ainda não era conhecido.”

Efetivamente, há necessidade de afastamento do sigilo dos dados bancários do representado, notadamente em razão de sua provável relação com o financiamento dos atos antidemocráticos ocorridos no dia 8/1/2023.

A necessidade de fiel observância aos requisitos constitucionais e legais é obrigatória para o afastamento da garantia constitucional (HC 93.050-6/RJ, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, Segunda Turma, julgado em 10-6-2008; HC 84758, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, Tribunal Pleno, DJ 16-06-2006; HC 85.088/ES, Rel. Min. ELLEN GRACIE, Segunda Turma, DJ 30-9-2005; AI 655298 AgR, Rel. Min. BROS GRAU, Segunda Turma, julgado em 04/09/2007; MS 25812 MC, Rel. Min. CEZAR PELUSO, DJ 23/02/2006 AI 541265 AgR, Rel. Min. CARLOS VELLOSO, Segunda Turma, julgado em 04/10/2005; Inq. 899-1/DF, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, DJ 23-9-1994; MS 21.729-4/DF, Rel. Min. Presidente SEPÚLVEDA PERTENCE, DJ 13-8-1993), pois, como bem salientado por MIRKINE-GUETZÉVITCH:

encontra-se aí a garantia essencial das liberdades individuais; sua limitação não é possível senão em virtude da lei (As novas tendências do direito constitucional. São Paulo: Campanha Editora Nacional, 1933. p. 77).

No caso dos autos, os requisitos se mostram plenamente atendidos, pois patente a necessidade de afastamento do sigilo bancário e fiscal para a investigação da organização criminosa responsável pelos atos terroristas ocorridos na Praça dos Três Poderes.

PET 12227 / DF

V – BLOQUEIO DE PERFIS EM REDES SOCIAIS

A Polícia Federal representou pelo bloqueio dos canais/perfis/contas de titularidade do representado em redes sociais, bem como a imposição da proibição do seu uso para divulgar mensagens de texto ou vídeo, a fim de propagar ideias antidemocráticas (f. 28).

Em face das circunstâncias delineadas, imprescindível a realização de diligências, inclusive com o afastamento excepcional de garantias individuais que não podem ser utilizadas como um verdadeiro escudo protetivo para a prática de atividades ilícitas, tampouco como argumento para afastamento ou diminuição da responsabilidade civil ou penal por atos criminosos, sob pena de desrespeito a um verdadeiro Estado de Direito (HC nº 70.814-5/SP, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, Primeira Turma, DJ de 24/6/1994).

Efetivamente, a Polícia Federal indicou que o investigado se utilizou das redes sociais exatamente com o fim de instigar, divulgar e financiar atos criminosos e golpistas (fls. 3 a 13).

A Procuradoria-Geral da República manifestou-se favoravelmente ao bloqueio dos perfis e contas do investigado em redes sociais (fls. 77-78).

Assim, se torna necessário, adequado e urgente o bloqueio dos perfis do investigado, diante da possibilidade de sua utilização para instigar atos ilícitos e antidemocráticos, bem como a adoção das demais medidas pleiteadas pelo Parquet, com objetivo de interromper a lesão ou ameaça a direito (art. 5º, XXXV, Constituição Federal), conforme anteriormente ressaltado.

VI – DISPOSITIVO

Diante de todo o exposto, com fundamento nos artigos 240 e seguintes do Código de Processo Penal DETERMINO:

(1) A BUSCA E APREENSÃO DOMICILIAR de armas, munições, computadores, tablets, celulares e outros dispositivos eletrônicos, bem como de quaisquer outros materiais elevado valor econômico apreendidos.

Expeçam-se os mandados, dirigidos à Polícia Federal, nos termos do art. 243 do Código de Processo Penal.

(2) A BUSCA E APREENSÃO PESSOAL de RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS (CPF 359.972.878-07), inclusive, para que, caso não se encontre no local da realização da busca, proceda-se à apreensão de armas, munições, objetos e dispositivos eletrônicos de que tenha a posse, bem como a busca em quartos de hotéis, motéis e outras hospedagens temporárias onde o investigado tenha se instalado, caso estejam ausente de sua residência.

AUTORIZO, desde logo, a adoção das seguintes medidas pela autoridade policial:

(2.1) busca pessoal e a apreensão de materiais em veículos automotores, caso o investigado esteja em deslocamento;

(2.2) realização de busca pessoal em desfavor de quaisquer pessoas sobre as quais, presentes no recinto no momento do cumprimento da ordem judicial, recaia suspeita de que estejam na posse de armas proibidas, objetos ou papéis que interessem à investigação (art. 240, § 2º, do Código de Processo Penal), bem como para o uso da força estritamente necessária para romper eventual obstáculo à execução dos mandados, inclusive o arrombamento de portas e cofres eventualmente existentes no endereço, caso o(a) investigado(a) não esteja no local ou se recuse a abri-los;

(2.3) autorização para o acesso e a análise do conteúdo (dados, arquivos eletrônicos, mensagens eletrônicas e e-mails) armazenado em eventuais computadores, servidores, redes, inclusive serviços digitais de armazenamento 'em nuvem', ou em dispositivos eletrônicos de qualquer natureza, por meio de quaisquer serviços utilizados, incluindo aparelhos de telefonia celular que forem encontrados, bem assim para a

apreensão, se necessário for, dos dispositivos de bancos de dados, DVDs, CDs ou discos rígidos;

(2.4) acesso e a análise do conteúdo dos computadores e demais dispositivos no local das buscas e de arquivos eletrônicos apreendidos, mesmo relativo a comunicações eventualmente registradas, inclusive dados armazenados 'em nuvem';

(2.5) arrolamento, a avaliação e a custódia, em ambiente seguro, do dinheiro em espécie e dos bens de elevado valor econômico apreendidos.

Expeça-se os mandados, dirigidos à Polícia Federal, nos termos do art. 243 do Código de Processo Penal.

(3) o BLOQUEIO IMEDIATO das contas bancárias/ativos financeiros de RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS (CPF 359.972.878-07), mediante expedição de ofício ao BANCO CENTRAL DO BRASIL e a CVM (para que o bloqueio se operacionalize nesse caso por meio do sistema SOF-CEI), incluindo posição de custódia de ações, títulos privados, títulos públicos e derivativos, aplicações em fundos de investimento, VGBL, PGBL, aplicações em LCA e LCI, aplicações em CDB' s, RDB' s, COE, ouro e afins, previdência privada, cartas de consórcio e criptomoedas.

DEVERÃO AS INSTITUIÇÕES FINANCEIRAS INFORMAR SOBRE O EFETIVO BLOQUEIO.

(4) O BLOQUEIO de veículos automotores por meio do Sistema RENAJUD e o bloqueio de bens imóveis por meio da Central Nacional de Indisponibilidade de Bens (CNIB) em relação a RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS (CPF 359.972.878-07), mediante expedição de ofício ao Conselho Nacional de Justiça.

(5) o AFASTAMENTO DO SIGILO BANCÁRIO de todos os bens, direitos e valores mantidos em instituições financeiras, no período de 30/10/2022 a 21/2/2024 (Caso nº 002-PF-008298-31 e e-mail: paulo.phbc@pf.gov.br), em nome de RAFAEL MORENO SOUZA SANTOS (CPF 359.972.878-07).

Expeça-se ofício, em caráter sigiloso, ao Banco Central do Brasil, para que:

1. Realize consulta através do SISBAJUD e se identifique as instituições financeiras nas quais as referidas pessoas físicas investigadas mantêm relacionamento como titulares, representantes ou procuradores, tais como contas de depósito à vista, de poupança, de investimento, de depósitos a prazo e outros bens, direitos e valores, diretamente ou por seus representantes legais, bem como em relações em conjunto com terceiros;

2. Consigne no SISBAJUD que o atendimento à determinação judicial deve ser realizado prioritariamente pelo sistema SIMBA, através do Caso nº 002-PF-008298-31;

3. Encaminhe o ofício judicial exclusivamente às instituições financeiras com as quais o investigado mantém ou manteve relacionamento durante o período de 30/10/2022 a 21/2/2024, conforme resultado da consulta ao CCS e faça constar na comunicação o Código Identificador do Caso nº 002-PF-008298-31 e e-mail: paulo.phbc@pf.gov.br, para ser utilizado para validação e transmissão dos dados;

4. Para o cumprimento da decisão judicial as instituições financeiras observem o disposto na Carta Circular nº 3454/2010, do Banco Central do Brasil, que divulga leiante para que as instituições financeiras prestem informações relativas a movimentação financeira, do investigado citado inclusive na qualidade de procurador, referente ao período de 30/10/2022 a 21/2/2024;

5. As instituições financeiras envolvidas encaminhem os dados bancários via rede mundial de computadores, utilizando-se dos programas VALIDADOR BANCÁRIO SIMBA e TRANSMISSOR BANCÁRIO SIMBA, disponibilizados no sítio <http://www.pf.gov.br/servicos-pg/sigilo-bancario>;

6. As instituições financeiras envolvidas encaminhem os dados bancários no prazo máximo de 30 dias a partir do recebimento do comunicado da decisão judicial;

7. Se encaminhe ofício judicial ao Banco Central do Brasil, através do protocolo digital desta instituição, solicitando a transmissão do CCS do investigado ao Código Identificador do Caso nº 002-PF-008298-31, contendo o prazo para cumprimento da ordem judicial e a data do recebimento do ofício judicial pelas instituições financeiras visando o preenchimento dos campos obrigatórios para transmissão do CCS pelo validador do SIMBA;

8. Seja autorizado a autoridade policial e a peritos criminais designados para atuar no caso, requisitar diretamente às instituições financeiras, dados e documentos de suporte das operações financeiras realizadas no período do afastamento do sigilo, bem como aqueles relacionados a cadastros dos clientes e análises de crédito feito nas próprias instituições pela área de compliance ou de controle internos;

9. Sejam fornecidos pela instituição financeira documentos relacionados à abertura da conta, fita de caixa, cheques (microfilmagem ou documento digitalizado), contratos de abertura de conta, extrato de cartão de crédito e demais documentos físicos de interesse da investigação em poder da instituição financeira através do SISBAJUD ou outro meio de interesse; e

10. Que sejam fornecidos pelo Banco Central do Brasil, em meio eletrônico, planilha eletrônica e dados tabulados, todos os registros no SISTEMA CÂMBIO existentes de operações de câmbio do investigado, no período cujo sigilo foi afastado, contendo os dados lançados no SISTEMA CÂMBIO (Dados Contratação e Dados Liquidação), especialmente: A) CONTRATAÇÃO: 1. Decision

In a decision rendered on this case record on 1/8/2023, in view of the violent escalation of the criminal acts which resulted in the invasion of the buildings of the PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO, the NATIONAL CONGRESS, the FEDERAL SUPREME COURT with plundering of public property, as widely reported by the national press, I determined, among other measures, the issuance of an official letter to companies Facebook, Tik Tok and Twitter, for them to proceed with the blocking within two (2) hours of the indicated channels/profiles/accounts, which instigated and publicized the criminal acts under investigation, under penalty of a daily fine of one hundred thousand reais (BRL 100,000.00), with the provision of their registration data to this SUPREME COURT and the full preservation of their content.

The Special Advice on Confronting Disinformation of the SUPERIOR ELECTORAL COURT informs that, through a survey on social media open data, detected a publication made by the influencer and podcaster “Monark” on the digital platform Rumble, containing an interview with the Member of the Brazilian House of Representatives FILIPE BARROS (PL- PR), in the wake of which false news are spread about the integrity of electoral institutions (Official Letter AEED/GAB-SPR/GAB-PRES no. 2419/2023).

This is the brief report. DECISION.

As I emphasized when the decision was rendered on 1/8/2023, the despicable terrorist attacks on Democracy and Republican Institutions will be held accountable, as will the financiers, instigators, and the former and current conniving and criminal public officials who continue in the illicit conduct of committing anti-democratic actions. On 1/8/2023, as is widely known nationally and internationally, the violent escalation of criminal acts resulted in the invasion of the buildings of PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO, the NATIONAL CONGRESS and the FEDERAL SUPREME COURT, with plundering of public property.

The role of the instigators of the acts, especially on social media, is of no less relevant circumstance, making it clear that the aforementioned communication means are an essential part of the criminal enterprise that resulted in the appalling acts witnessed on 1/8/2023, and in the subsequent acts scheduled for the following days, subject to decisions in this case record and in ADPF 519.

In this context, I have repeatedly emphasized that the Federal Constitution enshrines the binomial “FREEDOM and LIABILITY”; not irresponsibly allowing abuse to be carried out in the exercise of a constitutionally enshrined right; not allowing the use of “freedom of expression” as a protective shield for the practice of hateful, anti-democratic speech, threats, aggression, criminal offenses and all sorts of unlawful activities.

Freedom of expression is not Freedom of aggression!

Freedom of expression is not Freedom to destroy Democracy, Institutions and the dignity and honor of others!

Freedom of expression is not Freedom to propagate lying, aggressive, hateful and prejudiced speech!

In view of the pointed out circumstances, it is essential to carry out due diligence, including the exceptional removal of individual guarantees that cannot be used as a real protective shield for the practice of illegal activities, nor as an argument for removing or diminishing civil or criminal liability for criminal acts, under penalty of disrespecting a true Rule of Law (HC No. 70.814-5/SP, Reporting Justice CELSO DE MELLO, First Panel, Court Gazette dated June 24, 1994).

Thus, as reported, the decision rendered on 1/8/2023 determined the blocking of several profiles/channels owned by BRUNO AIUB MONTEIRO, known as “Monark”, on the social networks Instagram (@monarkoficial), Rumble (<https://rumble.com/Monark>), Telegram (<https://t.me/monarktalks> and <https://t.me/monarkk>), Tik Tok (https://www.tiktok.com/@monarktalks_) Twitter (@monark) and Youtube (<https://www.youtube.com/@MonarkTalksCortesOficial>).

However, in a new channel created on the Rumble platform (<https://rumble.com/oMonarkx>), which already has 287 thousand followers, BRUNO MONTEIRO AIUB, as reported by AEED/TSE, started again to publish fraudulent news about the actions of this SUPREME COURT and the SUPERIOR ELECTORAL COURT, in the following terms:

“Monark says: 'And it's not the guy who's going there, fighting and putting in place... because, every time the Supreme Court makes a move like that, it spends its political capital. This takes a toll on it. [...] So, why is it (Supreme) willing to pay this cost? Why is it (Supreme) willing to guarantee non-transparency in elections? We see the TSE censoring people, we see Alexandre de Moraes arresting people, you see a lot of things happening, and at the same time they are preventing the transparency of the ballot boxes? You become wary, what monkey business is happening at the ballot boxes there? Why? Why doesn't our political system want to let the Brazilian people have more certainty? What is the interest? Manipulate the ballot boxes? Manipulate the elections? That's what I keep thinking...’.”

Furthermore, AEED/TSE point out to the creation of several other profiles, in complete disregard of the previously rendered decision:

Twitter: <https://twitter.com/MonarkVoltou> (16.2 thousand followers)

Instagram: <https://www.instagram.com/monark.talks/> (101 thousand followers)

Telegram: <https://t.me/monarktalks>

Discord: <https://discord.gg/8NKCauHf9>

Thus, it becomes necessary, appropriate and urgent to interrupt the possible spread of speeches with hateful content, subversion of order and encouragement of the breakdown of institutional and democratic normality by blocking social network accounts, to stop the harm or threat to right (article 5, XXXV, Federal Constitution), as previously highlighted.

In view of the foregoing, I ORDER the issuance of official letters to companies DISCORD, META INC., RUMBLE, TELEGRAM and TWITTER, for them to proceed with the blocking of the channels/profiles/accounts detailed below within two (2) hours, on pain of a daily fine of one hundred thousand reais (BRL 100,000.00), and provide their registration data to this SUPREME COURT and the full preservation of their contents: [add all indicated links:

I FURTHER ORDER THE IMPOSITION OF A PROVISIONAL MEASURE against BRUNO MONTEIRO AIUB, consisting of abstaining from publishing, promoting, replicating and sharing fraudulent news (fake news) subject of this decision, under penalty of a DAILY FINE OF ten thousand reais (BRL 10,000.00) in case of non-compliance.

instituições eleitorais (Ofício AEED/GAB-SPR/GAB-PRES nº 2419/2023).

É o breve relato. DECIDO.

Conforme ressaltai por ocasião da decisão proferida em 8/1/2023, os desprezíveis ataques terroristas à Democracia e às Instituições Republicanas serão responsabilizados, assim como os financiadores, instigadores e os anteriores e atuais agentes públicos coniventes e criminosos, que continuam na ilícita conduta da prática de atos antidemocráticos. Na data de 8/1/2023, como é de amplo conhecimento nacional e internacional, a escalada violenta dos atos criminosos resultou na invasão dos prédios do PALÁCIO DO PLANALTO, do CONGRESSO NACIONAL e do SUPREMO TRIBUNAL FEDERAL, com depredação do patrimônio público.

O papel dos instigadores dos atos, especialmente nas redes sociais, não é circunstância de menor relevância, ficando claro que os referidos meios de comunicação são parte essencial da empreitada criminosa que resultou nos estarrecedores atos testemunhados no dia 8/1/2023, e nos subsequentes atos programados para os dias seguintes, objeto de decisões nestes autos e na ADPF 519.

Nesse contexto, tenho reiteradamente enfatizado que a Constituição Federal consagra o binômio “LIBERDADE e RESPONSABILIDADE”; não permitindo de maneira irresponsável a efetivação de abuso no exercício de um direito constitucionalmente consagrado; não permitindo a utilização da “liberdade de expressão” como escudo protetivo para a prática de discursos de ódio, antidemocráticos, ameaças, agressões, infrações penais e toda a sorte de atividades ilícitas.

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de agressão!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de destruição da Democracia, das Instituições e da dignidade e honra alheias!

Liberdade de expressão não é Liberdade de propagação de discursos mentirosos, agressivos, de ódio e

preconceituosos!

Em face das circunstâncias apontadas, imprescindível a realização de diligências, inclusive com o afastamento excepcional de garantias individuais que não podem ser utilizadas como um verdadeiro escudo protetivo para a prática de atividades ilícitas, tampouco como argumento para afastamento ou diminuição da responsabilidade civil ou penal por atos criminosos, sob pena de desrespeito a um verdadeiro Estado de Direito (HC nº 70.814-5/SP, Rel. Min. CELSO DE MELLO, Primeira Turma, DJ de 24/6/1994).

Desse modo, conforme relatado, por meio da decisão proferida em 8/1/2023, foi determinado o bloqueio de diversos perfis/canais de titularidade de BRUNO AIUB MONTEIRO, conhecido como “Monark”, nas redes sociais Instagram (@monarkoficial), Rumble (<https://rumble.com/Monark>), Telegram (<https://t.me/monarktalks> e <https://t.me/monarkk>), Tik Tok (https://www.tiktok.com/@monarktalks_) Twitter (@monark) e Youtube (<https://www.youtube.com/@MonarkTalksCortesOficial>).

Entretanto, em novo canal criado na plataforma Rumble (<https://rumble.com/c/Monarkx>), que já conta com 287 mil seguidores, BRUNO MONTEIRO AIUB, conforme relatado pela AEED/TSE, voltou a divulgar notícias fraudulentas acerca da atuação desta SUPREMA CORTE e do TRIBUNAL SUPERIOR ELEITORAL, nos seguintes termos:

“Monark diz: ‘E não é o cara que tá indo lá, lutando e colocando... porque, toda vez que o Supremo faz um movimento desse, ele gasta fichas políticas. Isso tem um custo pra ele. [...] Então, porque ele (Supremo) está disposto a pagar este custo? Por que ele (Supremo) está disposto a garantir uma não-transparência nas eleições? A gente vê o TSE censurando gente, a gente vê o Alexandre de Moraes prendendo pessoas, você vê um monte de coisa acontecendo, e ao mesmo tempo eles impedindo a transparência das urnas? Você fica desconfiado, que maracutaia está acontecendo nas urnas ali?”

INQ 4923 / DF

Por quê? Por que o nosso sistema político não quer deixar o povo brasileiro ter mais segurança? Qual é o interesse? Manipular as urnas? Manipular as eleições? É isso que eu fico pensando...’.”

Além disso, a AEED/TSE indicou a criação de diversos outros perfis, em completo desrespeito à decisão anteriormente proferida:

Twitter: <https://twitter.com/MonarkVoltou> (16,2 mil seguidores)

Instagram: <https://www.instagram.com/monark.talks/> (101 mil seguidores)

Telegram: <https://t.me/monarktalks>

Discord: <https://discord.gg/8NKCauHf9>

Assim, se torna necessária, adequada e urgente a interrupção de eventual propagação dos discursos com conteúdo de ódio, subversão da ordem e incentivo à quebra da normalidade institucional e democrática mediante bloqueio de contas em redes sociais, com objetivo de interromper a lesão ou ameaça a direito (art. 5º, XXXV, Constituição Federal), conforme anteriormente ressaltado.

Diante do exposto, DETERMINO a expedição de ofício às empresas DISCORD, META INC., RUMBLE, TELEGRAM e TWITTER, para que, no prazo de 2 (duas) horas, procedam ao bloqueio dos canais/perfis/contas abaixo discriminados, sob pena de multa diária de R$ 100.000,00 (cem mil reais), com o fornecimento de seus dados cadastrais a esta SUPREMA CORTE e a integral preservação de seu conteúdo: [acrescentar todos os links indicados:

IV. The Select Subcommittee filed briefs to help support Americans' First Amendment rights in court

In August 2023, 12 Members of Congress, including 9 Members of the Select Subcommittee, filed an amicus brief in support of the plaintiffs-appellees in Missouri v. Biden, a federal lawsuit then-pending in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit challenging the constitutionality of the federal government's wide-ranging censorship enterprise.⁷³ During oral argument, the panel of Fifth Circuit judges discussed the amicus brief and whether the Fifth Circuit could take "judicial notice" of the exhibits included in the Members' amicus brief.⁷⁴ After the Fifth Circuit affirmed the lower court's ruling and the case was appealed to the Supreme Court, 45 Members of Congress, including 11 Members of the Select Subcommittee, filed another amicus brief in the case (now Murthy v. Missouri) in support of those challenging the federal government's censorship regime.⁷⁵

The Select Subcommittee's brief before the Supreme Court outlined how the Biden-Harris Administration coerced and colluded with Big Tech companies to "distort[] the free marketplace of ideas promised by the First Amendment" and "bring[] the weight of federal authority to bear on any speech it dislike[d]—including memes and jokes" during the COVID pandemic.⁷⁶ The brief also detailed the FBI's months-long 2020 campaign to suppress true allegations of Biden family influence peddling, as well as CISA's efforts to censor conservative speech before and after the 2020 presidential election.⁷⁷

The Select Subcommittee's efforts ensured that the Supreme Court considered this voluminous evidence of federal censorship efforts as the Court decided a critically important free speech case. Justice Alito's dissenting opinion, joined by Justices Thomas and Gorsuch, concluded that the Select Subcommittee proved that the Biden-Harris White House "engaged in a covert scheme of censorship" and referenced or cited the Select Subcommittee's May 1, 2024 interim report 17 times.⁷⁸ Justice Alito cited the Select Subcommittee's work to show that Facebook changed its policies about the lab leak theory because of pressure from the Biden-

⁷⁴ Matt Taibbi, In Landmark Censorship Case, Judges Grill the Feds, RACKET NEWS (Aug. 11, 2023) (noting that "[a] secondary goal [for the administration] had to be stifling judicial curiosity about a just-filed amicus brief from Judiciary Chair Jim Jordan and other House members containing 'Facebook Files' documents. But those dreams went up in smoke fast. [] Seven minutes in [] [Judge] Willett cut Tenny [the Biden Administration's lawyer] off. . . . Harris Administration.⁷⁹ Justice Alito specifically noted that “[i]nternal Facebook emails paint a clear picture of subservience.”⁸⁰ As a result, Justice Alito concluded that the Biden-Harris White House “engaged in a covert scheme of censorship that came to light only after the plaintiffs demanded their emails in discovery and a congressional Committee obtained them by subpoena,” citing the Executive Summary of the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s May 1, 2024 report on the Biden-Harris White House’s censorship campaign.⁸¹

The Select Subcommittee has uncovered both foreign and domestic threats to Americans’ First Amendment right to speak freely. Time and again, federal agencies and government bureaucrats have sought to silence citizens whose perspectives they disagreed with—often working with Big Tech companies and third parties to do so. After identifying these gross, illegal abuses of state power, the Select Subcommittee proposed legislative solutions—such as H.R. 4848, the Censorship Accountability Act; H.R. 4791, the Free Speech Protection Act; and H.R. 9605, the No Censors on our Shores Act—to ensure that government censors, foreign and domestic, are prevented from, or at least held accountable for, silencing the voices of the American people. The Committee on the Judiciary has passed the two bills in its jurisdiction, H.R. 4848 and H.R. 9605, and the House should consider them expeditiously.

INTEREST OF AMICI CURIAE

Representatives Jim Jordan, Kelly Armstrong, Andy Biggs, Dan Bishop, Kat Cammack, Russell Fry, Lance Gooden, Harriet Hageman, Mike Johnson, Thomas Massie, Barry Moore, and Elise Stefanik are Members of the United States House of Representatives and Members of the House Judiciary Committee and/or the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government. The Judiciary Committee is authorized by the House to conduct oversight and legislate on matters concerning civil liberties, the separation of powers, and the judiciary. Each Member of Congress has taken an oath to uphold the Constitution and laws of the United States. As Members of the House Judiciary Committee and/or the Weaponization Subcommittee, each Member has an institutional interest in protecting First Amendment rights from encroachment by the executive branch, protecting the rule of law, and holding the executive branch accountable when it overreaches. This interest also includes ensuring that the courts police those constitutional boundaries.

Each Member signatory is concerned that the Biden Administration has violated the Constitution and abridged Americans' civil liberties. The House Judiciary Committee and the Weaponization Subcommittee have been conducting an ongoing investigation into how and to what extent the executive branch has coerced or colluded with social media companies to censor speech. Very recent evidence, obtained in said investigation in the weeks after the district court's preliminary injunction ruling, further corroborates the district court’s findings. Thus, each Member signatory has a substantial interest in this case and offers a unique perspective by virtue of his or her role in Congress.¹

INTRODUCTION

Wielding threats of intervention, the executive branch of the federal government has engaged in a sustained effort to coerce private parties into censoring speech on matters of public concern. On issue after issue, the Biden Administration has distorted the free marketplace of ideas promised by the First Amendment, bringing the weight of federal authority to bear on any speech it dislikes—including memes and jokes. Of course, Big Tech companies often required little coercion to do the Administration’s bidding on some issues. Generally eager to please their ideological allies and overseers in the federal government, these companies and other private entities have repeatedly censored accurate speech on important public issues. When the censors were too slow to suppress speech that the partisans in the Administration disliked, the federal government prodded them back into action with continual and increasing pressure.

Official pressure to suppress speech violates the First Amendment. “[A] principal function of free speech under our system of government is to invite dispute. It may indeed best serve its high purpose when it induces a condition of unrest, creates dissatisfaction with conditions as they are, or even stirs people to anger.” Texas v. Johnson, 491 U.S. 397, 408–09 (1989) (cleaned up). No doubt, the government may find some individuals’ speech “misguided, or even hurtful,” but “the point of all speech protection is to shield just those choices of content.” Snyder v. Phelps, 562

U.S. 443, 458 (2011) (cleaned up). “The First Amendment embodies our choice as a Nation that, when it comes to such speech, the guiding principle is freedom—the unfettered interchange of ideas—not whatever the State may view as fair.” Arizona Free Enter. Club’s Freedom Club PAC v. Bennett, 564 U.S. 721, 750 (2011) (cleaned up). The First Amendment is founded on “the hypothesis that speech can rebut speech, propaganda will answer propaganda, [and] free debate of ideas will result in the wisest governmental policies.” Dennis v. United States, 341 U.S. 494, 503 (1951). Thus, the First Amendment stands against any governmental effort to coerce or otherwise burden the free speech of private entities—even if that action falls short of outright suppression. Cf. Kennedy v. Warren, 66 F.4th 1199, 1213 (9th Cir. 2023) (Bennett, J., concurring) (“[W]e do not require a government official to list specific consequences in order to find a constitutional violation.”).

The district court found, as a matter of fact, that “the United States Government, through the White House and numerous federal agencies, pressured and encouraged social-media companies to suppress free speech.” Missouri v. Biden, 2023 WL 4335270, at *44 (W.D. La. July 4, 2023). These factual findings “must be left undisturbed unless clearly erroneous.” Direct Biologics, LLC v. McQueen, 63 F.4th 1015, 1020 (5th Cir. 2023) (cleaned up). “Where there are two permissible views of the evidence, the factfinder’s choice between them cannot be clearly erroneous.” Anderson v. Bessemer City, 470 U.S. 564, 574 (1985).

The district court’s findings are easily “permissible”; they are clearly correct. Beyond the ample evidence cited by the district court and the Plaintiffs, even more recent evidence obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and the Weaponization Subcommittee confirms the district court’s conclusions.

That evidence shows that the Biden Administration has relentlessly pressured private entities—sometimes in cooperation with other private entities—to censor speech that the Administration disliked. As detailed below, this official coercion has undermined the marketplace of ideas on issues of public importance ranging from COVID to federal elections to Biden family misdeeds. And the suppression “does not simply have an effect on speech, but is directed at certain content and is aimed at particular speakers”: conservative voices opposed to the current Administration. Barr v. Am. Ass’n of Pol. Consultants, Inc., 140 S. Ct. 2335, 2347 (2020). “This sort of ‘beggar thy neighbor’ approach to free speech—restricting the speech of some elements of our society in order to enhance the relative voice of others—is wholly foreign to the First Amendment.” Bennett, 564 U.S. at 741 (cleaned up). Likewise foreign to the First Amendment are governmental efforts to coerce the speech of private Americans. “As a Nation we have chosen a different course—to protect even hurtful speech on public issues to ensure that we do not stifle public debate.” Snyder, 562 U.S. at 461.

Because the Biden Administration has repeatedly used government coercion to stifle public debate—and the district court’s injunction rightfully halts the Administration’s unlawful conduct—the Court should affirm.

ARGUMENT

I. The United States has coerced speech about COVID.

As the district court found, the federal government “suppressed alternative views” about COVID-related matters, including the origination of the virus, the efficacy of vaccines and masks, and the adverse effects of lockdowns, effectively forcing social media companies to enforce the government’s view as “the truth.” Biden, 2023 WL 4335270, at *49–50. The district court listed over twenty examples of the government engaging in coercive acts directed toward social media companies to bring about censorship. Id. at *45–47. And the government’s pressure campaign worked. Facebook agreed to moderate certain COVID-related speech in response to pressure from the Biden Administration, telling the government that Facebook would rely on their “authorities” to determine what content to censor. Id. at *5, *6, *50. The district court described the government’s direction of Facebook’s content choices as a “partner[ship].” Id. at *47.

Very recent evidence corroborates the district court’s findings. The House Judiciary Committee subpoenaed internal documents from Meta, the parent entity of Facebook and Instagram. The documents obtained thus far confirm that the companies censored information and altered their content moderation policies because of pressure from the Biden Administration to rid their platforms of purported “misinformation.”²

This pressure was direct and coercive. For example, the Administration tried to suppress discussion of COVID’s origins: when a Facebook executive asked in July 2021 why the company censored the COVID lab leak theory, an executive in charge of content policy development said, “[b]ecause we were under pressure from the [A]dministration” to do so.³ The same Facebook executive confessed that the company “shouldn’t have done it.”⁴

Yet Facebook continued to do the Administration’s bidding, repeatedly removing and reducing content the federal government disfavored. The Biden White House’s successful months-long campaign to censor views expressing or supporting vaccine hesitancy is the clearest example of how the government coerced social media companies to change the scope and enforcement of their content moderation policies.

In an internal email, a Facebook employee explained to CEO Mark Zuckerberg and COO Sheryl Sandberg: “We are facing continued pressure from external stakeholders, including the [Biden] White House and the press, to remove more COVID-19 vaccine discouraging content.”⁵

Mark, Sheryl:

We are seeking your guidance on whether to take more aggressive action against certain vaccine discouraging content.

We are facing continued pressure from external stakeholders, including the White House and the press, to remove more COVID-19 vaccine discouraging content. For example, we recently shared with the White House a list of the top 100 vaccine-related posts on FB in the U.S. for the week of 4/5-4/11. While authoritative information dominated the list, the White House was concerned that the #3 post was a vaccine discouraging humorous meme, and they called on us to delete the meme.

Another Facebook executive notified his team that a senior advisor to President Biden was “outraged” “that [Facebook] did not remove” a meme that bothered the Administration.⁶ Likewise, to appease the Administration, Facebook demoted a Tucker Carlson video critical of the COVID vaccine, even though Facebook admitted that the video did not violate company policy.⁷

Tucker Carlson was not the only prominent critic of President Biden to be targeted by the Administration’s censorship efforts. According to Facebook’s internal notes of meetings with White House senior advisors, White House officials questioned whether Facebook’s enforcement of its content moderation policies against the New York Post was aggressive enough.⁸ Similarly, in April 2021, a White House official questioned whether Facebook could “change [its] algorithm so that people were more likely to see [the New York Times], [the Wall Street Journal], any authoritative news source over [the] Daily Wire, Tomi Lahren, polarizing people.”⁹ The White House’s requests were rooted in the paternalistic notion that Americans cannot decide for themselves what information should or should not be believed. As a White House staffer condescendingly remarked in a meeting with Facebook in April 2021, “[i]f someone in rural Arkansas sees something on [Facebook], it’s the truth.”¹⁰ In a June 2021 meeting, the White House pushed Facebook to “reduce the spread of bad information,” i.e., “bad” information according to the White House.¹¹

Not only did the Biden Administration privately coerce Facebook and other companies into censoring information, it also engaged in a public relations campaign against the companies to pressure them into submission. In July 2021, President Biden publicly denounced these companies, particularly Facebook, claiming they were “killing people” by not censoring alleged “misinformation” to the government’s satisfaction.¹² Facebook employees internally lamented that the Biden White House’s “definition of ‘misinfo’ is completely unclear.”¹³ Following the White House’s pressure, Facebook leadership—internally admitting that the move was “stemming from the continued criticism of our approach from the [Biden] administration”—directed employees to “brainstorm some additional policy levers we can pull to be more aggressive against . . . misinformation.”¹⁴ Ultimately, the company decided to adopt four new, more aggressive policy options one month later.¹⁵

Likewise, before meeting with the Biden Administration’s Office of the Surgeon General (OSG), a Facebook employee said that Sheryl Sandberg “is keen that we continue to explore some moves that we can make to show that we are trying to be responsive to the [White House].”¹⁶ The email continued: “My sense is that our current course—in effect explaining ourselves more fully, but not shifting on where we draw the lines . . . is a recipe for protracted and increasing acrimony with the [White House].”¹⁷ Internal documents obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and the Weaponization Subcommittee show that the Biden Administration pressured Facebook to censor information about the COVID vaccine’s side effects, even if the information was true.¹⁸ In a July 2021 meeting with OSG, a Facebook employee confirmed that Facebook was demoting content that questioned whether vaccine mandates constituted “government overreach,” despite acknowledging “[t]hat’s not false information.”¹⁹

Worse still, when Facebook questioned censoring information, the Biden Administration showed disdain and contempt for the First Amendment. For example, when the Administration flagged satirical content about the COVID vaccine, a Facebook executive first warned that removing satirical content would “represent a significant incursion into traditional boundaries of free expression in the US.”²⁰ But the Biden Administration was unpersuaded, insisting that the content “inhibits confidence” in the COVID vaccine.²¹

A Facebook vice president warned internally that the company was at “a crossroads” with the Administration over its censorship efforts.²² Facebook executives grasped the connection between the company’s business prospects and staying in the Administration’s good graces. One executive, recommending that the company consider bending to the Administration’s censorship requests, cautioned COO Sheryl Sandberg that Facebook had “bigger fish we have to fry with the Administration — data flows etc.”²³

Another looming issue was—and still is—reform of Section 230. As the district court explained, Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act is “valuable” to Big Tech because of its legal protections. Biden, 2023 WL 4335270, at *47. And the district court found that the federal government “threat[ened]” Big Tech with the repeal of Section 230 to induce compliance with its censorship campaign. Id. Mark Zuckerberg has referred to the possibility of antitrust enforcement as an “existential threat” to his empire. Id. at *4. Four days after President Biden publicly accused Facebook of “killing people,” the White House Communications Director publicly said the Administration was “reviewing” Section 230 reform as an option because the social media companies “should be held accountable.”²⁴ Internal documents show that Facebook executives feared that the Biden Administration would retaliate against the company for not censoring enough: one executive commented that the dispute over content was not “a great place for us to be,” and he would be “grateful for any further creative thinking on how we can be responsive to their [content] concerns.”²⁵ In response to mounting pressure, Facebook capitulated: “By August 2021, Facebook executives were emailing each other about new planned changes to their Covid content policies,” including increased punishments for violators.²⁶

In short, the Biden Administration used its power to commandeer the apparatuses of social media companies to affect their COVID-related content policies. And out of self-interest, the companies complied and censored content beyond what it otherwise would have. This government coercion violates the First Amendment.

II. The United States has coerced speech about Biden Family influence peddling.

The federal government, specifically the FBI’s Foreign Influence Task Force (FITF), also used its power and influence to deceive and coerce social media companies into suppressing factual information during the 2020 election about the Biden family that the FBI knew to be true.²⁷ The district court rightly labeled “[t]he FBI’s failure to alert social-media companies that the Hunter Biden laptop story was real, and not mere Russian disinformation,” as “particularly troubling.” Biden, 2023 WL 4335270 *50. The laptop contained documents and emails with incriminating details about foreign business dealings that also implicated Hunter Biden’s father—then-presidential candidate, Joe Biden.²⁸

In a recent transcribed interview before the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee, current Section Chief of FITF, Laura Dehmlow, testified that (1) FBI agents who knew the laptop was real were some of the same FBI agents who repeatedly warned social media companies about a potential “hack-and-leak” likely to occur in October 2020; and (2) despite direct requests from Twitter and Facebook for information on the day the New York Post story was published, the FBI decided to deliberately withhold critical information from the social media companies.²⁹

Although the FBI had the authenticated laptop in its possession since December 2019, it did not publicly acknowledge that it was real until after the November 3, 2020, election.³⁰ Rather than acknowledge the truth, the FBI actively influenced and deceived the social media companies to censor the story when it inevitably came out.³¹ In a well-executed, months-long plan, the FBI primed the narrative, telling social media companies to “look for a ‘hack and dump’ operation by the Russians prior to the 2020 election.”³² Then, as soon as the laptop’s contents were exposed, the FBI refused to answer questions and let the narrative it had constructed do its work of distracting from and minimizing the truth. Mark Zuckerberg’s justification for censoring the story illustrates the effectiveness of this plan: “the FBI basically came to us” and said, “you should be on high alert.” Facebook censored the story because when “[the FBI] come[s] to us and tell[s] us that we need to be on guard about something, then I want to take that seriously,” and the story “basically fit the pattern” the FBI warned about.³³ This federal coercion led to the censorship of accurate information.

In “the nine months leading up to the 2020 election, the FBI met over 30 times with social media platforms—all while in possession of Hunter Biden’s laptop.”³⁴ The FBI had “at least five meetings with Facebook, Google, Microsoft, [and] Yahoo!, in addition to multiple meetings with Twitter and Reddit.”³⁵ Yoel Roth, former Head of Site Integrity at Twitter, confirmed in a sworn declaration that he had regular meetings in 2020 with different federal agencies, including the FBI, where they “communicated that they expected ‘hack-and-leak operations’” against those associated with political campaigns “shortly before the 2020 presidential election, likely in October.”³⁶ “These expectations of hack-and-leak operations were discussed throughout 2020.”³⁷ He was also told “that material obtained through those hacking attacks would likely be disseminated over social media platforms, including Twitter” and even that there were rumors the materials could involve Hunter Biden.³⁸

The companies also participated together in regular “USG-Industry” meetings, including four in October 2020, with representatives from federal agencies, including the FBI.³⁹ During these meetings, the FBI asked social media companies what their “hack and leak” policies were, how the companies would handle a potential “hack and leak,” and whether the companies would remove hacked materials from their platforms.⁴⁰ In response, some companies without a specific “hack and

Dehmlow confirmed that “the FBI could—and did—share information with companies regarding foreign malign influence operations, like hack-and-leak operations, including those conducted by Russia-aligned actors.”⁴² For example, the agenda for the October 7, 2020 “USG-Industry” meeting—one week before the October 14 New York Post story—lists “Hack/Leak Concerns” as a topic.⁴³

On the day the article was published, FBI met with Twitter, and a company representative asked if the laptop was real.⁴⁴ In testimony to the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee, Dehmlow stated that, in response, “one of the FBI folks who was on the call” confirmed that the laptop was real before “another participant jumped in and said, ‘no further comment.’”⁴⁵ After the meeting, FBI personnel “deliberated internally” and determined that—even though they knew the laptop was not Russian disinformation—in all further communications with social media companies the FBI would reply with “no comment.”⁴⁶

Later that same day, the FBI met with Facebook. This time the FBI had its story straight. When Facebook asked whether the laptop was real, Dehmlow, on behalf of the FBI, said, “no comment.”⁴⁷ Despite requests made during Dehmlow’s interview and subsequently to Director Wray by letter, the FBI has thus far refused to reveal to the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee the identities of the FBI official who told Twitter that the laptop was real, the FBI lawyer who instructed “no further comment” during the call with Twitter, or the FBI official who determined that the agency would respond only “no comment” when asked about Hunter Biden laptop’s authenticity going forward.⁴⁸

Facebook followed up again the next day, October 15.⁴⁹ According to an internal Facebook document recently obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and the Weaponization Subcommittee, a Facebook employee (and former FBI official) “spoke with SSA Elvis Chan (FBI San Francisco) on 15 October 2020, as a follow up to the call with the Foreign Influence Task Force on 14 October.”⁵⁰ Facebook again asked if the FBI had any new information, to which “Chan advised that he was up to speed on the current state of the matter within the FBI and that there was no current evidence to suggest any foreign connection or direction of the leak.”⁵¹ But of course, the FBI knew not just of the absence of evidence suggesting any foreign connection; the FBI knew the laptop was real.⁵²

This internal Facebook document directly conflicts with the deposition testimony FBI Special Agent Elvis Chan provided in this case. Chan testified that he was “confident” that he “was not a party to any meeting with social media companies where Hunter Biden was discussed outside of the [October 14 FITF-Facebook meeting where Laura Dehmlow responded ‘no comment’].”⁵³ Later, when asked if, other than the October 14 FITF-Facebook meeting, he was “aware of any communications between anyone at Facebook and anyone at the FBI related to the Hunter Biden laptop story,” Chan responded, “No.”⁵⁴

As a result of the FBI’s withholding critical information the day of (and the days after) the New York Post’s article was published, the social media companies began to do precisely what the FBI intended: suppress truthful First Amendment-protected speech less than three weeks before the presidential election.⁵⁵ The story implicating one of the two major party candidates was blocked by Twitter and de-amplified by Facebook, “significantly reducing its circulation and prevalence in users’ newsfeeds.”⁵⁶ All because the FBI—an organization that the companies felt compelled to follow—had led them to believe the laptop story was Russian disinformation.⁵⁷ The story was not Russian disinformation, and FBI personnel meeting with Twitter and Facebook knew at the time that it was not Russian disinformation.⁵⁸ This government coercion of the marketplace of ideas undoubtedly affected the 2020 election.⁵⁹ The district court’s findings that the federal government unlawfully coerced private speech are amply supported by the evidence.

III. The United States has coerced speech about elections.

The United States also flouted the First Amendment by coercing election-related speech. This coercion is especially troubling because speech pertaining to elections “occupies the core of the protection afforded by the First Amendment.” McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm’n, 514 U.S. 334, 346 (1995). Yet the federal government has repeatedly coerced social media companies to censor election-related speech. It has done so directly, through DHS’s Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA), and indirectly, through the private-sector Election Integrity Partnership (EIP). Following revelations from this lawsuit and the ongoing investigation by the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee, CISA has taken steps to cover-up and hide its efforts to surveil and censor domestic speech.⁶⁰

A. Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA)

Congress established CISA in 2018 to “lead cybersecurity and critical infrastructure security programs, operations, and associated policy.”⁶¹ Shortly after the 2016 election, DHS Secretary Jeh Johnson designated “election infrastructure” as a “critical infrastructure subsector.”⁶² CISA’s “Countering Foreign Influence Task Force” (CFITF) focuses “on election infrastructure disinformation.”⁶³ But in an effort to expand its focus on foreign misinformation to domestic misinformation, “CISA transitioned its [CFITF] to promote more flexibility to focus on general MDM,” or so-called “Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation.”⁶⁴

CISA’s focus on so-called “malinformation” is particularly alarming. According to CISA, “[m]alinformation is based on fact, but used out of context to mislead, harm, or manipulate.”⁶⁵ Put more plainly, “malinformation is factual information that is objectionable not because it is false or untruthful, but because it is provided without adequate ‘context’—context as determined by the government.”⁶⁶

In his deposition, Brian Scully, the first head of the CFITF and later the head of the MDM team at CISA,⁶⁷ said that CISA engaged in “switchboarding,” where CISA would flag alleged disinformation to social media platforms.⁶⁸ According to Scully, “switchboarding” involves CISA officials first receiving alleged “misinformation” reports from election officials and then forwarding those reports to social media companies so that they could take enforcement measures against the reported content.⁶⁹ Scully admitted that CISA was aware that its outreach to social media companies about alleged misinformation would trigger content moderation.⁷⁰

CISA also funded and utilized third parties, such as the Center for Internet Security (CIS), to achieve these aims. CIS is the nonprofit entity responsible for operating the Multi-State Information Sharing and Analysis Center (MS-ISAC) and

Elections Infrastructure Information Sharing and Analysis Center (EI-ISAC).⁷¹ The EI-ISAC allows election officials around the country to send alleged “misinformation” to CIS, which CIS then forwards to the relevant social media platforms.⁷²

As illustrated by the diagram below from CIS’s website, the “EI-ISAC is federally funded by CISA and a division of the Center for Internet Security.”⁷³ CISA requested $27 million in FY 2024 funding CIS to operate the EI-ISAC and the MS-ISAC.⁷⁴

Illustrating that claims of “misinformation” are inherently political, the CISA-funded EI-ISAC facilitated attempts to censor core political speech. For example, a state government official working for Pennsylvania’s Secretary of State, a Democrat, reported to the EI-ISAC posts on Twitter and Facebook from Senator Ted Cruz’s accounts.⁷⁵ In the offending post, Senator Cruz, a Republican, asked: “Why is it only Democrat blue cities that take ‘days’ to count their votes? The rest of the country manages to get it done on election night.”⁷⁶ Emblematic of this “switchboarding,” the federally funded EI-ISAC forwarded the report to Facebook.⁷⁷

B. The Election Integrity Partnership (EIP)

The United States, primarily CISA, also coerced social media companies into censoring speech about the 2020 election through the private-sector Election Integrity Partnership (EIP), led by Stanford University. Formed in the summer of 2020, EIP was a coalition of research entities created “in consultation with CISA and other stakeholders”⁷⁸ and “united government, academia, civil society, and industry, analyzing across platforms, to address misinformation in real time.”⁷⁹ Emails obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee confirm that CISA officials were involved with EIP from the very beginning.⁸⁰

⁸⁰ Ex. 20 (E-mail from Kate Starbird to Alex Stamos (July 8, 2020, 10:26 AM)).

Because the four entities comprising EIP were not government entities,⁸¹ the United States sought to use EIP to do things that the government could never do without violating the First Amendment—namely, directly monitoring and censoring speech. By its own account, EIP filled the “gap” in the government’s ability to police so-called “misinformation” and “disinformation” about elections on social media because “no government agency in the United States has the explicit mandate to monitor and correct election mis- and disinformation.”⁸²

EIP used the Jira Service Desk, a ticketing software to allow approved entities (government agencies, EI-ISAC, and others) to submit “misinformation” reports, creating a “Jira ticket.”⁸³ From there, EIP personnel analyzed the submission and could comment on the ticket, before a manager would assess whether to forward the ticket to the relevant social media platform(s).⁸⁴ EIP’s final report illustrates this workflow⁸⁵:

EIP was thoroughly intertwined with CISA, which aided EIP in the process of reporting undesirable election-related speech to social media platforms.⁸⁶ Stanford confirmed in a recent letter to Chairman Jordan that CISA was directly “tagged” in a number of Jira tickets “rather than or in addition to” the CISA-funded EI-ISAC.⁸⁷ Other documents obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee confirm CISA’s involvement.⁸⁸

The FBI, the National Security Agency (NSA), and the Global Engagement Center (GEC) were also involved. The GEC is a federal government interagency organization housed at the State Department with the stated mission of countering foreign “propaganda and disinformation efforts.”⁸⁹ Most notably, the GEC submitted tickets to EIP through Jira.⁹⁰ Stanford recently confirmed to the Committee that social media platforms could see which entity submitted a ticket, including federal government entities.⁹¹ In addition, before the 2020 election, EIP briefed the NSA, and sent one Jira ticket to the FBI.⁹²

The EI-ISAC, federally funded and operated by CIS and CISA, also submitted tickets.⁹³ CISA even coordinated “an agreement” between CIS and EIP to avoid double reporting.⁹⁴ The two admittedly became “partners,”⁹⁵ sharing personnel.⁹⁶ Information obtained to date during the House Judiciary Committee and

Weaponization Subcommittee’s investigation confirms that the government-funded EI-ISAC submitted over 100 Jira tickets in the lead-up to the 2020 election.⁹⁷

This close affiliation with the federal government heightened the coerciveness of EIP’s interactions with social media platforms. EIP onboarded major social media platforms, gaining privileged access to some of these platforms’ data and the ability to collect such data in real-time.⁹⁸ EIP’s direct recommendations for censorship resulted in the suppression of disfavored speech about the 2020 election.⁹⁹ Thirty-five percent of the URLs EIP “shared with Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, TikTok, and YouTube were either labeled, removed, or soft-blocked.”¹⁰⁰ Every Twitter account holder EIP identified as a “Repeat Spreader” of election-related “disinformation” expressed “conservative or right-wing political views.”¹⁰¹

EIP’s election-speech monitoring did not end with the 2020 election. EIP recreated itself for the 2022 election and may again for the 2024 election.¹⁰²

The United States’ coercive tactics with social media platforms to quell election-related messages it finds undesirable are unconstitutional—even when funneled through a private-sector entity. See Norwood v. Harrison, 413 U.S. 455, 465 (1973) (“[A] state may not induce, encourage or promote private persons to accomplish what it is constitutionally forbidden to accomplish.” (cleaned up)).

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, and to vindicate the First Amendment’s promise of a marketplace of ideas free from government meddling, the Court should affirm the preliminary injunction.

Because we were under pressure from the administration and others to do more and it was part of the "more" package. We removed four claims that multiple fact checkers had labeled false even though we didn't have a harm assessment. We shouldn't have done it. We stopped removing the man made claim in May and now we're moving the other three claims (covid is new/patented) from remove to reduce and inform.

Following up here (and replying on behalf of [redacted] as well who is presenting in another meeting): We worked to further streamline and simplify the talking point around the 12 people identified by the CCDH ('disinfo dozen'). We'd recommend using the following:

"People on the Center for Countering Digital Hate's list show up in multiple places across Facebook products: Facebook pages, Facebook groups, and IG accounts for example. If they repeatedly break our rules, we permanently remove that page, group, or account from our services, and we've done that in more than a dozen instances."

In case it's helpful for further context, the break-down of the entities we've removed associated with people

That is a good question. The “disinfo dozen” refers to 12 people. Many of those people have multiple presences on FB/IG. For example, RFK Jr. had a FB Page and IG account. We have removed the IG account but not FB Page, as he posts different content across those two presences and only the IG account has reached our threshold for removal.

Thx - now, for truly the most simplistic question...: if we've removed pages/accounts of a dozen individuals what's left on FB of the “disinfo dozen”?

Thx, Just a few Qs:

- I don't understand the eg of "shedding" that we took action on?
Vaccine shedding is the term used to describe the release or discharge of any of the vaccine components in or outside of the body. We've seen people closing down their shops to people who have been vaccinated because of fears of shedding, to give just one example of how this claim is causing confusion and could contribute to hesitancy. Vaccine shedding can only occur when a vaccine contains a weakened version of the virus and occurs when a virus is released from an infected person. None of the Covid-19 vaccines cause any kind of shedding. None include living Covid-19 so it is impossible for vaccinated people to shed Covid-19 from the vaccine itself.

- The Q&A has Qs asking why we only took action on covid vaccine misinfo in Dec last year and Feb this year. Why these dates?

December 2020 is when we first announced we would be removing some false claims about Covid vaccines given the news the vaccines would soon be rolling out around the world. Before that we did not know what would be true or false about the vaccines. February 2021 is when we announced we would remove general vaccine misinformation (8 widely debunked claims, including vaccines cause autism).

- I find what we've actually done re the "disinfo dozen" v hard to follow. Any way to simplify that for me?

Center for Countering Hate's (CDDH) Disinformation Dozen

- We have removed violating content that these accounts have posted.
- We have entirely removed the Facebook Pages or Groups or Instagram accounts of more than a dozen of these individuals for repeatedly violating our misinformation policies. In other cases, we have restricted their activity (e.g. by not recommending their content).

Subject: Re: Vaccine Policy

+ Nick, [REDACTED]

Please see a draft note for Mark and Sheryl with 3 stronger enforcement options against vaccine discouraging content here (and copied below as well) further to the discussion with Mark last week. Let us know if any feedback or if there's anything missing here.

Thanks so much,

Subject: [For Decision] Vaccine discouraging content

Mark, Sheryl:

We are seeking your guidance on whether to take more aggressive action against certain vaccine discouraging content.

We are facing continued pressure from external stakeholders, including the White House and the press, to remove more COVID-19 vaccine discouraging content. For example, we recently shared with the White House a list of the top 100 vaccine-related posts on FB in the U.S. for the week of 4/5-4/11. While authoritative information dominated the list, the White House was concerned that the #3 post was a vaccine discouraging humorous meme, and they called on us to delete the meme.

We currently remove content that includes certain misinformation about covid and vaccinations (e.g., the covid vaccine has microchips) and content that explicitly discourages vaccination (e.g., the COVID-19 vaccine is too dangerous - don't get it!). Under our policies, this meme should not be removed.

Instead, we aim to reduce this sort of vaccine discouraging content, namely 'sensational or alarmist content' (e.g., there's no point vaccines are useless!; vaccines are the work of the devil; these vaxx are so bad for your body!) and 'criticism of personal vaccine choices' (e.g., it's child abuse to give your kid the vaccine; you'd have to be a complete moron to get vaccinated).

To reduce this content, we are currently building systems to review & demote on escalation, and over time hope to have demotions at scale through classifiers (although that kind of scaled enforcement is likely to be challenging). We are not convinced we'll be able to catch all kinds of this content quickly enough before it gains some distribution. Additionally, given people's interest in the topic, weaker demotions may not be sufficient to meaningfully limit the distribution of posts.

Based on consultations with vaccination communication experts and other health partners, we worry that removing (as opposed to demoting) more expressions of vaccine hesitancy might be counterproductive to the goal of vaccine uptake, because it would: 1/ prevent hesitant people from talking through their concerns online and 2/ reinforce the notion that there's a cover-up (a key prong of anti-vaccine narratives). Details of feedback from external experts and research are below.

We seek your guidance on how to treat this vaccine discouraging content. Here are the options:

1. 25% demotion (current plan, execution under way)
2. ~50% demotion, or even stronger (e.g., 80%) if we find that 50% isn't sufficient to keep such content out of top vaccine posts
3. Remove this content

Details below.

Thanks,

A. Definitions of the Vaccine Discouraging Content in Question

1. Sensational or Alarmist Vaccine Content: Content that otherwise does not violate our COVID-19 or vaccine policies above but that suggests that vaccines are unsafe, ineffective, sacrilegious or irrelevant, in exaggerated, conspiratorial, or sensational terms. This includes content that makes generalizations about vaccine harms or utility in hyperbolic terms or without providing context, or which connects vaccination to a conspiratorial narrative about a purposely hidden widespread health harm, secret, or truth.
 - a. Ex: "They're coming with these dangerous shots for you next -- the sheep of the world need to wake up."
 - b. Ex: "Vaccines are the work of the Devil"
 - c. Ex: "These VAXX are so bad for your body!"
 - d. Ex: "Vaccines are so useless, what's the point!"
 - e. Ex: "I need to detox my kid to get these vaccine toxins out...Any ideas?"
2. Criticizing the Choice to Receive/Provide Vaccines: Content that otherwise does not violate our COVID-19 or vaccine policies above but that disparages others on the basis of their choice to get vaccinated, or on their choice to vaccinate others, including attacking language used towards vaccinated people or those administering vaccinations, or blaming people for misfortune after vaccination.

- a. Ex: "You're committing child abuse for giving this vaccine."
- b. Ex: "Only someone clinically insane would get this vaccine!"
- c. Ex: "Any extreme pro-vaxers unfriend me. You are a danger to public health you thick, unscientific twats"
- d. Ex: "I can't believe they got vaccinated, what idiot sheeple"
- e. Ex: "Take a look around people -- anyone who gets these experimental vaccines is just a guinea pig."

B. Options for Addressing Severe Vaccine Discouraging Content

1. 25% demotion ← plan of record, still need to execute - consistent with the Integrity Ranking Guidelines (IRGs), we can demote by 25%. We are just beginning to do this.
 - a. Pros: slows distribution of such content; consistent with normal practice for demoting problematic content without specific user notice/appeals
 - b. Cons: unsatisfactory to certain critics who want us to take even stronger action; some demoted content may still go viral
2. ~50% demotion, or even stronger (e.g., 80%) if we find that 50% isn't sufficient to keep such content out of top vaccine posts
 - a. Pros: may satisfy some critics who want more aggressive action; significantly reduces virality of vaccine discouraging content
 - b. Cons: inconsistent with normal practice for demoting problematic content without specific user notice/appeals; could be seen as shadowbanning
3. Remove
 - a. Pros: may satisfy certain vocal critics; best option to reduce virality
 - b. Cons: removes true content and personal opinions; reduces public conversation on important issue; provides "evidence" to people who believe FB is overly censorious or participating in vaccine cover-ups

C. External Perspectives on Removing More Vax Hesitancy Content

Since 2018, we have consulted extensively with external experts about our approach to vaccine content on Facebook and our engagement has stepped up significantly during the COVID pandemic. We have received varied responses on what the right approach is when it comes to removal and have modest confidence in our current approach. Some key health partners, including the WHO, continue to advocate for removing much more content. The WHO has communicated to us that they think our current policies are not comprehensive enough especially when it comes to takedowns of entities that they believe we should be removing due to the harmful impact they have on vaccine confidence (and, in turn, ending the pandemic). As mentioned above, the White House also continues to put significant pressure on removing more.

However, many vaccine communication experts seem to think we are now in the right place in terms of policy-writing about what content we remove vs. reduce. Among these experts, there is a general sense that deleting more expressions of vaccine hesitancy might be counterproductive to the goal of vaccine uptake, because it would: 1/ prevent hesitant people from talking through their concerns and 2/ reinforce the notion that there's a cover-up (a key prong of anti-vax narratives). These risks seem particularly acute now in the US, because we are quickly approaching the point of supply exceeding demand and remaining vaccine holdouts being due to genuine hesitancy. Some experts have voiced the value in hesitant people being able to seek answers to their questions and having their concerns addressed. There may be risk of pushing them further toward hesitancy by suppressing their speech and making them feel marginalized by large institutions.

Prior external research on effective interventions to address vaccine hesitancy highlights the critical importance of facilitating open dialogue, especially dialogue that is or that can be tailored to the individual or their communities. Research suggests that attitude change happens when people get a chance for productive discourse and addressing people's concerns head on (rather than reducing chances for conversation) can lead to positive change. Opening up a chance for people to express their hesitancy, criticism and concerns can serve as an important way for them to access information. Moreover, past on-platform network research has suggested that there is likely to be a backlash from taking down conspiracy-oriented networks' content, though in light of lessons learned we may be better equipped to handle it with our tools than we have previously.

Consistent with this reasoning, in March, the Washington Post Editorial Board published a piece titled, "Banning vaccine-hesitant posts is not the way to ease people's fears" which made the case that removals (and broad, strong demotions) would be counterproductive: "sweeping takedowns or down-rankings of all borderline content could foster more misgiving, and deprive people of the opportunity to discuss and learn."

Our conversations with experts informed the creation of the "Barriers to Vaccination (B2V): Vaccine Content Quality Integrity Framework" (from which we excerpted the definitions above), and we've since vetted this framework with outside experts. Of note, in early March, we discussed our planned approach with members of the "High Level Panel on Vaccine Confidence & Misinformation" (organized by London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine and the Center for Strategic and International Studies). Key take-aways:

- The panel had very positive feedback for our framework, calling it "sophisticated and nuanced." They appreciated that the B2V work addresses a critical gray zone of content that may contribute to vaccine hesitancy.
- The Panelists highlighted the importance of avoiding unintended consequences that may be associated with squashing expression on the platform.
- Experts underscored that they would be very hesitant about removing content that leads users to discuss vaccines. They expressed concern around stifling healthy debate about the vaccines, especially with regard to the sharing of personal vaccine anecdotes or other vaccine discussion and debate. For example, some pointed to the importance of facilitating open conversation online between parents whose children experienced adverse effects from the COVID vaccine.

While thinking through our policies, we also recently met with Heidi Larson, the head of the Vaccine Confidence Project. Heidi's general view is that we need to create an open and safe space for people to have vaccine-related conversations. She believes we need to hear about people's fears and anxieties related to the vaccine and respond appropriately (not just throw facts at people but understand there is an emotion behind people's claims and questions). We met with Heidi again on 4/26 to check in on whether our approach to content expressing vaccine hesitancy was still in the right place. While acknowledging that it's a complicated time due to recent discouraging safety events, she continues to support not removing this content due to the aforementioned potential inadvertent effects of removing this kind of content and is happy to be a spokesperson for us.

AC PRIV:

As frustrating as these fake leaks and innuendo are (and they are!), my thoughts are that we should not let that distract us from the real issues here, which are the substance. Clearly we have a policy viewpoint gap with them we need to figure out perspectives on – what we believe violates and what they think does... and the belief that YT is doing better than us, which I find so hard to believe. Probably best to spend our effort here and not get sucked into this other thread.

At the end of the day, unless we get to a common ground on what we're doing on substance, the rest doesn't really matter.

Thanks Nick. This is obviously very disheartening to read. Rob made an offhand comment about conversations with "other people from Facebook" during a recent conversation, this is clearly what he was referencing. Because of his history in the digital campaign world, it's not surprising that he'd have relationships with some of our employees. It's disheartening and unfortunately no longer surprising to read that our colleagues would portray our conversations this way. I haven't been part of any conversation that includes disparaging remarks made about Andy, or about any strategy to snow the White House — the only disparaging remarks I've heard people make on our calls have been in reference to the disrespectful tone Rob uses with employees at Facebook.

All of that said—Andy's challenge feels very much like a crossroads for us with the White House in these early days.

Subject: A/C PRIV White House/Covid

Just got off hour long call with Andy Slavitt. There are some pretty serious – and sensitive (see last point) - issues we need to address. A summary:

• He was appreciative of the data we sent thru on Friday, and confirmed that Rob F had said that they had never received so much data from us before.

BUT:

- Andy attended a meeting of misinfo researchers (didn't provide names) organized by Rob F on Friday in which the consensus was that FB is a "disinformation factory", and that YT has made significant advances to remove content leading to vaccine hesitancy whilst we have lagged behind.
- Whilst appreciative of our emphasis on authoritative vaccine, the principal focus for Andy S and his team in the coming weeks is to reach the "hardest to reach" people who have a propensity to consume vaccine hesitant related content and who are not swayed by official/authoritative sources of content. Our systems, he believes – as confirmed by the researchers – feed vaccine hesitant related content to pockets of the population and that's the problem he wants our help to resolve.
- As an eg, he was outraged – not too strong a word to describe his reaction – that we did not remove this post which was third most highly ranked post in the data set we sent to him:
<https://www.facebook.com/td.mccomas/posts/4106421952731017> I countered that removing content like that would represent a significant incursion into traditional boundaries of free expression in the US but he replied that the post was directly comparing Covid vaccines to asbestos poisoning in a way which demonstrably inhibits confidence in Covid vaccines amongst those the Biden Administration is trying to reach. [It would be very helpful if someone could please check whether this content was also available on YT – Andy's assumption is that YT would never accept something like this]
- V worryingly, towards the end of the conversation, Andy told me in confidence – so please treat it as such – that internal FB employees are leaking to his team (I assume via Rob F) accounts of disobliging remarks made about both Andy and Rob by FB decision makers. Further, that those remarks are coupled with suggestions about how FB should "snow" the White House with info/data about authoritative Covid info in order not to share the most telling/helpful data about content which contributes to vaccine hesitancy. We then discussed the wider issue of trust – or the lack of it – between FB and the Biden team related to the events during the election and beyond, but needless to say I was shocked and embarrassed that somehow we are perceived to be behaving so unprofessionally.

We concluded that he would ask Rob F to share the data and policy recommendations from the researchers with us asap so that we could give a considered reply on further steps we may/may not be able to take. We agreed to speak again once that assessment has been made.

Given what is at stake here, it would also be a good idea if we could regroup to take stock of where we are in our relations with the WH, and our internal methods too.

Thx

Subject: Re: Email to Andy with report

Thanks Nick—here are some talking points that you can use if Andy raises Rob's questions:

How was this [Tucker Carlson] post not violative?

- while we remove content that explicitly directs people not to get the vaccine, as well as content that contains explicit misrepresentations about vaccines, we reviewed this content in detail and it does not violate those policies.

Moreover: you say reduced and demoted. What does that mean? There's 40,000 shares on the video. Who is seeing it now? How many? How effective is that?

- The video is receiving 50% demotion for seven days as it is in the queue to be fact checked

- Crowdtangle shows engagement not views, and a simple text search for "vaccine" in Crowdtangle doesn't have the same recall as our classifiers, i.e., doesn't include all of the posts about vaccines. The data that we provided doesn't include the Tucker Carlson video because our data pipelines don't populate that quickly – we provided data for the week before.

Why label this content with a generic "visit the covid information center" message?

- Our more granular label about vaccine safety says "COVID-19 vaccines go through many test for safety and effectively before they're approved". In light of the decision to pause the J&J vaccine, vaccine safety discussion evolved past "approval," and we were concerned that this was a confusing/irrelevant message to be applying to content discussion the decision to pause J&J without revoking approval. We temporarily reverted to a more generic message and are updating the more specific label for posts about vaccine safety to say "COVID-19 vaccines go through many tests for safety and effectiveness and then are monitored closely" to try to adapt to the changing factual situation and evolving discussion.

Subject: Email to Andy with report

Nick—

We are in final stages of approval for the report that will go to the WH tonight. Think best if you send to Andy with an email confirming you can talk this weekend—and I can forward to Rob.

Draft email below:

Andy,

Wanted to make sure to get this to you ahead of the weekend. We believe this is responsive to what you have asked us to do — namely to provide information on what we are seeing on the platform with respect to vaccine content, as well as the interventions we are deploying to counter misinformation. As I mentioned yesterday, our data is lagging and this covers the period 4/5 to 4/11. I don't yet have a more specific answer on the Tucker Carlson post.

This probably goes without saying, but I want to make sure to convey that this is not information we normally share, and this data set is not cleanly vetted according to an integrity process that would take much longer to conduct. We took your cue the other day that it was important to get this to you quickly even if not polished. We have not made this information public and we hope to continue to be able to share with you and the team under confidence.

We hope we can continue to engage on the content provided here, and we're happy to schedule time next week to discuss with the team.

Look forward to talking this weekend.

Attendees (FB): Brian Rice, [REDACTED] [REDACTED]

- Brian – wanted to make sure we had time, we have a few things coming to you. We have an update to the symptom survey in a week. We could set up time to walk through the one you have, the new info. It's a different look, but useful, want to talk through
- Rob – useful, especially from comms folks
- Brian – will have more detail on demographics, should be improved. We also have data stuff from last week, want to center our work on universe of content. Nick told Andy that it will take some time to build, will have that ASAP. Today, wanted you to meet [REDACTED] our Product lead across all COVID defensive work. When Nick was talking to Andy about areas where we were unable to provide answers, [REDACTED] should be able to provide more information. She'll do an overview. We'll make sure to follow up on any questions.
- [REDACTED] – Hopeful for open confirmation, my job is focus on responding to immediate issues. I report to Guy. I'm jumping in midstream, may have some questions, I want to understand where we've been missing the mark, addressing gaps, see areas where we may not have direct answers but could look at proxies, other solutions. Want to understand problems, priorities going forward.
- Rob – sounds great. Maybe helpful to hear where we're coming from – we're concerned about FB impact on vaccine hesitancy, we see so often in data that people who are vaccine hesitant see on FB. Our theory is that content is harder to remove is doing the most harm, people are setting on the fence. We understand taking down that content is not best solution, for us, we want to understand if our theory is right, where you see what's driving vaccine hesitancy, what you are doingm how we can plug in and get you things. If you find things that are working, want to hear that. That's what we care about. We're not trying to screw you guys, we want to solve this problem. In 3 months, when there's a demand problem, we'll be in the barrel
- [REDACTED] – similar strategies –
 - Inform
 - Remove what's actually harmful
 - Reduce where there is hesitancy
- [REDACTED] – I know you want numbers, I don't have numbers yet on how interventions are working on, looking at proxies. Today – can sepak to levers, where are we reducing content, introducing reshare friction, have some things we can dig into. Nick mentioned we're looking at viral content, that's a metric we want to get you, but centralizing work – also looking at large entities, big groups, pages, big IG accounts. Last one is comments. One thing that's difficult – good post, bad comments, we see that quite often. We see authoritative info from WHO having a lot of hesitancy comments. Top skepticism comments on those posts, don't

- Rob – so you're focused on virality, big entities like pages/groups, less on comments/posts between friends
- [REDACTED] – for the most part, right – the way we think about – head problem – where do we see hot spots – minority individuals/entities producing content that then gets redistributed. From prioritization perspective, that's how we know content will be redistributed/upranked/reshared. This is for hesitancy (not misinfo, which gets different treatment). We want to know overall hesitancy content, what are interventions. Detection methodology is dependent on topical conversations – that will take weeks, if not months. So in the interim, focused on the hot spots. Does that make sense?
- Rob – yes, makes sense. Do you have a tangible example? Done or seen is helpful.
- [REDACTED] – I asked the teams this morning – overall viral pieces of content – anecdotally, they've shared
 - Topics trending towards uncertainty – FDA approval v authorization – general confusion about that
 - Another one – concerns about vaccinated people shedding the virus to non-vaccinated people nearby – indirect
 - Have seen a lot of groups sharing individual stories about side effects or death after vaccination
 - If we're taking authoritative information – we could detect outright discouragement based on a reliable link, but it's harder to detect skeptical comments like "Oh, isn't that interesting." – we are working to be able to detect that, but we can't yet
- Rob – that makes sense. Fascinating. I'm curious – NY Post churning out articles every day about people dying. What is supposed to happen to that from Policy perspective. Does that article get a reduction, labels?
- [REDACTED] – Let's go back to remove (outright misinfo), reduce (not benign, more sensationalism, eg claim vaccines create miscarriages, indirect discouragement), inform – levers are contingent on content type, who posted it. We look at removing from recommendations, explorer, we want to take all this content out of that. E.g. Health Groups are non-recommendable, want to get them out of areas where we recommend or amplification systems. What we're prioritizing in feed – want to make sure that anything we suspect is hitting skepticism, harmful topically but we can't remove, we reduce. I don't have those numbers today.
- [REDACTED] – a lot of things get viral copy-pasted. We have a concept of introducing an inform interstitial – if I go to reshare post like that, have an interstitial noting that a post has been rated false by 3PFC. We can also do fwd limits. These are all methods we've used where there's not super clear lines in the sand. That's a suite of tools we're trying to apply right now.
- Rob – The question I have, if you're applying these methodologies, where is it still breaking through? And to whom? If it's still there, where is next whack a mole?

- [REDACTED] – big whackamole is that this all depends on our ability to detect. We're getting better at detecting things like the microchip thing and delete that. We're getting better at detecting (human, natural language processing) discouragement. We find COVID posts, then we identify posts that are explicit discouragement, or this is bullying for choosing to get vaccinated. What's hard right now, we haven't completed full detection path. We need to close gaps, that's what we're doing. The comments thing isn't solved, that's the big thing keeping me up at night, that I'm most worried about from an implementation perspective.
- Rob – so substantive problem is not that there are holes in the policy, it's more that the detection of things that needs more work
- [REDACTED] – the hard part is that what could be applicable to policy is moving, the timeline takes some time. Things are evolving on a discussion basis. This also gets harder as events evolve. For example, recent charges in Italy against two doctors and a nurse for administering Astra Zeneca vaccine. That creates a net new topic for our systems to need to be able to identify and get to intervention. That's why inform – driving to authoritative sources, CIC – that's why it's so important. Best way to resolve/educate individuals who aren't adversarially minded – compared to every real world event. Trying to get to fastest real solution v managing symptoms of having right information. I want to get a few minutes at the end to talk about next touch point. A lot of what I just said – there are also individuals that are adversarial, very good at following rules, know where the lines are, driving things off platform.
- Rob – I can go over 12:30 if you can. My question on inform – intellectually my bias is to kick people off. Inform, intellectually, maybe path of most impact. How are you measuring impact when you do inform? Is there secret sauce targeting that we can use? Stanford has suggested building targeting tools of people that engage with antivax content.
- [REDACTED] – This is where it gets into Offense side, this is what Emily was talking about. How do we measure success – are we getting people vaccinated. We have metrics around how many people we're informing, how quickly, how thorough. Are we identifying right content. Best directional metric is that symptom survey. We don't have a strong causative way of saying because integrity did X, we now see preventing growth – we don't see that. That's why we end up in education. If we're getting at do people have more information, are they better educated, that symptom survey is best we have right now.
- Rob – that survey, you are doing treatment survey
- [REDACTED] – real measure of success – did people go to center, did they read content, did that change perspective – broader integrity – unless someone tells us, hard to measure if we're changing hearts and minds, unless we do survey
- Rob – what are most successful inform interventions?
- [REDACTED] – only a few that are very topical based right now, don't have metrics now. People have concerns about methodology or safety on vaccines. We're in a test phase on broad COVID inform treatment that drives to FB/IG. There's a post, we put inform treatment driving directly to CIC. Not even about violating content – just broad swath.

That's the next big push of what we think might be a good inform treatment. In an ideal state, we want to get as precise as possible. The north star would be addressing each topic, but that degree of specificity might not be something we can ever get to. So trying to go broad and wide, with a big focus on the US. Trying to push out much more information given trends we're seeing.

- Rob – our public campaign, largely grants, fed govt not most trustworthy actor on vaccines – how can community organizations plug into FB in a way that will be maximally effective. Is there tooling that's coming online?
- [REDACTED] – I'd love to continue this conversation – I'm not a lawyer, know we have to be sensitive to personal information, targeting. In terms of targeting, one of the interesting trends we've seen in my own experience – local FB Groups – city, council, regional groups giving info about when new appts are available. I'm personally seeing local group community organizing. Might be an interesting thing to look at – how are communities having those conversations – something to explore further.
- Rob – to Brian's point, that's the next question – how can we plug in, how can we help. We're going to be a clearinghouse for ad campaigns, what can we bring to bear.
- [REDACTED] – Action items:
 - Chat more about how to do more targeted communication to vulnerable communities
 - Symptom survey
- Brian – we'll put a briefing on with Curtiss, our research director.
- [REDACTED] – we owe you a WA follow up
- Brian – we'll send that over – we'll take your queues – weekly, biweekly checkin makes sense, if you want to communicate on the fly with me and [REDACTED] we're open
- Rob – probably both – let's put check in on calendar
- Brian – ok great, we'll put on the calendar

EXHIBIT 5

4/14 Notes on Call with White House

WH Attendees: Rob Flaherty, Clarke Humphrey, Andy Slavitt (joined at 30 min mark)

FB Attendees: Brian Rice, [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED]

- Brian: Idea today was to follow up based on meeting next week, we have [REDACTED] on to talk to approach to getting authoritative information, [REDACTED] has some info from survey, then will go through metrics. Also want to be very clear, know you are interested in empirical information regarding success of interventions. Obviously want to get you what's helpful for you to do your job.
- [REDACTED] I need to understand a little bit. How I've interpreted – you're trying to find a causal link between someone not being exposed to vaccine hesitancy content, and therefore went out and got a vaccine. From a behavioral perspective, we don't see that. I want to make sure I understand what you're looking for. We can pull click through rates, other numbers, but want to confirm.
- Rob: Three things. We have to explain to President, Ron, people, why there is misinfo on the internet, bigger problem than FB. Where issues are, what interventions are, how well they are working, for products, want to engage in things that you know to be effective. I don't even care about specific methodology, you have better, richer data than we'll ever have. What are the things driving hesitancy on your platform? What is it? How big is the problem? When you are intervening, how are you measuring success? I say these things because candidly there is not a lot of trust towards FB, I need to know what theory of the case is, where we can be most effective. I am, personally, nervous, reported that there are interventions that have been done in other contexts, like NEQ score, that have been pulled back. Want to make sure that you're not finding things that are effective that you aren't doing.
- [REDACTED] That's helpful. In terms of what we're doing, we look at overall universe of content on FB, 1% is related to vaccines. Some subset of that is hesitancy, some is misinfo. We know as of March, 900,000 pieces of content was misinfo, 150,000 was US. Outside of that, numbers are really hard for us because hard to identify definitive vaccine hesitancy content. Very explicit example – 40% of Marines not taking vaccine – that's being presented as fact. People are questioning government. We're struggling to identify within hesitancy content, the stuff that's nefarious, the stuff that isn't. We don't know that if we removed everything, that it would alleviate external factors.
- Rob: The 40% of Marines, vaccine passports, good examples. J&J. To me, the one view I have – total interactions on CrowdTangle – you have more data about who is seeing it, where's it going. We don't want to be in a position where we take down bad news. But if your goal as a company is to make it more likely that people will get the vaccine. People don't see this in only one way. Is your presupposition to do these broad things without any sense. If you're seeing something that is factual that is that kind of news, it will have a negative way in a way that it wouldn't on other platforms.

- [REDACTED] We are thinking about it the same way, we have the same challenge. We can't ask news outlets to take down bad news. That's why flooding with good information is so important. There are people that might see NYT, other trusted sources, have hesitancy. Then there's the actual trusted communities – health agencies/government/experts/FB, family/friends/community. In my own life, hard to get my mom to take vaccine because she thinks she already had COVID and someone else should get it. That's a weird example, removing the content prohibits discussion. How do we tone down the fervor?
- Rob: Good question to be asking, you are a fervor machine.
- [REDACTED] In terms of interventions, know that there are groups that are hot spots – mandatory post approvals – admins have to approve posts. If violating content approved, gives the group a strike. I'm uncovering new examples on comments – public figures on comments might be contributing more. Tomi Lahren post on how she's not getting the vaccine. Even with comment reduction, still struggling if we reduce comments from public figures, Tomi Lahren makes a post.
- Rob: On what basis are you finding that the public figure comments have impact?
- [REDACTED] We don't have that causal link – we'd have to do a controlled study to expose people to misinformation or hesitancy content and study it. That's unethical. We can't measure that. I'd love to understand how you all are measuring that.
- Rob: I don't work at a company that profits on data. Hard for me to say. This is the whole problem. You guys are grading your own homework.
- Brian: No, working with Carnegie Mellon, we aren't seeing that.
- Rob: As a general practice on Facebook, you don't have a mechanism to test attitudinal impact?
- [REDACTED] The impact assessment is the survey data.
- [REDACTED] There's a difference between being able to set up a causal type test on our proactive measures to try to encourage vaccine uptake. The information we're putting out – we can roll out slowly and have some sense on whether it's having an impact on attitudinal measures and we do some of those tests. On the side of stuff that's misinfo, negative things propagating throughout the network. We don't have as easy an opportunity way to set up tests to determine whether people were a priori hesitant or not. We can do that for proactive work, we do research before we throw it out. For example, things we are sharing with communities of color, making sure not culturally insensitive. Work with organizations on brand lift tests. It's harder on the side of harmful content.
- Rob: If you were to change the algorithm so that people were more likely to see NYT, WSJ, any authoritative news source over Daily Wire, Tomi Lahren, polarizing people. You wouldn't have a mechanism to check the material impact?
- [REDACTED] That would require people being comfortable self-reporting change in intent to FB. One of the reasons the symptom survey is set up separately with Carnegie Mellon, UMD, because we're not under the impression that people
- Rob: But you cannot link product to that.

- [REDACTED] No, because the privacy rules in place, communicated to govt regulators, is that FB can't have the identifiable data to tie it back.
- Rob: If concern is measurable attitudinal effect, there's nothing to test persuasive material on FB. Brand Lift surveys are what you sell people.
- [REDACTED] We have the ability to do that for what FB or partners are communicating. Those are interventions that we can roll out, randomize through. When you're talking about content issues, there isn't independence of observation, material spreading through the network. SUTFA (?) violations there. Difficult to estimate causal effect. Ranking changes, given the small set of the population that we don't know ahead of time, means there is a lot of dilution, takes a lot of time to pick up that effect. Attitudes don't change immediately because of a ranking change. Have to allow time to take effect. If we made a change today, even with perfect experiment, would take a long time. And in pandemic time, we don't have that time.
- [REDACTED] That's why from product perspective, it's so important to look at mechanisms – if we can't remove it, at least we need to contain it.
- [REDACTED] one piece of circumstantial evidence – we're seeing declines in vaccine hesitancy in the US similar to the decline that Census/Pulsar data is seeing. Trying to serve best data possible with others making decisions based on it. The problem is not stagnant as far as hesitancy among US FB population. It's going down. Is it going down as fast as it could? I don't have an answer.
- Rob: Is it going down universally?
- [REDACTED] we have seen it go down among subpopulations. Are seeing a
- [Andy Slavitt is on the call at this point – 11:30 AM]
- [REDACTED] In Georgia, started talking about J&J halting earlier, we picked up an angle change there. Even across subpopulations, we aren't seeing it. We aren't measuring conservatives. We do look at counties and states, that are good proxies. We've been seeing things go down until recently.
- Andy: Apologize I missed some of the beginning. A few questions on the pieces I've seen so far- is there any spillover effect on attitudes from Pfizer or Moderna vaccines? What can you tell us about what people are saying about J&J? If people are spooked by the fact that there is a pause, I don't consider that misinfo, disinfo, or problematic. The vaccines are working on 9 figures of Americans. What bothers us is when data is obscured by people that mispresent it, knowingly or unknowingly. If people have legitimate concerns and questions, we want to be able to answer them. People are within their rights to react to news. We want to know the most effective way to respond to that. More broadly, feels like we're having a surprisingly tough time pinning down a plan of action of limiting the effects of people spreading misinfo on FB or WA. Question I asked 6 or 8 weeks ago – do we have or are we measuring the top, most shared negative sentiments? Are we measuring those over time? Are we taking the time to measure the impact of them? We've heard lots of conversation about other initiatives, a little bit of we can't do this, we can't do that. I just want to make sure that when we're frustrated, we're frustrated because we can't seem to get a straight answer to what feels like a very simple question.

- [REDACTED] Andy, nice to meet you, I'm the product lead. Going to try and work through your questions. [REDACTED] could you speak to J&J effects? I don't know that we have spillover measurements on Moderna and Pfizer?
- Andy: Perfectly reasonable you wouldn't have, if you could monitor over next few days, would be great.
- [REDACTED] On Moderna and Pfizer, based on guidance from Rob, trying to promote as much good as we can in CIC. [REDACTED] can speak to J&J.
- [REDACTED] Just quickly, because I think more important piece Andy is asking about is info diffusion on the platform. We are seeing an increase in vaccine hesitancy early states where media had more attention, e.g., Georgia shutting down J&J earlier, so far increase in hesitancy only in Georgia. People are giving more reasons about why they are hesitant – lack of trust in govt, not sure vaccine will work, people more interested in waiting to see if vaccine is safe. We're looking to see if we can match messaging to users to some of these concerns. For example, decline in trust in government – opportunity to push more local, authoritative people as spokespeople for information. Encouraging people not to wait and see. That doesn't answer spillover question, we'll get back to you if we have something reasonable to share that's good information.
- Andy: Don't wait to report to us to address spillover issues. Thank you for focusing on that. You can go onto the larger question.
- [REDACTED] Want to reanchor on where we seem three biggest forms of problems:
 - Minority - disinfo dozen – actively pushing to remove – their patterns of behaviors have started to shift to avoid policies – for example, they are using bitly links off platform. We're looking at all their identities and removing. Are they going to make mistakes so we can take them down? Vast minority of entities are actually maliciously intended.
- Andy: Clarifying q on that group – Have you limited ability to share?
- [REDACTED] Yes – we haven't explained that they are feature limited to them. Hard to detect content if not outright misinfo. We've taken other steps – removing amplification for Health Pages and Groups, but we don't want to remove good content or downrank re-education opportunities. Push and pull to calibrate.
- Andy: You don't have algorithms that can tell the difference?
- [REDACTED] Our detection classifiers can find outright misinformation
- Andy: Those are not shareable?
- [REDACTED] if we are able to identify and remove misinformation, if we can't remove, we reduce wherever we can.
- Andy: middle ground – how do you put caps on it.
- [REDACTED] three mechanisms
 - Where to put hard product features in place – e.g., mandatory post approval by admins – slows down
- Andy: Has that been done?
- [REDACTED] yes. Another example, want to slow down the rate at which content can be produced. Good posts have bad comments. We've rate limited the amount of comments to slow that down. Goes back to containing when we can't remove.

- Rob: This is a place where it's worth zooming in, where the rubber is meeting the road. What are you trying? How is it working?
- Andy: If you've done those things, can you measure the amount of shares of negative dis- or misinformation? Can you show us what those are? Last week it was 4%, this week it's 2%? That gives us a baseline. We recognize this is an ongoing battle. We don't know right now how big the battle is, whether we're winning or losing. Then we're able to not flail around and begin to focus with you on how to make it better. Is that possible to produce some kind of report?
- [REDACTED] Before you got here – we can pull raw numbers. Those will not necessarily correlate with attitudinal changes. Because this is real world, we will see the numbers fluctuate. For example, with J&J, may see spikes.
- Andy: So if you told me, we've gone from 3% to 2% but it hasn't changed attitudes. That's all we want; you control what you can control. Someday, there could be bad info about Pfizer, we have to answer honestly. FB isn't accountable for that. FB is accountable for people getting truthful, reliable information, not content that subtly changes. I just want to reinforce a lot of what Rob has been saying.
- [REDACTED] It would make a lot of our lives easier if when we delete content, we change minds. When we talk about constraint, that's the best thing we can measure. We've had a lot of policy conversations, don't want to go back to that. This is hard from technical and policy perspective. How to get the right information to the right people to get people vaccinated.
- Andy: Happy to think through challenges with you. Depends on who is sending message – in mainstream newspaper that's reliable, one thing, if comments that aren't, someone with a misleading story. Drudge report had a headline yesterday – 6/7 million cases of J&J have problem- total disaster. Together, someone coming on that news for the first time gets the intended effect.
- [REDACTED] In terms of scale, that would make me nervous too. The technical challenge, building
- Andy: We care about posts shared the most.
- [REDACTED] Can ask one question – what I'm hearing is – give us a better sense of raw numbers – those might flip and won't show sentiment. We want to hear what we can do better – for J&J – communities in rural areas, MI, potentially more likely to take J&J. I don't know the best way to go about reaching them. Would love to hear from your side how your campaign is reaching people so we can build into product.
- Andy: over long term, if you believe govt/expert agencies put transparency and safety first, will pay off. If people get accurate information, feel comfortable that someone watching backs. Worries about being rushed are not as true. Black community – got very good feedback from black physicians, black activists. At the same time, people in conservative community, just as we were getting people off the edge, now people more likely to say right all along. If people do their own homework, we ought to trust them. Not everyone will choose to get a vaccine. If people can make own decisions, we'll get over 80%. But worried about people being unduly influenced.
- [REDACTED] I just want to be clear that attitudinal shift data on misinfo doesn't exist.

- [REDACTED] With inform strategy, on J&J side, we tried to put risks in context. If there are other things you want to get out, we'd love to see that to help inform people.
- Rob: I obviously care about attitudinal shifts, matters to me. I still feel like I don't know what you are doing, what the metrics of success are. What are the 10 things you've tried?
- [REDACTED] to be fair, we are tracking that. Reduced VPVs, reduced ranking. What I can't give is attitudinal shift. That's the first time I'm hearing in those terms. That would be great for us to provide. We have hard policy constraints – things like Tomi Lahren's post. Just want to be clear we haven't declared victory.
- Andy: If you added to that policy changes you are considering, that would be helpful as well. I will tell you this just to have Rob's back, he gets asked this, it's becoming the number one question. I would just ask you not to put him in a position where he says he doesn't know. Better if he can say here's what the data says here's what they're doing, this is what they are working on.
- [REDACTED] Completely hear that. If I'm frustrated, it's because we want to achieve the same things. What we can give you is data.
- Andy: [REDACTED] I appreciate you being honest. I think it will be challenging for Rob to say that FB team is frustrated too. That kind of reaction would not go over well. We have to get past that.
- [REDACTED] To be extremely clear, reason I'm frustrated is not because it's a big problem, it's because it's moving so fast. The 40% Marines – that's coming from a community already hesitant. Comes from care.
- Rob: Maybe I haven't been able to articulate – what do you need from me to get the information you need?
- Brian: We'll develop a report get you data. We don't want to send something that will be frustrating. We've got a good sense, from what Andy has told us on this call would be most helpful – data picture. We will and can get you a report, Andy. We've been struggling to get you a usable dataset.
- Rob: Can we drill down on that. I don't need we saw 5% lift over X. I need – we tried XYZ, this is what seems to be working. What did you try? What is scaling? What was ineffective or political bullshit. Then a sense of what now.
- Andy: What Rob just asked for, complements the data. Do get the sense that this isn't a social media wide problem, it's unique to FB and WA. Conversations are not as challenging – we have much more straightforward conversations with others. I think people believe you can solve it. Simplify to here's what's going on, here's what's working.
- [REDACTED] this is my third meeting – Rob, we can pull that on the interventions. A lot of it will look like what we discussed two meetings ago. Product measures will look like what we've talked about. Haven't thrown away a lot. Just want to manage expectations. Want to understand how we're working with you in a different way than others.
- Rob: I feel like we're running around in circles. Some partners give us lots of information, some partners tell us to fuck right off. This feels like we're chasing our tails. If you don't want to give information, just say that. I don't want to feel like I'm going to a dog and pony show. My dream for FB to play ball. It's about will we get out of this fucking mess. I'm not doubting that you are sincerely trying to solve this problem in good faith. I'm doubting that you are telling us everything or that you [REDACTED] aren't getting the resources you need to tackle this. Of 1% of vaccine info, this is what's concerning, this is who is seeing it, this is what we're doing.

- [REDACTED] Super helpful, appreciate the feedback. When I say want things from you all, just to improve our process. One example – we can't do race targeting. Using SVI.
- Andy: I've jumped into 3 or 4 FB conversations; each one has been almost exactly the same. I've asked the same questions with Rob. They all finish the same way. Good promise at the end. This is a new set of people; you're hearing the questions for the first time. I can't call Nick back and say that something is different now. Feels like we're in the same place.
- Brian: It's been 2-3 weeks, know Nick told you we'd be working on reporting. We'll get that to you ASAP. I think Nick said at the time it would take some time to figure out.
- [REDACTED] What helps me is understanding is it doesn't have to be qualitative. On the metrics – the most viral content is the authoritative content – I thought that wouldn't be useful. We'll look for faster qualitative bunch along with product info.
- Rob: Two reasons why not useful – we see it in CrowdTangle. I don't know if widest reach stuff is the problem, or stuff that's in groups, private.
- [REDACTED] Answer hasn't changed
 - Disinfo dozen style people staying under policy limits
 - Authoritative posts with comments and dialogues
- Rob: What that implies to me that you think there's not a problem. So, tell me what is. If it's far reaching authoritative but bad news.
- [REDACTED] That's why we didn't send it. I don't have the numbers on comments but pulling. The last thing that's evolving – public figures
- Rob: concept of disinfo dozen is concerning – is it impact or subjective?
- [REDACTED] subjective – reason it makes me nervous – how do we stay below these lines. Maybe misspoke when I said frustration – relates to nuance and extent of the problem. I want to work with you on these things – scrapper faster data
- Brian: Thanks Rob. We don't want to be running in circles. We'll get you something to react to. That will inform next steps.

EXHIBIT 6

4-5 Notes on Call with White House re Symptom Survey

WH attendees: Rob Flaherty, Courtney Rowe, Clark

FB attendees: Brian Rice, [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED]

- Brian: Want to introduce [REDACTED] he leads our work on the COVID survey that we're sending regularly to you. Want to walk through how we use it, how we approach it, how we think it will be useful in the work you're doing to identify pockets of the country where vaccine hesitancy is more of a problem. [REDACTED] will give an update at the end. Will turn it over to [REDACTED] let us know if you have questions.
- [REDACTED] Hi Rob and Courtney, nice to meet you. Please interrupt with any questions, see this as a conversation. I lead a special methodology team – Demography and Survey Science. I'm a sociologist by training. The survey that we're running with CMU and UMD – using FB's superpower in combination with superpower of public health community to understand at a granular level issues. We rely on public health experts to help with what goes into survey, we aren't public health experts. In the US alone, we collect about 40,000 responses per day. Next largest – 75,000 responses every two weeks – the Household Pulse Data. Temporal and granularity make valuable instrument. We don't have access to individual responses, but we use data internally to help inform messaging campaigns, understand in the US, the world, where different messages might resonate. I can go into high level insights by race/ethnicity/age etc., real time info on preventative health behavior. But want to address what you want to hear about. High level things most pertinent:
 - We've all heard in the media and other data sources about disparities among people of color versus whites with respect to hesitancy. This survey points out that vaccine accepting black and LatinX adults are less likely to have attempted to make an appointment. In LatinX community, highest gap in MD, NY, VA. MD – disparity between LatinX and white adults is largest – interesting because MD is one of the least hesitant states. State like NM, much older Latino population, actual parity between white population and Latino population there.
 - States where most hesitant – MI, Indiana, Ohio – reasons people are giving – side effects, waiting to see what happens, lack of trust. In other states, a lot of diversity across the US. Nice thing about this data is you can dive in at a county level to see how the numbers are changing over time so you can think about potential interventions.
 - Another highlight – looking at real time preventative health behaviors. E.g., Texas with no mask mandate – we can look before and after lifting mask mandate on March 10. 3% decrease in people reporting wearing masks. We see heterogeneity across counties. Travis county kept mask mandate, saw very little change. Harris county, saw a 5-point change. We can understand microinterventions, how they are affecting behaviors. Can also look at interest in vaccine, what concerns people are having.

- This is just some of the ability that we have. The results are usually available about a day after collected. If we collect today, can see estimates tomorrow. That allows us to be able to understand the changes occurring as pandemic is unfolding.
 - Change instrument frequently, in 7 languages.
 - Would love to answer questions, what you'd like to see.
- Brian: Rob, you heard from [REDACTED] that we're using survey to get feedback and see in the real world how people are responding. View it as a valuable tool. Would love feedback on how could use it. We have a new version coming to you next week.
- [REDACTED] Have collaborated with CDC, gotten a lot of good feedback, a lot of interest from academic community. Zeke Emmanuel just co-published an article looking at self-modulated behaviors in response to rising case rates.
- Rob: In terms of the survey, when gleaning things from it, how do you compare population on FB against general population?
- [REDACTED] About 93% of adults in the US use the internet, about 83-84% on FB. We have more data about people on FB than people on survey panels. People don't join FB to take surveys, orthogonal w/r/t bias. Some slight skews, but we think we do pretty well. The value of the data isn't that there isn't bias, it's that the bias is consistent over time. If you want to understand over time across geographies, we can offer that better than anyone else.
- Rob: First packet I got in mid-March, was results from February, was useful. I'm curious, what are messaging things that are most useful. What are you finding that has worked?
- [REDACTED] We haven't engaged with our own interventions, we're rolling that out, it's early to say.
- [REDACTED] You'll recall, we're doing a lot of broad inform, we felt we didn't have the right targeting in place to go deep. One thing I want to make sure we're not losing, any subtext – how do we enable you to find the communities that need the more targeted messaging?
- Rob: we want to find where is the biggest problem, what has been materially useful.
- [REDACTED] Survey itself can tell you the reasons that hesitant but persuadable are being influenced by norms and expectations of people around them in their lives. You can see at a geographic level the differences. But you can also see who they trust. Those also vary by geography and population. If you take that – can explore local messengers in one community, friends and family in another, more elite spokesperson is another. It can help you with the messaging, but you have to try it to see if works.
- [REDACTED] It's hard for us to prove out that an informative piece of content changes hearts and minds outside of survey. Social norms, like profile frames, seeing friends and family and public figures, could help.
- [REDACTED] So when 28% people of NH saying they are waiting because other people need it more, then maybe you need to match message to not to wait. Almost like political microtargeting.
- Rob: How do we make that operationally useful for us and track it?

- [REDACTED] Because of privacy reasons, we work through academic partners. You could work through academic partners, or there is a public API. We can talk about the cadence you might want to receive the information.
 - For example, prime minister's office in UK want to access data to build out a dashboard.
 - We can help get in format that's the easiest way for you to consume.
- Rob: Format like the document you sent, the high-level takeaways, that's helpful. With API, might need Cyrus or HHS. I probably won't be using the API.
- Courtney: Would be great to follow up with Cyrus. Love that broken down by region and demographics. But equally important, how do we work with you all to push back on it. If someone in rural Arkansas sees something on FB, it's the truth.
- [REDACTED] OK – so in terms of action items
 - Find ways to reduce delay
 - Maybe there is a future opportunity to bring in my counterpart Katie who is working on roll out of info on state sides
- Courtney: That would be great. But we want to understand how to counter and correct myths. That piece of it is equally important. Seeing counternarrative on FB will be much more effective.
- Brian: We will push to get more frequent versions of this, can also look for red alert, COVID survey concierge service, will look at what we can provide. [REDACTED] want to see what survey can tell WH about where people are hesitant and how we get messages to them. Then also on FB to counter misinfo through labeling, pushing authoritative info to people. That's something we're making a priority.
- Courtney: Super helpful to get this information, this is what we need. What we need is help pushing back on the myths.
- [REDACTED] Doesn't just help us understand how and where to intervene, but it also tells us if the interventions are working. We can see overtime if hesitancy is decreasing where we are doing interventions.
- Rob: Rather than chasing individual narratives/demographics, know you've said that broad access is more of philosophical approach.
- [REDACTED] Don't think that targeting is the wrong way to do it, it's a sequencing thing. Remove harm, reduce hesitant, inform good. In an ideal state, we inform, but we can also identify and reduce hesitant. But since the detection still isn't quite there for hesitancy, we are starting with inform. Maturity of our detection is the core of challenge for identifying and removing and also means harder to do more targeted interventions.
- Rob: Question I have – if we focus on broad stuff next – if we are to take things from more targeted info, we run targeted ads and local media. You can look at what's showing promise, what's in the lab.
- [REDACTED] Yes – right now, it's all broad. Wondering if there is a way to combine vast majority of fastest groups about how to find appointments, discussing side effects. Do we leverage this kind of activity – we know from human patterns of behavior that people are trying to do X, can we build a better data set.

- [REDACTED] That's where a lot of our efforts are trying to go. We are looking at using CDC SVI to see if we're having a more or less positive effects on those counties that are considered as vulnerable by CDC. Can we bring together behavioral aspects of what we see. Not building two different tools, building one, market the same one to different people.
- [REDACTED] Can we bring Katie next time, Brian? This is at the heart of biggest opportunity to work together.
- Brian: Yes.
- Rob: Is the problem that there isn't a tool? Or the more someone uses FB, the more likely to be vaccine hesitant?
- [REDACTED] Don't think we have data that suggests that. Literature on vaccine hesitancy – people bring hesitancy to the groups that they are in. They aren't more hesitant as a result of social media campaigns. Do think that for some populations – not knowing how to get an appointment is actually a barrier. FB can help meet that need. For other populations, might have a more effective message. Vaccine hesitant, anti-vaxxers. We can address concerns of vaccine hesitant by understanding concerns and address.
- [REDACTED] Remove harm – about trying to actively do harm – that's the vast minority but we want to remove. Hesitancy – want to keep getting as much information as I can to you. Vast majority of overall widely distributed content, authoritative and good – from CDC, etc. Hesitancy themes around side effects – is vaccine causing nose bleeds, enlarged lymph nodes. We still have a gap in understanding or managing expectations as to what experience could be like. Another thing – lots of questions over finding appointment. Seeing a trend in memes and satire making fun of individuals that don't want to get vaccine. Political themes: video of Biden speaking, reactions. Still small group of adversarial people, large group who are hesitant and have concerns about side effects, finding appointments.
- Rob: Are you able to provide resources?
- [REDACTED] This is why on broad inform – we tag anything with COVID-19 vaccine, it directs you to the COVID information center. Ideal state – I have a concern about a nosebleed, here's a resource exactly about that. That from a technical perspective is really hard, which is why it's broader.
- [REDACTED] It's hard, and it may not be effective. Some research shows that allowing people to express experience and concerns might be a more effective path to having a conversation with them. Have to be careful in how we approach.
- Rob: If people are having the conversation, is the presumption that we let people have it. Direct them to CDC. What then?
- [REDACTED] I think it's an and. We all know people that have had the experience that think that FB is listening to them. The more general stuff, connection to CDC, pops up as very predictable, that's fine, people don't have issues with that. You have the opportunity to go back later, to surface information. At the immediate moment, have the big brother feel. We should pay attention to those conversations, make sure that people see information, even if it's not right then. Have easy access to information.

- [REDACTED] Also need to be honest here, deficit of trust in the government, deficit of trust in FB. Figuring out the right interventions that doesn't reinforce some of those concerns around trust is really critical. Who are your trusted sources? Friends and family? Community figure? In areas where we or you aren't the right voice, where we can find the right voice to address concerns>
- Rob: how do we get that stuff to people?
- [REDACTED] there are a number of public health agencies we're working with to do campaigns on FB – make use of ability to understand population and target messages appropriately.
- Brian: Some of this is actually targeting. [REDACTED] and our ads team know more – a lot can be accomplished through targeting, third parties can definitely target – there will be demographic information that will be able to be used as well.
- Rob: There are ways we can target around it. Since it's a global pandemic, can we give agencies access to targeting parameters that they normally wouldn't be able to?

... (missed 1 Q)

- Courtney: Have other issues – for example, women of childbearing age worried about fertility. Can we adjust survey on a dime? Pregnancy is another one but I'm less worried about it. Conservative circles. Can we send stuff your way to look at?
- [REDACTED] Yes you can definitely share information with us, we can look at what we're seeing, look at modifications to survey. CDC weighs in on questions. We do have questions, for example on pregnancy, we can look at whether it corroborates what you're seeing. We have other things like job occupations that we're looking at.
- [REDACTED] Want to be mindful of time,
 - In March took down 700,000 pieces of content globally, 150,000 in the US – this is a drop because we took down a lot and then were cleaning up
 - For full transparency and honesty, have moved out of a sprint that the teams have been in for the last 8 weeks, achieved goals, made progress – closed out foundationa understanding work, early virality detection. Now focus for teams will be expediting execution.
 - Don't want to seem like we've changed teams or priority, we're just shifting focus
- Rob: Team that had been focused on vaccine hesitancy is moving to execution phase, figured out what you need to do
- [REDACTED] That's right, but just within moving target, we've now identified the head of the problem, know what we're doing, overall priority, teams, resources, hasn't changed.
- Brian: We described this as a lockdown earlier. Wanted to hear from us, as things pop out of Facebook and into the Washington Post. Want to communicate clearly with you.
- Rob: I appreciate that, am not 100% understanding it but probably more me than you. What are the things that you found?
- [REDACTED] What I don't want you to think is that we've declared victory and on vacation. What we found – had some improvements on misinfo accuracy, adjusting policies (e.g., removing 2 million pieces of content). Vaccine hesitancy – what we talked about last time – it's around topics – symptoms/appointments/memes/political themes, less about small group of adversaries. Now we're focused on executing.

- Rob: Execute is trying out new interventions?
- [REDACTED] Great question – when I say execute – we've already been deploying interventions in a first version way. Now we're expanding and improving the quality of those.
- Courtney: What are you qualifying as misinformation versus politically charged? What does that universe of stuff look like overall?
- Brian: The way that you describe it probably isn't the way we think about it – misinfo v. politically charged. We have a policy definition of misinformation, then we have gradations of what we take down, versus reduce/inform. Might be easier to send some examples.
- Courtney: What are all the narratives that are out there? Would be interesting to see what's misinformation versus something we'd flag.
- Brian: That's what [REDACTED] getting into with respect to the themes. We'll update you on the major themes that we're seeing each week. Flat out, adversarial misinfo versus vaccine hesitancy content.
- Courtney: E.g., in last seven days, have seen claims about people playing God, etc. Is that misinformation?
- [REDACTED] Maybe we can get some visual examples and send over. We'll pull Katie in around messaging channels. What am I missing Brian?
- Brian: Going to look at different ways to share survey information with Rob. Don't want to just link API to you, want to be topline. We'll take that back with [REDACTED] team too.
- Courtney: super helpful.
- Rob: We can offline about specific format. We're most interested in what's keeping you up at night.
- [REDACTED] We can do that, raise up to you quite frequently. Have a number of epidemiologists looking at this internally and externally.
- Courtney: I pinged the team about vaccine passports, can get you some examples.
- [REDACTED] Religious thing – survey lets us know if concerns are religious.
- Courtney: OK great.
- [REDACTED] we'll meet again in a week? Can move to Mondays going forward.

6/15 Meeting with White House

FB Attendees: Brian Rice, [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED]

WH Attendees: Rob Flaherty

Brian – Rob, I know we have a lot to cover. Want to respond to conversation from a little while back. Start off with the Policy changes we made on May 26. Then we'll walk through content demotion where we hopefully explain in a way where you're comfortable with it. And hopefully our colleague [REDACTED] will join to provide more context around the statistics we sent over on vaccine sentiment. Wanted to make sure we gave you clarity there.

Rob – sounds great.

[REDACTED] – I'm [REDACTED] – I lead the product teams working on integrity within FB App. Around the distribution of reducing problematic content, inform treatments. I'll touch on 3 new misinfo experiences related to reducing distro of misinfo, touch briefly on how ranking works, I know we've discussed in the past, demotions are anchored in ranking, so will gloss over that, then go to details of demotions.

Rob – great

[REDACTED] – 3 new misinfo tools announced at end of May. Leveraged a few of them in election period.

New approach – give people more info about Pages that have shared misinformation or have content that has been repeatedly fact checked. So now where there's the case, you can get more information about what fact checkers said about content on that page. Part of overall inform strategy to give people more information.

More aggressive approach to entities that have repeatedly shared misinfo – Pages or Groups – it's typically the same sets of Pages/Groups. We've introduced logic so that we increase demotion strength/amount of demotion that we apply to those entities. This is one I was especially excited about. We know it's the same set of entities that are repeatedly sharing. This one is key.

Last one- improvement in way we notify people that they've shared content that fact-checkers later rate. We've redesigned notifications that the person gets to make it easier to understand. Additional info we're adding in – fact checker's article debunking the claim, prompt to share additional context with other people.

[REDACTED] – those are the three main new misinfo levers we've introduced. Any questions.

Rob – biggest question is related to how demotion works. But to make sure I have it right – first one is a pop up when you go to like a page that tells you it's repeatedly shared misinfo?

[REDACTED] – yes. And includes substantive information about the fact checker. We can send you an example of what it looks like.

Rob – how many times does the Page have to share to trigger treatment?

[REDACTED] – It varies across experiences. In this case, I think it's 5. Let me follow up specifically. Want to make sure you have the most accurate information.

Rob – I'm curious about notifications after sharing something fact-checked. In many different worlds ago, Brian and I talked about – the CW said it hardens people. What changed? What research have you done?

██████ – I can't speak to what was discussed earlier. These experiences have been being built for quite some time, have evolved. We've refined user research that told us that people do pay attention, there is value in providing this information, even if it's after the fact. Brian, any other context?

Brian – was this around the election?

Rob – this is when we first talked on Beto stuff – badging, notifying people. Research said counterproductive. I think this is a good thing.

Brian – I do remember that was our sense at the time – going back after the time. Let me go back to the teams and see.

██████ – We have pivoted substantially in the couple years I've been here towards a much more inform-centric approach. Another experience we launched last year – when a person goes to share an out-of-date piece of content or one likely to have misinfo in it, we surface what we call a reshare interstitial that informs people at time of sharing that content might be out of date. We found that as classifiers have improved over time, we've been able to be more targeted in approach, that type of information has quite materially slowed the spread of viral misinformation. A lot of this was over time improving our ability to classify, getting the copy and experience right – informative but not judgmental. Saying likely to be problematic in XYZ ways, you choose if you reshare. We notify you there might be some issues.

██████ – external studies in this space are heterogenous in their effects. Quality of classifier really matters in prompts, even if after the fact. Also, nature of the topic itself. Tone in which you approach it matters quite a bit. One of those situations where it works sometimes, it's not going to work all the time. You have to test and adjust it. I'm sure that improving classifier over time is what's making this work.

██████ – and getting the tone right is also a key factor. Can influence whether pause before sharing.

Rob – Tone is way copy is written?

██████ – right. We spent months of time landing the precise copy where we wouldn't be perceived as being paternalistic. Landing the words was really important. We launched the first ones in March/April last year have now used during election periods, other scenarios. It's a powerful lever against misinformation.

Rob – Cool, awesome

██████ – I love this approach specifically because we are transparent with users. Demotion work – it is difficult to be transparent, give people a sense of how their content is being enforced on. In this case, able to be transparent and clear about the fact that the content will get less distribution, fewer people are going to see it.

Rob – that makes sense.

██████ – Ok, I'll just cover context-setting COVID approach. We remove content that clearly violates our policies. Then there is a set of content that doesn't violate but could be harmful, and so important to reduce the amount of times content is seen. Won't spend much more time on that if that works for you.

Rob – OK

██████ – I can spend a minute on how ranking works. Demotions, in their simplest form, is a discount to a ranking score that we assign to a piece of content. Zooming out a bit – there is so much content out there – each person has more inventory than they could possibly ever go through. Ranking is important because it's important to order what people see. Rank based on user value – determined by signals. What you might want to see most versus what I might want to see most. What we do is take all these different signals, assign a ranking score to a piece of content. Say there is a piece of sensationalist content, vaccine related. We assign a value – say it's 10 – given all the different things we incorporate into ranking score. Our integrity system then calculates an integrity score or multiplier. In the case of sensationalist content – we're certain that this piece of content is correctly classified as such – sensationalist content gets a demotion strength or discount of 40%/0.4. – we subtract 4 from 10. Piece of content that would have otherwise had a ranking score of 10 now has a rank of 6. So, when we stack rank or order the content after applying integrity score determines where it goes. Tricky piece is that ranking systems are deeply personalized. Difficult to say that a piece of content will rank in X position in everyone's feed universally. Not how it works. But I can say this piece of content would be seen by roughly 40% fewer people based on demotion. That's one way to think about the "under the hood" of demotion works.

Rob – this is interesting. If seen by 40% fewer people, who are the remaining 60%? What are the audience differentiations? What kind of person can see it?

██████ – this is where the personalized nature of news feed comes in (and note I'm talking conceptually, it may not be precisely 60/40). One example is a low inventory user. So, if my dad only has 4 friends, there's limited content for him to see. Another reason – connected to a page or group. Or if someone is scrolling deeper into feed than you or I might do.

Rob – Reason I ask – seems plausible that 40% that are no longer seeing it are less susceptible to it and 60% are more open to it. Attitudinal difference.

██████ – I think that's right – although we can't say who it's bad for, or whether their attitudes are antecedent.

Brian – Thinking about that population – I've been asking the same questions – you'd have the 40% might be the fence sitters. The remainder may have signal that they want to see it – they're not fence sitters. They are the folks that won't be convinced. There's an argument that you're removing it from fence sitter. I don't think we have data to show it.

Rob – Devil in the details. It's hard for me to make a personal evaluation of whether it's making a difference.

██████ – If we wanted to understand if it's making a difference, we'd have to randomly assign who gets demotion and who doesn't and have some sense of prior attitudes. Given that this is a rare event. That random assignment becomes harder when you're talking about content that others inject into the system versus our ability to inject content. With vaccines, it's probably not exposure to one thing or exposure over a short time. At the point of the pandemic where we're talking about vaccines, people have hardened/crystallized their attitudes. Hard to study. On integrity – we hope they are effective, taking steps because we don't want the content up. And then there are times where we are actively putting things at the top of people's feed. In that case, we control random assignments and can look at differences.

██████ – two other things.

60/40 – don't want to anchor in them, they are arbitrary. Could have used X and Y.

This is where inform treatments become important. People who might want to see that content will continue to see it. With overlay of authoritative content pinned to the top – embedded authoritative information – becomes very important. People can choose to engage. But in parallel, we're providing a counter to that misinformation. Does that make sense?

Rob – It makes sense. You guys are much longer on inform, we're much longer on reduce.

██████ – what do you mean by that?

Rob – we're keen on what platforms are doing to reduce the spread of bad information, that platforms are not funneling people towards bad content. That's our primary concern. If you guys have data that show that inform counteracts the spread of bad information, great.

██████ – it does. The value of inform is that we know that it does have an impact on distribution.

Rob – I'd love to see that.

██████ – particularly important for borderline content where difficult for classifiers.

██████ – a couple data points that have been really helpful for me. Search interstitial. I think we have data that interstitials do reduce borderline and misinfo shares. It's a clear example of interstitial having a meaningful impact. Other data we have goes one step further – proactive campaigns with CDC and so on. Able to measure causal and in some cases positive impact on vaccine attitudes. Another example of value of inform.

Rob – I haven't seen that data.

██████ – as with all marketing campaigns, depends on targeting and copy. More than happy to share.

██████ – some of them were in Nick's email.

Rob – that was my last thing I wanted to get at with Brian. We came away that you weren't measuring, then we saw that you were. Was that brand lift? How are you measuring?

██████ – Measured in a few ways. A lot of the ones in Nick's note were brand lift or analogous (compare people exposed to content to random control group and survey). That's one of the techniques we've used. In addition to that, have done additional studies to try to attribute to real world uptake. Those take longer. Blood donations is a good example – when we rolled out in the US worked closely with American Red Cross – we were able to see with their data – increase of 19% increase nationwide of new donors. Using same techniques in this space. Direct brand lift, then broader body of work that goes all the way to attribution in the physical world.

██████ – I have to hop, Rob happy to follow up with whatever details might be helpful. There is some upcoming work on increased transparency that would love to chat with you about sometime in the future.

Rob – Great, thank you.

██████ – We are able to do causal inference/impact analyses. The conversation we had previously was how can we understand impact of misinfo on people's attitudes. That's where we have a hard time studying.

Rob – that makes sense. I actually do have to run also. I still have more questions, can email them to you Brian.

Brian – great. As ██████ mentioned, we are doing more as a Company to try and make this easier to understand. Coming in the next couple weeks. We can follow up with you then. But send questions, we'll do our best.

Rob – also interested outside of COVID in promotion of good information – NEQ score stuff rings a lot of alarm bells. Would like to dive in next time we talk.

Hi all,

Thanks so much again for the sprint on this. Leadership met today and decided we should move forward on our 4 recommendations (pasted below and also in our team's working doc here <[https://docs.google.com/\[REDACTED\]](https://docs.google.com/[REDACTED])>) and scope the exact product work needed to implement and then execute on the ones that are relatively easy to do.

[REDACTED] and [REDACTED] will be driving next steps on this overall while I'm out on PTO next week, coordinating with [REDACTED] and will reach out to our Product counterparts on Options 2a, 2b, and 2c. @ [REDACTED] <[mailto:\[REDACTED\]@fb.com](mailto:[REDACTED]@fb.com)> could you be on point to further scope Option 1a with your Recs Product counterparts?

@ [REDACTED] <[mailto:\[REDACTED\]@fb.com](mailto:[REDACTED]@fb.com)> and @ [REDACTED] <[mailto:\[REDACTED\]@fb.com](mailto:[REDACTED]@fb.com)> , please let us know if there's additional feedback you got on the Product side for how to best scope these options and whom to involve. I appreciate you flagging earlier today that we'll have to make some prioritization calls as we scope each of these options further.

@ [REDACTED] <[mailto:\[REDACTED\]@fb.com](mailto:[REDACTED]@fb.com)> , @ [REDACTED] <[mailto:\[REDACTED\]@fb.com](mailto:[REDACTED]@fb.com)> and @ [REDACTED] <[mailto:\[REDACTED\]@fb.com](mailto:[REDACTED]@fb.com)> , please let us know if you have any immediate thoughts on deadline to turn v2 of these options around. We'll move fast but aren't aware of a specific moment when we need to commit to any of these privately or publicly with external stakeholders.

Recommendations to further scope:

Option 1a. Designate linked assets as non-recommendable

- * Impact: Any assets linked to Groups/Pages/Profiles/Accounts that have been removed for COVID misinfo violations would not be recommended to users. E.g., RFK Jr.'s IG Account is removed, so his FB Page will be non-recommendable.
- * Recommendation: We recommend this as a stop-gap measure specifically targeting Disinfo Dozen assets. Per the recent Avaaz <https://secure.avaaz.org/campaign/en/fb_algorithm_antivaxx/> report, some entities affiliated with removed Disinfo Dozen Pages are still being recommended because they do not have recent violations.
- * Difficulty: Low (1-6 weeks)

Option 2a. Count COVID M&H, Vaccine WDH, & COVID RFH toward misinfo Repeat Offender Status

- * Impact: Currently, strikes for COVID Misinfo & Harm, Vaccine Widely Debunked Hoaxes, and COVID Repeatedly Fact-Checked Hoaxes receive Community Standards strikes, but they do not count towards Misinformation Repeat Offender (RO) Status. If we count those strikes towards Misinfo RO Status, entities spreading COVID or vaccine misinfo would more quickly receive related penalties, such as content demotion or an advertising ban, on top of normal CS penalties.
- * Recommendation: We recommend this because the Misinfo RO system is meant to penalize misinfo actors and therefore should count this content, which is more egregious than false information fact-checked by a 3PFC.
- * Difficulty: Low (1-6 weeks)

Option 2b. Develop a strike system for health-related Partly False and Missing Context ratings that could trigger domain/Page/Group/account Repeat Offender (RO) status in more instances [Note: leadership feedback is to develop this for DOMAINS only]

- * Impact: Our latest analysis of URLs directing to Disinfo Dozen webpages found that a significant percentage of the most viewed URLs have Partly False or Missing Context 3PFC ratings. Counting health-related Partly False and Missing Context ratings toward entity-level penalties could allow us to take stronger action to reduce the distribution of the domains and associated entities themselves.
- * Recommendation: We recommend this as it is consistent with the precedent of taking stronger measures against Covid-related fact-checked content. However, this requires considerable lift for just a small set of bad actors.
- * Difficulty: High (6+ weeks)
- * In the interim, we could demote in-Feed domains associated with removed entities (note: three Disinfo Dozen domains are already experiencing demotion under Misinfo RO penalties).

Option 2c. Demote Partly False rated Covid or vaccine misinformation more strongly

- * Demote Partly False rated Covid or vaccine misinformation more strongly (up to 80% from 50% today) (Recommended)
- * Impact: COVID or vaccine misinfo that we don't remove would appear lower in people's News Feed.
- * Recommendation: We are already demoting COVID content rated Missing Context as a BTG and see this as consistent with that precedent.
- * Difficulty: Low (1-6 weeks)

Feedback from Health Integrity London

1. RFH strikes for demotion are not in production. We had strikes for RFH deletes and plan to enable strikes for demotions as a P2 for Q3 when we onboard responses to Misinformation's infra. RFH has ~40 new content enforcements per day (excluding banking which is ~550/day).
2. RE Section 3 "Demote more content" - As we plan to integrate with misinfo's infra for all responses (P1 Q3) these features could be prioritised for launch at that time. @ [redacted] <[mailto:\[redacted\]@fb.com](mailto:[redacted]@fb.com)> to comment on feasibility/timelines.
3. I have added another section with additional BTGs measures for consideration. One of which is automated Feed demotions on Covid posts by Health Misinfo Ros which was a BTG lever that we launched during the lockdown with Feed Integrity. At that time it was developed with [redacted], but while she's out I believe @ [redacted] <[mailto:\[redacted\]@fb.com](mailto:[redacted]@fb.com)> is covering here.

Subject: [A/C PRIV] Enforcement Update re COVID-19

Nick, [REDACTED] [REDACTED]

This email provides a follow-up to our August 6th discussion regarding our response to the Surgeon General on COVID-19 misinformation. During that discussion, we agreed to further explore four discreet policy options for reducing the prevalence of COVID-19 misinformation on our platforms. Since then, teams have scoped the requirements for executing those options. As discussed further below, we plan to roll-out the first three options over the next coming weeks, and will roll-out the fourth option as an escalation only policy.

Please let us know if you have any concerns with the following plan by 9 am ET tomorrow; otherwise, we plan to provide an update to the Surgeon General and start executing against these tomorrow.

Thank you,
[REDACTED]

1. Option 1: Designate any assets linked to Groups/Pages/Profiles/Accounts, which have been removed for COVID misinfo violations, as non-recommendable to users.

- a. Impact: Any asset linked to Groups/Pages/Profiles/Accounts that have been removed for COVID misinfo violations would not be recommended to users (e.g., RFK Jr.'s IG Account is removed, so his FB Page will be non-recommendable).
- b. Status: By the end of this week, we will enforce on approximately 60 linked assets related to the Disinfo Dozen that have been removed for COVID misinfo violations. Over the next three weeks, we will engage in further work to understand how to mitigate the risk of over-enforcement here. We will then return with a further recommendation on a broader policy change that will affect more than just the 60 Disinfo Dozen-linked assets.

2. Option 2: Count COVID Misinformation & Harm (M&H), Vaccine Widely Debunked Hoaxes (WDH), & COVID Repeatedly Fact-Checked Hoaxes (RFH) toward Misinformation Repeat Offender status.

- a. Impact: Currently, only 3PFC-rated False/Altered content counts toward misinfo repeat offender status, which results in demotions and demonetization for entities. Counting COVID M&H, Vaccine WDH, and COVID RFH strikes towards misinfo repeat offender status would more quickly penalize entities spreading COVID or vaccine misinfo on top of our normal Community Standards penalties.
- b. Status: We are targeting the end of September for launch. This includes updating language on existing transparency surfaces to notify affected entities how content we remove for COVID/Vaccine violations factors into their Repeat Offender status.

3. Option 3: Demote COVID or vaccine misinformation rated Partly False more strongly.

- a. Impact: We currently demote content rated Partly False at 50%. We will increase that demotion level to 80% for COVID and vaccine misinfo. Note: In the last month, fact-checkers applied "Partly False" ratings to at least 1k COVID-19/vaccine content.
- b. Status: We are targeting the end of next week for launch. This includes transparency updates in an existing NewsRoom Post (link).

4. Option 4: Count COVID or vaccine-related URLs that are rated Partly False or Missing Context towards "domain" Repeat Offender (RO) status (i.e., penalize the URL domains from which the content was shared).

- a. Impact: The Disinfo Dozen report faulted FB for allowing users to share URLs linked to the Disinfo Dozen. Misinfo Policy found that, for the most viral Disinfo Dozen URLs rated by third-party fact checkers, 85% of those ratings were either Partly False or Missing Context. However, only False ratings count towards misinfo repeat offender status, which means, for those URLs rated False, all user shares of that URL's domain will be demoted.
- b. Status:
 - i. Change: This is a heavy lift to integrate into our existing repeat offender system. Instead, we will approach this as an on-escalation break-the-glass measure. We will periodically manually review domains that had a high number of third-party fact check ratings to see if enough of them were COVID or vaccine related. We will enforce on domains that meet that threshold manually for 90-day domain demotion (note: threshold is still TBD). Misinfo Policy and Product are aligned on this modification of the option as a BTG solution.
 - ii. Caveats: This will not flow through the normal repeat offender process, so will not have messaging that domain repeat offender status has been met. However, many of our domain repeat offender demotions do not give notification unless the domain is explicitly tied to a page. We will need to have a reactive comms plan for partners that may experience these demotions.

To follow-up on #2 below, we were able to evaluate the groups closer. Based on the evidence of the post showing an intent to evade enforcement, and the presence of strikes in the group, PLUS evidence that they have a back-up group ready to go if their larger group is removed, we are comfortable removing both groups.

On #2, we discovered this content in two groups. Both groups are using coded language to discuss COVID and vaccines. We don't have a policy prohibiting people from using coded language if their content otherwise does not violate our policies. One group had only 6 posts and no violations; the other had 3,600 posts and 2 violations. I am asking PREsc to continue reviewing those groups to make sure there are no violations. We could amend our Help Center to prohibit Groups and Pages from using coded language to discuss COVID and vaccines if there is evidence that they intend to avoid detection (we believe there is such evidence here -- see post below where they are teaching members how to use code words).

On #3, we reviewed 28 websites linked to the "Disinfo Dozen" and found that 15 prominently feature content that would violate our COVID/vaccine misinfo policies, or would be borderline vaccine discouraging, if they were on our platform.

Of those 15, >50% of the recent shares of 2 of those domains would violate our policies if on platform; 25-50% of the recent shares of 6 of those domains would violate our policies; and <25% of the recent share of 7 of those domains would violate our policies.

- If we were to blackhole all 28 websites, that would remove approximately 500 million pieces of content.
- If we were to blackhole only the 15 websites, that would remove approximately 252 million pieces of content.

- If we were to backhole only the 2 domains where >50% of the recent shares contain violating content (i.e., childrenshealthdefense.org and vaccines.mercola.com), >66 million pieces of content would be removed.

Grateful if someone could explain why this wasn't labeled?

He also shared this which I think rather proves our point – are we supposed to remove “gibberish”? - but grateful for views since I'd like to get back to Andy on it (he claims he is trying to be helpful by passing on our POV to the Surgeon General before the Fri meeting):

3. Sheryl is keen that we continue to explore some moves that we can make to show that we are trying to be responsive to the WH. [REDACTED] – I have explained to her that you think the blackholing idea doesn't work after all.

We should take stock after the Fri meeting, but my sense is that our current course – in effect explaining ourselves more fully, but not shifting on where we draw the lines or on the data we provide (subject to the agreement last night that we'd offer up VPVs of content we've removed but only if demanded from other platforms on the same basis) is a recipe for protracted and increasing acrimony with the WH as the vaccine roll out continues to stutter through the Fall and the Winter. Given the bigger fish we have to fry with the Administration – data flows etc – that doesn't seem a great place for us to be, so grateful for any further creative thinking on how we can be responsive to their concerns.

Well, I'm pushing [REDACTED] et al to see what more data we can share with them which is a big ask from the WH – the problem is they disregard the “reach” data (vs engagement) that we already share with them, and they don't ask the same of other cos (YT et al) so I'm going to propose to Surgeon Gen on Fri that he asks for comparative data from all the cos not just us which should move things along on that front.

Re misinfo itself it's worth reading the email from [REDACTED] in detail – what the WH appears to want us to remove ranges from humor to totally non violating chatter about vaccines. I can't see Mark in a million years being comfortable with removing that – and I wouldn't recommend it.

We don't need to decide everything at once – we should wait to see what Surgeon Gen tells me on Fri before deciding how/whether we need to make any bigger moves.

[REDACTED] now tells me that she's sceptical that the “blackholing” of links actually works in practice – frustrating – so if you answer to the wider thread be aware that it's not yet clear whether it's workable.

Nick,

TLDR: There is likely a significant gap between what the WH would like us to remove and what we are comfortable removing. There are some policy mitigations that could get the two parties closer, but Content Policy does not recommend pursuing them.

You asked for information about the delta between content that Facebook is removing and the White House wants us to remove and mitigation options. The White House rarely provides any specificity about what it wants removed, but it routinely complains to us about content identified in critical media reports. We've compiled specific criticisms and extrapolated from more general complaints below:

1. Cross-platform disables:

- a. Delta: The WH wants cross-platform disables. We only do cross-platform disables for child safety and dangerous organization violations.
- b. Mitigation (not recommended): We could remove all of a person's groups/pages/accounts once they have had a single group/page/account removed for covid misinfo violations. This would remove approximately 50 non-violating entities associated with the Disinfo Dozen, including many entities that have nothing to do with COVID or vaccines. We are continuing to research what other entities might be affected.
- c. Background:
 - i. Jen Psaki said that if you're banned on one platform, you should be banned on all platforms. We do not and should not ban users from FB or IG because they've been banned by competitors. We assess FB pages and profiles and IG accounts based on the content they post and do not typically enforce against a non-violating page/profile/account if a connected entity is removed (we only enforce cross-platform on DOI and Child Safety violations). This practice has been a point of contention around the "Disinfo Dozen" because we have removed their violating entities (23 entities from 11 of the 12 people) but continued to allow their non-violating entities (53 entities - this set is under constant review and number changes often).

2. Off-Platform Links:

- a. Delta: The WH wants all links to the Disinfo Dozen's off-platform domains removed. We only remove links to off-platform content if the content violates child safety or dangerous organizations violations.
- b. Mitigation (not recommended): We could remove all posts from FB/IG if the posts contain a link to domains associated with covid misinfo violators, but it would likely remove significant amounts of benign content posted by regular users, such as their posts about person experiences or government criticism that also include a link to a website. Some of the off-FB/IG websites also have non-covid-related content, so we could be removing posts that are not about COVID and link to the websites for non-COVID reasons. It is unlikely that we have capacity to review individual off-platform links, so we would likely have to execute at a domain level.
- c. Background:
 - i. To get to the claim that 65% of covid misinfo comes from the Disinfo Dozen, we assume the WH is complaining about non-violating content on FB that includes links to content off FB that would violate if posted on FB.

- ii. We could blackhole links to any domain or sub-domain associated with pages, groups, or accounts removed for violating our covid misinfo policies. We are currently investigating the impact that this change would have, including both scope of removals and how much of the content would be benign. Given resource constraints, we do not think it is feasible to review all pages before removal.
- iii. We are still collecting information on how much content this would remove and a rough estimate of what percentage of that content links to benign versus violating content.

1. True information:

- a. Delta: The Surgeon General wants us to remove true information about side effects if the user does not provide complete information about whether the side effect is rare and treatable. We do not recommend pursuing this practice.
- b. Mitigation (not recommended): We currently label all of this content and demote some of it. We could remove the content or increase the demotion strength.
- c. Background:
 - i. The Surgeon General's report on misinformation defines misinformation as including: "An anecdote about someone experiencing a rare side effect after a routine surgery. The specific anecdote may be true but hide the fact that the side effect is very rare and treatable. By misinforming people about the benefits and risks of the surgery, the anecdote can be highly misleading and harmful to public health."
 - ii. Experts have advised us that it's important to allow people to ask questions and allow open discussion of vaccine safety and efficacy to overcome vaccine hesitancy. For content that is presented in a sensational or shocking way or promotes vaccine refusal, we demote the content and apply a label with a link to accurate, authoritative information. We believe the information push partially combats the incomplete information while giving users space to express their views and share their personal experiences.

1. Other Vaccine Hesitant Content:

- a. Delta: The WH generally objects to content that appears in media criticism of our covid misinfo efforts. While we don't have specifics, we can extrapolate that they would like us to remove content that provides any negative information on or opinions about the vaccine without concluding that the benefits of the vaccine outweigh that information or opinion; humorous or satirical content that suggests the vaccine isn't safe
- b. Mitigation: Similar to true information, we recommend adhering to expert advice that we allow open discussion of vaccine safety and efficacy and do not recommend removing this content. We could consider increasing the demotion strength on content being demoted that is still breaking through into top posts.
- c. Background:
 - i. We reviewed a recent report, titled Facebook has a vaccine misinfo problem, that concluded 12 of the top 15 vaccine-related posts on Facebook in a one-month period were "negative." We replicated the report's Crowdtangle search to review the content. None of the content or users relate to the "Disinfo Dozen." Of note, in order to maintain the narrative of FB's failure, our critics remove UNICEF content from their analysis because it effectively dominates covid content -- an accurate report on covid content from this Crowdtangle search would show that 5 of the top 15 posts were authoritative, pro-vaccine posts from UNICEF.
 - ii. None of the content should have been removed. Five pieces of content labeled "negative" are being demoted for being vaccine hesitant. Six pieces of content labeled "negative" are non-violating -- one is an ABC News report; two are personal opinions opposing mask and vaccine mandates; and two are personal opinions about the speaker's decision not to get vaccinated. Four pieces of content are labeled "positive" or "neutral." There is a full content assessment below.

Detailed Assessment of Other Vaccine Hesitant Content:

1. The #2 ranked content is an ABC News report about side effects. It is deemed "negative."
 - a. Delta assessment: We don't know whether the WH would propose that this reporting from network news should be removed for accurately reporting on side effects. We do not recommend doing so.

1. Five pieces of content (ranking 1, 5, 7, 13, 14) were borderline content and were demoted and labeled, but the demotion strength did not remove them from the top 100 FB posts for the relevant time period. All received the label: "COVID-19 vaccines go through many tests for safety and effectiveness and are then monitored closely" with a link to FB's COVID-19 Information Center.
 - a. Delta assessment (content assessment below): We suspect the WH believes this content should be removed. We demote and label this content because we find it irresponsible in its sensationalism and lack of context; however, it is a mix of true content and criticism of the government, both of which are appropriate to allow on platform.
 - b. #1, 5, and 7 are from Candace Owens and suggest that the vaccine is experimental or has side effects, including death, and are critical of the government. #5 was also fact-checked by a 3PFC.
 - c. #13 is from Tucker Carlson and offers sensationalized reporting on a true incident of a 12 year old suffering a rare side effect and reporting on a study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) Pediatrics about the dangers of wearing masks to children. The content was posted the day after the JAMA study was published. JAMA retracted the study two weeks after publication.
 - d. #15 is from Turning Point USA and suggests that the government has no authority to mandate taking an experimental vaccine.
1. Five pieces of content (ranking 4, 6, 8, 11, 12) were labeled negative.
 - a. Delta assessment (content assessment below): The WH has previously indicated that it thinks humor should be removed if it is premised on the vaccine having side effects, so we expect it would similarly want to see humor about vaccine hesitancy removed. We don't have insight into whether the WH wants personal opinions about government mandates or explanations of personal choices not to get the vaccine removed. We believe there is a strong interest in protecting the expression of personal opinion and personal choice.
 - b. #4 is a cartoon attempt at humor, suggesting that door-to-door vaccinators would be tied to trees.
 - c. The other four pieces of content all offer personal opinions about mask or vaccine mandates or the decision to be vaccinated.
1. Four pieces of content (ranking 3, 9, 10, 15) were labeled positive or neutral.

Disinfo Dozen Status On Platform:

1. We have been aware of the Disinfo Dozen back in March. We took very aggressive actions based on them, and other entities we flagged, by expanding the amount of Misinfo that we remove and by giving the "Worst of the Worst" entities 48 hours to remove all violating misinformation or otherwise they would be removed. As a result of that, we removed known anti-vaxxers such as RFK Jr.'s IG Account.
2. This resulted in behavior modification by these actors -- RFK stopped posting anti-vax content on his FB page, and some other members of the Disinfo Dozen also stopped posting violating content.
3. We have continued to monitor these accounts and have found the following:
 - a. 91 entities are tied to the Disinfo Dozen (however, the majority of these entities do not share anti-vax content and some post infrequently or stopped posting altogether).
 - b. 23 of those entities have been removed.
 - c. We are confirming additional entities (approx. 15) that may be removed under our "Single Use Multiple Account" and Recidivism policies (we are aiming to have these results by EOD).
 - d. 11 of the 12 Disinfo Dozen members have had one entity removed by us. The 12th posts mainly about internet censorship now. We are watching his profile closely.

7/16 Call with SG's Office

Attendees (SG's Office): Eric Waldo, Kyla Fullenwider

Attendees (FB): [REDACTED], [REDACTED], [REDACTED], [REDACTED], [REDACTED], [REDACTED], [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

- [REDACTED] Good to see you Eric, Kyla. Long time no see.
- Eric: Great to see you.
- [REDACTED] I'll run point for a little bit and then will pass it over to you. I have a few of our team members on the call. Won't do full intros, they'll introduce themselves as we go. We do have [REDACTED] our Head of Health, on the line. What we were initially going to do was some intros to some of our work. But given the announcement, wanted to focus a bit more on that. Understanding information sources you're using, understanding the advisory, and discuss next steps to move forward. Would love to hear from you Eric.
- Eric: I'm Eric Waldo, Director of Engagement for Surgeon General Murthy. I spent all 8 years in the Obama Administration. Week 4 for me, really excited to be part of Dr. Murthy's team. You obviously heard the remarks from Dr. Murthy and Jen Psaki. Dr. Murthy has been clear that we're really calling for an all-society approach – individuals, organizations, technology can do, especially with respect to misinformation. We know this is a broader issue for society. Health Advisory is one of the tools for SG's office. We have commitments from Rockefeller Foundation, other organizations, in response to SG's call for action. Before we go further, want introduce Kyla.
- Kyla: I'm leading SG's work on health misinformation, including the Advisory. We're excited to walk through some pieces of it today. I was previously CIO for US Census Bureau, stood up work on misinformation there. Nice to meet you all, good to be here. We set up calls with as many stakeholders as possible who were mentioned in the Advisory. Want to go through at a high level.
 - To reiterate – Advisory is one of three tools that SG has to call public attention to an issue of concern. A report is longer, multi-year effort, hundreds of pages, on a topic with a lot of literature and substantial evidence base – for well-established health issues. Then you also have a call to action, 20–50-page document, around a topic. In the middle. Advisory is a shorter document – calling attention to an emergent issue for public health. Just adding some context, most folks, including myself a year ago, might not be familiar.
 - As Eric mentioned earlier, wanted to be very intentional about a whole of society approach. Called out stakeholder groups of particular importance, individuals/families, educators, health professionals, technology platforms, researchers, government (list incomplete, see advisory for full list).
 - First parts of the document set the stage – lay the groundwork for how we got here. Second page – unique to SG Advisory – we call out specific actions and recommendations. Let me move through and skip forward to tech platforms.
 - If you hadn't had a chance to review the section on tech platforms, would be great to do so. Everything rooted in evidence-base, in conjunction with experts we consulted. Wanted to find middle ground of interventions and solutions that are doable but meaningful. What we wanted to address here are not just the low-hanging fruit but things that could create systemic impact over the long term. But not so visionary that are not able to be implemented. Happy to talk through any of those pieces.

- Just jumping to conclusion – message that we really wanted to drive home – speed and scale at which misinformation is spreading is truly unprecedented and it's having quantifiable impacts on COVID response. Wanted to make that clear. We do think we're in a unique circumstance – what WHO calls infodemic – that needs to be addressed.
- [REDACTED] let's recircle back on questions but would love to hear more about specifics.
- Kyla: sounds good.
- Eric: [REDACTED] I know you flagged the 4 action items from Jen Psaki's remarks. I don't know if you want to walk through those, what your current stance is on those, anything you might be doing in response to call to action, we'd love to hear that.
- [REDACTED] Great, that would be a helpful discussion. Will turn it over to [REDACTED] and our team.
- [REDACTED] Happy to discuss and start with the four points. The overall recommendations on what technology platforms can do – we're broadly aligned, make a lot of sense. We'd love to work together. Excited about that as one area of discussion, anticipate it will be ongoing, working to build shared understanding of solution space. Would also be helpful to get to a shared understanding on the scope of the program – it would be quite helpful for us to learn some of the specific data points and research you're seeing, maybe even connect our research teams. We also obviously partner with academics, others. But quite helpful if we have a shared understanding of the problem grounds solutions. In an ideal world – how do we align on solutions, how do we align on shared understanding of most concerning things you are seeing.
- Eric: That absolutely makes sense.
- [REDACTED] So, on aligning on solutions –
 - More transparency – in general, we agree here. You're probably familiar with our tool called CrowdTangle. It's currently just showing engagement not just reach. We've been working to share reach with government partners since January. We've made substantial investments in this tool that's open to researchers and academics. We agree that reach better contextualizes things. Open to feedback on how reports could be more useful, other thoughts
- Kyla: Are you planning to continue having CrowdTangle available going forward?
- [REDACTED] Not my specific product area, but it's been available for many years. It's available to government partners by exception – CDC, WH, and others do have access.
- Kyla: CrowdTangle – that will continue to be a tool that's available for use?
- [REDACTED] We can confirm that but I'm not aware of any plans to change that.
- Kyla: If there's an update on CT, that would be great if you could provide that.
- [REDACTED] That's initial steps and thinking on measuring. Related to this point and the fourth point about amplifying trusted sources. We are very focused on understanding the impact of interventions. We've partnered with organizations – funding RFPs to understand impact of misinformation and RFPs on effectiveness of educational information. One of the more recent things we did – Alliance for Advancing Health Online. Working with Merck, WHO, others, working to foster a better understanding of interventions and how they are improving outcomes. We're providing a substantial amount of funding. We're very invested and want more research, more RFP submissions. That could be an area to go deeper in the future.
- [REDACTED] To second point on enforcement strategy, maybe best to have [REDACTED] discuss.
- [REDACTED] On this question – the way we enforce on content – what's being posted on a Page or Group. People post different content on a Page than for instance on an IG account. On RFK, Jr., for example, was using IG account to spread anti-vax account. It reached the threshold of strikes and was removed. He then stopped posting on FB about vaccines at all.

- [REDACTED] On the third point – one of the reasons we were reporting on top engaged posts and top reach posts- wanted to see what kind of content was in there. We've been sharing reports with the White House on this.
 - The top posts on our platform are mostly not about COVID or vaccines. Among the subset of posts that are about COVID and vaccines- the top 100 posts on COVID/vaccines, there are a few more on the potentially inducing hesitancy side. But if you zoom out, those are fewer than the ones coming from credible, authoritative sources. We have more work to do, but that's what we're seeing and what we are sharing. Replicable from CrowdTangle. We're very open to if there are things that we're missing, would love to engage on the specifics.
 - I'll also say in the SG's Advisory around designing systems in such a way that you can slow down the spread of misinformation. That's a promising approach we are committed to. For example, last year, in WA, we removed the ability to forward a link to many people at once. There were good use cases, like sharing a link to a birthday party, but took action to limit misinformation spread.
 - When people share content that could be misinformation, have an interstitial that links to the COVID Information Center.
 - Just some examples of the changes we've already made that are aligned with this approach. The WA one in particular was a big system change.
- Kyla: The piece we talk about specifically about adding friction – do you have anywhere publicly where you share the impact of those interventions?
- [REDACTED] I know these have all been shared publicly, not sure how deep we got into the data, but we can follow up.
- [REDACTED] On this question – policy side and enforcement side. We've been working hard over the last year and a half to keep up, have been working with CDC and others to update our policies as things evolve. The enforcement piece is also difficult, training classifiers. We also have partnership with third party fact checkers – for things that don't meet removal threshold, get sent to third party fact checkers. Content is temporarily demoted pending fact check. We have shared that about 95% of the time when people see those screens/interstitials, they didn't go on to post the content.
- Kyla: Size of fact checking team?
- [REDACTED] We partner with 80 organizations in over 60 languages.
- [REDACTED] And we attack virality aspect through feed demotions. We remove content that can lead to imminent physical harm. For content that doesn't meet that threshold, we instituted borderline demotions. For example, someone sharing negative side effect posts. Similarly, posts questioning whether you should get a vaccine under a mandate, whether it's government overreach. We demote those. That's not false information, but it leads to a vaccine negative environment. When it comes to looking at COVID misinformation, it's a different approach. What we normally do is just remove or leave to fact checkers. Here, we introduced a middle ground.
- [REDACTED] There's a lot on educational, amplifying credible sources I want to touch upon briefly before we break as well.
- Kyla: [REDACTED] do you have anywhere this borderline policy?
- [REDACTED] Yes, it's all public in our Community Standards. There is a link that details all of this, we can send it to you.
- [REDACTED] Last point – helping get people access to credible information. Will be a huge part of solution. This is an area we've invested a lot in, have commitment to. A lot of our efforts are around helping organizations meet people where they are with information. And then there is social norming work. A lot of research shows that if you know someone who has gotten vaccinated, it can make you more likely to do get it. We worked with USG on profile frames. At this point, I think 50% of users in the US have seen a friend or family member use a COVID vaccine profile frame. KFF study also shows that friends/family can be very influential. We've also delivered 10 billion ads impressions through partner channels, working to publish data on the impact. There's a lot to build on.

- On Amplification, changing how we amplify within core product, making sure that trusted/credible sources are getting more distribution.
- Eric: Thank you, this is super, super helpful. I know we weren't going to get all the way home. Let me just say two things as we wrap up. 1- thank you for jumping on the call, we're getting comfortable with being uncomfortable. Want to be honest, appreciate courage having this conversation. I think you'll continue to hear the White House and leaders say they want to move forward with solutions. You'll hear that from Dr. Murthy. Want to be super straight with you. Kyla and I can offline with the team and circle back on solutions. I want to say thank you, can be uncomfortable, really appreciate it.
- [REDACTED] I'm very conscious you need to jump, we'll stand by. Again, we're looking to understand what you're seeing, understand next steps and how to partner moving forward. We'll be in touch on email.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. This is the transcribed interview of Laura Dehmlow.

Chairman Jordan has requested this interview as part of the committee's oversight of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Would the witness please state your name for the record?

Ms. Dehmlow. Laura Dehmlow.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Could agency counsel please state your name for the record?

Ms. Doocy. Mary Doocy, FBI.

Mr. Hanson. Matthew Hanson, Department of Justice.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. And, Ms. Dehmlow, you understand agency counsel has the primary fiduciary duty to the Bureau and not to you individually?

Ms. Dehmlow. I do.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. And so you would like to continue with agency counsel today?

Ms. Dehmlow. Yes.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. On behalf of the committee, I want to thank you for appearing here today to answer our questions.

The chairman also appreciates your willingness to appear voluntarily.

My name is [REDACTED], and I'm with Chairman Jordan's staff.

I'll now have everyone else from the committee who is here in the room introduce themselves, as well.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED] with Chairman Jordan's staff.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED] with Chairman Jordan's staff.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED] Chairman Jordan's staff.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED], Chairman Jordan's staff.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED], Chairman Jordan's staff.

1 MINORITY COUNSEL 2. [REDACTED], oversight counsel for the Democrats
2 and Judiciary Committee.

3 MINORITY COUNSEL 1. [REDACTED], chief oversight counsel for the House
4 Judiciary Committee.

5 [REDACTED]: [REDACTED], Democratic staff and intern.

6 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Thank you.

7 I would like to now go over the ground rules and guidelines that we will follow
8 during today's interview.

9 Our questioning will proceed in rounds. The majority will ask questions for 1 10 hour, and the minority will then have an opportunity ask questions for an equal period of 11 time if they so choose.

12 We'll alternate back and forth until there are no more questions and the interview 13 is over.

14 Typically, we take a short break at the end of each hour, but if you would like to 15 take a break apart from that, please just let us know. We're happy to accommodate 16 that.

17 As you can see, there's an official court reporter taking down everything we say to 18 make a written record.

19 So we ask that you give verbal responses to all questions.

20 Do you understand?

21 Ms. Dehmlow. I do.

22 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. So the court reporter can take down a clear record, we will 23 do our best to limit the number of people directing questions at you during any given 24 hour to just those people on the staff whose turn it is.

25 Please try and speak clearly so the court reporter can understand and the folks

1 down at the end of the table can hear you, as well.

2 It is important that we don't talk over one another or interrupt each other if we 3 can help it, and that goes for everyone present at today's interview.

4 We want you to answer our questions in the most complete and truthful manner
5 possible. So we'll take our time. If you have any questions or if you do not understand 6 one of our questions, please just let us know.

7 Our questions will cover a wide range of topics. So, if you need clarification at 8 any point, please just say so. If you honestly don't know the answer to a question or do
9 not remember, it's best not to guess. Please give us your best recollection. It's okay to 10 tell us if you learned information from someone else. Just indicate how you came to 11 know that information.

12 If there are things you don't know or can't remember, just say so and please
13 inform us who to the best of your knowledge might be able to provide a more complete 14 answer to our question.

15 You should also understand that by law you are required to answer questions
16 from Congress truthfully.

17 Do you understand that?

18 Ms. Dehmlow. I do.

19 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. This also applies to questions posed by 20 congressional staff in an interview.

21 Do you understand this?

22 Ms. Dehmlow. I do.

23 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Witnesses that knowingly provide false testimony
24 could be subject to criminal prosecution for making false statements under 18, U.S.C.,
25 United States Code, section 1001.

1 Do you understand this?

2 Ms. Dehmlow. Uh-huh.

3 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Is there any reason you are unable to provide truthful
4 answers to today's questions?

5 Ms. Dehmlow. No.

6 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Finally, I'd like to make note that the content of what we 7 discuss here today is confidential. We ask that you not speak about what we discuss 8 in this interview to any outside individuals to preserve the integrity of our investigation.

9 For the same reason, the marked exhibits that we will use today will remain
10 with the court reporter so they can go in the official transcripts. And any copies of 11 those exhibits will be collected at the end of the interview.

12 All right. That's the end of my preamble.

13 Is there anything my colleagues from minority would like to add?

14 MINORITY COUNSEL 1. Just thank the witness for taking time out of your 15 schedule to join us today.

16 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Mary or Matthew, do you have anything for the record?

17 Ms. Doocy. No.

18 Mr. Hanson. No.

19 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Okay. Well, the clock now reads 10:06 a.m.
20 We'll get started with our first hour of questioning.

21 Ms. Dehmlow. Okay.

22 EXAMINATION BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

23 Q Good morning.

24 A Good morning.

25

1 Q Could you state your full name for the record?

2 A Laura Dehmlow.

3 Q Okay. And where do you currently work?

4 A The Federal Bureau of Investigation.

5 Q And what is your current title?

6 A I'm the section chief of the Foreign Influence Task Force.

7 Q And what is the Foreign Influence Task Force?

8 A The Foreign Influence Task Force is a component part in Counterintelligence
9 Division that is charged with understanding and mitigating foreign malign influence
10 operations targeting the United States.

11 Q And how long have you been in that role for?

12 A A bit over 2 years.

13 Q [REDACTED]

14 A [REDACTED]

15 [REDACTED]

16 [REDACTED]

17 Q [REDACTED]

18 A [REDACTED]

19 [REDACTED]

20 Q [REDACTED]

21 A [REDACTED]

22 Q [REDACTED]

23 A [REDACTED]

24 Q [REDACTED]

25 A [REDACTED]

1 A There were -- as I mentioned earlier, we aimed to get together with most of
2 the companies within the couple of weeks in the immediate -- in the immediate weeks
3 preceding the election.

4 Q Are you familiar with the October 2020 New York Post story on Hunter
5 Biden's laptop?

6 A I am.

7 Q Do you recall whether any of these social media companies you were 8 meeting with asked you any questions about it?

9 A I do.

10 Q And what is your recollection? Who --

11 A So I remember having a conversation with or being involved in a 12 conversation with Twitter, and I honestly can't recall if this was repeated to me -- I might 13 have been a few minutes late to the meeting -- or if -- or if I was -- I actually overheard it.

14 But it was -- it was relayed to me later that somebody from Twitter -- I don't recall
15 who. I'm not sure who. Somebody from Twitter essentially asked whether the laptop 16 was real. And one of the FBI folks who was on the call did confirm that, yes, it was 17 before another participant jumped in and said no further comment.

18 Q Do you recall who from the FBI said it was real?

19 A I do.

20 Q And who was that?

21 A It's a non-SES employee. I'd have to take that back.

22 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. What's their title?

23 Ms. Dehmlow. An analyst.

24 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. What field office are they out of?

25 Ms. Dehmlow. Again, I'm not sure that I'm allowed to provide details here

1 because it was a non-SES employee.

2 Ms. Doocy. We'll take it back.

3 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Can we not know about this, just not the name of the individual?

4 Ms. Doocy. They're in the Criminal Investigative Division. We can tell you that 5 and then get back to you if we can provide a non-SES name.

6 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. I think the committee would like to know the name of the individual 7 but also their title.

8 Ms. Doocy. Sure.

9 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

10 Q Was this individual affiliated with FITF?

11 A Again, it was somebody from the Criminal Investigative Division who is 12 embedded with us.

13 Q So yes?

14 A Yes.

15 Q And did this question occur in the context of a bilateral meeting?

16 A It did.

17 Q Do you recall how soon after the story broke that this meeting occurred?

18 A I don't remember. I believe it was the same week, but I don't remember 19 the specific day.

20 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 1:

21 Q On that call with that IA who's in the Criminal Investigative Division, that was 22 the individual who said, "yes, the laptop is authentic"? Is that correct?

23 A I don't believe it was that specific. Again, I don't recall hearing the 24 conversation itself. I know it was relayed to me afterwards. But my understanding is 25 that we confirmed that, yes, the laptop was a real laptop.

1 Q And then you said another FBI individual came on and said, "No further 2 comment."

3 A Yes.

4 Q Is that correct?

5 A That's correct.

6 Q Who was that individual?

7 A It was some -- it was one of our lawyers who was on the call.

8 Q And who was that individual?

9 A Again --

10 Ms. Doocy. We'll take that request back. They're not SES.

11 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Do they work out of the General Counsel's Office or a specific field 12 office?

13 Ms. Doocy. They're in the Office of the General Counsel. But, again, we'll take 14 that request back. We don't have authorization to speak to their specific name in this 15 context.

16 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Okay. I think the committee would like to know the individual's 17 name, as well as their title.

18 Thank you.

19 MAJORITY COUNSEL 3 Just to clarify, when you say the laptop was real, you mean it 20 was, like, a real laptop or that it belonged to Hunter Biden or what exactly?

21 Ms. Dehmlow. Since I wasn't -- I don't recall the specifics. I think my 22 understanding is generally we confirmed the existence of the laptop.

23 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

24 Q Who relayed this information to you?

25 A I don't recall. The reason that I remember it specifically is that we had a

1 conversation afterwards, talking, deliberating on how we would answer the question if 2 another company asked.

3 Q And did this deliberation occur immediately following --

4 A I would say within, yeah, within the next couple of hours.

5 Q During this time period, October 2020, does FITF have its own in-person
6 office? Or is this conversation over Zoom?

7 A Which -- which part of the conversation, the conversation with the 8 companies or the conversation, the deliberations?

9 Q The deliberations.

10 A I believe it happened over our -- our -- our chat function.

11 Q Do you recall how many FBI personnel were part of this deliberation?

12 A I don't.

13 Q Do you have a ballpark sense?

14 A Just a handful probably.

15 Q Do you recall why you were not in attendance at this part of the bilateral 16 meeting?

17 A Again, it's possible that I was. I just don't recall the part. The part that I 18 remember with clarity is the part immediately after that. It's a very busy time. I might 19 have just been running late, a couple of minutes late, you know. It was a very busy time
20 for the FITF.

21 Q Do you know how Twitter reacted when the first agent said that the laptop 22 was real?

23 A No recollection.

24 Q Did you receive any followup requests for information from Twitter?

25 A Not that I recall, not that came to me.

1 Q So you said he was one example.

2 Do you recall other social media companies?

3 A I believe Facebook -- we met with Facebook soon thereafter. Can't 4 remember if it was the same day or within a couple of days. And they also asked, and I
5 said, "No comment." That was the -- that was the decision we made in those 6 post-meeting deliberations, which is pretty typical. It was an ongoing investigation, and 7 we don't generally comment on ongoing investigative matters when asked.

8 Q Okay.

9 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Who made the decision that the FBI would have no comment
10 to the social media companies going forward?

11 Mr. Hanson. So I want to be clear.

12 Ms. Dehmlow, obviously, can answer the question as long as it doesn't get into 13 internal deliberations or advice from a lawyer or anything.

14 Ms. Dehmlow. Yeah, and, unfortunately I can't answer that with any further 15 detail on that advice.

16 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. So you can't tell us who made the decision?

17 Ms. Dehmlow. I can say there were internal deliberations with a number of 18 parties, and then -- but I can't get into that further.

19 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. So then, Counsel, are you instructing her not to answer the question 20 any further?

21 Ms. Doocy. We'll take the request for the non-SES back and get back to you as 22 soon as possible.

23 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. And the content of the discussion?

24 Ms. Doocy. So, in this context, she's not authorized to speak to internal 25 deliberations which may implicate attorney-client or other legal privileges today, but we'll

1 take your request back.

2 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. But you're instructing her not to answer today. Is that accurate?

3 Ms. Doocy. To the specifics of the conversation she received related to whether or not she 4 was deliberating about the veracity of the laptop, in this context, yes.

5 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Okay.

6 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

7 Q With respect to the internal deliberations, were there individuals who

8 participated other than members of FITF?

9 A Yes. Again, I can't get into more specifics because of the deliberative
10 process privilege they're articulating.

11 Q Were there members participating in these deliberations other than 12 members of FITF and other than members of OGC?

13 A I can't recall specifics.

14 Q Do you recall who from Facebook asked the question?

15 A I don't.

16 Q Was the laptop on the agenda for either of these bilateral meetings with 17 Twitter or Facebook?

18 A No. It came as a surprise to us that there was questions. At least it came 19 as a surprise to me. I wasn't tracking the news story until that moment.

20 Q And who else was on the call with Facebook?

21 A It would have been essentially the same -- same folks, probably the unit
22 chiefs from FITF and some range of other folks. But I don't recall specifics.

23 Q You said that you were the one that said "no comment"?

24 A Uh-huh.

25 Q Had it been decided in advance that you'd be the one to answer that

1 question?

2 A No, not that I recall.

3 Q Who was the section chief of FITF at the time?

4 A Bradley Benavides.

5 Q Was he on the call?

6 A Not to my recollection, no.

7 Q Was he on the Twitter call?

8 A Not to my recollection, no.

9 Q Did he usually attend these calls?

10 A He did not.

11 Q Was Elvis Chan on the call with Facebook?

12 A It's likely, but I don't recall specifically.

13 Q Was Elvis Chan on the call with Twitter?

14 A It's likely, but I don't recall specifically.

15 Mr. Jordan. You acknowledged, back to the meeting with Twitter, when the first 16 FBI official acknowledged that the FBI -- that the -- excuse me -- that the laptop was real,
17 how long had you -- how long you had known that information?

18 Ms. Dehmlow. I don't remember. I really can't recall.

19 Mr. Jordan. Did you learn that it week you? Learn it months before? When 20 did you know that the laptop was real?

21 Ms. Dehmlow. I really don't remember.

22 Mr. Jordan. You said -- that's the word you used. You said the agent said the 23 laptop was real. Is that right?

24 Ms. Dehmlow. He confirmed at some point that the laptop existed, yes. But,
25 again, I don't recall the specific language, and I wasn't there.

1 Ms. Doocy. Can I confer with the client for a moment?

2 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Yeah, we'll go off the record.

3 [Discussion off the record.]

4 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. We'll go back on the record.

5 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

6 Q When the Facebook employee asked the question, do you recall exactly 7 what they asked?

8 A I don't.

9 Q Do you know if it was about the laptop?

10 A Yes. It was essentially whether or not we -- yes, it was something about the 11 laptop. I don't remember -- I know that my answer was "no comment" because -- and 12 the question doesn't stick in my mind because it was something about the laptop. And I
13 said, "No comment."

14 Again, that was not my decision. It wasn't my final call. There were other 15 agency, other departments, other FBI equities at stake, investigative equities, and so 16 pretty typical for us to come to that conclusion.

17 Q Were you aware if Twitter or Facebook were taking steps to censor the 18 story?

19 A I was not.

20 Q Did you ever become aware?

21 A Eventually, when the -- when there was extensive news coverage about it
22 ultimately, but I don't know if I knew it that week, within a couple of months.

23 Q Do you think it was the right decision to say "no comment"?

24 A Not here to -- again, it wasn't my call and it's pretty typical for us to not 25 comment on ongoing investigative equities.

1 Q When the information was relayed to you following the Twitter call that the 2 first agent had said the laptop was real, just to clarify, you knew prior to that 3 conversation that the laptop was real. Is that correct?

4 A I did, yes.

5 Q But you don't recall when approximately you learned.

6 A I don't, sorry.

7 Q Sitting here today, do you know when the FBI first determined that the 8 laptop was real?

9 A I don't. I know that there is some information in the public record
10 regarding when the FBI acquired the laptop, but I don't, sitting here, remember that date.

11 Q Do you know who else at FITF knew that the laptop was real?

12 A I don't actually. I would assume both my -- yes, I would certainly say that 13 Brad Benavides was aware.

14 Q What about the individuals on the Russia unit?

15 A I would assume the unit chief was also aware. I'm pretty certain of that 16 fact.

17 Q For the individual --

18 Mr. Hanson. Just to clarify, do you know to a certainty that they were aware, or 19 are you just making deductions?

20 Ms. Dehmlow. I'm pretty certain that they were aware.

21 Mr. Hanson. Okay.

22 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

23 Q In advance of the bilateral meeting, would the FITF team discuss internally
24 about what to cover in a meeting?

25 A We would, yes.

1 Q -- that very frequently it wasn't a FITF-owned investigation or equity. Is 2 that right?

3 A I don't think that's what I testified, no.

4 Q Okay.

5 A I said FITF is focused on those actors and those activities, and those activities
6 are inclusive of the information that we're passing to -- to -- to the social media
7 companies. So that was very much a FITF equity. We're program managing those 8 cases.

9 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 1:

10 Q When you say that the Hunter Biden wasn't a FITF-owned equity --

11 A Uh-huh.

12 Q -- did it have any equities in the FBI investigation of Hunter Biden?

13 A Did what have any equities?

14 Q FITF.

15 A Again, I can't speak to that ongoing investigative action. That's an ongoing 16 investigation. I can't speak to any details regarding it.

17 Q Is that an instruction from counsel?

18 A I think, yes, but they can confirm it.

19 Mr. Hanson. I'd ask you to not respond to any information regarding ongoing 20 investigations.

21 Ms. Dehmlow. I can't speak to ongoing investigations, ongoing investigative 22 activity.

23 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

24 Q If the ongoing investigation had FITF equities in it, then FITF would be able to 25 share information?

1 A Not broadly. The FITF can only share information in the context of the 2 Justice Manual provision regarding details of foreign malign influence operations. So it's 3 not that we can just broadly share anything regarding an ongoing investigative equity.
4 There's specific provisions of the Justice Manual that govern what we can and cannot 5 share.

6 Q Okay. But, if the Hunter Biden laptop were part of a foreign malign
7 influence operation, that is something that FITF would be able to share information on.

8 A Yeah, I don't want to speak to a hypothetical. But if there is a foreign 9 malign influence operation and we've got specific details about how those actors are 10 propagating information operations, influence operations on platforms, that's something 11 that we could share the specific details of.

12 Q Okay. I mean, that sounds like a "yes" to my previous question but --

13 A I want to be really specific about what we do and don't do because we don't 14 just comment broadly on investigative activity.

15 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. So did FITF share any information with social media companies
16 regarding the Hunter Biden investigation as it relates to foreign malign activity?

17 Ms. Doocy. Same instruction.

18 Ms. Dehmlow. Yeah.

19 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. What's the instruction, Mary?

20 Ms. Doocy. Not to comment on ongoing investigations.

21 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Thanks.

22 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

23 Q So, in these bilateral FITF meetings, social media companies, is it fair to say it
24 was routine that they would be receiving information related to foreign malign influence
25 operations that related to investigations of the FBI?

For DAVID AGRANOVICH:

RIDGE BLANCHARD

REGINALD BROWN

Kirkland & Ellis

1301 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W.

Washington, D.C. 20004

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. We'll go on the record.

This is a transcribed interview of David Agranovich. Chairman Jordan has requested this interview as part of the committee's investigation of how and the extent to which the executive branch has coerced and colluded with companies and other intermediaries to censor speech.

Would the witness please state his name for the record.

Mr. Agranovich. David Agranovich.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. On behalf of the committee, I want to thank you for appearing here today to answer our questions. The chairman also appreciates your willingness to appear voluntarily.

My name is [REDACTED] [REDACTED] and I'm with Chairman Jordan's staff.

I will now have everyone else from the committee who is here at the table introduce themselves as well.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. [REDACTED] counsel for Chairman Jordan's staff.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 3. [REDACTED] with Chairman Jordan's staff.

MINORITY COUNSEL 1. [REDACTED] with Chair Nadler's staff.

MINORITY COUNSEL 2. [REDACTED] with Mr. Nadler's staff.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] with Ranking Member Nadler.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] Jim Jordan's staff.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] with Chairman Jordan's staff.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] Chairman Jordan's staff.

[REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] majority.

Mr. Blanchard. I'm Ridge Blanchard with Kirkland & Ellis.

Mr. Brown. Reg Brown -- Reginald Brown for Kirkland & Ellis for the witness and Meta.

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] And I also noticed a couple of additional people came in the room.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Yeah. If the folks who came in would state their name for the record.

Mr. Gaetz. Matt Gaetz, majority member of the House Judiciary Committee.

[REDACTED] majority.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Thank you. I'd like to --

MINORITY COUNSEL 2. If I can ask for you all to speak up a little bit. I'm having a little bit of trouble hearing you.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Sure.

I'd like to now go over the ground rules and guidelines that we'll follow during today's interview.

Our questioning will proceed in rounds. The majority will ask questions first for 1 hour, and then the minority will have an opportunity to ask questions for an equal period of time if they choose. We will alternate back and forth until there are no more questions and the interview is over.

Typically, we take a short break at the end of each hour, but if you would like to take a break apart from that, please just let us know.

As you can see, there are official court reporters taking down everything we say to make a written record, so we ask that you give verbal responses to all questions.

Do you understand?

Mr. Agranovich. Yes.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. So the court reporters can take down a clear record, we will do our best to limit the number of people directing questions at you during any given hour to just those people on the staff whose turn it is. Please try and speak clearly so the court reporter can understand and so the folks down at the end of the table can hear you.

It's important that we don't talk over one another or interrupt each other if we can help it, and that goes for everybody present at today's interview.

We encourage witnesses who appear before the committee to freely consult with counsel if they so choose. It is my understanding that you are appearing today with counsel. Is that correct?

Mr. Agranovich. That is correct.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Could counsel please state your name for the record.

Mr. Brown. We have already done that. Reginald Brown, Kirkland & Ellis.

Mr. Blanchard. Ridge Blanchard, Kirkland & Ellis.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Thank you.

We want you to answer our questions in the most complete and truthful manner as possible, so we will take our time. If you have any questions or if you do not understand one of our questions, please let us know.

Our questions will cover a wide range of topics, so if you need clarification at any point, just say so. If you honestly don't know the answer to a question or do not remember, it's best not to guess. Please give us your best recollection, and it's okay to tell us if you learned information from someone else. Just indicate how you came to know the information.

If there are things you don't know or can't remember, just say so, and please inform us who, to the best of your knowledge, might be able to provide a more complete answer to the question.

You should also understand that although this interview is not under oath, by law, you are required to answer questions from Congress truthfully.

Do you understand that?

Mr. Agranovich. Yes.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. This also applies to questions posed by congressional staff in an interview.

Do you understand that as well?

Mr. Agranovich. I do.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Witnesses that knowingly provide false testimony could be subject to criminal prosecution for perjury or for making false statements under 18

U.S.C., section 1001.

Do you understand this?

Mr. Agranovich. I do.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Is there any reason you are unable to provide truthful answers to today's questions?

Mr. Agranovich. No.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Finally, I'd like to make note that the content of what we discuss here today is confidential. We ask that you not speak about what we discuss in this interview to any outside individuals to preserve the integrity of our investigation.

For the same reason, the marked exhibits that we will use today will remain with the court reporters so that they can go in the official transcript, and any copies of those exhibits will be returned to us when we wrap up.

All right. That's the end of my preamble. Is there anything that my colleagues --

Mr. Brown. [REDACTED] someone else came into the room. I just want to make sure we get names.

[REDACTED] Hi. I'm [REDACTED] I'm with the House Judiciary minority.

Mr. Brown. I'm sorry?

[REDACTED] [REDACTED]

Mr. Brown. [REDACTED]

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Is there anything my colleagues from the minority would like to add?

MINORITY COUNSEL 2. No, thank you.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Okay. The clock now reads 10:06. We'll start the first hour of questioning.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Great.

EXAMINATION

BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

Q Thank you, Mr. Agranovich.

Could you state your full name, please.

A Yes. My full name is David Jacob Agranovich.

Q And where's your current place of employment?

A I currently work at Meta.

Q Okay. What's your current title?

A I'm Meta's director for global threat disruption.

Q [REDACTED]

MINORITY COUNSEL 1. I'm sorry. We can't hear you.

MINORITY COUNSEL 2. We can't hear you.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

Q [REDACTED]

A [REDACTED]

Q Okay. Great. Your counsel started to provide some of this. At a high level, could you provide your employment history?

A Yes. So I currently work at Meta as Meta's Director for Global Threat Disruption. And I joined the company as Meta's Global Threat Disruption Lead.

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

condensing that down to coordinated inauthentic behavior.

A Uh-huh.

Q Were there other policies that you consulted with the government on?

A Not that I can recall. Yeah, not that I can recall.

Q You said that hack-and-leak concerns, hack-and-leak operations, that would fall under your team's purview.

A The hack-and-leak policy specifically would fall under our team's purview.

Q Is that a policy you worked on directly?

A Yes.

Q How has it changed since you first joined Meta?

A The hack-and-leak, as you can imagine, hack-and-leak has been an issue that security teams, not just ours but across industry and government, have been focused on for several years now.

There were hack-and-leak operations that were identified going back to 2016, linked to Russian military intelligence services. There were hack-and-leak operations targeting the Macron election in France after that. And then there have been a number of hack-and-leak operations linked to a number of different foreign intelligence actors in countries all over the world since then.

So, naturally, hack-and-leak was one of the various threat factors that we were focused on and wanted to make sure that we were both keeping abreast of and being cautious to make sure we weren't allowing the platform to be manipulated in any way.

And so the hack-and-leak policy which we had developed functionally focused on three main areas.

So, first, determining whether the material that we were evaluating was obtained by a hacked, from a hacked source; i.e., was it obtained by someone without authorization to access that material?

Second was the material being disseminated with an intent to deceive? And that functionally on our platform, what that would mean is, is there indicia of deception, is there fake account usage or fake accounts being used to disseminate the material?

And then, third, was the material being disseminated on behalf of or at the direction of a foreign government influence operation?

And so that's the three-part test of the hack-and-leak policy, and that's functionally what the policy was in my time at Meta.

Q And was that -- so that was the case when you first started back in 2018 to today? When did this three-part test come into being?

A To the best of my recollection, the policy was developed in early to mid-2020.

Q And what was --

MINORITY COUNSEL 2. I'm sorry? When?

Mr. Agranovich. In early to mid-2020?

BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

Q And what was the policy before then?

A I understand there are other policies at the company that can apply to hacked materials. They're not policies that I work on, but I know that those existed prior to the hack-and-leak policy being developed.

Q And did you ever consult with the government regarding your -- or regarding Meta's hack-and-leak policy?

A I recollect that we discussed the fact of us working on hack-and-leak issues in meetings with the government, but I don't believe we consulted with the government on the policy itself.

Q Okay. Did the government ever contact you to comment on your hack-and-leak policy?

A Not to my recollection.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Do you know where we are on time?

MAJORITY COUNSEL 3. You have about a minute.

Mr. Brown. You have about a minute and 37 seconds left.

BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 1:

Q When did those meetings occur?

A Which meetings?

Q The meetings you just referenced where there was a discussion of Meta's hack-and-leak policy with the government?

A I believe the summer of 2020.

Q And which entities were those discussions happening with?

A That would be the Foreign Influence Task Force, DHS, CISA, and ODNI.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Were these one-on-one meetings or were other companies invited as well?

Mr. Agranovich. These meetings, these were multiple companies, and then the government agencies I mentioned.

MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Do you remember who instigated these meetings? Was it on the government end, or was it from industry's end?

Mr. Agranovich. I don't know who instigated the meetings.

Mr. Brown. We're at time. I was wondering if we could take a break off the record. Thanks.

[Recess.]

MINORITY COUNSEL 2. We're ready to go back on the record.

13 Please try and speak clearly so the court reporter can understand and so the folks
14 down at the end of the table can hear you. It's important that we don't talk over one 15 another or interrupt each other if we can help it, and that goes for everybody present at 16 today's interview.

17 We encourage witnesses who appear before the committee to freely consult with 18 counsel if they so choose, and it's my understanding you are appearing today with 19 counsel. Is that correct?

20 Mr. Gleicher. Correct.

21 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Could counsel please state your name for the record?

22 Mr. Brown. Reg Brown, Kirkland & Ellis.

23 Mr. Greene. Jordan Greene, Kirkland & Ellis.

24 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Thank you.

25 We want you to answer our questions in the most complete and truthful manner

1 as possible. So we will take our time. If you have any questions or if you don't
2 understand one of our questions, please let us know.

3 Our questions will cover a wide range of topics. So if you need clarification at 4 any point, just say so. If you honestly don't know the answer to a question or don't 5 remember, it's best not to guess. Please give us your best recollection, and it's okay to 6 tell us if you learn information from someone else. Just indicate how you came to know 7 the information.

8 If there are things you don't know or can't remember, just say so and please
9 inform us who, to the best of your knowledge, might be able to provide a more complete
10 answer to the question.

11 You should also understand that, although this interview isn't under oath, by law, 12 you are required to answer questions from Congress truthfully.

13 Do you understand?

14 Mr. Gleicher. Yes.

15 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. This also applies to questions posed by congressional 16 staff in an interview.

17 Do you understand?

18 Mr. Gleicher. Yes.

19 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Witnesses who knowingly provide false testimony could 20 be subject to criminal prosecution for perjury, or making false statements under 18
21 United States Code 1001.

22 Do you understand?

23 Mr. Gleicher. Yes.

24 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Is there any reason you are unable to provide truthful
25 answers to today's questions?

1 Mr. Gleicher. No.

2 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Finally, I would like to note that the content of what we 3 discuss here today is confidential. We ask that you not speak about what we discuss in 4 this interview to any outside individuals to preserve the integrity of our investigation.

5 For the same reason, the marked exhibits that we use today will remain with the 6 court reporter so that they can go in the official transcript. And any copies of those 7 exhibits will be returned to us when we wrap up.

8 All right. That's the end of my preamble.

9 Is there anything my colleagues from the minority would like to add?

10 MINORITY COUNSEL 1. Not at this time, no.

11 I will -- I just want to alert everybody one of my colleagues will coming in to hand 12 me something, [REDACTED]. And then she'll just be leaving.

13 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Okay.

14 MINORITY COUNSEL 1. Thanks.

15 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. The clock now reads 10:05 a.m. We will start the first 16 hour of questioning.

17 EXAMINATION

18 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 1:

19 Q Mr. Gleicher, what's your current place of employment?

20 A I work at Meta.

21 Q And what's your current title?

22 A I am head of security policy.

23 Q [REDACTED]

24 A [REDACTED]

25 Q [REDACTED]

1 Q You mentioned the community standards. Is the hack-and-leak policy
2 separate from the CIB policy?

3 A Yes.

4 Q Can you state again if your team has primary responsibility for the 5 enforcement of the hack and leak policy?

6 A Yes.

7 Q Do you know when that policy was first adopted?

8 A I believe it was adopted -- I don't remember the exact date but it was sort of 9 mid-2020.

10 Q Did you work on the development of that policy?

11 A Yes.

12 Q And do you recall which other teams, if any, from Facebook were involved in 13 the development of that policy?

14 A I don't know about specific teams. But within [REDACTED]'s org, there 15 were a number of people thinking about issues around the 2020 elections at that time.

16 Q So is it concern about the 2020 elections that led Facebook to adopt a 17 hack-and-leak policy?

18 A In part, yes.

19 Q What specifically about the 2020 election?

20 A As we were preparing for the 2020 elections, we identified that one of the 21 likely risks it was important to prepare for was a hack-and-leak campaign from a foreign 22 threat actor like Russia.

23 Q And by "we," do you mean Facebook?

24 [Discussion off the record.]

25 Mr. Gleicher. My apologies. Could you say that again?

I spoke with SSA Elvis Chan (FBI San Francisco) on 15 October 2020, as a follow up to the call with the Foreign Influence Task Force on 14 October. I asked SSA Chan whether there was any update or change since the discussion on 14 October 2020 as to whether the FBI saw any evidence suggesting foreign sponsorship or direction of the leak of information related to Hunter Biden as published in the New York Post story on 14 October. SSA Chan advised that he was up to speed on the current state of the matter within the FBI and that there was no current evidence to suggest any foreign connection or direction of the leak. SSA Chan assured that the FBI would be in contact if any additional information on this was developed through further investigation.

2 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. We'll go on the record.

3 Good morning. This is a transcribed interview of Mr. Alex Stamos. Chairman
4 Jordan has requested this interview as part of the committee's investigation of how and 5 the extent to which the executive branch has coerced and colluded with companies and 6 other intermediaries to censor speech.

7 Would the witness please state your name for the record?

8 Mr. Stamos. Alexander Stamos.

9 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. We encourage witnesses who appear before the 10 committee to freely consult with counsel if they so choose, and it is my understanding 11 that you are appearing today with counsel. Is that correct?

12 Mr. Stamos. Yes.

13 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Could counsel please state your name for the record?

14 Mr. Bellinger. John Bellinger, Arnold & Porter.

15 Mr. Thompson. Caleb Thompson, Arnold & Porter.

16 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Thank you.

17 On behalf of the committee, I want to thank you for appearing here today to 18 answer our questions. The chairman also appreciates your willingness to appear 19 voluntarily.

20 My name is [REDACTED] and I am with Chairman Jordan's staff.

21 I will now have everyone else in the room who is with the committee introduce 22 themselves as well.

23 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. [REDACTED] with Chairman Jordan's staff.

24 MAJORITY COUNSEL 3. [REDACTED] Chairman Jordan's staff.

25 MINORITY COUNSEL 1. [REDACTED] chief oversight counsel for the House

1 Judiciary Democratic staff.

2 [REDACTED] [REDACTED] House Judiciary Democratic staff.

3 [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] House Judiciary Democratic staff.

4 [REDACTED] [REDACTED] House Judiciary Democratic staff.

5 [REDACTED] [REDACTED] House Judiciary Democratic staff.

6 [REDACTED] [REDACTED] Mr. Jordan's staff.

7 [REDACTED] [REDACTED] Chairman Jordan's staff.

8 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Thank you.

9 I would now like to go over the ground rules and guidelines that we will follow
10 during today's interview. Our questioning will proceed in rounds. The majority will ask 11 questions first for 1 hour, and then the minority will have an opportunity to ask questions 12 for an equal period of time if they so choose.

13 We will alternate back and forth until there are no more questions and the 14 interview is over. Typically we take a break at the end of each hour, but if you would 15 like to take a break apart from that, please just let us know.

16 As you can see, there's an official court reporter taking down everything we say to 17 make a written record, so we ask that you give verbal responses to all questions.

18 Do you understand that?

19 Mr. Stamos. I do.

20 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. So the court reporter can take down a clear record, we 21 will do our best to limit the number of people directing questions at you during any given 22 hour to just those people on the staff whose turn it is.

23 Please try and speak clearly so the court reporter can understand and so the folks
24 down at the end of the cable can hear you as well. It is important that we don't talk
25 over one another or interrupt each other if we can help that, and that goes for everybody

1 present at today's interview.

2 We want you to answer our questions in the most complete and truthful manner
3 as possible, so we'll take our time. If you have any questions or if you do not understand
4 one of our questions, please just let us know. Our questions will cover a wide range of 5 topics so if you need clarification at any point just ask.

8 information from someone else. Just indicate how you came to know the information.
9 If there are things you don't know or can't remember, just say so and please inform us
10 who, to the best of your knowledge, might be able to articulate.

11 You should also understand that by law you are required to answer questions
12 from Congress truthfully.

13 Do you understand that?

14 Mr. Stamos. Yes.

15 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. This also applies to questions posed by congressional 16 staff in an interview.

17 Do you understand this?

18 Mr. Stamos. Yes.

19 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Witnesses that knowingly provide false testimony could be 20 subject to criminal prosecution for making false statements under 18, U.S.C., Section 21 1001.

22 Do you understand this?

23 Mr. Stamos. Yes.

24 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Is there any reason you are unable to provide truthful
25 answers to today's questions?

1 Mr. Stamos. No.

2 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Finally, I would like to make note that the content of 3 what we discuss here today is confidential. We ask that you not speak about what we 4 discuss in this interview to any outside individuals to preserve the integrity of our 5 investigation.

6 For that same reason, the marked exhibits that we will use today will remain with 7 the court reporters, and we will collect any copies of the exhibits at the end of the 8 interview.

9 Okay. That's the end of my preamble.

10 Do my colleagues from the minority have anything?

11 MINORITY COUNSEL 1. We would just like to thank the witness for flying out 12 from California to join us today.

13 MAJORITY COUNSEL 1. Thank you.

14 Mr. Stamos I understand you have an opening statement. You may proceed.

15 Mr. Stamos. I do. Thank you.

16 Good morning. I'm glad to have this opportunity to describe the work of the 17 Stanford Internet Observatory and to address misperceptions about its participation in 18 the Election Integrity Partnership and the Virality Project.

19 The Stanford Internet Observatory studies misuses of the internet with the goals 20 of publishing research, suggesting technical and policy mitigations, and educating the 21 next generation of cyber specialists. I'm the founder and the director of the observatory
22 and a lecturer in the computer science department at Stanford.

23 To that end, I teach courses in cybersecurity and online safety at Stanford, along
24 with supervising our research efforts. Our research includes work on child safety, online
25 promotion of self-harm, generative AI, and influence campaigns by China, Iran, Russia,

1 Q You mentioned that the Global Engagement Center was one of the entities
2 that can submit reports, tickets as well?

3 A Yes. They could send -- they could send emails in to us for us to open and 4 to look into, yes.

5 Q Do you recall who at the GEC you interacted with?

6 A I don't- -- I mean, personally I had -- there was a meeting in which I believe 7 the director of the GEC was at here in D.C. I don't recall her name. I -- I didn't have 8 most of those conversations.

9 Q The meeting in D.C. that you just referenced, what was the purpose of that 10 meeting?

11 A I believe it was to tell them about what EIP was doing and telling them that 12 they could send into us reports of foreign influence that they saw, potential foreign 13 influence.

14 Q Do you know who first connected GEC and EIP together?

15 A I believe that we had already had preexisting relationships with GEC because 16 they had published in this area before the EIP.

17 Q In addition to CISA and GEC, do you recall any other Federal agencies that 18 played either informal, like, external stakeholder role or otherwise consulted EIP?

19 A So the only groups that could and did report from the Federal Government 20 report anything to us was the GEC, which is actually part of the government and then the 21 EI-ISAC external, you know. And you'd have to give it your own determination of how 22 much of the government that is. But those are the only two groups that did send 23 anything in to us. We did do briefings for several other agencies and we had one ticket
24 that we then sent out to the FBI.

25 Q Which other Federal agencies did EIP briefly?

1 A I did a briefing for General Nakasone then the director of NSA and Cyber 2 Command.

3 Q And did these briefings -- when did they occur in the process? Is it
4 pre-election?

5 A Pre-election, yes. Like in the late summer, early fall we did a briefing. He 6 had come to campus and had heard us talk about our foreign work. And he asked me to 7 brief his executive staff on our concerns and what kind of foreign influence who happen
8 during the election.

9 Q And the FBI mentioned -- received the ticket. Did the FBI also receive 10 briefings for the election?

11 A The FBI was part of that briefing, so I did it from the FBI office in -- in San 12 Francisco because I just can't Zoom in to the NSA.

13 Q Do you recall who set up the meeting between you and the NSA?

14 A Elvis Chan had set up the -- so the meeting was set up because Nakasone
15 had come to campus. Elvis was the facilitator who provided the space and participated, 16 listened to the briefing in San Francisco.

17 Q Yeah. Did you know Mr. Chan before this meeting had occurred?

18 A I did.

19 Q And how did you know special agent Chan?

20 A Yeah, he runs the group in the San Francisco office of the FBI that handles
21 high profile national security cyber attacks and so had I worked with him both at Yahoo.
22 At Yahoo we had been attacked by the -- by contractors working for the Russian FSB.

23 And then at Facebook we had a number of attempted attacks, as well as 24 manipulations of the platform to cause attacks by a variety of government agencies, 25 foreign government agencies. And so Elvis was the primary contact for all of that

1 because he ran the group that would investigate those kinds of foreign actions.

2 Q Do you recall anyone else from the FBI attending this meeting?

3 A There were some other people from his squad. I don't recall their names.

4 Q And so in addition to the NSA, FBI, do you recall any other entities that were 5 present at the meeting?

6 A The -- it was a video conference. In the room were only FBI agents. The 7 only people I knew of who were on the other link were NSA.

8 Q So you mentioned FBI, NSA, GEC and CISA. Were there any other
9 government agencies that received a briefing from EIP?

10 A Not to my knowledge.

11 Q Did you -- in addition to this briefing that the FBI helped facilitate between 12 EIP and NSA, did you have any other interactions with the FBI as a function of EIP's work?

13 A We did the preemptive briefing and we sent them one report related to 14 Arabian action in the election and I believe that was our only interaction with them.

15 Q When EIP was organized, were there new EIP email addresses created for 16 folks?

17 A No. We have a domain that has one working email address info@, which 18 was a mailing list that went to three or four different people.

19 Q Okay. Do you know who those three or four people are?

20 A It was me, probably Elena Cryst or deputy director of SIO, Kate Starbird and I
21 believe there's a comms person at UW, I forgot his name, who'd receive those emails.
22 Because often that would be media requests and he would be the one who handled 23 those.

24 Q So I think we started to touch upon this, but how would members of EIP 25 communicate with one another?

2 [4:42 p.m.]

3 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

4 Q Who was the EIP's primary point of contact at Reddit?

5 A I've forgotten her name. There was a woman in the policy team. We can 6 come back to you.

7 Q Do you recall with respect to Alphabet if there was different points of 8 contact for Google as opposed to YouTube or if it was the same point of contact?

9 A I believe it was the same. For these purposes, the central Google team was 10 the one who was coordinating on their election policies.

11 Q In 2020, who was EIP's primary former contact with Discord?

12 A I don't recall with Discord.

13 Q What about with respect to Wikimedia?

14 A Yes. There's a -- I don't remember what the name is of the person at 15 Wikimedia. I wasn't a part of those meetings.

16 Q Who would have been part of those meetings?

17 A Probably [REDACTED] or some of the students who were doing onboarding.

18 Q Who is EIP's primary point of contact with Pinterest?

19 A I don't recall.

20 Q Are there plans to -- you mentioned that EIP -- obviously, this is the 2020
21 iteration. In 2022, you said there were some differences. Are there any plans to have 22 some continuation of the partnership for the 2024 election?

23 A That's an interesting question. I'm going to have to have a discussion with 24 Stanford's leadership. Since this investigation has cost the university now approaching
25 seven figures legal fees, it's been pretty successful I think in discouraging us from making

1 it worthwhile for us to do a study in 2024.

2 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. Do you recall which exhibit we're on?

3 [REDACTED]. 21 -- 22.

4 MAJORITY COUNSEL 2. 22. All right.

5 [Stamos Exhibit No. 22

6 Was marked for identification.]

7 BY MAJORITY COUNSEL 2:

8 Q Do you know who [REDACTED] is? I don't know if I'm pronouncing her 9 name right.

10 A Yeah. She was the woman I was thinking of, the head of policy for Reddit.

11 Q Great. And at her email at the top of the page, she says that 12 "We" -- assuming referring to Reddit -- "are unable to participate in Jiras, but we are 13 happy to receive info over email."

14 Do you recall that Reddit didn't respond in Jira directly?

15 A Right. They did not -- for whatever reason, did not want to have something 16 they had to log into. They wanted things to be put in the email and sent directly to 17 them.

18 Q Okay. And then there's an email below from you. You explain the 19 situation. There are a couple of links. And then below you say: "It would be great if 20 we could get somebody from Reddit on the Jira, just like Facebook, Google, Twitter,
21 TikTok, Instagram, CISA, EI-ISAC."

22 Were you referring to CISA, the government agency?

23 A I was probably making a mistake there talking about CISA because EI-ISAC
24 were the people who had access to the Jira.

25 Q But you list both EI-ISAC and CISA. Is that right?

INTEREST OF AMICI CURIAE

Amici curiae are Representative Jim Jordan and 44 other Members of Congress. The full list of amici appears on the following page.*

Each Member of Congress has taken an oath to uphold the Constitution and laws of the United States, and they have an institutional interest in protecting First Amendment rights from encroachment by the executive branch, protecting the rule of law, and holding the executive branch accountable when it overreaches. This interest also includes ensuring that the courts police those constitutional boundaries.

Each Member signatory is concerned that the Biden Administration has violated the Constitution and abridged Americans' civil liberties. Congress—and the House Judiciary Committee and the Weaponization Subcommittee, in particular—has been investigating the executive branch's coercion and collusion with social media companies to censor speech. Evidence recently obtained by these investigations further corroborates the district court's findings and the opinions below. Thus, each Member signatory has a substantial interest in this case and offers a unique perspective by virtue of his or her role in Congress.

* Under Rule 37.6, no counsel for a party authored this brief in whole or in part, and no person other than amici curiae, their members, or their counsel made a monetary contribution to its preparation or submission.

The following is the full list of amici:

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

Wielding threats of intervention, the executive branch of the federal government has engaged in a sustained effort to coerce private parties into censoring speech on matters of public concern. On issue after issue, the Biden Administration has distorted the free marketplace of ideas promised by the First Amendment, bringing the weight of federal authority to bear on any speech it dislikes—including memes and jokes. Of course, Big Tech companies often required little coercion to do the Administration’s bidding on some issues. Generally eager to please their ideological allies and overseers in the federal government, these companies and other private entities have repeatedly censored accurate speech on important public issues. When the censors were too slow to suppress speech that the partisans in the Administration disliked, the federal government prodded them back into action with continual and increasing pressure.

Official pressure to suppress speech violates the First Amendment. “[A] principal function of free speech under our system of government is to invite dispute. It may indeed best serve its high purpose when it induces a condition of unrest, creates dissatisfaction with conditions as they are, or even stirs people to anger.” Texas v. Johnson, 491 U.S. 397, 408–09 (1989) (cleaned up). No doubt, the government may find some individuals’ speech “misguided, or even hurtful,” but “the point of all speech protection is to shield just those choices of content.” Snyder v. Phelps, 562 U.S. 443, 458 (2011) (cleaned up). “The First Amendment embodies our choice as a Nation that, when it comes to such speech, the guiding principle is freedom—the unfettered interchange of ideas—not whatever the State may view as fair.” Arizona Free Enter. Club’s Freedom Club PAC v. Bennett, 564 U.S. 721, 750 (2011) (cleaned up). The First Amendment is founded on “the hypothesis that speech can rebut speech, propaganda will answer propaganda, [and] free debate of ideas will result in the wisest governmental policies.” Dennis v. United States, 341 U.S. 494, 503 (1951). Thus, the First Amendment stands against any governmental effort to coerce or otherwise burden the free speech of private entities—even if that action falls short of outright suppression. Cf. Kennedy v. Warren, 66 F.4th 1199, 1213 (9th Cir. 2023) (Bennett, J., concurring) (“[W]e do not require a government official to list specific consequences in order to find a constitutional violation.”).

Censorship-by-proxy is an especially nefarious form of state action, given that it is designed to evade detection, oversight efforts, and public records requests. The district court found, as a matter of fact, that “the United States Government, through the White House and numerous federal agencies, pressured and encouraged social-media companies to suppress free speech.” J.A. 201. The Fifth Circuit agreed. These factual findings must be upheld unless clearly erroneous. “Where there are two permissible views of the evidence, the factfinder’s choice between them cannot be clearly erroneous.” Anderson v. Bessemer City, 470 U.S. 564, 574 (1985). And “[w]here an intermediate court reviews, and affirms, a trial court’s factual findings”—as here—“this Court will not lightly overturn the concurrent findings of the two lower courts.” Easley v. Cromartie, 532 U.S. 234, 242 (2001).

The district court’s findings are easily “permissible”; they are clearly correct. Beyond the ample evidence cited by the courts below and the Plaintiffs, even more recent evidence obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and the Weaponization Subcommittee confirms the conclusions reached below. That evidence shows that the Biden Administration has relentlessly pressured private entities—sometimes in cooperation with other private entities—to censor speech that the Administration disliked. As detailed below, this official coercion has undermined the marketplace of ideas on issues of public importance ranging from COVID to federal elections to Biden family misdeeds. And the suppression “does not simply have an effect on speech, but is directed at certain content and is aimed at particular speakers”: conservative voices opposed to the current Administration. Barr v. Am. Ass’n of Pol. Consultants, Inc., 140 S. Ct. 2335, 2347 (2020). “This sort of ‘beggar thy neighbor’ approach to free speech—restricting the speech of some elements of our society in order to enhance the relative voice of others—is wholly foreign to the First Amendment.” Bennett, 564 U.S. at 741 (cleaned up). Likewise foreign to the First Amendment are governmental efforts to coerce the speech of private Americans. “As a Nation we have chosen a different course—to protect even hurtful speech on public issues to ensure that we do not stifle public debate.” Snyder, 562 U.S. at 461.

Because the Biden Administration has repeatedly used government coercion to stifle public debate—and the injunction below rightfully halts the Administration's unlawful conduct—the Court should affirm.

ARGUMENT

I. The United States has coerced speech about COVID.

As the district court found, the federal government “suppressed alternative views” about COVID-related matters, including the origination of the virus, the efficacy of vaccines and masks, and the adverse effects of lockdowns, effectively forcing social media companies to enforce the government’s view as “the truth.” J.A. 213. The district court listed over twenty examples of the government engaging in coercive acts directed toward social media companies to bring about censorship. J.A. 205–09. And the government’s pressure campaign worked. Facebook agreed to moderate certain COVID-related speech in response to pressure from the Biden Administration, telling the government that Facebook would rely on their “authorities” to determine what content to censor. J.A. 98. Echoing the White House’s own description, the district court described the government’s direction of the companies’ content choices as a “partner[ship].” J.A. 210. The Fifth Circuit agreed, finding that the social media companies “not only continued to take down content the officials flagged, and provided requested data to the White House, but they also changed their moderation policies expressly in accordance with the officials’ wishes.” J.A. 7; see J.A. 49–68 (finding coercion and significant pressure by the White House, FBI, CDC, and CISA based on a detailed examination of the factual record).

Recent evidence corroborates these findings. The House Judiciary Committee subpoenaed internal documents from Meta, the parent entity of Facebook and Instagram; Alphabet, the parent entity of Google and YouTube; and Amazon. The documents obtained confirm that the companies censored information and altered their content moderation policies because of pressure from the Biden Administration to rid their platforms of purported “misinformation.”¹

This pressure was direct and coercive. For example, the Administration tried to suppress discussion of COVID’s origins: when a Facebook executive asked in July 2021 why the company censored the COVID lab leak theory, an executive in charge of content policy development said, “[b]ecause we were under pressure from the [A]dministration” to do so.² The same Facebook executive confessed that the company “shouldn’t have done it.”³

Yet Facebook continued to do the Administration’s bidding, repeatedly removing and reducing content the federal government disfavored. The Biden White House’s successful monthslong campaign to censor views expressing or supporting vaccine hesitancy is the clearest example of how the government coerced social media companies to change the scope and enforcement of their content moderation policies.

In a draft of an internal email, a Facebook employee explained to CEO Mark Zuckerberg and COO Sheryl Sandberg: “We are facing continued pressure from external stakeholders, including the [Biden] White House and the press, to remove more COVID-19 vaccine discouraging content.”⁴

Mark, Sheryl:

We are seeking your guidance on whether to take more aggressive action against certain vaccine discouraging content.

We are facing continued pressure from external stakeholders, including the White House and the press, to remove more COVID-19 vaccine discouraging content. For example, we recently shared with the White House a list of the top 100 vaccine-related posts on FB in the U.S. for the week of 4/5-4/11. While authoritative information dominated the list, the White House was concerned that the #3 post was a vaccine discouraging humorous meme, and they called on us to delete the meme.

Another Facebook executive notified his team that a senior advisor to President Biden was “outraged”

“that [Facebook] did not remove” a meme that bothered the Administration.⁵ Likewise, to appease the Administration, Facebook demoted a video posted by journalist Tucker Carlson that was critical of the COVID vaccine, even though Facebook admitted that the video did not violate company policy.⁶

Tucker Carlson was not the only prominent media critic of the Biden Administration to be targeted by the Administration’s censorship efforts. According to Facebook’s internal notes of meetings with White House senior advisors, White House officials questioned whether Facebook’s enforcement of its content moderation policies against the New York Post was aggressive enough.⁷ Similarly, in April 2021, a White House official questioned whether Facebook could “change [its] algorithm so that people were more likely to see [the New York Times], [the Wall Street Journal], any authoritative news source over [the] Daily Wire, Tomi Lahren, polarizing people.”⁸ The White House’s requests were rooted in the paternalistic notion that Americans cannot decide for themselves what information should or should not be believed. As a White House staffer condescendingly remarked in a meeting with Facebook in April 2021, “[i]f someone in rural Arkansas sees something on [Facebook], it’s the truth.”⁹ In a June 2021 meeting, the White House pushed Facebook to “reduce the spread of bad information,” i.e., “bad” information according to the White House.¹⁰

The White House exerted similar pressure on YouTube. The government’s demands for meetings and information on YouTube’s policies and removals led to warnings within YouTube that the Biden “White House is very interested in our work on borderline content” and should be briefed again “to prevent anything from potentially spiraling out of control.”¹¹ YouTube considered this approach necessary because it was “seek[ing] to work closely with [the Biden] administration on multiple policy fronts.”¹²

The White House’s pressure extended to Amazon, the world’s largest online bookstore. Senior White House officials ran key searchers for topics such as “vaccine” and emailed Amazon employees directly when displeased with how the search results appeared.¹³ One internal Amazon email regarding a “Pre-Brief for Meeting w/ the White House” started with this “Top Talking Point[]”: “Is the Admin asking us to remove books, or are they more concerned about search results/order (or both)?”¹⁴ Other internal emails reveal that Amazon was “feeling pressure from the White House” on this issue.¹⁵ The Committee’s investigation remains ongoing, but there is evidence that Amazon adopted new policies, including “enabl[ing] Do Not Promote for anti-vax books,” because of pressure from the White House.¹⁶

Not only did the Biden Administration privately coerce Facebook and other companies into censoring information, it also engaged in a public relations campaign against the companies to pressure them into submission. In July 2021, President Biden publicly denounced these companies, particularly Facebook, claiming they were “killing people” by not censoring alleged “misinformation” to the government’s satisfaction.¹⁷ Facebook employees internally lamented that the Biden White House’s “definition of ‘misinfo’ is completely unclear.”¹⁸ Following the White House’s pressure, Facebook leadership—internally admitting that the move was “stemming from the continued criticism of our approach from the [Biden] administration”—directed employees to “brainstorm some additional policy levers we can pull to be more aggressive against . . . misinformation.”¹⁹ Ultimately, the company adopted four new, more aggressive policy options one month later.²⁰

Likewise, before meeting with the Biden Administration’s Office of the Surgeon General (OSG), a Facebook employee wrote that Sheryl Sandberg “is keen that we continue to explore some moves that we can make to show that we are trying to be responsive to the [White House].”²¹ The email continued: “My sense is that our current course—in effect explaining ourselves more fully, but not shifting on where we draw the lines . . . is a recipe for protracted and increasing acrimony with the [White House].”²² Internal documents obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and the Weaponization Subcommittee show that the Biden Administration pressured Facebook to censor information about the COVID vaccine’s side effects, even if the information was true.²³ In a July 2021 meeting with OSG, a Facebook employee confirmed that Facebook was demoting content that questioned whether vaccine mandates constituted “government overreach,” despite acknowledging “[t]hat’s not false information.”²⁴

Worse still, when Facebook questioned censoring information, the Biden Administration showed disdain and contempt for the First Amendment. For example, when the Administration flagged satirical content about the COVID vaccine, a Facebook executive first warned that removing satirical content would “represent a significant incursion into traditional boundaries of free expression in the US.”²⁵ But the Biden Administration was unpersuaded, insisting that the content “inhibits confidence” in the COVID vaccine.²⁶

A Facebook vice president warned internally that the company was at “a crossroads” with the Administration over its censorship efforts.²⁷ Facebook executives grasped the connection between the company’s business prospects and remaining in the Administration’s good graces. One executive, recommending that the company consider bending to the Administration’s censorship requests, cautioned COO Sheryl Sandberg that Facebook had “bigger fish

Another looming issue was—and still is—reform of Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act. As the district court explained, Section 230 is “valuable” to Big Tech because of its legal protections. J.A. 210. And the district court found that the federal government “threat[ened]” Big Tech with the repeal of Section 230 to induce compliance with its censorship campaign. Ibid. Mark Zuckerberg has referred to the possibility of antitrust enforcement as an “existential threat” to his empire. J.A. 95. Four days after President Biden publicly accused Facebook of “killing people,” the White House Communications Director publicly said the Administration was “reviewing” Section 230 reform as an option because the social media companies “should be held accountable.”²⁹ Internal documents show that Facebook executives feared that the Biden Administration would retaliate against the company for not censoring enough: one executive commented that the dispute over content was not “a great place for us to be,” and he would be “grateful for any further creative thinking on how we can be responsive to their [content] concerns.”³⁰ In response to mounting pressure, Facebook capitulated: “By August 2021, Facebook executives were emailing each other about new planned changes to their Covid content policies,” including increased punishments for violators.³¹

In short, the Biden Administration used its power to commandeer the apparatuses of social media companies to affect their COVID-related content policies. And out of self-interest, the companies complied and censored content beyond what they otherwise would have. This government coercion violates the First Amendment.

II. The United States has coerced speech about Biden Family influence peddling.

The federal government, specifically the FBI’s Foreign Influence Task Force (FITF), also used its power and influence to deceive and coerce social media companies into suppressing factual information during the 2020 election about the Biden family that the FBI knew to be true.³² The district court rightly labeled “[t]he FBI’s failure to alert social-media companies that the Hunter Biden laptop story was real, and not mere Russian disinformation,” as “particularly troubling.” J.A. 218. The laptop contained documents and emails with incriminating details about foreign business dealings that also implicated Hunter Biden’s father—then-presidential candidate, Joe Biden.³³

In a transcribed interview before the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee, the current Section Chief of FITF, Laura Dehmlow, testified that (1) FBI agents who knew the laptop was real were some of the same FBI agents who repeatedly warned social media companies about a potential “hack-and-leak” likely to occur in October 2020; and (2) despite direct requests from Twitter and Facebook for information on the day the New York Post story was published, the FBI decided to deliberately withhold critical information from the social media companies.³⁴

Although the FBI had the authenticated laptop in its possession since December 2019, it did not publicly acknowledge that it was real until after the November 3, 2020, election.³⁵ Rather than acknowledge the truth, the FBI actively influenced and deceived the social media companies to censor the story when it inevitably came out.³⁶ In a well-executed, monthslong plan, the FBI primed the narrative, telling social media companies to “look for a ‘hack and dump’ operation by the Russians prior to the 2020 election.”³⁷ Then, once the laptop’s contents were exposed, the FBI refused to answer questions and let the narrative it had constructed do its work of distracting from and minimizing the truth. Mark Zuckerberg’s justification for censoring the story illustrates the effectiveness of this plan: “the FBI basically came to us” and said, “you should be on high alert.”³⁸ Facebook censored the story because when “[the FBI] come[s] to us and tell[s] us that we need to be on guard about something, then I want to take that seriously,” and the story “basically fit the pattern” the FBI warned about.³⁹ This federal coercion led to the censorship of accurate information.

In “the nine months leading up to the 2020 election, the FBI met over 30 times with social media platforms—all while in possession of Hunter Biden’s laptop.”⁴⁰ The FBI had “at least five meetings with Facebook, Google, Microsoft, [and] Yahoo!, in addition to multiple meetings with Twitter and Reddit.”⁴¹ Yoel

Roth, former Head of Site Integrity at Twitter, confirmed in a sworn declaration that he had regular meetings in 2020 with different federal agencies, including the FBI, in which they “communicated that they expected ‘hack-and-leak operations’” against those associated with political campaigns “shortly before the 2020 presidential election, likely in October.”⁴² “These expectations of hack-and-leak operations were discussed throughout 2020.”⁴³ He was also told “that material obtained through those hacking attacks would likely be disseminated over social media platforms, including Twitter” and even that there were rumors the materials could involve Hunter Biden.⁴⁴

The companies also participated together in regular “USG-Industry” meetings, including four in October 2020, with representatives from federal agencies, including the FBI.⁴⁵ During these meetings, the FBI asked social media companies what their “hack and leak” policies were, how the companies would handle a potential “hack and leak,” and whether the companies would remove hacked materials from their platforms.⁴⁶ In response, some companies without a specific “hack and leak” policy,

Dehmlow confirmed that “the FBI could—and did—share information with companies regarding foreign malign influence operations, like hack-and-leak operations, including those conducted by Russia-aligned actors.”⁴⁸ For example, the agenda for the October 7, 2020 “USG-Industry” meeting—one week before the October 14 New York Post story—lists “Hack/Leak Concerns” as a topic.⁴⁹

According to Dehmlow, on the day the article was published, FBI met with Twitter, and a company representative asked if the laptop was real.⁵⁰ Dehmlow testified that, in response, “one of the FBI folks who was on the call” confirmed that the laptop was real before “another participant jumped in and said, ‘no further comment.’”⁵¹ After the meeting, FBI personnel “deliberated internally” and determined that—even though they knew the laptop was not Russian disinformation—in all further communications with social media companies the FBI would reply with “no comment.”⁵²

According to Dehmlow, later that same day, the FBI met with Facebook. This time the FBI had its story straight. When Facebook asked whether the laptop was real, Dehmlow, on behalf of the FBI, said, “no comment.”⁵³ The FBI has thus far refused to reveal to Congress the identities of the FBI official who told Twitter that the laptop was real, the FBI lawyer who instructed “no further comment” during the call with Twitter, or the FBI official who determined that the agency would respond only “no comment” when asked about Hunter Biden laptop’s authenticity going forward.⁵⁴

Facebook followed up again the next day, October 15.⁵⁵ According to an internal Facebook document obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and the Weaponization Subcommittee, a Facebook employee (and former FBI official) “spoke with SSA Elvis Chan (FBI San Francisco) on 15 October 2020, as a follow up to the call with the Foreign Influence Task Force on 14 October.”⁵⁶ Facebook again asked if the FBI had any new information, to which “Chan advised that he was up to speed on the current state of the matter

This internal Facebook document directly conflicts with the deposition testimony FBI Special Agent Elvis Chan provided in this case. Chan testified that he was “confident” that he “was not a party to any meeting with social media companies where Hunter Biden was discussed outside of the [October 14 FITF-Facebook meeting where Laura Dehmlow responded ‘no comment’].”⁵⁹ Later, when asked if, other than the October 14 FITF-Facebook meeting, he was “aware of any communications between anyone at Facebook and anyone at the FBI related to the Hunter Biden laptop story,” Chan responded, “No.”⁶⁰

As a result of the FBI's withholding critical information on the day of (and in the days after) the New York Post article's publication, the social media companies began to do precisely what the FBI intended: suppress truthful First Amendment-protected speech less than three weeks before the presidential election.⁶¹ The story implicating one of the two major party candidates was blocked by Twitter and deamplified by Facebook, "significantly reducing its circulation and prevalence in users' newsfeeds,"⁶² all because the FBI—an organization that the companies felt compelled to follow—had led them to believe the laptop story was Russian disinformation.⁶³ The story was not Russian disinformation, and FBI personnel meeting with Twitter and Facebook knew at the time that it was not Russian disinformation.⁶⁴ The government's coercive manipulation of the marketplace of ideas no doubt affected the 2020 election.⁶⁵ The district court's findings that the federal government unlawfully coerced private speech are amply supported by the evidence.

III. The United States has coerced speech about elections.

The United States also flouted the First Amendment by coercing platforms into suppressing election-related speech. This coercion is especially troubling because speech pertaining to elections “occupies the core of the protection afforded by the First Amendment.” McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm’n, 514 U.S. 334, 346 (1995). Yet the federal government has repeatedly coerced social media companies to censor election-related speech. It has done so directly, through DHS’s Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA), and indirectly, through the private-sector Election Integrity Partnership (EIP).⁶⁶

A. Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA)

Congress established CISA in 2018 to “lead cybersecurity and critical infrastructure security programs, operations, and associated policy.”⁶⁷ CISA’s “Countering Foreign Influence Task Force” (CFITF)

⁶⁶ Staff of the H. Comm. on the Jud., 118th Cong., Interim Staff Report: The Weaponization of CISA (June 26, 2023), available at <https://bit.ly/45jYPke> (D. Ct. Doc. 291-2) [hereinafter Interim CISA Report].

focused “on election infrastructure disinformation.”⁶⁸ But in an effort to expand its focus on foreign misinformation to domestic misinformation, “CISA transitioned its [CFITF] to promote more flexibility to focus on general MDM,” or so-called “Mis-, Dis-, and Malinformation.”⁶⁹

CISA’s focus on so-called “malinformation” is particularly alarming. According to CISA, “[m]alinformation is based on fact, but used out of context to mislead, harm, or manipulate.”⁷⁰ Put more plainly, “malinformation is factual information that is objectionable not because it is false or untruthful, but because it is provided without adequate ‘context’—context as determined by the government.”⁷¹

In his deposition, Brian Scully, the first head of the CFITF and later the head of the MDM team at CISA,⁷² said that CISA engaged in “switchboarding,” a practice in which CISA would flag alleged disinformation to social media platforms.⁷³ According to Scully, “switchboarding” involves CISA officials first receiving alleged “misinformation” reports from election officials and then forwarding those reports to social media companies so that they could take enforcement measures against the reported content.⁷⁴ Scully admitted that CISA was aware that its outreach to social media companies about alleged misinformation would trigger content moderation.⁷⁵

Petitioners highlight that CISA stated in its communications with platforms that no “favorable or unfavorable” action would be taken against them. Br. 6. But CISA’s disclaimer pointedly did not make a similar promise on behalf of other government agencies (including the FBI) with whom CISA shared ticket information.⁷⁶ In other words, the disclaimer “emphasized that CISA would involve law enforcement agencies and that CISA would not (or could not) commit that law enforcement agencies would not take an unfavorable action based on how the social media platforms decided to respond to the misinformation report.”⁷⁷ This omission was significant. As the former Chief Security Officer of Facebook explained, “I think all executives of all public companies understand that there's lots of parts of the government that can punish you for activity that you thought was appropriate."⁷⁸

CISA also funded and utilized third parties, such as the Center for Internet Security (CIS), to achieve these aims. CIS is the nonprofit entity responsible for operating the Elections Infrastructure Information Sharing and Analysis Center (EI-ISAC).⁷⁹ The "EI-ISAC is federally funded by CISA and a division of the Center for Internet Security."⁸⁰ The EI-ISAC allows election officials around the country to send reports of alleged "misinformation" to CIS, which CIS then forwards to the relevant social media platforms.⁸¹

For example, a state government official working for Pennsylvania's Secretary of State, a Democrat, reported to the EI-ISAC posts on Twitter and Facebook from Senator Ted Cruz's accounts.⁸² In the offending post, Senator Cruz, a Republican, asked: "Why is it only Democrat blue cities that take 'days' to count their votes? B. The Election Integrity Partnership (EIP)

The United States, primarily CISA, also coerced social media companies into censoring speech about the 2020 election through the private-sector Election Integrity Partnership (EIP), led by Stanford University. Formed in the summer of 2020, EIP was a coalition of research entities created “in consultation with CISA and other stakeholders,”⁸⁵ which “united government, academia, civil society, and industry, analyzing across platforms, to address misinformation in real time.”⁸⁶ “[F]rom the beginning,” “Stanford and CISA envisioned the partnership connecting federal agencies with social media platforms,” and CISA officials were intimately involved.⁸⁷

As one senior EIP figure explained, EIP was “set up at the request of DHS/CISA.”⁸⁸ Because the four entities comprising EIP were not government entities,⁸⁹ the United States sought to use EIP to do things that the government could not do without violating the First Amendment—namely, directly monitoring and censoring speech. By its own account, EIP filled the “gap” in the government’s ability to police so-called “misinformation” and “disinformation” about elections on social media because “no government agency in the United States has the explicit mandate to monitor and correct election mis- and disinformation”⁹⁰—and because of “[u]nclear legal authorities including very real 1st amendment questions.”⁹¹

EIP used the Jira Service Desk, an internal ticketing software to allow approved entities (government agencies, EI-ISAC, and others) to submit “misinformation” reports, in the form of a “Jira ticket.”⁹² From there, EIP personnel analyzed the submission and could comment on the ticket, before a manager would assess whether to forward the ticket to the relevant social media platform(s).⁹³ EIP’s final report illustrates this workflow:⁹⁴

⁸⁹ Stanford Internet Observatory, the University of Washington’s Center for an Informed Public, the Atlantic Council’s Digital Forensics Research Lab, and Graphika.

EIP was thoroughly intertwined with CISA, which aided EIP in the process of reporting undesirable election-related speech to social media platforms.⁹⁵ Stanford confirmed in a letter to Chairman Jordan that CISA was directly “tagged” in a number of Jira tickets “rather than or in addition to” the CISA-funded EI-ISAC.⁹⁶ Some of those involved with EIP worked for CISA, giving them (and CISA) direct access to the tickets.⁹⁷ Other documents obtained by the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee confirm CISA’s involvement.⁹⁸ “As a consequence, CISA had visibility on what was being submitted to the EIP”—and “social media platforms knew that CISA had knowledge of the EIP’s intake.”⁹⁹ So even while “CISA did not directly report content to the EIP, CISA could see what was being reported to the EIP and simultaneously report the same content directly to the social media platforms.”¹⁰⁰

The FBI, the National Security Agency (NSA), and the Global Engagement Center (GEC) were also involved. The GEC is a federal government interagency organization housed within the State Department with the stated mission of countering foreign “propaganda and disinformation efforts.”¹⁰¹ Most notably, the GEC submitted tickets to EIP through Jira and “was one of the most frequently tagged organizations in” Jira.¹⁰² In addition, before the 2020 election, EIP briefed the NSA, and sent one Jira ticket to the FBI.¹⁰³ Social media platforms could

The federally funded EI-ISAC also submitted tickets.¹⁰⁵ CISA even coordinated “an agreement” between CIS and EIP to avoid double reporting.¹⁰⁶ The two admittedly became “partners,”¹⁰⁷ sharing personnel.¹⁰⁸ Information obtained to date during the House Judiciary Committee and Weaponization Subcommittee’s investigation confirms that the government-funded EI-ISAC submitted over 100 Jira tickets in the lead-up to the 2020 election.¹⁰⁹

This close affiliation with the federal government heightened the coerciveness of EIP’s interactions with social media platforms. Stanford’s amicus brief in this Court claims that “EIP’s decisions about what to escalate to social media platforms were made completely independently.” Br. 25. It also suggests “that CISA did not share tips about instances of misinformation with EIP, did not have general access to EIP tickets identifying instances of misinformation, and did not ‘coordinate’ EIP’s contacts with social media platforms.” Id. at 24–25. These claims continue Stanford’s identified pattern of misrepresentations and deceitful public statements about EIP, including to congressional investigators.¹¹⁰

Initially, Stanford told Congress—and still continues to claim on its website—that “EIP did not make recommendations to the platforms about what actions they should take.”¹¹¹ That was and continues to be provably false: despite Stanford’s best efforts to avoid a subpoena, the Committee eventually received dozens of tickets “in which the EIP made a direct recommendation to platforms on what action should be taken.”¹¹²

Then, Stanford claimed that only the GEC submitted tickets, and otherwise it “did not use Jira to receive information from, or share information with, any federal government agencies or officials.”¹¹³ That too was wrong: besides the overlap between CISA personnel and EIP, the Committee obtained documents showing that “CISA personnel were receiving information from or generated by the Jira system” and that “CISA personnel referenced the ‘EIP-’ codes when switchboarding.”¹¹⁴ involved with EIP, “Stanford’s counsel finally admitted in a letter to the Committee that CISA was, in fact, involved with the EIP’s Jira system and that CISA had been directly ‘tagged’ on a number of tickets.” Stanford’s counsel claimed that “[a]t the time of Mr. Stamos’s interview, Mr. Stamos was not aware that CISA or CFITF had been “tagged” in any Jira tickets.”¹¹⁵ This assertion was dubious, as tickets that were shared with CISA “were assigned to Stamos.”¹¹⁶ Given that CISA was intimately involved in EIP’s creation and operation, CISA was directly tagged in tickets, CISA personnel had access to the ticket system, and both CISA and EIP were sharing the same information with social media companies, Stanford’s claims before this Court that CISA had no “general access to EIP tickets” and that EIP’s communications were “completely independent[]” (Br. 24–25) are hard to take seriously.

EIP onboarded major social media platforms, gaining privileged access to some of these platforms’ data and the ability to collect such data in real time.¹¹⁷ EIP’s direct recommendations for censorship resulted in the suppression of disfavored speech about the 2020 election. Thirty-five percent of the URLs that EIP “shared with Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, TikTok, and YouTube were either labeled, removed, or soft-blocked.”¹¹⁸ Every Twitter account holder that EIP

Content characterized as “disinformation” often did not refer to factually inaccurate posts. “EIP analysts were unable to identify a single external source to support its designation of a particular post or narrative as ‘mis- or disinformation’ in a majority of posts it flagged.”¹²⁰

The United States’ coercive tactics with social media platforms to quell election-related messages it finds undesirable are unconstitutional—even when funneled through a private-sector entity. See Norwood v. Harrison, 413 U.S. 455, 465 (1973) (“[A] state may not induce, encourage or promote private persons to accomplish what it is constitutionally forbidden to accomplish.” (cleaned up)).

IV. The United States is funding research and tools to enable censorship at scale.

The Committee and Select Subcommittee have also uncovered how the National Science Foundation (NSF) uses taxpayer funds for research into AI-powered censorship and propaganda tools through its Convergence Accelerator Track F program.¹²¹ These exchanges provide context for the federal government's other interactions with "disinformation" researchers, such as CISA's interactions with the Election Integrity Partnership.

Non-public documents obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee demonstrate that the federal bureaucrats, "disinformation" researchers, and non-profits understood that "content moderation" and combatting so-called misinformation is, in their words, "censorship." The Committee and Select Subcommittee have obtained October 2021 presentation slides with speaker's notes in which researchers pitch their AI-powered tool to NSF as a way for "policy makers at platforms" to "externaliz[e] the difficult responsibility of censorship."¹²²

The Committee and the Select Subcommittee have obtained nonpublic emails and other documents that reveal an intentional effort by NSF to hide its role in funding these censorship and propaganda tools. From legal scholars like Jonathan Turley to conservative journalists, NSF tracked public criticisms of its work in funding censorship projects. In fact, NSF went so far as to develop a media strategy that considered blacklisting certain American media outlets because they were scrutinizing NSF's funding of censorship and propaganda tools.¹²³

Moreover, NSF provided taxpayer funding to researchers who, in their proposal to NSF, cited a study “of two conservative groups” examining the “online search practices” of Americans who hold “the Bible or the Constitution” as “sacred” and “distrust[] journalists and academics.”¹²⁴ The same study claimed that “everyday” Americans “often focused on reading a wide array of primary sources, and performing their own synthesis,” “unlike expert lateral readers” who rely on the “expert consensus.”¹²⁵ These types of comments unveil the worldview of “disinformation” researchers, which is paternalistic at best and contemptuous at worst.

Collectively, these documents begin to shed light on why so many in the Executive Branch, Big Tech, and academia have felt entitled to try to limit public debate on issues of national import. The Executive Branch’s self-righteous motives notwithstanding, stifling speech is not only unconstitutional, but it leads to distorted, poorer policy outcomes because ideas can no longer be fairly contested on their merits.

ABUSES OF FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES

A major catalyst for the creation of the Select Subcommittee was the mounting evidence that the Justice Department, under Attorney General Merrick Garland, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) under Director Christopher Wray, are broken. During the Biden-Harris Administration, the Justice Department and FBI have advanced a two-tiered system of justice—investigating and prosecuting disfavored individuals or groups with disfavored views. In particular, the FBI has targeted its employees who hold conservative viewpoints, investigated parents at school board meetings, and sought to invade the sacred spaces of Catholic churches in the name of fighting “domestic terrorism.” However, such abuses are not limited to the FBI. Federal agencies including the IRS, the Treasury Department, and other Justice Department components like the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (ATF), have misused federal funds to target Americans. The Select Subcommittee has worked to ensure that the government works for the American people, not against them.

I. The weaponization of federal law-enforcement resources against Americans

Rather than focusing its resources on addressing issues like rising crime, rampant illegal immigration, and the fentanyl crisis, federal law enforcement spent much of the Biden-Harris Administration targeting those engaged in constitutionally protected activity. Perhaps nothing is more emblematic of the Justice Department leadership’s disdain for American people than Attorney General Garland’s October 2021 anti-parent memorandum. The Select Subcommittee released a report on March 21, 2023, “A ‘Manufactured’ Issue and ‘Misapplied’ Priorities: Subpoenaed Documents Show No Legitimate Basis for the Attorney General’s Anti-Parent Memo,” detailing the findings of its investigation. The Select Subcommittee conducted oversight of the Biden-Harris Administration’s use of federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources against parents voicing concerns about controversial curricula and education-related policies at local school board meetings. This oversight initially began during the 117th Congress, in October 2021, following the issuance of a memorandum from Attorney General Garland directing the FBI and all U.S. Attorney’s Offices—among other Department components—to examine and address threats posed by parents at school board meetings.⁸² At the outset of the 118th Congress, after Republicans resumed control of the House of Representatives, the Committee and Select Subcommittee subpoenaed the Justice Department, FBI, and Education Department for documents necessary to advance the Select Subcommittee’s oversight and inform potential legislative reforms.⁸³ The documents received pursuant to the subpoena showed that there was no legitimate basis for the Attorney General’s directive to insert federal law enforcement into local school board matters and revealed how the Administration worked with leftwing special interest groups to generate the predicate for the Attorney General’s directive.⁸⁴ These documents, along with other corroborating evidence, indicated that the Administration’s actions were a politically motivated offensive meant to quell swelling discord over controversial education curricula and unpopular local school board decisions.⁸⁵

The Select Subcommittee showed that the FBI’s and Justice Department’s disdain for Americans with conservative viewpoints did not end at school board meetings. On May 18, 2023, the Select Subcommittee published a report, “Report on FBI Whistleblower Testimony Highlights Government Abuse, Misallocation of Resources, and Retaliation,” detailing whistleblower testimony from several current and former FBI employees highlighting egregious abuse, misallocation of law-enforcement resources, and misconduct by FBI leadership. These whistleblower disclosures undeniably revealed the political weaponization of the FBI under Director Wray and President Biden.⁸⁶ Additionally, the disclosures described the depths of retaliatory conduct each of the whistleblowers faced after making protected disclosures about what they believed in good faith to be wrongful conduct.⁸⁷

The FBI under Director Wray’s tenure even targeted Americans engaged in the practice of their religion. The Select Subcommittee issued a report on December 4, 2023, “The FBI’s Breach of Religious Freedom: The Weaponization of Law Enforcement Against Catholic Americans,” which exposed the FBI’s categorization of certain Catholic Americans as potential domestic terrorists. This investigation began in February 2023 after a whistleblower revealed the existence of an anti-Catholic memorandum in internal FBI systems.⁸⁸ This memorandum was an official FBI document that cast “radical traditionalist Catholics” as “racially or ethnically motivated violent extremists.”⁸⁹ The memorandum even proposed opportunities for the FBI to infiltrate Catholic churches as a form of “threat mitigation.”⁹⁰ The basis for the memorandum relied on a single investigation in the Richmond Field Office’s area of responsibility in which the subject “self-described” as a “radical-traditionalist Catholic.”⁹¹ However, FBI employees could not define the meaning of “radical-traditionalist Catholic” when preparing, editing, or reviewing the memorandum.⁹² Nevertheless, this single investigation became the basis for an FBI-wide memorandum warning about the dangers of “radical” Catholics.

Through its oversight, the Select Subcommittee obtained documents that showed the FBI abused its counterterrorism tools to target Catholic Americans as potential domestic terrorists and that there was no legitimate basis for the memorandum to insert federal law enforcement into Catholic houses of worship.⁹³ The Select Subcommittee discovered that the FBI relied on at least one undercover agent to develop its assessment, and the FBI even proposed developing sources among the Catholic clergy and church leadership.⁹⁴ Not only did the FBI propose to develop sources, but at the time it released the memorandum, it had already interviewed a priest and choir director affiliated with a Catholic church in Richmond, Virginia.⁹⁵

Under the Biden-Harris Administration, the weaponization of the Justice Department seeped into several of its components—not just the FBI. On May 22, 2024, the Select Subcommittee held a hearing examining overreach by the ATF, which highlighted the ATF’s failure to use sound judgment and follow proper protocol during the execution of a search warrant at the home of Bryan Malinowski in Little Rock, Arkansas.⁹⁶

In the early morning hours of March 19, 2024, at least ten vehicles of armed ATF agents arrived at Malinowski’s home to execute a search warrant.⁹⁷ According to the affidavit in support of the warrant, the ATF reportedly alleged that Malinowski was selling firearms without a license.⁹⁸ Footage from the Malinowskis’ doorbell camera apparently showed ATF agents approaching the house with riot shields and subsequently disabling the camera to prevent their conduct from being recorded.⁹⁹ Upon hearing the commotion and fearful of a home intrusion, Malinowski awoke and prepared to defend his family.¹⁰⁰ Malinowski apparently encountered what he and his wife believed to be home intruders.¹⁰¹ An exchange of gunfire ensued, ATF agents shot Malinowski in the head, and two days later he succumbed to his injuries.¹⁰² Only forty-six seconds transpired between the moment ATF agents first announced themselves and the time that ATF agents shot Malinowski.¹⁰³

The circumstances of Malinowski’s death showed that the ATF failed to use sound judgement and failed to follow proper protocol during the execution of this search warrant. Justice Department policy and President Biden’s Executive Order 14074 requires ATF agents—including those who conducted the search warrant on the Malinowski family home—to wear active body-worn cameras during the execution of a search warrant.¹⁰⁴ However, the Department has confirmed to the Malinowski family that, in violation of Department policy, the ATF agents were not wearing body cameras during the raid.¹⁰⁵

Despite requests from the Select Subcommittee, the ATF has not explained why it resorted to a risky, pre-dawn entry of Malinowski’s home when it could have peacefully executed the warrant while he was away from his residence. The ATF’s affidavit in support of the warrant startlingly revealed that ATF agents had conducted surveillance on Malinowski and had developed a pattern of life analysis to understand when he was home or at work.¹⁰⁶ The Malinowskis' attorney, former U.S. Attorney Bud Cummins, testified to the Select Subcommittee that ATF agents strategically gathered on March 12, 2024, one week before the deadly raid, at a nearby Walmart in anticipation of executing the search warrant on the Malinowskis' home.¹⁰⁷ However, Cummins explained that the ATF agents did not execute the search warrant on March 12 as they learned that Malinowski was not at home that morning.¹⁰⁸ This evidence shows that ATF deliberately chose to execute the search warrant when they knew Malinowski was present inside his home.¹⁰⁹ Video security footage from Walmart confirms Cummins's statements.¹¹⁰

The ATF's pre-dawn raid of the Malinowskis' home coincided with the agency's implementation of a regulation to restrict the right to private lawful sales of firearms.¹¹¹ In particular, the ATF seeks to drastically expand the universe of Americans who would be classified as a "dealer" under federal law requiring them to obtain a license to become a Federal Firearms Licensee (FFL),¹¹² subjecting them to a term of imprisonment of up to five years and a fine of up to $250,000, or both.¹¹³ In May 2024, a federal district court judge issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting enforcement of the ATF rule.¹¹⁴ However, litigation in such matter is ongoing.

The Select Subcommittee has also conducted oversight of the Biden-Harris Administration's weaponization of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) against law-abiding Americans. In 2022, Democrats in Congress flooded the IRS with $78.9 billion in new funding, $45 billion of which was earmarked solely to hire as many as 87,000 agents to aggressively pursue American taxpayers.¹¹⁵ During the 118th Congress, the Republican majority in the House severely curtailed this new funding to ensure that tax dollars were used in ways more beneficial to the American public.¹¹⁶ The Select Subcommittee's oversight shows the wisdom of this action. On October 27, 2023, the Select Subcommittee published a report, "Fighting the Weaponization of the Internal Revenue Service \(IRS\): The End of Unannounced Field Visits," detailing the results of the Select Subcommittee's investigation of the IRS weaponizing unannounced field visits to intimidate journalist Matt Taibbi—the same day that he testified before the Select Subcommittee about government abuse—and to harass and threaten an unsuspecting Ohio taxpayer. Notably, in both cases, neither taxpayer owed anything to the IRS.¹¹⁷ Yet the IRS showed up unannounced at their homes and, in the case of Taibbi, compiled a dossier of information about him as part of its visit.¹¹⁸ After the Select Subcommittee uncovered the degree to which the IRS was abusing this practice, the IRS terminated its decades-long practice of allowing Revenue Officers to conduct unannounced field visits.¹¹⁹ The Select Subcommittee’s oversight resulted in a substantive change that better protects Americans’ privacy and reins in an overly aggressive federal agency.

In addition, the Select Subcommittee conducted oversight of the Justice Department after it was revealed that the Department, in an egregious violation of separation of powers, attempted to access private communications from Members of Congress and congressional staff involved in conducting oversight of the Department. In 2017, classified information about the Department’s misuse of Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) warrants against Trump campaign associate Carter Page was given to the media and published in several articles.¹²⁰ Eventually, the Department tried and convicted James Wolfe, a longtime Democrat staffer on the Senate Select Intelligence Committee, for the unauthorized disclosure of sensitive information.¹²¹ However, the breadth of the Department’s efforts to identify the leaker were not fully realized until 2023, when Google and other telecommunications companies provided notice—after the Department’s repeated nondisclosure orders lapsed—to its users that the Department had subpoenaed for their personal information.¹²²

The Justice Department investigated a swath of Republican and Democrat congressional staffers, including former Chief Investigative Counsel to then-Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Charles Grassley who, at the time, was conducting vigorous oversight of the Department.¹²³ Google’s notification to this staffer revealed the Justice Department likely also sought the personal records and communications of countless other congressional staffers—both Republicans and Democrats—who engaged in similar oversight during the same period.¹²⁴ This revelation followed reporting that the Department issued subpoenas to obtain the private emails and records of Members of Congress and congressional staffers on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence who were conducting oversight of the Justice Department’s Crossfire Hurricane investigation.¹²⁵ Taken together, these facts strongly suggests that the Justice Department weaponized its law-enforcement authority to spy on the entities seeking to hold it accountable.

The Select Subcommittee’s oversight led the Department to concede that its actions were improper and to adopt bolstered criteria for opening investigations implicating Members of Congress and congressional staff members.¹²⁶ On November 8, 2023, the Justice Department informed the Select Subcommittee of “a change to the Department of Justice’s policies and procedures in criminal investigations involving Members of Congress and their staff” that “impose[s] new requirements to consult with, or receive approval from, the Public Integrity Section.”¹²⁷

During the Biden-Harris Administration, federal law enforcement consistently turned against the American people. Despite federal law enforcement’s task to protect all Americans, the Biden-Harris Administration pursued a two-tiered system of justice. In fact, the Justice Department silenced conservatives, investigated parents at school board meetings, and called pro-life Catholics extremists. Further, as noted above, the ATF failed to follow protocol and execute sound judgement in its deadly raid in Little Rock, Arkansas. Additionally, the IRS conducted unannounced visits to taxpayers’ homes, including a hearing witness while he was testifying before the Subcommittee. As a result of the Select Subcommittee’s oversight, the Administration rolled back some of these abusive policies, but work remains to ensure that law enforcement works for Americans and not against them.

Interim Staff Report of the Committee on the Judiciary
and the
Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government

U.S. House of Representatives

March 21, 2023

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Committee on the Judiciary is conducting oversight of the Biden Administration’s use of federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources against parents voicing concerns about controversial curricula and education-related policies at local school board meetings. This oversight began in October 2021 following the issuance of a memorandum from Attorney General Merrick Garland directing the Federal Bureau of Investigation and all U.S. Attorney’s Offices—among other Department components—to examine and address threats posed by parents at school board meetings.

Although the Biden Administration declined to cooperate with this oversight in the 117th Congress, whistleblower disclosures and a report commissioned by the National School Boards Association (NSBA) shed some light on how the Biden Administration colluded with the NSBA to create a justification to use federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources against parents. There were gaps in the information available to the Committee then, primarily because the Biden administration did not participate in the NSBA’s third-party report. On February 3, 2023, Chairman Jordan subpoenaed the Justice Department, FBI, and Education Department for documents necessary to advance the Committee’s oversight and inform potential legislative reforms.

From the initial set of material produced in response to the subpoenas, it is apparent that the Biden Administration misused federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources for political purposes. The Justice Department’s own documents demonstrate that there was no compelling nationwide law-enforcement justification for the Attorney General’s directive or the Department components’ execution thereof.¹ After surveying local law enforcement, U.S. Attorney’s offices around the country reported back to Main Justice that there was no legitimate law-enforcement basis for the Attorney General’s directive to use federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources to investigate school board-related threats. For example:

- One U.S. Attorney reported that “this issue was very poorly received” by his local law-enforcement community and “described by some as a manufactured issue.”² He continued: “No one I spoke with in law enforcement seemed to think that there is a serious national threat directed at school boards, which gave the impression that our priorities are misapplied.”³
- Another U.S. Attorney’s Office reported that the local FBI field office in the area “did not see any imminent threats to school boards or their members . . . , nor did they ascertain any worrisome trends in that regard.”⁴

¹ In fact, Attorney General Garland admitted as much in his October 2021 testimony to the Committee, conceding that the National School Boards Association letter was the only basis for the Department’s actions. See Oversight of the United States Department of Justice: Hearing Before the H. comm. on the Judiciary, 117th Cong. at 68 (2021) (testimony from Hon. - Local law-enforcement officials noted that local officials should properly respond to school board threats. In Montana, several law-enforcement offices rightly advised the Justice Department that “local law enforcement authorities are best suited to address criminal threats against school board administrators.”⁵
- Most threats reported back to Main Justice had little connection to school board matters. For example, the Southern District of Alabama reported that although one of the school board member’s houses was shot at, the incident was the “unfortunate consequence of gun violence in the city” and not related to school board decisions or policies.⁶

The documents received pursuant to the Committee’s subpoena show the absence of a legitimate nationwide basis for the Attorney General’s directive to insert federal law enforcement into local school board matters. The documents also shed light onto how the Administration worked with education special interests to generate the predicate for the Attorney General’s directive. It appears, from these documents and the information received previously, that the Administration’s actions were a political offensive meant to quell swelling discord over controversial education curricula and unpopular school board decisions. The Attorney General’s directive came just weeks before a pivotal gubernatorial election in Virginia, in which education policies were hotly debated and a local school board’s actions were under intense scrutiny.⁷ The inference from the initial tranche of subpoenaed documents is that the Justice Department’s actions were a reaction to these political circumstances rather than a legitimate law-enforcement response to any serious, nationwide threat.

In response to the Committee’s subpoena, the FBI acknowledged for the first time that it opened 25 “Guardian assessments” of school board threats, and that six of these investigations were run by the FBI’s Counterterrorism Division.⁸ These admissions supplement whistleblower disclosures about the FBI’s actions, including disclosures the FBI investigated a mom because she belonged to a “right-wing mom’s group” and “is a gun owner” and a dad because “he rails against the government.” According to the FBI, none of the school board-related investigations have resulted in federal arrests or charges, highlighting the political motives behind the Attorney General’s actions. The Administration’s goal seems to have been silencing the critics of its radical education policies and neutralizing an issue that was threatening Democrat Party prospects in the close gubernatorial race in Virginia.

This weaponization of law-enforcement powers against American parents exercising their First Amendment rights is dangerous. The Justice Department subjected moms and dads to the opening of an FBI investigation about them, the establishment of an FBI case file that includes their political views, and the application of a “threat tag” to their names as a direct result of their exercise of their fundamental constitutional right to speak and advocate for their children. The Committee has called on Attorney General Garland to rescind his memorandum, which he has refused to do. From the documents and information received pursuant to the subpoena, it is crystal clear that Attorney General Garland should rescind his unwise and unsupported directive to insert federal law enforcement into local school board matters.

The House Committee on the Judiciary, through and with its Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government, is charged with investigating “violations of the civil liberties of citizens of the United States.”⁹ This interim staff report fulfills the ongoing obligation to identify and report on instances of the weaponization of the federal government—here, the misuse of federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources against parents exercising their First Amendment rights at school board meetings. While the documents produced to date help to better understand what transpired, they do not tell the whole story. The Committee and the Select Subcommittee will continue to pursue the relevant facts to inform legislative reforms to protect American civil liberties.

BACKGROUND

In October 2021, House Judiciary Committee Republicans opened an investigation into the Biden Administration’s misuse of federal law-enforcement resources to target concerned parents. Since then, Committee Republicans have sent over 100 letters to Department of Justice components requesting documents and information related to this investigation.¹⁰ Additionally, Republicans have sent four letters to the Department of Education.

With help from brave whistleblowers and the NSBA-commissioned report, the Committee uncovered initial information in the 117th Congress about the Biden Administration’s misuse of its authorities. From the information available then, the Committee learned the following:

- The NSBA collaborated with the Biden White House to develop the language of the NSBA’s September 29, 2021 letter to President Biden urging the use of federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism tools, including the Patriot Act, against parents.¹¹
- The NSBA shared the draft language of its letter with the White House, which apparently raised no concerns with the reference to counterterrorism tools or the inclusion of the Patriot Act in the letter.¹²
- Five days after the NSBA letter to President Biden, on October 4, Attorney General Garland issued a memorandum that inserted federal law enforcement into local school board meetings.¹³
- Attorney General Garland established a task force—including the Department’s National Security Division, with responsibility for enforcing federal counterterrorism statutes—to examine school board-related threats and highlighted the FBI’s National Threat

Operations Center to serve as a snitch-line for tips about parents at school board meetings.¹⁴

- In testimony to the Committee, Attorney General Garland admitted that the sole basis of his memorandum was the NSBA letter sent to President Biden.¹⁵
- On October 20, 2021, the FBI’s Counterterrorism and Criminal Divisions operationalized the Attorney General’s directive, announcing to all FBI special agents in charge the creation of a new threat tag—EDUOFFICIALS—to track school board-related threats.¹⁶

The FBI later opened dozens of investigations into parents’ conduct at school board meetings, using the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag, in almost every region of the country and relating to all types of educational settings.¹⁷ Whistleblower disclosures to the Committee showed how, as a direct result of Attorney General Garland’s October 4 directive, federal law enforcement is using counterterrorism resources to investigate protected First Amendment activity. For example:

- In one investigation, an FBI field office interviewed a mom for allegedly telling a local school board “we are coming for you.” The complaint, which came into the FBI through the National Threat Operations Center snitch-line, alleged that the mom was a threat because she belonged to a “right wing mom’s group” known as “Moms for Liberty” and because she “is a gun owner.” When the FBI interviewed the mom, she told the agent that she was upset about the school board’s mask mandates and that her statement was a warning that her organization would seek to replace the school board with new members through the electoral process.
- An FBI field office opened an investigation into a dad opposed to mask mandates. The complaint came in through the National Threat Operations Center snitch-line and alleged that the dad “fit the profile of an insurrectionist” because he “rails against the government,” “believes all conspiracy theories,” and “has a lot of guns and threatens to use them.” When an FBI agent interviewed the complainant, the complainant admitted they had “no specific information or observations of . . . any crimes or threats,” but they contacted the FBI after learning the Justice Department had a website “to submit tips to the FBI in regards to any concerning behavior directed toward school boards.”
- In another case, an FBI field office opened an investigation into Republican state elected officials after a state Democrat party official accused them of making an “online terroristic threat by politicians against school board members.” This complaint also came into the FBI through the National Threat Operations Center snitch-line. It alleged that one Republican official “incited violence” against school board members by expressing displeasure with school districts’ vaccine mandates.

These investigations into concerned parents were the direct result of Attorney General Garland’s October 4 directive. Each of the cases was initiated following the directive and the complaints came into the FBI through the same snitch-line—the National Threat Operations Center—highlighted in the press release accompanying the October 4 memorandum. One complainant even told an FBI agent that they reported the tip to the FBI because of the snitch-line, despite having “no specific information” about any actual threat.

The FBI later disclosed—only after Chairman Jordan’s subpoena to Director Wray—that it had opened 25 “Guardian assessments” with the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag.¹⁸ The FBI assigned seventeen of the investigations to the Criminal Investigative Division, six to the Counterterrorism Division, and two to the Weapons of Mass Destruction Directorate.¹⁹ The FBI acknowledged that it “has not observed an uptick of threats directed at school officials since it began tracking the data.”²⁰ Of the 25 investigations, the FBI determined that only one warranted opening a “Full Investigation,” and referred the majority of the remaining cases to state and local authorities.²¹ There have still been no federal prosecutions.

The Administration did not comply fully with the Committee’s oversight in the 117th Congress. Early in the 118th Congress, Chairman Jordan renewed the outstanding requests to the Justice Department, FBI, Education Department, and White House.²² Still, the Administration declined to comply fully and on February 3, 2023, the Committee issued a subpoena to compel the production of documents. On February 28, 2023—the day before the Justice Department was required to comply with the Committee’s subpoena—the Department produced 448 pages of documents. On the same day, the Education Department produced 1,004 pages of heavily redacted documents. Both departments indicated that they would continue to produce responsive material going forwards.²³

NEW INFORMATION IN THE SUBPOENAED DOCUMENTS

The Committee’s subpoenas have returned new information that demonstrates how the Biden Administration misused its federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources on school board-related threats. The documents shed new light on the Administration’s coordination with education special interests to generate the predicate for the Justice Department’s actions. The subpoenaed documents show there was no legitimate nationwide basis for the Attorney General’s directive to insert federal law enforcement into local school board matters. In fact, almost universally, local law enforcement rejected the directive and expressed strong preference that local authorities handle local matters.

I. Internal Executive Branch communications show that the Biden Administration and NSBA extensively colluded prior to the Attorney General’s memorandum.

As the radical left continued to push a woke agenda on America’s children, parents across the country started to speak out at school board meetings against critical race theory, mask mandates, and controversial curricula. As more parents spoke out, the NSBA and the Biden Administration colluded to create a justification, articulated in an October 4 memorandum from Attorney General Garland, to use federal law-enforcement tools to silence parents. The initial documents produced in response to the Committee’s subpoena provide more details on the extent of that coordination.

A. Prior to the October 4 memorandum, the Department of Education and White House worked with a left-leaning group to promote calls for federal law-enforcement intervention.

On September 16, 2021, CEO of the National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP) Ronn Nozoe emailed Mary C. Wall, of the White House COVID-19 Response Team, about NASSP’s September 16, 2021, press release calling for the “federal government to protect school leaders from threats and violence.”²⁴ Mr. Nozoe asked Ms. Wall to share it with her networks.²⁵ That same day, employees at the Department of Education set a meeting to discuss the NASSP’s press release.²⁶ The Education Department redacted much of these internal communications among its employees, preventing the Committee from fully understanding the nature and circumstances of these discussions.²⁷

On September 20, 2021, Dr. Aaliyah Samuel, Deputy Assistant Secretary, Local, State and National Engagement in the Office of Communications and Outreach at the Department of Education, emailed Mr. Nozoe requesting a time to talk.²⁸ Mr. Nozoe sent an email with the ²⁴ HJC-118-0000337; HJC-118-0000338. In the press release, Mr. Nozoe called for the “full authority of the federal government to help us remove or ban threatening individuals from our schools who are determined to do nothing more than disrupt learning or potentially harm us or our staff” and for the Department of Education to issue specific guidance on the authority school leaders possess to oust concerned parents.

following three requests:

- “Build safe zones around schools – similar to drug free zones. Make it a federal crime to threaten any educator/school staff on school property.”²⁹
- “Set up a 911 Network to report physical and social threats. Establish an ombudsman at the federal level with a direct line to the FBI/Justice Department. Do not leave it solely up to local authorities to determine the severity of the threats.”³⁰
- “Provide legal protections for all educators by creating a legal defense fund so school leaders who have been maligned in their community can get legal assistance to protect/repair their reputations. . . . [W]e are asking for a fund to be set up so school leaders who have had their reputations smeared in public/social media/local media because of mask/no mask vax/no vax mandates do not have to dig into their personal savings to hire attorneys for defamation of character/slander legal action necessary to clear their names.”³¹

Dr. Samuel forwarded the chain to other employees at the Department of Education, but the Department redacted the majority of the content of these communications. Additionally, Dr. Samuel added Ms. Wall to an email thread among Department of Education officials discussing the NASSP’s requests, but Ms. Wall’s message back to the group was also redacted.³²

B. The NSBA sent the Department of Education its letter before it was public.

On September 29, 2021, Chip Slaven, the Interim Director and CEO of the NSBA, emailed the NSBA’s letter to President Biden regarding threats against school officials to Julie Rodriguez at the White House and copied Dr. Samuel at the Department of Education.³³ Dr. Samuel forwarded the NSBA’s letter to several other Department of Education officials.³⁴ In the email, Mr. Slaven thanked the Department of Education for “the recent opportunity to discuss these issues with the White House and Administration officials.”³⁵ Mr. Slaven further explained that the NSBA’s letter to President Biden requests that “federal law enforcement and relevant agencies work with state and local authorities and public schools to address these ongoing threats.”³⁶ Mr. Slaven did well to ensure that the Department of Education received the NSBA’s letter one day before its public release.³⁷ On October 1, 2021, there are emails involving several

Department of Education officials—Sheila Nix, Chief of Staff; Suzanne Goldberg, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Strategic Operations and Outreach, Office of the Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights at the Department of Education; Dr. Aaliyah Samuel; Scott Sargrad, Deputy Chief of Staff for Policy and Programs; and Emma Leheny, formerly Principal Deputy General Counsel and Acting General Counsel—asking if anyone had “any more thoughts” on the NSBA letter, but the Department redacted the content of those conversations as well.³⁸

C. The Justice Department and the NSBA coordinated prior to the release of Attorney General Garland’s October 4, 2021 memorandum.

On October 4, 2021, Alivia Roberts, from the Justice Department’s Public Affairs Office, sent an email to NSBA Interim Executive Director and CEO Chip Slaven attaching the Attorney General’s memorandum before it was publicly released, writing:

It was a pleasure to speak with you today regarding efforts the Department of Justice is taking to address threats against school administrators, board members, teachers, and staff. . . . [W]e thank you for raising this concern with us, and we hope to continue this dialogue as this is a very important issue the department is committed to addressing.³⁹

Mr. Slaven responded by writing, “[NSBA] stand[s] ready to work with you on efforts going forward. Please let us [know] how we can support your efforts.”⁴⁰

⁴⁰ DOJ-HJC-0000446.

On October 6, 2021, Mr. Slaven reached out to Anthony Coley, also from the Justice Department’s Public Affairs Office, notifying him that calls and emails to NSBA were increasing and saying they had reported several to the Alexandria Police Department.⁴¹ He also asked for a contact at the FBI with whom the NSBA could communicate. Mr. Coley responded that threats of violence should be reported to the local FBI office or the FBI’s National Threat Operations Center tip line.⁴²

D. There was collaboration between the Justice Department and the Department of Education.

Three days prior to Attorney General Garland issuing his October 4, 2021 memorandum, Shaylyn Cochran, Chief of Staff in the Office of the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division, connected Myesha Brayden, a Justice Department employee, to Suzanne Goldberg, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Strategic Operations and Outreach, at the Department of Education, because both were “looking into” the issue of alleged threats directed at school board officials.⁴³ Ms. Cochran suggested that the two “may benefit from connecting to determine any joint equities between DOJ and ED-OCR.”⁴⁴

A week later, Ms. Goldberg’s assistant scheduled time for her to speak with another Associate Deputy Attorney General, Kevin Chambers, who was also involved in the issue.⁴⁵ Whether or not they eventually spoke—and what about—is not clear. On October 5, 2021, Emma Leheny at the Department of Education shared the October 4 Justice Department press release on addressing threats against school officials with Ms. Goldberg, who indicated she “never heard back from the point-person there.”⁴⁶

Officials at the Department of Education responded with approval to the NSBA’s successful attempt to involve federal law enforcement at local school board meetings.⁴⁷ After the release of the Attorney General’s October 4, 2021 memorandum, officials at the Department of Education praised the move, calling it “noteworthy.”⁴⁸ In fact, Ms. Goldberg wrote to Associate Deputy Attorney General Kevin Chambers that she was “very glad to see the memo.”⁴⁹

Kevin, Thanks for your voicemail on Monday. I am not sure why but it only just popped up on my phone this morning.

I was very glad to see the memo, and it would be great to talk in the coming day or two. My schedule is quite cramped as I imagine yours is as well so I am copying Addie Zinsner here to help us find time.

Looking forward to talking soon.

II. If the Justice Department performed due diligence before promulgating the Attorney General’s memorandum, the Department would have learned it lacked a legitimate predicate.

The documents produced indicate that Attorney General Garland’s October 4, 2021 memorandum—inserting federal law enforcement into local school board meetings—was a misuse of federal authority. Internal Justice Department communications show that had Attorney General Garland performed a modicum of due diligence prior to issuing his memorandum, he would have learned that there was no “disturbing spike” in alleged threats and violence at school board meetings, as he alleged in his memorandum.⁵⁰ The documents show that beyond the NSBA’s letter—which it has since retracted—the evidence does not support any legitimate, nationwide predicate for deploying federal law-enforcement resources against America’s parents.

A. In the days following the issuance of the October 4, 2021 memorandum, Justice Department officials expressed confusion as to how to implement the Attorney General’s directive.

On October 7, 2021, the Deputy Director of the Justice Department’s Office of Public Affairs⁵¹ sent an email to “USAEO-Public Affairs Officers”⁵² list recipients clarifying the Attorney General’s October 4 memorandum and addressing “a rash of misinformation about this memo suggesting it somehow limits parental free speech or label[s] parents as ‘domestic terrorists.’”⁵³ The email included a “set of facts/talking points for use by [U.S. Attorney Offices] in meeting with law enforcement partners, community stakeholders, and the press to keep the record straight as this process plays out.”⁵⁴ The email also included sections of the Attorney General’s memorandum in bold type to emphasize how it should be interpreted and portrayed to stakeholders.⁵⁵

⁵⁰ Memorandum from Hon. Merrick Garland, Atty Gen., U.S. Dep’t of Justice, Partnership Among Federal, State, Local, Tribal, And Territorial Law Enforcement to Address Threats Against School Administrators, Board Members, Teachers, and Staff (Oct. 4, 2021).

⁵¹ The Justice Department redacted this federal employee’s name from its production to the Committee.

⁵² “USAEO” likely refers to the Executive Office for the United States Attorneys.

⁵⁵ See id.

On October 21, 2021, a person, whose name is redacted, from the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Southern District of Indiana sent an email to a redacted list of recipients, including the Justice Department’s Public Affairs Office, asking if they had any guidance other than the October 7, 2021 talking points, as they were getting questions about what actions their office was taking concerning threats or disruptions to local school boards.⁵⁶ After some back and forth, the Southern District of Indiana employee explained that their response was “[t]he U.S. Attorney’s Office will comply with the Attorney General’s request as set forth in his memo of October 4, 2021,” to which the Public Affairs Office replied, “That seems fine.”⁵⁷

In addition, employees from different U.S. Attorney’s Offices reached out to each other to learn of other Districts’ plans in response to the Attorney General’s memo. An email from the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of Oregon to the USAEO-LEC listserv group asked what plans the Districts have made in response to the Attorney General’s memorandum.⁵⁸ An employee in the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of Alaska responded by stating their office was “proposing a joint virtual training with state [law enforcement] agency heads” and “hoping to include [the] state Director of Law in the training.”⁵⁹ The employee stated the USAO and FBI were “awaiting additional guidance and more information regarding the ‘series of measures designed to address the rise in criminal conduct directed towards school personnel’ as referenced in the AG’s memo.”⁶⁰

B. Reported instances of school board officials being threatened were almost nonexistent.

On October 20, 2021, Monty Wilkinson, Director of the Executive Office for United States Attorneys, sent a memorandum to all U.S. Attorneys’ Offices with guidance for implementing the Attorney General’s October 4, 2021 memorandum.⁶¹ Director Wilkinson’s memorandum directed U.S. Attorneys’ Offices to convene a meeting by November 3, 2021, with appropriate district law enforcement leaders and to notify the Executive Office that they had held the meeting, identify which agencies participated, and note any significant issues for the Deputy Attorney General’s attention.⁶² The memorandum specified that the “purpose of these meetings is to address violations of criminal law regarding harassment, intimidation, threats of violence, and actual violence against school officials, teachers, and employees”⁶³

The overwhelming majority of judicial districts reported not having heard of any instances of threats or violence being levied at school board officials.⁶⁴ One U.S. Attorney

Nevertheless, they did not see any imminent threats to school boards or their members in the local [area of responsibility], nor did they ascertain any worrisome trends in that regard.”⁶⁶

Other reported threats were too vague to be independently substantiated or so innocuous as to not be of any real concern.⁶⁷ For instance, Acting U.S. Attorney for the District of South Dakota Dennis Holmes reported that “[o]fficials could remember only [one] incident” to report.⁶⁸ In that case, “an irate parent, who was upset about mask mandate[s], had to be removed from a school board meeting by the school resource officer,” but, Mr. Holmes clarified, “[n]o threats were made to board members or school staff.”⁶⁹ In another case, Acting U.S. Attorney for the Middle District of Tennessee Mary Jane Stewart reported only that “one school district has experienced heated board meetings with the public, which resulted in threats of violence and received national exposure in the news.”⁷⁰ Ms. Stewart provided no other details of the incident.

In these meetings, local law enforcement expressed concerns about other, more pressing issues. For example, the few law enforcement agencies that actually attended the meeting held by the Middle District of Alabama reported no issues with threats against school officials and instead “voiced more concern over the safety of students from other threats, such as gang and gun violence.”⁷¹

In general, participating agencies voiced more concern over the safety of students from other threats, such as gang and gun violence. ATF reported on their program to identify and remove guns from schools. The Auburn Police Chief was very interested in this program and wanted to follow up with the ATF representative on their efforts in his schools.

Similarly, U.S. Attorney Sean Costello of the Southern District of Alabama reported that one of the school board member’s houses was shot at, but the incident was unrelated to the school board member’s service on the school board and instead an “unfortunate consequence of gun violence in the city.”⁷²

On October 26, I traveled to the Northern Division of our district and met with the district attorney, the Dallas County Sheriff, and the Selma police chief to have the same discussion with them. They did not identify any significant issues, though they did note that the home of a city school board member was shot into recently. This incident does not appear to be related to service on the school board, and is believed to be merely an unfortunate consequence of the gun violence in the city.

C. The U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Georgia deployed domestic terrorism resources against parents after finding only one alleged threat of violence within the district.

The U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Northern District of Georgia was an exception among U.S. Attorney’s Offices, doubling down on the Attorney General’s directive to use domestic terrorism resources against parents.⁷³ When that office reported back to Main Justice, the correspondence noted how Ryan Buchanan, in his former role as Assistant U.S. Attorney and Anti-terrorism Advisory Council Coordinator, had proactively contacted FBI officials in the Atlanta Field Office “to discuss the new guidance and FBI’s plans for contacting and engaging with other federal, as well as, local law enforcement partners” about the Attorney General’s directive.⁷⁴ Specifically, Mr. Buchanan reported that “the FBI’s [domestic terrorism] Squad would take the lead in acting as point-of-contact for referrals concerning school violence threats and consult with AUSA Buchanan concerning any reports.”⁷⁵ Just days afterward, President Biden nominated Buchanan to be the U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Georgia.⁷⁶

Notably, in the same report to Main Justice in which the Northern District of Georgia reported that it was activating the FBI's Domestic Terrorism Squad to be the "lead" against school board-related threats, the office cited only one "threat of violence" in the district that was "circulated on social media."⁷⁷ Although the specific nature of this threat is not discussed in the document production, publicly available information suggests that the office was likely referencing a social media post, later determined to be a hoax,⁷⁸ from a student threatening to perpetrate a school shooting in revenge for being bullied.⁷⁹ This incident appears to be unrelated to the Justice Department's ostensible goal of protecting school officials from parent-related threats.

III. Local officials generally opposed federal intervention at local school board meetings.

In reports back to Main Justice, many of the U.S. Attorneys' Offices noted that their local law-enforcement partners opposed federal intervention at local school board meetings. Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of Montana Joe Thaggard wrote that "[redacted] as well as the Cascade County Attorney, Cascade County Sheriff, and the Great Falls Chief of Police have all . . . written to [Acting U.S. Attorney Leif] Johnson advising that the local law enforcement authorities are best suited to address criminal threats against school administrators and other school officials.”⁸⁰ Additionally, Mr. Thaggard noted, “Mr. Johnson has received telephone calls from a concerned citizen, a county attorney, and the press. Most, but not all, of those people have indicated a desire for the local authorities to handle any investigations and prosecutions.”⁸¹

The U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of West Virginia, William Ihlenfeld, II, reported that “[Redacted], Superintendent of the West Virginia State Police, explained his belief that most situations involving threats or harassment of school officials can be handled by state and local officials.”⁸² He continued:

[Redacted], Chief of the Martinsburg (W.Va.) Police Department, said that there have been a handful of situations in Berkeley County in which attendees at board of education meetings have been boisterous and disruptive. However, he said these incidents were able to be handled at the local level without the need for federal assistance.⁸³

Perhaps the most striking response to the Attorney General’s directive and the Justice Department’s guidance was described by Steven D. Weinhoft, the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois.⁸⁴ Mr. Weinhoft explained that “this issue was very poorly received” among the participants to the meetings in that District and was “described by some as a manufactured issue.”⁸⁵ Mr. Weinhoft offered the following summary of his experiences at the meetings:

No one I spoke with in law enforcement seemed to think that there is a serious national threat directed at school boards, which gave the impression that our priorities are misapplied. Some expressed concerns that the federal government was meddling in an area where it does not belong. I heard concerns over the federal government inserting itself into issues of local politics and local choices on education. But more frequently, I heard unease over the [F]irst [A]mendment implications.⁸⁶

Due to the strong negative reactions from local law enforcement, Mr. Weinhoft “advise[d] against further national action on this matter.”⁸⁷

In addition to receiving pushback from local officials regarding federal intervention at school board meetings, U.S. Attorneys’ Offices noted a lack of enthusiasm and participation in their meetings mandated by Main Justice. For example:

- U.S. Attorney Clifford D. Johnson explained that the Northern District of Illinois office invited 630 entities, but only 18 attended the meeting.⁹¹

CONCLUSION

Internal Executive Branch documents indicate that the Biden Administration’s use of federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources is an example of government weaponization against American parents. If the Justice Department performed any due diligence prior to the issuance of the Attorney General’s memorandum, it would have understood clearly and forcefully that federal intervention was unwarranted. Because that due diligence did not occur—and the Administration acted out of political motivations rather than for law-enforcement reasons—parents around the country had FBI “assessments” opened into them.⁹⁴

Ensuring the effective and even-handed use of federal law-enforcement authority should be a noncontroversial priority. Americans deserve to have confidence that the enormous power and reach of federal law enforcement will be used fairly and free of any indication of politicization. Committee Republicans have repeatedly called on Attorney General Garland to rescind his memorandum. He has declined to do so to date. The use of these resources chills protected First Amendment activity as parents rightfully fear that their passionate advocacy for their children could result in a visit from federal law enforcement.

The Committee’s and the Select Subcommittee’s work is not complete. This oversight will continue as the Justice Department and the Education Department continue to produce responsive documents. In addition, the FBI has produced only fourteen pages of documents to date in response to the Committee’s subpoena—a flagrant disregard of the serious concerns about the Bureau’s misuse of its authorities against parents.⁹⁵ There remain open questions about the development and issuance of Attorney General Garland’s memorandum—issued only five days after receipt of the NSBA’s letter to President Biden—and the coordination between the Justice Department and White House on that point. There remain open questions about how the FBI quickly operationalized the Attorney General’s directive, and whether the Bureau objected to the civil liberty concerns inherent in the Attorney General’s memorandum. The Committee has outstanding subpoenas for testimony from Chip Slaven and Viola Garcia, senior NSBA officials who signed the letter to President Biden. Until all responsive documents are produced and interviews with the necessary parties take place, the Committee and the Select Subcommittee will continue its oversight to uncover facts that will inform potential legislative reforms.

ATTENTION:

All Justice Department and FBI Employees

You have a right to speak with Congress

Every federal employee of the Department of Justice and FBI has an unfettered right to communicate with Congress, without the approval, consent, or awareness of the Department or the FBI. Federal law protects these disclosures.

Whistleblowers are an invaluable source for Congress in identifying, understanding, and remedying waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement. The Committee on the Judiciary is charged with conducting constitutional oversight of the Department of Justice and FBI.

Any Justice Department or FBI personnel with information are encouraged to contact the Republican staff of the Judiciary Committee at (202) 225-6906.

Executive Summary

The Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government are charged by the House of Representatives with conducting oversight of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). Whistleblower testimony from rank-and-file FBI employees is an essential part of this oversight. From accounts provided by these brave and dedicated law-enforcement officers, Congress can better understand, and ultimately address, the serious problems infesting the senior leadership ranks of the FBI. It is clear from these disclosures, and especially in wake of Special Counsel John Durham's report, that the FBI has become politically weaponized.

To date, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have received whistleblower testimony from several current and former FBI employees who chose to risk their careers to expose abuses and misconduct in the FBI. Some of these employees—Special Agents Garret O'Boyle and Stephen Friend, Supervisory Intelligence Analyst George Hill, and Staff Operations Specialist Marcus Allen—have chosen to speak on the record about their experiences.¹ The disclosures from these FBI employees highlight egregious abuse, misallocation of law-enforcement resources, and misconduct with the leadership ranks of the FBI. Among other disclosures:

- The FBI's Washington Field Office (WFO) pressured a field office in Boston, Massachusetts, to open investigations on 138 individuals who traveled to Washington, D.C., to exercise their First Amendment rights on January 6, 2021, with no specific indication that these people were involved in any way in criminal activity. The only basis for investigating these people was that they shared buses to Washington with two individuals who entered restricted areas of the Capitol that day. Rather than limiting the investigation to just the two people who entered restricted areas, the WFO instructed the Boston Field Office to open investigations on all 140 individuals who attended the political rally.
- In response to the WFO's pressure to open investigations into all 140 individuals, the Boston Field Office asked the WFO for more evidence, including video from the Capitol, to properly predicate the investigations. The WFO provided pictures of the two individuals inside the Capitol; however, the WFO refused to provide video evidence from the Capitol out of fear it would disclose undercover officers or confidential human sources inside the Capitol.
- Shortly after the events of January 6, 2021, Bank of America (BoA) provided the FBI with confidential customer data—voluntarily and without any legal process. BoA gave WFO a list of individuals who had made transactions in the Washington, D.C. area using a BoA product between January 5 and January 7, 2021. Individuals who had previously purchased a firearm with a BoA product were reportedly elevated to the top of the list.

¹ Because of the false and defamatory attacks that Democrats on the Committee and Select Subcommittee perpetrated against Friend, O'Boyle, and Hill, Allen initially only consented to speaking with the Committee's majority.

- FBI leadership pressured agents to reclassify cases as domestic violent extremism (DVE), and even manufactured DVE cases where they may not otherwise exist, while manipulating its case categorization system to create the perception that DVE is organically rising around the country.
- The FBI dispenses cash bonuses to local field office leadership for meeting certain arbitrary metrics and performance goals. This bonus structure creates perverse incentives for the FBI to utilize law-enforcement tools and resources where they may not be needed or appropriate in order for FBI leadership to benefit financially.

These FBI employees have come forward to blow the whistle at great personal and professional risk. Each of these whistleblowers described retaliatory conduct that they have faced after making protected disclosures about what they believed in good faith to be wrong conduct. A recurring theme is that the FBI has violated federal whistleblower protection laws and abused its security clearance review process to hamstring the brave agents who exercise their right to make protected disclosures to Congress or who dared to question agency leadership. For example:

- Special Agent O’Boyle made protected disclosures to his Supervisory Special Agent about potentially illegal activity, and the FBI transferred him to a new unit that required him to move his family across-country. When O’Boyle arrived for his first day, the FBI placed him on unpaid, indefinite suspension, effectively rendering his “family homeless” and leaving them without any personal effects—including his young children’s clothing—because these items were in FBI storage.
- Likewise, in Special Agent Friend’s case, the FBI suspended his security clearance after making protected disclosures. This suspension rendered Friend unable to fulfill his duties as a special agent—thus, the FBI suspended him indefinitely. While on suspension, the FBI refused to allow Friend to obtain outside employment, leaving his family without income.
- In Staff Operations Specialist Allen’s case, the FBI suspended his security clearance for simply performing duties of his job—conducting case-related research using open-source news articles and videos and sending his search results to his task force colleagues.

The FBI leadership’s trend toward political partisanship in recent years has disturbed the ranks of front-line FBI agents like O’Boyle, Friend, and Hill. In the words of one whistleblower, the current state of the FBI is “cancerous” as the Bureau has “let itself become enveloped in this politicization and weaponization.” This testimony supplements earlier disclosures from whistleblowers, highlighted in the Committee’s November 2022 report, in which whistleblowers described the FBI’s Washington leadership as “rotted at its core” and having a “systemic culture of unaccountability.”²

² H. COMM. ON THE JUDICIARY, FBI WHISTLEBLOWERS: WHAT THEIR DISCLOSURES INDICATE ABOUT THE POLITICIZATION OF THE FBI AND JUSTICE DEPARTMENT (Nov. 4, 2022).

The whistleblowers who have come to the Committee and Select Subcommittee expressed sincere concern about the state of the FBI, but they remained optimistic that the Bureau could improve with “tough love.” That concern and hope for the FBI’s future is fundamentally what motivates these brave whistleblowers: the belief that speaking truth to power, through the right channels, can help to restore the Bureau to what it once was. This report builds on the disclosures of these whistleblowers to assist the Committee and Select Subcommittee in understanding the problems so that Congress may consider potential legislative reforms to America’s preeminent law enforcement agency.

I. FBI Whistleblower Disclosures Show Serious Abuses and Misallocation of Law-Enforcement Resources.

American citizens rightfully expect law enforcement agencies at every level to judiciously exercise its powerful authorities and to properly allocate resources—employees, funds, time, and other finite resources—to tackle the most-pressing issues facing the public. This is especially true regarding the law-enforcement apparatus of the United States Department of Justice.³ However, whistleblower testimony revealed to the Committee and Select Subcommittee that the FBI has abused its authority and egregiously misallocated the resources entrusted to it by American taxpayers.

Particularly, several whistleblowers have described a perverse incentive structure that promises FBI officials financial reward if they can justify opening more cases and meet other investigative metrics as set by officials in Washington. Such an incentive structure is dangerous because the FBI is a powerful law-enforcement agency engaged in the “often competitive enterprise of ferreting out crime.”⁴ It is axiomatic that the FBI should pursue its mission without fear, favor, or expectation of financial profit. The public record is replete, however, with instances of the FBI failing to meet this standard.⁵ Meanwhile, whistleblower testimony has also uncovered that the agency is engaging in the practice of ordering its agents to classify, and in a number of cases, reclassify, particular investigations as involving “domestic violent extremism” in efforts to merely support political talking points that the number of such cases is “on the rise.” These whistleblower allegations are disturbing, and this section details specific whistleblower testimony about these serious matters.

A. The FBI’s Cash Bonus System Creates Perverse Incentives to Use Law Enforcement Tools for Leadership’s Financial Benefit and Not Legitimate Law Enforcement Needs.

Whistleblowers have described a “disconcerting aspect of the FBI”—that is, Special Agents-in-Charge (SACs) around the country are eligible to “get a monetary bonus at the end of the year if they meet metrics.”⁶ Indeed, according to testimony, SACs often keep computer spreadsheets that list performance metrics that the FBI then relies upon to dispense bonuses to these SACs.⁷ These metrics appear to be arbitrarily assigned, and in some cases self-determined by the SAC. This reward structure creates perverse incentives in which law-enforcement tools and resources are expended for the financial enrichment of FBI leadership instead of a legitimate law-enforcement basis.

R. 317, 317 (1994) (Federal law enforcement’s “priorities are designed to focus federal law enforcement efforts on those matters within federal jurisdiction that are most deserving of federal attention and are most likely to be handled effectively at the federal level.” (emphasis added)).

⁷ Id.

Special Agent Garret O'Boyle explained to the Committee and Select Subcommittee that he had concerns about the potential for abuse in this incentive structure, particularly as they apply to surveillance techniques. He testified:

Q. And are you aware of these self-created performance metrics?

A. So to some degree, I am. . . . And I think a large driving factor in the FBI is to meet those metrics. And I think that raises grave constitutional concerns to be saying to law enforcement officers, you have to go and do X, Y, and Z so the boss gets his bonus. Nobody comes out and says it that way, but when you get the spreadsheet where—or the SAC Excel spreadsheet is red in these categories, we've got to fix it, we've got to do this and that to get it back up to green and then to gold so he gets his bonus. Nobody is saying it that way, but that certainly is what is implied.

Q. And what are the metrics?

A. There's a wide range of them. . . . [O]ne that I do have personal experience with is . . . Title III wiretaps, or FISAs, or other sophisticated—sophisticated techniques. That's what they're called. . . . [A]t the beginning of the year the SAC's metric might be, get three Title IIIs. And it's like, how do you know you're going to get three? And what if you don't get three? Well, then you're not marked gold in that category. So I think that that leads to a pervasive culture of not letting the case dictate where the investigation goes, but it's the manager or the agent pushing for a certain avenue of where a case goes.⁸

Indeed, O'Boyle recalled a specific instance in his career in which he and a co-case agent were not-so-subtly impressed into the profit-seeking service of their then-SAC. He testified:

And me and my co-case agent, a [Task Force Officer] who had been there for years, we had a meeting with my boss. It was Sonia Garcia at the time. And we were talking about this Title III affidavit that I'm writing—or that me and [Task Force Officer] are writing. And we wrap up the meeting, and she says, you guys, I really need this Title III. And it struck me as odd. So we walked out of the office. And I was like, [Task Force Officer], can we go to the conference room? And so we went in there and talked. And I was like, what did she mean, like, I really need this Title III? And he started laughing. And he's like, you'll see. . . . And he told me, like, there are metrics that need to be met, and then your boss or their boss can write to that, oh, while I was the supervisory resident or supervisory special agent, I had a Title III on this case. And they can write to that on what's called an FD-954, which is . . . your internal resume that you have to submit when you want to get promoted. And it's like, oh, she really needed that because it helps her get promoted. And then it also helps the SAC because then he's got a Title III for his Excel spreadsheet. So he's one Title III closer to being gold in that way and then getting his bonus. And I would say, like, by and large—I mean, a Title III, you listen to people's phone calls. . . . [T]hat's an extreme measure to take. And now with the FBI saying, get this arbitrary number of Title IIIs because then the big boss gets his bonus? Like, that's not how law enforcement should be working.⁹

O'Boyle testified that although that is “not how law enforcement should be working,” it was commonly understood in the FBI that special agents did well to meet these metrics so that their bosses could receive a financial bonus.¹⁰ The bonus structure was not only “common knowledge,” but a source of humor and speculation within the Bureau.¹¹ George Hill, a former FBI Supervisory Intelligence Analyst, testified to the Committee and Select Subcommittee that SACs would joke about the bonus while FBI personnel would speculate about how much money the SAC would receive as a bonus.¹² But as O'Boyle made clear, there is nothing funny about an incentive structure that “leads to a pervasive culture of not letting the case dictate where the investigation goes,” but allowing arbitrary metrics to guide the allocation of law-enforcement assets and resources.¹³

The pressure felt by field agents to hit metrics for their SACs even affected real-world law enforcement operations in the field. Special Agent Stephen Friend testified that he once was asked to “space out” arrests on different days so that the arrests would count as nine separate data points. He explained:

- Q. And as a special agent, when you were asked to either make an arrest or push an arrest off for a couple months, would you describe it as an environment of pressure to hit the metrics?
- A. Yes. I was told on one instance where there were nine subjects on a case that if I arrested them all in the same day it would count as one disruption statistic. But if I arrested one each day for nine straight days, it would count as nine statistics, so I should space out those arrests.

Q. So would you say that the pressure to hit the metrics, did it cause you to make changes to how you were doing your law enforcement duties?

A. Yes.¹⁴

It is concerning—to the say the least—that these perverse financial incentives affect the way in which FBI agents undertake their law enforcement duties. However, testimony from another whistleblower, Staff Operations Specialist Marcus Allen, also highlighted the disturbing practical effects of these incentives, which leads to unethical and inaccurate FBI documentation. Specifically, Allen explained how the FBI management will demand that employees manipulate time-keeping records to create the perception that a particular office is working more than it is on a particular matter. As he explained:

A. So I've observed in the workplace, like, on more than one year where it's like, someone from management will come down and they'll say, "Everybody, TURK¹⁵ this." And so all the investigators will be like, no matter what case it is, it's like, "Well, I guess we're TURKING this now," and they'll just literally all TURK that number, like, regardless of what they may have really worked on. It seems to me they're trying to meet whatever the number that's desired is, you know, and if they're short of that, then it's like, "Everybody, from this point forward, TURK this"¹⁶

O'Boyle's testimony further supported Allen's assertion about manipulating time-keeping records to hit certain metrics, particularly in the context of domestic terrorism cases. In his transcribed interview, O'Boyle explained:

Q. Given your experience with domestic terrorism cases, I want to ask you about some information that the committee has learned regarding domestic terrorism cases and domestic violent extremism. So we have learned that the Biden administration's narrative about the FBI's work on domestic violent extremism — abbreviated as DVE — cases may be misleading. We have received accusations that FBI agents are bolstering the number of cases of DVEs to satisfy their superiors. For example, one whistleblower claimed that, because agents are not finding enough DVE cases, they are encouraged and incentivized to reclassify cases as DVE cases, even though there's minimal circumstantial evidence to support the reclassification. Do you have any information regarding the reclassification of cases as DVEs?

- A. I would have to think about that further because I don't remember exactly where I heard this from. But in the FBI, we classify our cases—we call it a TURK code. TURK is, like, time, utilization, and record keeping. So there's, like, an alphanumeric code for every type of case, every type of investigation you work . . . I can't recall exactly, but I learned at some point that FBI agents were being directed to reclassify 170—I think it was 176 cases, so that would be domestic cooperation with police—to reclassify any of those into some type of domestic terrorism case. But, again, I don't remember if I heard that secondhand or if that was something I learned at work. I guess along that same line, as a DT agent, I encountered similar stat padding or case bolstering, in that I had a case—and I'll try not to get into too many details because I think it might still be open, but I don't know. It's a case I was trying to wrap up before my transfer. And truth be told, it was one case. But the FBI had me open up four different cases because they had me open a case for every individual that I had an articulable, factual basis that there may have been potential federal law being violated. And when I first got these cases, I'm like because I initially—they were transferred to me from another agent. And I think it was, like, two at the time. And I asked my boss, I was like, why do I have—these are the same. Like, everything I wrote, . . . everything I did, I started putting into all four cases because they were really just one case. Where, like, on a criminal case, say you were working, like, a gang, which this case was, I guess, like, a militia, if you're working, like, a gang, you have a case open on the gang, and you have a subfile for each person in it. Like, John Doe one, two, and three, they would all have their own subfile. Where in my case, John Doe one, two, three, and four all had their own separate case because then the FBI can—from my perspective—the FBI can come back to Congress and say, look at all the domestic terrorism we've investigated. Where, really, I was working one case. But the FBI can then say, well, he actually had four, and so we need you to give us more money because look at how big of a threat all this domestic terrorism is. So that's just my personal experience with that.

- Q. So it was the usual practice that if there were multiple individuals involved with one case, you may open a subfile for each individual? Is that correct?
- A. If you're working traditional criminal matters, yes. But I believe it's policy on the CTD side to open up all these separate cases, when in reality then that's just—they're just obscuring the truth and the facts. Like, all my guys that I was working on were related. They should have just been in one case. But they weren't because—
- Q. Who gave you the directions, Mr. O'Boyle, to open four cases in that matter rather than categorize all that conduct in one case?
- A. So, sir, I don't know if anybody even gave me a specific direction. It was more like, this is the policy¹⁷

American citizens deserve to know that their tax dollars are being spent on necessary investigations pervasive to their local communities. As this whistleblower testimony demonstrates, the FBI is rife with unnecessary and potentially unethical enticements that direct agents to not only lie about the types of cases on which they work but reward such FBI leadership for such deception.

B. The FBI Is Reclassifying and Manufacturing Domestic Violent Extremism Cases to Advance a Political Narrative that These Cases Are on the Rise.

Whistleblowers assert that the FBI pressured agents to reclassify cases as domestic violent extremism (DVE), and even manufactured DVE cases where they may not otherwise exist, while manipulating its case categorization system to feign a national problem. At a time when the Biden Administration maintains that DVE is the “greatest threat” facing the United States,¹⁸ the FBI appears to be complicit in artificially supporting the Administration's political narrative.

The FBI defines a DVE as “an individual based and operating primarily within the United States or its territories without direction or inspiration from a foreign terrorist group or other foreign power who seeks to further political or social goals wholly or in part through unlawful acts of force or violence.”¹⁹ According to the Biden Administration, investigations into DVEs have increased “significantly” in recent years.²⁰ In August 2022, FBI Director Wray testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee that “[t]he number of FBI investigations of suspected DVEs has more than doubled since the spring of 2020.”²¹

According to Hill, however, the pressure on FBI agents to meet metrics also contributed to the manipulation of DVE data. Hill explained how then-Washington Field Office ASAC Timothy Thibault and the FBI’s former Assistant Director of the Counterterrorism Division Jill Sanborn pressured agents to move cases into the DVE category to hit self-created performance metrics.²² Indeed, according to Hill, Director Wray and Assistant Director Sanborn set a “tone” to encourage agents “to identify opportunities where cases could be tagged as domestic terrorism threats.”²³ In a transcribed interview with the Committee, however, Sanborn denied this environment of pressure, testifying:

Q. And during your time at the FBI, are you aware of any instances where an agent has been told to reclassify a case?

A. Not that I can recall, no.

Q. Any instance where an FBI agent was pressured to reclassify a case?

A. Not that I can recall.

Q. During your time at the FBI, do you know if there is an—was an initiative to prioritize DVE cases?

A. . . . But there is a process for prioritizing threats, and I think it’s a yearly if not biyearly process, very mindful process, that takes into account a lot of different things. And it’s very intelligence based. It’s something that I believe is done well on the heels of the lessons we learned from 9/11 to not base prioritization just on volume of cases. So when I came in that’s how priorities got set in field offices, was the squad that had the most cases. And so I think this process that’s rooted in intelligence then gives you how the cases should be ranked—I mean, how the cases—how the threats should be ranked. And going through that process definitely during my time as [Assistant Director], and I believe I saw some of this as [Executive Assistant Director], made the DVE threat fall more elevated on that continuum than it maybe would've been 5 years ago.²⁴

Still, Hill recalled that ASAC Thibault's "level of excitement" at the prospect of targeting a "growing segment of our population" as domestic terrorists was, in his words, near "hysterical."²⁵

According to whistleblower information, the FBI has manipulated the manner in which it categorized January 6-related investigations to create a misleading narrative that domestic terrorism is organically surging around the country. Ordinarily, the FBI characterizes and labels cases according to the originating field office, with leads "cut" to other field offices for specific assistance in that geographic location.²⁶ With January 6 cases, however, the FBI has not followed its ordinary procedure, which would have resulted in the WFO leading the investigation and categorizing the investigations as WFO cases.²⁷ In particular, Friend disclosed that:

Q. So, per policy in the DIOG, or the Domestic Investigations and Operations Guide, is it correct that FBI agents ordinarily label full investigations case files according to the originating field office?

A. Yes.²⁸

Q. So, if the field office is cut a lead or sent a lead, is that field office then referred to as the lead office under the DIOG?

A. Yes.

Q. So, for example, if a Federal crime occurs in Texas, would the originating field office be in Texas?

A. Yes.²⁹

²⁹ Id.

Q. And for full investigations opened into the events that occurred at the Capitol on January 6, 2021, would the originating field office for those investigations be the Washington Field Office?

A. Yes.

Q. And if investigative actions outside of D.C. are required, would or should the WFO case agent then cut a lead to the appropriate FBI field offices?

A. Yes.

Q. And, following January 6th, to your knowledge, did the FBI set up any kind of task force within headquarters or the WFO to work on January 6th investigations?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe that task force? Was it in headquarters or the WFO?

A. The WFO. And it was staffed by employees who worked in WFO as well as TDY, temporary duty agents, from around the Bureau.

Q. Do you know who was in charge of the task force?

A. I don't.

Q. Okay. And since the events occurred in Washington, D.C., it is natural that the WFO would handle the investigations?

A. Yes.

Q. During your tenure at the Daytona Beach Resident Agency, were you ever assigned January 6th cases?

A. Yes.

Q. And during your tenure at the FBI, did the FBI follow this regular procedure with regards to January 6th investigations for labeling cases?

A. No.

- Q. How did the handling of January 6th investigations deviate from the regular procedure?
- A. We received leads from headquarters, from the task force working out of Washington, D.C., with directives to carry out certain investigative actions, in assumption that we were going to be opening cases from our office as the originating office. Then we would perform tasks and send that information back to Washington, D.C., for their approval or for their request for more work to be done and then ultimately for their decision on how to pursue a case, whether or not to prosecute it.³⁰

Friend also explained that although the field offices are carrying out the directives from WFO, the agents in WFO are actually determining and approving the investigative tactics. He explained this manner of running investigations was a deviation from standard practice. He testified:

- Q. . . . So, instead of following the regular case file management procedure, the WFO is directing other field offices to open full investigations, and then the WFO is performing and approving the investigative work. Is that an accurate characterization?
- A. Yes.
- Q. So, if January 6th cases are handled in this manner, does it appear on paper that local field offices instead of the WFO are the originating field offices?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And that deviates from the standard practice?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And, to your knowledge, is this only happening with January 6th cases?
- A. Yes.
- Q. How were your assigned January 6th cases handled? Were they handled in this similar way, where the WFO would tell you what to do and open cases?

³⁰ Id. at 12-13.

A. Yes.

Q. Were you told or pressured by the WFO to open full investigations?

A. We were told to open full investigations and that they would populate them with paperwork or case file work that was pertinent to that particular case.

Q. So, if you completed investigative steps, would you have to report back to the WFO on what you had done?

A. Yes.

Q. And would they tell you if you needed to do more investigating?

A. Yes.

Q. And what if you didn't believe that there was enough of a predicate to continue to investigate? Did you still have to investigate?

A. I was told that we could push back as much as we wanted but they would continue to send us additional requests to perform more work.

Q. And "they" meaning agents at the WFO?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever provided any insight as to why January 6th cases were handled in this manner?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that insight that you received?

A. I was told that there was a coordination call very early on after January 6th, during which there was representatives from all around the country, and the question was posed as to why this protocol was being followed, and that they were told that it was to get buy in from the field.³¹

³¹ Id. at 15-16.

- Q. Do you know when this coordination call happened?
- A. I was told it was in the immediate aftermath, so I was under the belief that it was probably within a week or two.
- Q. Did you get an understanding of who was on this coordination call?
- A. Yes. I was told that it was people from all around the Bureau who were going to be charged with primarily investigating the cases.
- Q. Okay. So it included WFO people and agents from across the country in different field offices?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And do you know what the substance — what was discussed on that call?
- A. That's the only fact that I know that was discussed on that particular call. But in my inquiries, I was told that these coordination calls were going on quite frequently in the aftermath of January 6th.³²

Friend explained that the FBI's manner of handling January 6-related investigations in a way that deviated from standard practice created a false impression with respect to the threat of DVE nationwide. He testified:

- Q. And, to your knowledge, does managing or labeling case files in this way create a false and misleading narrative that domestic violent extremism is increasing around the country?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Does this, in turn, give the impression that the threat of DVE is present in jurisdictions around the Nation even though the cases all stem from the same related investigation?
- A. Yes.³³

³² Id. at 16-17.

³³ Id. at 17.

Worse yet, the FBI prioritized DVE cases over other criminal investigations such as those involving child exploitation. As Friend testified:

- Q. And you said that you became a member of the Joint Terrorism Task Force at the Daytona Beach Resident Agency in October of 2021. Is that correct?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Is it correct to say that you were reassigned from investigating child exploitation cases to work on domestic terrorism cases?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Were those cases specifically related to January 6th?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And how was that communicated to you?
- A. There was a phone call from the assistant special agent in charge to my supervisor at the time, and he said that the new fiscal year approaching, that they were going to be resourcing manpower differently and that I was going to be reassigned from my current assignment to the JTTF. My supervisor asked about the investigations that I was working, and the ASAC said that those are to be considered a local issue going forward.³⁴

From Friend's testimony it is clear that although the local field offices appear to be running the cases on paper, the WFO was directing the field office special agents to "open the case" in their geographic area.³⁵ Meanwhile, the WFO was performing and approving "all of the investigative work and paperwork for the casefile."³⁶ Friend described how "there are active criminal investigations of January 6th subjects in which I am listed as the 'Case Agent,' but have not done any investigative work" and his supervisor "has not approved any paperwork within" those investigative files.³⁷ This deviation from established practice has an obvious motive: it allows the FBI to support the Biden Administration's narrative that domestic terrorism is on the rise by claiming that "[t]he FBI is a field-based law enforcement organization, and the vast ³⁴ Id. at 8-9.

³⁶ Id.

majority of our investigations should continue to be worked by our field offices,” while, in reality, running the investigation from Washington.³⁸

By deviating from standard practice, the FBI has given itself a pretext to claim the DVE threat is rising nationwide.³⁹ Friend disclosed:

The manipulative casefile practice creates false and misleading crime statistics. Instead of hundreds of investigations stemming from a single, black swan incident at the Capitol, FBI and DOJ officials point to significant increases in domestic violent extremism and terrorism around the United States.⁴⁰

In other words, the FBI’s case categorization creates the illusion that FBI field offices around the country are investigating a groundswell of domestic terrorism cases, giving the impression that the threat of DVE is present in jurisdictions across the nation. The reality is simpler: the cases all stem from the same related investigation concerning the actions at the Capitol on January 6. This scheme permits the FBI leadership to misleadingly point to “significant” increases in DVE threats nationwide.⁴¹

According to O’Boyle, the FBI classified “every single January 6th case . . . as a domestic terrorism case.”⁴² And yet hundreds of those cases were resolved as “petty crimes,” such as “trespassing and disorderly conduct.”⁴³ O’Boyle testified:

[T]he FBI holds [the January 6th investigation] up as the biggest investigation that it’s ever had. So if you’re categorizing all of them as domestic terrorism cases, yeah, they would double. But I think it’s kind of a misnomer to say that because the vast majority of those, at least in my experience, we would get leads related to those, and we’d work the leads and then send back to [WFO], who was running—kind of running everything, like, hey, this lead, you know, it’s unfounded or it is founded.⁴⁴

O'Boyle further recalled one example in which he was pressured to pursue an unreliable and uncorroborated tip related to January 6 that normally would not have been pursued. He explained:

- Q. Do you know, did the WFO pressure other field offices to keep January 6th cases open or open cases?
- A. I would say they pressured us to open cases to some degree. One example that I have personally But I received a lead about someone based on an anonymous tip, and in law enforcement anonymous tips don't hold very much weight, especially without evidence that you can corroborate pretty easily. I wasn't able to corroborate anything they said, even after speaking with the person they alleged potential criminal behavior of. While I'm trying to figure all that out, I get another lead from the same agent who sent me that lead. And they essentially tried to get me to violate policy or law.⁴⁵

And after talking to her, my mind was blown that she was still trying to get me to do some legal process on the guy that I got the anonymous tip on. Because there was no rational explanation that anybody could come up with, especially with the additional information I had found, that would have permitted me to do legal process even if I wanted to. And so I ended up writing that all up and denying it. But that was a personal example for me where it was like, okay, this has gone way off the rails here.⁴⁶

Similarly, Friend testified:

- Q. . . . I want to go back to the treatment of these January 6 cases. You talked about information packets that the Washington Field Office would send out around the country. Could you give me a sense of the categories of evidence that would be included in those packets?
- A. It would have information with photographs of surveillance footage tied to social media, facial recognition, to ensure that it matched with the individual's, say, their Facebook profile. It would be GPS information for the person's phone. And that information was provided by the phone providers to the FBI. And they were able to geolocate geo fence if that

phone was in the area. It included tips that came in through the public at large. In the aftermath of January 6th, there was a large push to get that information, so many, many people made phone calls or provided electronic communications to turn in who they thought were subjects. It could be anything from—confidential human sources might be able to provide some information. So that would all be assembled into a packet and disseminated to the field to pursue investigative—logical investigative action.⁴⁷

Q. And just so I understand this, in these packets, you observed information regarding confidential human sources?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you explain what happened when you went and spoke to that individual who there was no facial recognition indicating they were in the Capitol?

A. Yes. It was an anonymous tip from Rhode Island. Facial recognition was negative. The phone was negative. At that point, I said, it's probably it's not worth resourcing because we can't pursue an investigation, even if the person confesses to being there, because we don't have a complainant on this case. And I was told that, yeah, we got those all the time, especially right after January 6, and you have to go talk to them; otherwise, Washington is going to keep kicking it back to us. So I went and talked to him and knocked on his door, identified myself, and asked him if he was at the Capitol, and he told me that he wasn't because that was the day of his son's funeral. So I gave him my business card and I left.⁴⁸

Likewise, with respect to manipulating the data on the January 6 investigation, Friend testified:

A. By opening a separate case for each individual as opposed to one case with however many subjects are involved, they've turned one case into a thousand cases. And by spreading them to the field they've given the impression that those domestic terror cases are around the country when, in fact, the subjects, if they committed any sort of violation or ⁴⁷ Friend Interview at 107-08.

⁴⁸ Id. at 108-09.

infraction, they committed a crime at the Capitol on one day as opposed to being a cell that's operating in El Paso or Cleveland.⁴⁹

Q. And, to your knowledge, does managing or labeling case files in this way create a false and misleading narrative that domestic violent extremism is increasing around the country?

A. Yes.

Q. Does this, in turn, give the impression that the threat of DVE is present in jurisdictions around the Nation even though the cases all stem from the same related investigation?

A. Yes.⁵⁰

Q. Do you agree that manipulating the case file system in this way allows the FBI to support Director Wray's December 2019 assertion that the FBI is a, quote, "field-based law enforcement organization," end quote?

A. Yes.⁵¹

By manipulating the classification of January 6 investigations, according to Hill, Director Wray and FBI leadership "encourage[d] the use of DVE tags" and "create[d] the perception that [DVE] cases are [on the rise] all over the country. . . ." ⁵² O'Boyle put a finer point on the FBI's manipulation of case files. When asked about the FBI's deviation from practice related to the January 6 investigation, he testified:

Q. And is this how cases are normally handled?

A. No. I've never seen that before.

Q. Why do you think the FBI is handling the cases in this manner given your experience?

A. I think it goes back to making that threat appear larger than ⁴⁹ Id. at 131.

⁵⁰ Id. at 17.

⁵¹ Id. at 18.

⁵² Hill Interview at 23, 36.

it actually is, and then WFO kind of . . . being at the head of everything to try to ensure, as best they can, how the direction of a particular case will go.

- Q. And so if the main event occurred in Washington, D.C., and then now there's cases opening across the country, would it then look like there are domestic terrorism cases popping up across the country if this is how the FBI is handling?
- A. Yes, that is how it would look.⁵³

The nature of this manipulation has not been lost on the rank and file of the FBI. As Friend testified:

- Q. [W]hy did it concern you that the FBI was padding the stats on the [January 6] cases with this practice you've testified to of keeping matters open without any real law enforcement utility?
- A. For two reasons. I was worried that we were violating our rules and individuals' rights, and that could contribute to us essentially losing righteous prosecution against an individual, as well as being violative of their civil liberties. And, secondly, I believe . . . that the FBI is supposed to exist for maintaining law and order, and if we are creating the illusion that domestic terrorism is on the rise around the country, it's going to make people nervous, and it's going to contribute to a very toxic environment where we might be shifting the Overton window to the extent that half the country might be cut out of a constructive dialogue.⁵⁴

This testimony from these FBI whistleblowers is concerning. The FBI is pressuring agents to classify cases as DVE matters and manipulating data to advance a political narrative that domestic extremism is on the rise—and that everyday Americans in neighborhoods around the country are part of that growing threat. The FBI has diverted resources from investigating violent criminal enterprises, major drug traffickers, and international sexual predators and human traffickers to prioritize “domestic extremists”—roughly translated, according to the President's own words, as the half of the country that does not support his political views and policies.⁵⁵ This misallocation of law-enforcement priorities should concern all Americans.

⁵³ O'Boyle Interview at 181.

⁵⁴ Friend Interview at 47-48.

⁵⁵ Remarks, The White House, Remarks by President Biden on the Continued Battle for the Soul of the Nation (Sept. 1, 2022).

C. The FBI's Washington Field Office Pressured the Boston Field Office to Investigate Americans Solely for Traveling to Washington, D.C. on January 6.

The Committee has obtained information suggesting the FBI's push to advance an artificial narrative that domestic terrorism is on the rise is infringing on Americans' constitutional liberties. From whistleblower disclosures to publicly available information, it appears that with the newfound emphasis on fighting domestic violent extremism, the FBI sees signs of domestic terrorism wherever it looks.

Retired Supervisory Intelligence Analyst Hill provided one insightful example. According to Hill, two individuals organized a bus trip from Massachusetts to Washington, D.C., to attend a political rally in support of President Trump on January 6, 2021.⁵⁶ The group included a total of 140 people on two buses.⁵⁷ The two organizers of the trip entered restricted areas in the United States Capitol that day and, as a result, the FBI's Boston Field Office (BFO) opened cases against them for potentially violating federal law.⁵⁸ Rather than limiting the investigation to just the two people who entered restricted areas of the Capitol, however, the WFO instructed the BFO to open cases on all 140 individuals who attended the political rally.⁵⁹ As Hill testified to the Committee:

WFO wanted us to open up a case on each and every one of those 140 individuals, to which the [Supervisory Special Agent] in Boston said, "They were going to a political rally, which is First Amendment-protected activity. No, we're not starting cases on these people." To which they said, "Well, we're going to call your SAC." And the SSA said, "Go right ahead." . . . [T]o his credit, [the SSA] said, no, we're not opening up cases on people who went to a rally⁶⁰

Hill further recounted that when the Boston office asked the WFO for video evidence that the other 138 individuals were in the Capitol, the WFO informed the Boston agents that it could not share the video out of fear it would disclose the identities of undercover officers in the Capitol.⁶¹ Hill elaborated:

And I forgot a key part. The SSA for CT2 said, "Happy to do it. Show us where they were inside the Capitol, and we'll look into it." To which WFO said, "We can't show you those videos unless you can tell us the exact time and place those individuals were inside the Capitol."

To which the SSA responded back – and I was privy to these conversations firsthand – “Why can’t you show us – why can’t you just send us the – give us access to the 11,000 hours of video that’s available?” “Because there may be” – may be – “UCs,” undercover officers, “or CHSes,” confidential human sources, “on those videos whose identity we need to protect.”⁶²

In a subsequent exchange with Chairman Jordan, Hill detailed the sequence of events. He testified:

Q. So Washington Field Office contacts you and says, we want to open up investigations on the two people who organized these two buses –

A. And we did.

Q. – who were inside the Capitol.

A. Yes.

Q. And you said, fine, because they were inside the Capitol.

A. Because they were able to show us pictures of them inside the Capitol.

Q. Definitive proof they were inside the Capitol.

A. Yes.

Q. So you open up investigations on them. And then Washington Field Office asked you, we want you to look at everyone who was on the bus who came to the rally?

A. Correct.

Q. You said, show us why –

A. Show us proof they were in the Capitol.

Q. – and you’d be happy to do it.

A. Yes.

Q. And then they said, we can’t show you proof.

A. Correct.

⁶² Id. at 82.

- Q. And you asked, “Why can’t you show us proof?” Is that correct? “Why can’t you show us proof?”
- A. Either show us pictures or give us access to the videos, the 11,000 hours of video.
- Q. Back up a second. The two who you opened cases up on the initial two –
- A. Those came through with pictures.
- Q. So they had pictures of them –
- A. Yeah.
- Q. – inside the Capitol.
- A. In the Capitol, yeah.
- Q. Got it.
- A. It was clear cut violation of the law.
- Q. Got it. The other 140, they had no evidence, no proof that they had actually violated the law and were inside the Capitol.
- A. They may have, but they refused to share it with us.
- Q. Refused to share it with you. And then you said, we're not going to open up an investigation –
- A. Right, because all we had was they –
- Q. Before you said that, you said, show us the proof, show us the video or pictures, whatever you have. And they said, we can’t.
- A. Correct.
- Q. And the reason they gave you was?
- A. There may be UCs, undercovers, or CHSes, confidential human sources, and we need to protect their identities.⁶³

Hill's supervisor, Special Agent-in-Charge Joseph Bonavolonta, confirmed Hill's account about WFO asking Boston to open investigations on all 140 individuals. In a transcribed interview with the Committee, Bonavolonta testified:

- Q. . . . I'm going to read to you some testimony that we received from Mr. Hill . . . only for the purpose of potentially refreshing your recollection, to see if it, you know, jogs your memory. Mr. Hill testified—and this is on page 81 of his transcript—two individuals in Massachusetts organized buses to go down to the rally, and Boston opened up cases on those two individuals because we were shown definitive evidence from WFO of them entering restricted areas of the Capitol. On to page 82 of the transcript, [b]ut those two individuals organized these buses, and there were 140 people on the buses, on the two buses. And WFO wanted us to open up a case on each and every one of those 140 individuals, to which the SSA in Boston said, They were going to a political rally, which is a First Amendment protected activity, no, we're not starting cases on these people. To which they said, meaning WFO, Well, we're going to call your SAC, or your S A C, and the SSA said, Go right ahead. Does that vignette, was that briefed to you?
- A. So once again, the exact verbiage that came from George Hill there, like, I, that I can't recall if that's exactly how it went down. But, yes, the—the—when my team briefed me on that one issue, one of the things they did communicate to me was that because of that initial pushback about not wanting to immediately conduct blanket interviews of all of the 150 some odd passengers, absent [the two individuals who entered restricted space], then, you know, that a comment was made by somebody either out of headquarters or WFO, I don't know which one, that your SAC may be getting a call.
- Q. Okay.
- A. But as we spoke about earlier, I never received any such call or outreach.
- Q. Okay. And do you know who in the WFO would've been making that type of statement?
- A. So it would have been somebody somewhat commensurate to the line supervisor up in Boston. I just don't know who.

- Q. Okay. Hill's testimony goes on, on page 82, Because when you're pushing back, you know, you want to make sure that you have your six covered—I'm not sure what that means, but—so the SAC and the ASAC were intimately aware of these kinds of exchanges that were going on. And again, to his credit, Joe Bonavolonta said, No, we're not opening up cases on people who went to a rally. And I forgot a key part, the SSA for CT2 said, happy to do it . . . Does that jive with your recollection?
- A. Not—once again, just not the—not the verbiage that's being used or the quotes that are being attributed, but in totality, as I've said before all along, the methodology used by the line supervisor to either headquarters or WFO was simply, if you have additional evidence or information that would — that would justify us conducting interviews on certain individuals, then provide it to us, and we will do it.⁶⁴

Bonavolonta also testified that while he was not briefed to “that level of specificity” regarding Hill's disclosure that the presence of undercover officers in the Capitol was the reason the WFO withheld information from the Boston agents, he was aware “we were requesting additional information to see if we could . . . if we in fact had enough of a predication” for investigating.⁶⁵

Bonavolonta further testified:

- Q. And are you aware of whether agents or analysts within the Boston Field Office were asked to work on investigations related to the events that occurred at the U.S. Capitol on January 6th, 2021?
- A. Yes.
- Q. And about how many cases?
- A. I really can't give you a number in terms of the overall number of cases.
- Q. And was it your understanding that the agents within the Boston Field Office were running the investigations?
- A. No. The actual cases relative to January 6th were all program managed and generated out of our Washington

Field Office. And so, where our involvement would come into play would be if a—you know, a package with the requisite evidence in it that may have risen to the level of an individual being charged with a certain crime related to January 6th would be sent up to us and then worked in conjunction with an agent in my office, as well as with a AUSA within the district of Massachusetts. But then once whether it was if it was for instance, an arrest warrant, that arrest would be executed, and then the case would be—you know, the subject would go down for an appearance in Washington, and then that's where it would be worked from there, whether there was a guilty plea or a trial, it would all be done down in Washington, D.C., not up in Boston.

Q. And, when you say program managed out of the Washington Field Office or the WFO, did that mean the WFO was giving your agents direction on what to do?

A. I wouldn't necessarily say "direction." It was just more—it was more a package that would be sent up with the requisite evidence to execute in most cases an arrest warrant, and that was it. It was pretty—it was very basic.⁶⁶

Q. And you said or one of your colleagues in the Boston Field Office said that if you have additional evidence, we will take it, and if it meets the DIOG, we'll go out and interview these people. Is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And subsequent to that, somebody from Washington came back with some additional evidence on a specific finite number of individuals and then you proceeded to do investigative work on that finite group?

A. Correct.⁶⁷

O'Boyle similarly testified that the combination of financial incentives and political considerations led the FBI's January 6 investigation to go, in his words, "way off the rails."⁶⁸ When asked to clarify this statement, O'Boyle indicated he was pressured by at least one agent from the WFO to “violate policy [and] law” by initiating legal processes against at least one citizen who was simply the subject of an anonymous tip.⁶⁹ O’Boyle testified:

Q. And when you say “legal process,” what are you referring to?

A. So they were trying to get me to do the grand jury subpoenas, when there was no rational way to conclude that the legal process she wanted was in any way associated with the anonymous tip⁷⁰

Q. . . . Could you explain?

A. So the initial tip I received from [the WFO] I did investigate and did due diligence.

Q. Right.

A. And then the second tip, where then [the WFO is] asking me to get legal process, when there wasn’t a rational link between what [the WFO] wanted me to get the legal process for from the one tip and associating it with the previous tip [the WFO] had sent me the day or maybe 2 days prior.

Q. Okay. And so you declined, you didn’t seek legal process, right?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Were there any punitive actions against you for declining to take that step?

A. No, but I think that’s only because I think I was very meticulous in how I wrote it up, and after my boss read it, he was like, “Huh.”

Q. Okay. So, at the end of the day, you exercised your judgment, and you weren’t—there were no consequences for that.

A. As far as I know.⁷¹

Although O’Boyle did not face any punitive actions from the FBI relating to his refusal to unlawfully seek legal process following a tip, his testimony is still shocking. Such testimony confirms that the FBI was pressuring its agents to violate federal law to investigate American citizens without adequate legal process. It is undoubtedly also concerning that O’Boyle feels he avoided any punitive or adverse action from the FBI in this case only because he “was very meticulous” in assessing the case and creating a paper trail to justify his refusal to follow a directive from the WFO.

D. The FBI Gathered Conservatives’ Financial Records from Bank of America Without Any Legal Process Following January 6.

Just like FBI whistleblowers O’Boyle and Friend, retired FBI Supervisory Intelligence Analyst George Hill provided the Committee with detailed allegations of FBI civil liberties abuses. Specifically, he testified that following the events at the Capitol on January 6, 2021, Bank of America (BoA) gave the FBI’s Washington Field Office a list of individuals who had made transactions in the D.C., Maryland, Virginia area with a BoA credit or debit card between January 5 and January 7, 2021.⁷² He also testified that individuals who had previously purchased a firearm with a BoA product were elevated to the top of the list provided by BoA.⁷³ Specifically, Hill testified:

A. . . . The Bank of America, with no directive from the FBI, data-mined its customer base. And they data-mined a date range of 5 to 7 January [of 2021] any BOA customer who used a BOA product. And by “BOA product,” I mean a debit card or a credit card. They compiled that list. And then, on top of that list, they put anyone who had purchased a firearm during any date. So it was a huge list⁷⁴

Q. Was the list that Bank of America provided targeted just to the D.C. area for those—

A. Yes.

Q. —dates?

A. Just the District and surrounding area, so, like, the NOVA area.

Q. And the surrounding area.

⁷² Hill Interview at 74-75.

⁷³ Id.

⁷⁴ Id. at 74.

- A. Yeah.
- Q. And it's anyone who used a Bank of America either debit or credit card—
- A. Right.
- Q. —to conduct a transaction.
- A. Any transaction. To buy a hotdog. Doesn't matter.
- Q. Okay. And then my understanding is that they created a second list where that first list was prioritized based on individuals that had purchased a firearm?
- A. They just basically just built on top of it, anybody who committed a—you know—
- Q. A firearm purchase?
- A. [T]hese are your priorities, these are your number one individuals that you need to go after. Not only did they use a BOA product in the District, but they've also purchased a firearm at some point in time, any time.
- Q. This list was provided then without any legal process to the FBI?
- A. Correct. So my understanding of the DIOG and amateur assessment based on law is that, you know, if a citizen sees a crime in commission, there's nothing wrong with injecting that and opening up a case. But, to my knowledge, you know, using a debit card or a credit card in the District does not provide adequate predication for the investigation of a crime. So there was no legal process either asking for it or — you know, from the Bureau or from DOJ or anybody.⁷⁵

Hill further testified:

- Q. Mr. Hill, you described the process by which this Bank of America data pull is lashed to data regarding firearm purchases. What was the geographic envelope for those firearm purchases?

⁷⁵ Id. at 75-76.

- A. They would had to have met both criteria: used a BOA product in the District—but there was no geographic framework if they had ever, ever bought a firearm.
- Q. What about the firearm purchase as a feature of time? Did—
- A. No, there was no time—there was no—
- Q. So that—
- A. That was not in the data range, date . . . But the gun purchase could be anywhere—
- Q. Anywhere, anytime. You could live—you could be a resident of Iowa, be a BOA customer, purchased a shotgun in 1999, go to the District, use your credit card to pay for a hotel on January 5th and check out. You're going to rise to the top of that list . . . [w]ere there any other criteria, other than the BOA transaction and the firearm purchase, that were prerequisites?
- A. No.⁷⁶

Hill's testimony was corroborated by the testimony of Boston's Special Agent-in-Charge Joseph Bonavolonta, who testified that Boston's JTTF Squad Supervisor, Chief Division Counsel, and Special Agent-in-Charge of Counterterrorism brought the BoA data to his attention. He further testified to the Committee and Select Subcommittee:

- Q. . . . And are you aware of information coming from Bank of America that was sent to the FBI?
- A. I am, yes.
- Q. [A]re you aware of the existence of that information on the FBI systems?
- A. I can't tell you where it is housed on FBI systems or what the current status is, but I am aware of information that was forwarded to us related to a Bank of America lead, yes.⁷⁷

- Q. And why did they bring this information to your attention?

⁷⁶ Id. at 76-77.

⁷⁷ Bonavolonta Interview at 11.

- A. So they brought the information to my attention, first and foremost, to make me aware that a lead had been sent to our office from a unit within FBI Headquarters that fell under the Office of Private Sector. And the lead, the lead itself, was for informational purposes only. There was no directive in the lead to do anything . . . from an investigation standpoint. However, in the body of the lead, there was an information that was provided by Bank of America following a certain number of criteria that in essence aggregated a list of individuals that were supposedly living up in the New England area who . . . either had potentially made . . . certain credit card purchases . . . for hotel reservations or plane tickets, or potential purchases at certain gun stores in and around . . . January 6th or planned for the inauguration date, like around January 20th, like in that timeframe. I'm speaking in generalities just because simply I can't recall the exact nature of the criteria, but it was something to that effect. And so my team brought that to my attention just to make me aware of it and to . . . just to see if there was going to be any request to actually . . . do something from an investigative measure on these individuals. So I reviewed the lead, and it was very clear in the lead that there was not a request to engage with anybody. Or we weren't being directed to do anything. But what I did on my own was . . . at the time, I was a co-chair of the SAC Advisory Committee, and I reached out to my colleague who was the SAC out of Springfield, Illinois, who was the chair of the SAC Advisory Committee. So we worked together on that just to see if he had been aware of this. And then we wound up together proactively communicating with the assistant director of the Counterterrorism Division [Jill Sanborn] at headquarters at the time just . . . to see if they were aware that this lead had at least been sent to two field offices. And the only knowledge I had at the time, obviously, was that it was sent to Boston, and it had been sent to Springfield. And we just wanted to make Counterterrorism Division aware of that just to let them know that we, based on the information provided in the lead, . . . we were not planning on doing anything with that information . . . and just so that Counterterrorism Division could be aware as well if in the event that it had been sent to other field offices . . . for awareness. And that was really my level of involvement with that particular lead.⁷⁸

⁷⁸ Id. at 13.

- Q. And it was also represented to us that individuals were prioritized on that list if they had a firearms purchase. Does that match your recollection?
- A. So . . . I don't have any knowledge of anybody being prioritized over a firearm purchase, but in one of the criteria that was in there in terms of Bank of America's data, it was related to purchases that had been made at either gun shops or, you know, stores that would sell firearms, but I can't speak to in terms of if any individual on that list was actually prioritized, or at least that wasn't conveyed to me.
- Q. And did the gun purchases have to be recent, or could it have been at any time in the past?
- A. That I just don't know.
- Q. And how many individuals were included on that list that were in the jurisdiction of the Boston Division?
- A. Approximately 6 or 7, or around that number.⁷⁹

This testimony is highly alarming. The FBI seemingly worked with a major financial institution to receive, without legal process, financial records about Americans who used credit or debit card to purchase hotels, flights, or firearms in close proximity to January 6, 2021. This invasion of the privacy of American citizens in this manner is decidedly concerning.

E. Line Agents Opposed Attorney General Garland's Memorandum Directing Federal Law Enforcement Resources Against Parents.

As the radical left pushed its woke agenda on America's children, parents across the country started speaking out at school board meetings against critical race theory, unscientific mask mandates, transgender ideology in the classroom and bathroom, and anti-America curricula. Concerned parents were vocal and unafraid in their opposition to this indoctrination. The National School Boards Association (NSBA) and the Biden Administration, however, could not abide this growing parental rights revolution and colluded to create a pretext—articulated in an October 4 memorandum from Attorney General Garland—to use the federal law-enforcement apparatus to silence parents.⁸⁰

The FBI was a witting participant in the Administration's anti-parent endeavor. A press release accompanying the Attorney General's memorandum highlighted the FBI's National

Threat Operations Center for tips about parents at school board meetings.⁸¹ On October 20, 2021, the FBI operationalized Attorney General Garland’s directives. The FBI’s Assistant Director for the Counterterrorism Division and the Assistant Director for the Criminal Division sent an email to SACs around the country referencing the Attorney General’s October 4 directive and notifying FBI personnel about a new “threat tag” created to apply to school board investigations.⁸² The FBI then began to open investigations with the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag across the nation and established case files on dozens of parents with information that included their political views and the application of this “threat tag” simply because they exercised their fundamental constitutional right to speak.⁸³

The FBI informed the Committee that, between October 14, 2021, and the end of January 2023, the FBI applied the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag to “approximately 25” cases—only one of which “subsequently resulted in the opening of a Full Investigation.”⁸⁴ Additionally, the FBI stated that the majority of these 25 cases “were referred to state and local law enforcement, and the vast majority—all but one—have been closed at the FBI level.”⁸⁵ The FBI also provided that 17 of the 25 cases “were assigned to the [FBI’s] Criminal Investigative Division; six were assigned to the Counterterrorism Division; and the remaining two were assigned to the Weapons of Mass Destruction Directorate”⁸⁶ In other words, the FBI’s disclosure confirmed whistleblower allegations that the FBI had misused criminal and counterterrorism resources against parents attending school board meetings.

Despite the inexplicable willingness of FBI leadership to use federal law enforcement and counterterrorism resources to investigate parents, it is clear that some brave FBI agents in local field offices saw this memorandum for what it was—weaponization of the federal law enforcement community against moms and dads speaking up about their children’s education.⁸⁷ Whistleblower testimony from O’Boyle and Friend details the “shock and surprise” that line agents had when learning of the memorandum and the Attorney General’s directive to target parents.⁸⁸

1. Special Agent O’Boyle Was “Stunned” to Learn that Attorney General Garland Intended to Pursue Concerned Parents for Investigation.

On October 4, 2021, Attorney General Garland issued a memorandum that directed the FBI and U.S. Attorneys’ Offices to address the “disturbing spike in harassment, intimidation, and threats of violence” at school board meetings.⁸⁹ O’Boyle testified to the Committee about his reaction to the memorandum and that of his colleagues. O’Boyle recalled that he was “stunned” to learn “that the highest-ranking law enforcement official in the country would publish something like that to the workforce.”⁹⁰ He viewed “the content and overall direction” of the memorandum to be “leading towards targeting parents for speaking up about their children’s education.”⁹¹ As a former police officer, he found it “most striking at first” that “such a high-ranking federal official” would use “federal law enforcement to hone in on” an area that is typically addressed by local law enforcement.⁹²

O’Boyle also shared the reaction of Supervisory Special Agent (SSA) at the Wichita Resident Agency, Sean Fitzgerald. O’Boyle recalled SSA Fitzgerald, whom O’Boyle reported to, stating “we will not be going to school board meetings in this office.”⁹³ Fitzgerald’s reaction to the memorandum is not surprising to O’Boyle. As O’Boyle put it, “There’s nothing that I know of, based on my training and experience in the FBI, that brings this to a level of federal concern.”⁹⁴

On October 20, 2021, in response to the Attorney General’s October 4 directive, FBI Counterterrorism and Criminal leadership in Washington created the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag to track and monitor school board-related investigations.⁹⁵ O’Boyle testified that the creation of the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag was “troubling” in that both the Criminal Investigative Division and Counterterrorism Division had signed off on the threat tag.⁹⁶ Particularly, O’Boyle questioned why federal law enforcement would be involved in local law enforcement matters, and stated that federal law enforcement involvement would “[a]bsolutely . . . chill parents from exercising their First Amendment right.”⁹⁷ O’Boyle testified:

- Q. And what was your reaction to seeing this EDUOFFICIALS threat tag on the news?
- A. Again, it was shock and surprise, especially—so Carlton Peeples was in charge of the Criminal Investigative Division, but also as part of that email was, I believe, Timothy Langan, who was from the Counterterrorism Division. And it was already surprising that the FBI’s CID would be involved in something like this, but then to have both CID and CTD, the Counterterrorism Division, sign off on a threat tag like that was troubling to say the least.

Q. And just like the memorandum, did agents and employees within your office discuss their reaction to hearing the news of the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag?

A. It is something we discussed just at the squad level, [task force officers] and agents, which I would say, in my experience, everybody I talked to about it was—had a similar reaction as me, like, why are we inserting ourself into this type of matter?

Q. Were you involved with any official conversations or correspondence about the creation of the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag?

A. No.

Q. And given your law enforcement background and your work at the FBI — or I guess when you were at the FBI—did you have any knowledge of or participate in any investigations that were labeled with the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag?

A. No.

Q. Are you generally aware that the FBI did in fact use that threat tag?

A. I am.

Q. And are you aware that several parents were investigated by the FBI for protected First Amendment activity?

A. I am.

Q. Given your law enforcement background and your work in the FBI, does this concern you?

A. It does.

Q. And do you think, given your background, does knowing that you could be investigated by the FBI for speaking up at your child's school board meeting, do you think that would chill parents from exercising their First Amendment right?

- A. Absolutely.
- Q. Given your law enforcement background and your work at the FBI, does the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag have any law enforcement utility? Is there any reason to have it?
- A. I don't believe so.⁹⁸

Significantly, none of the veteran FBI employees interviewed by the Committee to date could articulate a law enforcement utility for the threat tag.⁹⁹

2. Field Agents Viewed Attorney General Garland's Pursuit of Concerned Parents as a Chill on Parents' Protected First Amendment Activity.

This infringement upon parents' constitutionally protected activity was evident to special agents in the field. In his transcribed interview with the Committee, Friend described how he was directed to surveil parents at an anticipated "contentious" school board meeting in an effort to connect January 6 subjects to the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag.¹⁰⁰ As Friend recounted, his supervisor at the time ordered Friend and another agent to go to the location of a local school board meeting.¹⁰¹ As Friend testified:

- Q. So part of the pressure campaign, as you've testified, were these phone calls. Other than phone calls, was there any other medium in which that pressure campaign manifested? Emails? Directives? Other information?
- A. I didn't receive emails. I know that there was probably Instant Message within the FBI, because [a senior agent in our office] was corresponding with [the WFO] that way a lot. And there were communications, I know, for one group that they said they wanted surveillance done on them because they had been talking in online forums, so I know they were being monitored. And they wanted us to surveil them to a school board meeting.
- Q. What more can you tell us about that?
- A. There was an anticipated very—going to be a very contentious school board meeting in Flagler County, because there had been some disturbing books that had been found in the library, and a lot of parents were displeased, and some of these individuals were going to go attend the meeting. And we were asked to surveil them to the meeting. And then, once we arrived, we kind of looked around and said, this looks bad. It was right after the EDU threat tag had emerged. They told us to get out before we were identified as Federal agents.¹⁰²

In his interview, Friend noted that he had concerns about surveilling parents at school board meetings, believing this could chill parents' exercise of their First Amendment rights.¹⁰³ In fact, Friend testified that "I appeared at a school board meeting in September, so I was a little bit humored by the fact that I might be investigating myself."¹⁰⁴ He noted that his colleagues even teased him about this fact when they discussed the Attorney General's memorandum.¹⁰⁵ Friend stated that local law enforcement agencies were capable of handling any issues that might arise at school board meetings, and local law enforcement should properly handle those matters.¹⁰⁶ He testified that his colleagues had a similar dismissive reaction to the memorandum, stating, "We didn't take it seriously to the point where we were going to pursue investigations."¹⁰⁷

This position was not just held by whistleblowers and their colleagues. It was apparently shared by the field and local law enforcement. In an initial set of documents produced to the Committee pursuant to a subpoena, the Justice Department's own documents demonstrate that there was no compelling nationwide law-enforcement justification for the Attorney General's directive or the Department components' execution thereof.¹⁰⁸ After surveying local law enforcement, U.S. Attorney's offices around the country reported back to Main Justice that there was no legitimate law-enforcement basis for the Attorney General's directive to use federal law-enforcement and counterterrorism resources to investigate school board-related threats.¹⁰⁹ In addition, in reports back to Main Justice, many of the U.S. Attorneys' Offices noted that their local law-enforcement partners opposed federal intervention at local school board meetings.¹¹⁰ Similarly, Allen testified:

Q. Do you recall, subject to this memorandum, an email sent by Carlton Peeples, who was the Deputy Assistant Director of the Criminal Investigative Division, also in October of 2021, to announce the creation of an "EDUOFFICIALS" threat tag?

A. I do remember seeing an email about a threat tag having to do with schools. I can't recall if that was the specific threat tag that I saw on the email, but I do remember there being a creation of a threat tag and some people having ire about it in the squad area.

Q. When you say some people had ire about it, what do you mean?

A. I mean, like, verbal responses like, "What, are we going after, like, people at school like, parents at school board meetings now?" Statements to that effect.¹¹¹

Q. And when you talked about, you know, individuals expressing ire within the JTTF squad area . . . were those individuals special agents . . . ?

A. Yes . . . [i]t was a combination of both. People were like, "Like, what is this? Like, this is ridiculous."

Q. Did they think it was a waste of FBI resources?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it your understanding and the understanding that you could tell from the individuals of the JTTF squad were they under the impression that this was a local law enforcement issue?

A. I don't know what their official, you know, motivation was. I just know that they had ire with the threat tag and comments of the nature of, "What are we doing, going after parents now?" You know, almost like a ridiculousness, you know?

Q. Would you say that the reaction among the JTTF squad to the "EDUOFFICIALS" threat tag, was it negative?

A. I would say yes.

Q. Did you share that ire that your colleagues expressed?

A I thought it was concerning. You know, I thought it was very concerning.

Q And did you believe that the FBI should be using counterterrorism resources on this issue?

A No.¹¹²

According to Friend, the school board memorandum and the directives he had to surveil parents were consistent with the demand to show that DVE cases are on the rise around the country.¹¹³ Friend testified to his belief that he and his fellow agents were told to surveil parents “in order to meet the metrics that we have in order to show that we’re a successful agency.”¹¹⁴ Friend recognized, rightly, that they were overstepping their bounds and infringing on parents’ constitutional rights.¹¹⁵

II. FBI Leaders Weaponized the Security Clearance Adjudication Process Against Whistleblowers in Retaliation for Blowing the Whistle.

Whistleblower testimony makes clear that the FBI rid itself of employees who dared to speak out against FBI leadership or to raise good-faith concerns about FBI operations. The FBI has taken personnel actions against whistleblowers who raised concerns within the Bureau and, later, to Congress. In several instances—Friend, O’Boyle, and Allen—the FBI weaponized the security clearance adjudication process to silence employees who fight against the politicized “rot” within the FBI leadership. Because a security clearance is necessary to work at the FBI, revoking or suspending an agent’s security clearance effectively indefinitely suspends the agent and leaves the agent to languish in an unpaid purgatory.

This section details whistleblower testimony about the retaliation they have faced at the hands of the FBI. Despite FBI statements that it is “committed to addressing misconduct head-on” and that it is “taking considerable steps to ensure that employees are aware of whistleblower protections,” the reality is otherwise.¹¹⁶ As Friend explained, the FBI does all this in a way that “creates an impression that [whistleblowing] is frowned upon.”¹¹⁷ The FBI’s actions against whistleblower employees, rather than its words, reveal how the FBI leadership truly views whistleblowing.

A. Stephen Friend Was Suspended Without Pay After Questioning the FBI’s Handling of DVE Cases and Expressing Concern about January 6 Tactics.

The FBI retaliated against Friend after he expressed concerns about how DVE cases were being labeled and managed, the excessive force used in apprehending January 6 subjects, and for making protected disclosures to Congress.¹¹⁸ Friend testified:

Q. And were you ever told or notified that the FBI SWAT team would be used during search and arrest warrants for January 6th subjects?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that concern you?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did the plans for the execution of these warrants concern you?

A. Because the subject of the arrest warrant had been in communication with the FBI at that point and had expressed a willingness to cooperate with the FBI. And, in my ¹¹⁶ Id. at 106.

¹¹⁸ Friend interview at 20, 22, 26-27, 30.

experience in dealing with subjects of crimes and bringing them into custody, the FBI tends to use the least amount of force necessary to do that safely, and I felt that the use of SWAT, and coming from my background of being a SWAT team member, I felt that that was an unnecessary tool to use for that particular individual.

Q. So the subject of the warrant that the SWAT team was going to be used for was cooperating with the FBI. Is that your understanding?

A. Yes.

Q. And had mentioned a willingness to come in voluntarily . . . ?

A. Yes.

Q. . . . And in your experience working on criminal cases and SWAT teams, you said that the FBI normally uses the least intrusive methods. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that per FBI or DOJ policy?

A. I don't know what policy. I just know that that is the general approach that we always used.

Q. Can you explain some of the less intrusive methods that might be used for a subject who is cooperating with the FBI and has said that they're willing to come in?

A. You can call the individual and ask them to surrender. You can issue a summons. You can contact their attorney, if they're represented, and ask them to surrender. You can ask for local law enforcement to execute an arrest warrant. You can use surveillance resources to interdict an individual while they're traveling and away from their home base of operations.

Q. And, to your knowledge, none of these were used for the January 6th subjects that you were tasked with executing search and arrest warrants for?

A. Not on the individual SWAT was going to be used for, no.

Q. Did you raise these concerns to your direct supervisor?

A. Yes.¹¹⁹

Q. And what did you disclose to [your direct supervisor]?

A. I raised my concerns about the use of the SWAT team for the arrest. I also raised my concerns about the departures from the DIOG with regards to how the cases were being managed and told him that I believed that it was to manipulate the crime statistics. And I also said that I believed that we were infringing on individuals' Sixth Amendment rights.¹²⁰

Q. Okay. And how did [he] respond to your concerns?

A. He said that—he agreed that there was not a lot of work to be done on JTTF and that he was actually going to lobby to move me back into working child pornography investigations in the next fiscal year. He told me that he was concerned that he was doing file reviews on cases that none of his people in his—none of his subordinates were actually doing work on. And he then suggested that I might want to speak to the employee assistance program for counseling; and then asked me, if he brought my concerns up the chain of command, how they thought—how I believed that they would respond to that, and said that I had a good reputation and that my career could be in jeopardy if I wanted to beg out of participating in the upcoming arrest and searches.¹²¹

Q. And so is it fair to say that you had two kind of tranches of concerns: You had one about the DIOG violations stemming from how the investigations were being labeled, and then a separate concern about the use of SWAT team for one of the January 6th subjects who had been cooperating with the FBI? Is that correct?

¹¹⁹ Id. at 18-20.

¹²⁰ Id. at 20.

¹²¹ Id. at 20-21.

A. Yes.

Q. And you raised both of those concerns to [your direct supervisor]?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you raise your concerns to next?

A. I was contacted by one of the assistant special agents in charge of my office . . . and asked to attend a meeting with him and another [assistant special agent in charge]. And [he contacted me] on August 22nd in the evening, and I went and attended that meeting the following day, on the 23rd.¹²²

Q. And how did [the two assistant special agents in charge] respond to your concerns?

A. They pushed back on my concerns. They said that I had the right to raise my concerns, but I had to follow through on the orders that I was given to do.

Q. During your conversation with [the two assistant special agents in charge], did you ever refuse to participate in the warrants?

A. I told them that I didn't want to and that, if assigned to, I would have to consider not going, but I would call ahead if that was going to be the case.

Q. And did you raise both your concerns about the labeling of the January 6th investigations as well as the use of the SWAT team?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you ever participate in any of the operations for the executions of the warrants on the January 6th subjects?

A. I didn't have the opportunity to.

Q. Why didn't you have the opportunity to?

¹²² Id. at 22.

A. Following my meeting, I received an email from ASAC Markovski telling me that I was ordered to not come to work the following day and that I was going to be considered absent without leave.

Q. So they ordered you to be on AWOL status? Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. How long were you on AWOL status?

A. One day, August 24th.

Q. And they never gave you the opportunity to come into the office on that day?

A. No.

Q. When did you go back into the office?

A. August 25th. I emailed my supervisor, Greg Federico, in the evening on the 24th and asked him if I could come back the following day, and he said I could.

Q. Okay. And so, following your AWOL status, did you raise your concerns with anyone else?

A. Yes.

Q. And who was that?

A. I spoke to the special agent in charge of the Jacksonville Field Office, Sherri Onks.

Q. And what did you tell Special Agent in Charge Onks?

A. The same concerns that I had that I had raised with Greg Federico, Sean Ryan, and Coult Markovski . . . [m]y conversation with her was not as lengthy as it was with the ASACs. I essentially told her that my feelings on the matter were not changed after being placed AWOL and that I had concerns about the constitutionality of what we were doing.

Q. And how did she respond to those concerns?

- A. She told me that I represented a very fringe belief within the FBI and that I needed to question whether or not I wanted to have a future with the agency.¹²³

Shortly thereafter, as Friend recounted, when he arrived at work on September 19, 2022, four officials from his office, including the chief security officer, met him and took his badge, credentials, firearms, and all FBI property.¹²⁴ Friend testified:

They said that—they issued me a letter from Human Resources Division, signed by Executive Assistant Director Jen Moore, detailing the rationale for suspending my security clearance. And without a security clearance, I can't work in an FBI space and I can't fulfill my duties as a special agent, so I was suspended indefinitely. I was allowed to exhaust my accrued leave time. And they gave me a mechanism to—if I wanted to use sick time, it would need justification from a doctor. And I was given paperwork to seek outside employment if I wanted to, and escorted from the building.¹²⁵

When asked about his reaction to the suspension, Friend testified:

- Q. What was your reaction when you were suspended?
- A. In the immediate aftermath, I called my wife to come pick me up, and that was pretty disturbing for her. She had a tumor removed from her spine a few weeks before that, and she was not actually supposed to be driving. So she had to come and drive me with a back brace on home. And then, at that point, I started to communicate with my attorneys about, you know, what to do as far as bringing my concerns to the OIG and to the Office of Special Counsel and to Congress. So we drafted a formal complaint and submitted that to all three.
- Q. And have you had any communication with your colleagues from the Daytona Beach Resident Agency since your suspension?
- A. I have one friend who is now a former task force officer. He was not assigned to the JTTF. He was assigned to the Safe Streets Task Force. And he and I are friends, and we go to the gun range together . . . [a]nd the secretary of the office, ¹²³ Id. at 22-24.

¹²⁴ Id. at 27.

¹²⁵ Id.

she sends me text messages just of greetings and hello. But nobody else from the office.

Q. What was the reaction of your colleagues when they learned that you had been suspended?

A. I can only say what my task force friend said, and he said that everybody just kind of went along with whatever the proceedings were but that, in the aftermath, the office has been extremely reticent to do anything. They don't want to draw attention to the office. So the SSRA Federico is sort of nixing anything operational at this point.

Q. And when you say that people are hesitant to take actions, what do you mean by that?

A. Nobody ever got fired for doing nothing . . . [s]o it's pretty easy to extend an investigation out long, as opposed to being more aggressive in your investigative tactics that you use, and it's better to let the dust clear and settle around my situation before you draw a spotlight to yourself.

Q. And do you believe that you were retaliated against by the FBI for making protected disclosures to Congress?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you believe some of your colleagues, some of their hesitation is that they're nervous that they will be retaliated against for speaking up?

A. Yes.¹²⁶

The retaliation did not end with Friend's indefinite suspension. Despite informing Friend that he could seek outside employment, the FBI refused to sign off on his requests to obtain it or to provide him with the documents necessary for other employment. He testified:

Q. Did you take any steps to seek outside employment?

A. I submitted two FD-331s requesting outside employment. The first one was rejected. And the second one I submitted with also a caveat that I requested my training records, which the FBI has yet to furnish me.

Q. So the first form that was rejected, who rejected that?

¹²⁶ Id. at 29-30.

A. I was told that it was rejected by the executive management of the Jacksonville Field Office.

Q. Did you get a reason for why it was rejected?

A. No.

Q. And then you submitted a second form for outside employment and asked for records. What records did you request?

A. I'm seeking my firearms training records as well as my training records in general to prove my employment. Both of those are necessary to gain employment from the second outside entity. That's not the first request of those records that I've made either.

Q. . . . And have they given you the requested records?

A. No.

Q. Do you know why they have not given you the records?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Who has been denying your request to obtain your records?

A. I made a request to the firearms training unit and sent an email to their general counsel. And I sent the second request for outside employment to the chief security officer of Jacksonville Division.

Q. . . . And do you think this is just another episode of retaliation, by not giving you your records?

A. Yes.¹²⁷

Coincidentally, Jennifer Moore, who serves as the Executive Assistant Director of the FBI's Human Resources Branch, testified that the agency's failure to give Mr. Friend his records was a "mistake" that she "owned."¹²⁸ Ms. Moore specifically testified:

¹²⁷ Id at 32-33.

¹²⁸ Transcribed Interview of Ms. Jennifer Leigh Moore at 119-20 (Apr. 24, 2023) (hereinafter "Moore Interview").

Q. That wasn't done intentionally. What happened to Mr. Friend wasn't done intentionally. These are just all coincidences?

A. I'm not sure what you're referring to that happened to Mr. Friend.

Q Mr. Friend, where you denied his firearms training documents

A We did, and I owned that. That was a mistake . . . [m]istakes happen when you have a 37,000 employee organization.¹²⁹

Q. So it was a mistake not to give Mr. Friend his training records that he requested[?]

A. Yes, sir.¹³⁰

Nevertheless, the FBI knew exactly what it was doing when it suspended Friend's security clearance. The Bureau suspended it as retaliation for Friend making protected whistleblower disclosures to Congress.¹³¹ Without an active security clearance, he could no longer work as an FBI agent. As a husband and father, Friend needed to work to earn income. When asked how his suspension affected his family, Friend testified:

Q. And how has the FBI's retaliation against you affected you and your family?

A. Well, it's very unusual. My household, I have two young children, and they have asked, you know, why I'm not going to work and why my FBI vehicle is not in the driveway anymore, and that's sort of complicated to explain to grammar school children . . . [m]y wife lost her career shortly after my suspension, and she had to sign a nondisclosure about that, but it was under very suspicious circumstances, and I firmly believe that is related to my situation . . . [s]o neither one of us are gainfully employed, and that's been a financial burden on us as well as just a stressor, because we lost our health insurance, as well, with her employment termination.

¹²⁹ Id.

¹³⁰ Id. at 122.

¹³¹ Friend Interview at 105.

- Q. And if you had to put an estimate on it, how much has this ordeal cost you both in time and financially?
- A. Well, I would say, it's difficult to calculate because she received a severance from her prior employer. But myself, you know, being out of work for about 20 weeks, 13 of which unpaid—you'd have to go back and calculate what my, you know, salary would've been for that time period. But I don't think you can put a price tag on the stress that it's put on our family. I voiced to my supervisors that working for the FBI was my dream job and that's all I ever wanted to do. So having that opportunity taken away from me earlier than I was expecting has been very disappointing. And the way that the Bureau has conducted itself against me in the aftermath—as opposed to actually considering and investigating the righteousness of my complaint, they've chosen to circle the wagons and go after me—I think is very disappointing and soured me greatly enough that I actually resigned today.¹³²

In addition to his family's struggles, and to ensure maximum pressure—and, no doubt, to deter other potential whistleblowers—the FBI denied Friend's requests for outside employment and failed to provide him with records to obtain relevant employment. This ultimately led Friend to have no other option but to resign from his employment with the agency.

B. Garret O'Boyle Was Suspended Without Pay After Moving His Young Family Across the Country.

Like Friend, O'Boyle was subject to FBI retaliation for making protected disclosures to Congress after expressing his concerns up his chain of command with no action being taken.¹³³ O'Boyle, too, had his security clearance suspended.¹³⁴ In his interview, he testified that the FBI has “weaponized that clearance process.”¹³⁵ He explained:

They know that if they claim national security that they, carte blanche, can do whatever they want. And you have to have a security clearance to work in the FBI. So if they find any reason to strip you of that clearance, they'll do it, and they'll send you packing, and then there's no – hardly any recourse for you to take because the FBI investigates itself.¹³⁶

In his transcribed interview, O'Boyle shared his firsthand experience with the weaponization of the security clearance process. He described how the FBI suspended him right in the middle of his transfer and two weeks before his wife gave birth to their fourth child, causing their personal belongings—clothes, toys, furniture—to be stuck in an FBI-controlled storage unit for an extended period of time. O'Boyle testified:

A. You know, we're begging and borrowing from family for coats for our kids and warm clothes for our baby because the FBI won't let us have our stuff.

Q. And so I just want to make sure that we have everything, kind of, the facts straight on this. So you're notified in June that you make the new unit and you're going to be transferred from Kansas to Virginia, correct?

A. Correct.¹³⁷

Q. So then in order to retrieve your goods after a month of them being held by the FBI, you had to spend over $10,000 of your own money, correct, to retrieve those?

A. I would have to do the math, but it's right around ten grand.

Q. And in your opinion, do you believe this whole ordeal with recovering your personal goods and having to cover those costs, was that just another episode of retaliation?

A. I believe it was. I think every step of the way it just—the whole process continues to get weaponized. And people are complicit in it because they claim, well, I'm just doing my job and I was told to tell you that I can't let you come get your stuff, or whatever other excuse they can come up with to justify it in their own minds.¹³⁸

O'Boyle further testified:

Q. And let's talk a bit more about your transfer from Kansas to Virginia. You said that you accepted the position in June and then moved. Your first day was September 26th, I think you said. Is that correct?

A. Correct.

¹³⁷ Id. at 20.

¹³⁸ Id. at 21-23.

Q. So during that time, you sold your house in Kansas, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And then were your personal belongings moved or shipped to Virginia at some point?

A. They were. So after we closed on our house in—or I guess right before we closed on our house in Kansas, we had a contract—I mean, they contract through the government to some degree, came to our house, they packed up our stuff, put it in a truck and brought it to Virginia, where it was put in storage. And we were supposed to get that—those belongings delivered to the new house once we closed on it. So I'm trying to think of my dates here. So September 26th I get suspended. So between September 26th and November 3rd we're trying to figure out how we can get our stuff. And for the vast majority of that time, we essentially got the runaround from the FBI and the business they contract with on how to release our goods, on if we can get them shipped or not. And I think I have most of that in email. But essentially we kept being told, oh, they're not going to release your goods, they're not releasing your goods, we can't give you your stuff. And then eventually it was certain criteria for me to come get it myself. And so typically all of this is paid for, it's part of the transfer, and you pay, like, the tax bill on this stuff. But instead, in my case, they said, you can come and get it, you have to inspect all of your stuff at the warehouse that it's being stored, and then sign off on the paperwork, and see ya. So at my own expense, again, I rented moving trucks. A friend of mine came with me from Wisconsin. Honestly, I couldn't have done it without him. He has worked in the moving industry for many years. And without his expertise, I don't think my brother and I, who also — he flew in to help — would've been able to even pack it up correctly, because they essentially just pull it all out and say, here's your stuff, make sure it's all there. So we spent the whole day doing that. And, yeah, it cost about $10,000 out of my own expenses to handle that. That doesn't even account for the labor costs that would've been associated with it. And then it's interesting that on that same day is when I was told that my pay was suspended¹³⁹

¹³⁹ Id. at 18-21.

Q. And so for over a month you weren't able to access your personal goods. And can you describe what that includes furniture wise, what?

A. Everything. I mean, it was, yeah, other than, you know, I think our daughters all had, like, a backpack with, like, a toy and some clothes. And then my wife and I, same, had, like, a backpack of clothes and stuff like that. And we obviously did not anticipate this happening, so when our stuff got packed up in August, we had summer clothes because we thought, oh, by late September, early October, we'll be here, which the climate is much more moderate than in Wisconsin. So in October in Wisconsin it's practically winter and we're—just give me a minute.

Q. Take your time.¹⁴⁰

Q. And so to accommodate this transfer, you put your Kansas City home on the market and sell it, correct?

A. Our Wichita home.

Q. Your Wichita home.

A. Well, we lived in a suburb called Derby—

Q. And during that time, did you look for housing in Virginia?

A. We did. And that's another interesting aspect of it. So as part of the transfer, you're supposed to get a house hunting trip, 10 days. I didn't know at the time, but I found out later, that once you accept orders essentially your job is to focus on that transfer and work on that transfer. Instead, I was directed by my boss to try to finish up some casework that I had. So I didn't even really get to focus on that transfer like I should have. But I was able to come back to Virginia. I was here, I think, for 9 days or so, for training for that new position. So every night after—or just about every night after training was over, I would meet with my realtor, and we'd go look at houses. I think in those evenings over that time span, I think I looked at around 30 or 35 houses. So even though I didn't get the 10 day house hunting trip or anything like that, I was able to look for housing while I was at that training, which was in August.

Q. So then did you put an offer on in a house here?

A. We did. My last day of that training, which I think was like either the last day of August or the first day of September, is the last house I looked at, and I was like, oh, this is the one. And once I got back to Kansas, I talked to my wife about it, showed her pictures and stuff. And we put an offer in on it which was accepted and—yeah, so we were, like, okay, that part's done, now let's have this baby and then carry on. But obviously that—it didn't work out as planned.

Q. And so you packed up all your belongings in August, and then the FBI moved those belongings to Virginia, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So you're now in Virginia, your Kansas City—or your Wichita house is sold, and your belongings are in Virginia, and then on the first day at your new job in Virginia, you're walked out, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So then you have to wait over a month to retrieve your belongings because, as you've said, the FBI was giving you the runaround, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Did you have access to those belongings during that period of time?

A. I did not.

Q. And did you ask the FBI for access to those belongings?

A. We did. We asked if we could come get them and because there was really no other way than—that's when it was just back and forth, back and forth, or then not hearing from them, and then them saying, oh, we're trying to figure out the best way to get you your stuff. And then at one point, were, like, well, can you ship them here? Because we're not living in Virginia now. And then I think at one point they were, like, oh, we might be able to do that, but it's going to cost you $17,000. And we were, like, whoa, no, we—I'm suspended. Like, we knew my pay was going to get suspended. It hadn't been suspended yet. But we were, like, no, we're not paying you $17,000 for you to send us our stuff that you took to Virginia. So then we were able—they eventually they agreed to let me go and get it. That still cost, like I said, about ten grand, but I guess that beats 17.

Q. And the FBI wouldn't—in the normal course of things, if you're transferred, the FBI pays for those expenses, and then, as you said, you're in charge of the tax bill. Is that correct?

A. Correct.¹⁴¹

“Nearly 180 days” after his suspension, O’Boyle testified that he had not heard from the FBI regarding the status of his security clearance.¹⁴² Ms. Moore, who signed O’Boyle’s notice that his security clearance was suspended, testified that O’Boyle’s situation was a mere “coincidence.”¹⁴³ Ms. Moore specifically stated:

Q. The date that's on Mr. O'Boyle's letter? That was . . . October 22nd[?]

A. Yeah. And what day did Mr. O'Boyle execute his actual move?

Q. His first day was on September 23, 2022.

A. And so what was the date of the letter?

Q. September 23, 2022.

A. Okay.

Q. So that's just some big coincidence, that it was his first day [in Virginia]?

A. Absolutely.¹⁴⁴

¹⁴¹ Id. at 21-23.

¹⁴² Id.

¹⁴³ Moore Interview at 121-23.

¹⁴⁴ Id. at 121.

Pointedly, however, O’Boyle believes that the agency was intentionally weaponized against him.¹⁴⁵ As O’Boyle testified:

- Q. Culture wise, is the current FBI the same FBI you signed up to work for?
- A. Not at all.
- Q. Why?
- A. I think the biggest reason is how they have become weaponized against anyone who doesn’t just toe the line that they want them to toe. I think I’m a primary example of that. I start shedding light on things, on wrongdoing that is happening in the FBI; I get suspended. And I know I’m not alone. There are a number of other whistleblowers out there who are in a similar situation after being suspended. Some of them, after—it said—they claim they don’t retaliate for First Amendment protected activity. I know for a fact that they do, because one of my protected disclosures was about that, about the FBI retaliating against employees for engaging in First Amendment protected activity, and those employees got suspended.¹⁴⁶

Many other FBI whistleblowers told O’Boyle that they believe his experience is perhaps the most severe exhibition of the FBI’s weaponization.¹⁴⁷ As O’Boyle told the Committee and Select Subcommittee:

- Q. The retaliation that you’ve testified to today seems to have an enhanced feature of cruelty to it.
- A. I agree. I agree.
- Q. You know, are you and the other whistleblowers, the cases that you’re aware of, are there features of such acute cruelty?
- A. Not like this. My situation is one that all the other whistleblowers I’ve talked to are like, “I just can’t believe” — I mean, and they’re in a similar situation, they’re suspended without pay, and they say, “I can’t believe what has happened to you.” You know, earlier, I alluded I went to Iraq and Afghanistan, a year each, as an infantryman. I received the Combat Infantryman Badge for—I mean, that ¹⁴⁵ O’Boyle Interview at 37-38.

¹⁴⁷ Id. at 108-09.

is awarded to infantrymen who fight the enemy. So I've been shot at. I've had rockets shot at me, IEDs. And it's different, but this, what I'm going through right now, is harder than those deployments. When I got home from Afghanistan, I knew I was getting out of the Army. I had 10, 11 months left. And I was like—I had just turned 25, and I was like, "I'm done. The hardest thing I will do in my life, I've done it, and now I can move on." And then this happened. And it's not war, but it's very war like, in what it has done to me mentally, what it's doing to me and my family. And I didn't have a family then. You know, I just had my wife. And, you know, yeah, it's just—it's hard to believe.

- Q. Yeah . . . In these other suspensions, there doesn't seem to be this purposeful manifestation of cruelty to someone's family, to someone's living situation, to someone's ability to secure future employment. Why do you think the acuity of the cruelty is so much higher with you?
- A. I wish I knew. I think it probably just goes back to the pervasiveness of how the FBI has deemed—they've decided they're going to do what they want, on their agenda, on their terms, that they're the law, and they're not going to have someone internally shining a light in the darkness on the bad things that they are doing. And I think they realized, we have him in the perfect position to completely flip his life upside down and cause torment to him. Because then they can come back and say, well, look at his mental status, or, you know, he's clearly unstable, he hasn't had a job, or whatever they might try to drum up in the future, which I wouldn't be surprised at anything they try to drum up. But—
- Q. Do you believe they're making an example out of you?
- A. I do, yeah. I think it's clear. I mean, and I think that also has a cooling effect on speech, because any FBI employee who hears my story I'm sure would be stunned.
- Q. So you believe that you and your family are being . . . tortured so that the FBI can send a message to any future whistleblowers that this is what life will be like for you?
- A. I do.¹⁴⁸

C. Marcus Allen Was Suspended for Merely Forwarding Open-Source News Articles to His Colleagues.

The FBI retaliated against Marcus Allen, a decorated Marine and former FBI Staff Operations Specialist in the Charlotte Field Office, for simply performing the duties of his job.¹⁴⁹ Like other whistleblowers, Allen was suspended without pay.

Allen, who held a top-secret security clearance for approximately two decades, had worked as part of FBI Charlotte's Joint Terrorism Task Force (JTTF) while employed by the Bureau.¹⁵⁰ In addition to the JTTF, Allen's duties included "respond[ing] to the intelligence program."¹⁵¹ In order to meet the requirements of the intelligence program, Allen testified he was required to perform "all-source analysis" in which he would "research publicly available information [and] anything on the open web . . . to help out with our assessments and cases that the FBI has."¹⁵² While reading open-source news articles and watching open-source opinion videos concerning the events at the U.S. Capitol on January 6, 2021, Allen testified that he sent around links to these articles for his squad's "situational awareness" related to the FBI's investigation.¹⁵³ Because these open-source articles questioned the FBI's handling of the violence at the Capitol, the FBI suspended Allen for "conspiratorial views in regards to the events of January 6th"¹⁵⁴ However, Allen testified that passing along such articles was "part of [his] job."¹⁵⁵ Allen particularly stated:

Q. And why exactly did you send th[e] email[s]?

A. I sent [the emails] just for awareness because the[y] . . . indicated potential problems with the investigation as far as informants were concerned, and our organization's potential forthrightness about the utilization of informants there on that day. That might have some impact on our cases and the subjects that we're looking up, and just a general awareness overall for the investigation as a whole, that there might have been some kind of potential Federal involvement with the activities on January 6th, and I thought it was important enough that it like warranted our attention, you know.

Q. Is it safe to say that you sending th[ose] email[s] was part of your job at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you direct any of your colleagues to take any action regarding [these emails]?

A. No.¹⁵⁶

Worse yet, the FBI did not even give Allen the opportunity to rebut the allegations or to meet with agency leadership in his office.¹⁵⁷ Instead, Allen testified:

Q. So I want to talk more about the actual day of your suspension. I know that might be tough. So can you walk us through what happened that day?

A. Yes. So on the actual day of my suspension, I met with the chief security officer . . . , as well as [the] assistant special agent in charge The assistant special agents in charge are like the top three or four agents in the office right underneath the special agent in charge who's the chief essentially. And I met with them in a parking lot at a Cracker Barrel off of Carowinds Boulevard in Charlotte. They met me, and they read off a letter in the parking lot that I was being suspended for conspiratorial views in regards to the events of January 6th, and that my suspension—the date of the start was January 10th. The day of the meeting was January 19th, and it would be without pay as well.¹⁵⁸

However, the retaliation did not end with Allen's suspension. During his suspension, Allen testified that he sought the FBI's permission to seek outside employment, but the FBI has refused to acknowledge his requests or provide him with the documentation necessary for other employment. Allen specifically testified:

Q. Have you ever sought [the FBI's] approval for outside employment?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you expand upon that and tell us when you sought outside employment?

A. Yes. I sought outside employment within the past month. I went through the process. Because of the nature of the employer, I needed to correspond with an ethics attorney, which I did. I explained to him the announcement and the type of job, and we had a correspondence back and forth.

¹⁵⁶ Id. at 30-31.

And he relayed to me to go ahead and submit the outside employment form, the 331B, to the chief security officer at the Charlotte Field Office, . . . , which I did. I reached out to her. I submitted it, and she said she put it within the [Enterprise Process Automation System].¹⁵⁹ That employment approval—there’s a 15 business day response time, and that 15 day response time has been expired for several days, and I’ve received no correspondence back from the Bureau in its regard.¹⁶⁰

Allen additionally testified:

Q. And so you have received no answer as of today about your outside employment request?

A. No.

Q. And before that, did you submit to the FBI a prayer journal for prepublication review?

A. Yes.

Q. And when, about, was that?

A. Let’s see. That would’ve been October of 2022.

Q. And why did you submit it to the FBI for prepublication review?

A. I just wanted to make sure that it was okay; that, you know, I had their okay to go ahead and do it. Because of the nature of the situation, I conveyed, you know, there is nothing in here referencing my time as an employee for the FBI. You know, there’s nothing in reference to the FBI like, basically conveying to them that there’s nothing there that I’m trying to profit off of my association with the FBI. And I just want to make sure that I’ve got the, “Hey, we’re good to go. You can go ahead and do whatever you want with your prayer journal.” There was a correspondence back and forth, and then the correspondence dropped off, and I got no response after that.

¹⁶⁰ Allen Interview at 66-67.

Q. So your goal was to publish the prayer journal. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And maybe gain some income, since you weren't earning any income at that point in time?

A. Yes.

Q. So you're suspended from the FBI February of 2022. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you get a month of pay due to your service to the country. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you are without pay from February until today, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So you sought prepublication of your prayer journal in October of 2022 to earn some income, and then you never heard back from the FBI as to whether or not you could go ahead and publish it?

A. Correct.

Q. And then, just this month, you requested outside employment approval. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have never heard back from the FBI?

A. No.

Q. So you've been languishing now for over a year on unpaid suspension. Is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And, during that time, you have earned no income. Is that correct?

A. Correct.¹⁶¹

Allen further testified about the financial hardship that the FBI's decision to suspend him without pay has had on his family. He explained:

My family and I have been surviving on early withdrawals from our retirement accounts while the FBI has ignored my request for approval to obtain outside employment during the review of my security clearance.¹⁶²

The FBI officially revoked Mr. Allen's security clearance one day after his transcribed interview to this Committee.

D. Whistleblowers Have Described How the FBI's Politicization Has Crowded Out its Traditional Law Enforcement Function.

Whistleblowers have told the Committee that the FBI's Washington hierarchy is "rotted at its core" and maintains a "systemic culture of unaccountability." The FBI and the Department of Justice have been deeply politicized by its current partisan leadership. This politicized behavior has adversely affected front-line FBI agents.

According to O'Boyle, the FBI has allowed itself to be "enveloped in this politicization and weaponization" so much so that it is "a cancerous point."¹⁶³ O'Boyle testified:

Q. Are you aware of allegations that the FBI is using security clearance revocations as a tool to purge conservatives from its ranks?

A. I am.

Q. Do you believe that's occurring?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe that the FBI has become political?

A. I do.

Q. Do you think the extent of the politicization at the FBI is a problem that festers within its hierarchy, or is it nationwide, enterprise-wide?

¹⁶² Id. at 6.

¹⁶³ O'Boyle Interview at 154.

- A. I think it's encompassed in the hierarchy and then it trickles down throughout the rest of the Bureau. And those who are especially geared towards promoting will adhere themselves to whatever they need to promote. I think most people out in the field try to avoid that politicization of the agency, which is good. But it's gotten to a point, it seems to me, that it's like a cancerous point where the FBI has let itself become enveloped in this politicization and weaponization that I don't know how to even begin to fix it.¹⁶⁴

When asked about characterizations of the FBI's hierarchy, Friend stated that it was "consistent" with what he has heard from other FBI employees.¹⁶⁵ Friend testified:

- Q. Whistleblowers told committee Republicans that the FBI's Washington hierarchy is, quote, "rotted at its core," end quote, maintains a, quote, "systemic culture of unaccountability," end quote, and is full of, quote, "rampant corruption, manipulation, and abuse," end quote. Do you agree with these statements?

A. Yes.

- Q. And what is your reaction to hearing that this is how people characterize the FBI?

A. It sounds consistent with just about everybody that I've talked to who has never gone to headquarters.

- Q. So it doesn't surprise you that fellow FBI employees and agents are making these characterizations?

A. No.¹⁶⁶

Similarly, Allen testified about the politicization that he has witnessed within the FBI. He explained:

- Q. Mr. Allen, do you feel that you've been treated fairly?

A. No.

¹⁶⁴ Id.

¹⁶⁵ Friend Interview at 130-31.

¹⁶⁶ Id.

- Q. Do you believe that the FBI has become political?
- A. Yes.
- Q. Given your experience, do you see any other recent actions that we haven't discussed today by the Biden administration, DOJ, and the FBI as problematic?
- A. Problematic? I would say, by appearance, some of the information that's been made available in the public domain about public corruption that on the surface appears to not be being pursued seems problematic, especially in regards of public corruption when it comes from the highest offices in the land.
- Q. Is it fair to say that you've lost confidence in the FBI's leadership?
- A. Yes.
- Q. So the FBI told this committee that it . . . "does not target or take adverse actions against employees for exercising First Amendment rights or for their political views." Do you think that's accurate?
- A. I don't agree with that statement.¹⁶⁷

In Hill's view, similarly, the FBI needs "tough love" to eliminate its highly politicized culture and return to a "highly functioning, apolitical, high-performing FBI."¹⁶⁸

For whistleblowers who have spoken with the Committee and the Select Subcommittee, working for the FBI was their dream job.¹⁶⁹ They came to Congress with the goal of helping to return the FBI to its origins as an effective, apolitical law enforcement agency.¹⁷⁰ The FBI's motto—Fidelity, Bravery, Integrity—has long been used to describe the motivation of the men and women who serve.¹⁷¹ Yet agents like O'Boyle and Friend do not believe the FBI has kept faith with this motto, stating it “couldn’t be further from the truth.”¹⁷² And when they spoke out against what they reasonably believed were abuses and violations of law, they were silenced and their lives were upended. The efforts to silence whistleblowers, treat them cruelly, and ruin their careers are intended to prevent other agents from speaking out. The first step toward treatment is diagnosing the illness, and these brave whistleblowers have outlined the systemic sickness at the FBI’s core.

¹⁷² O’Boyle Interview at 90; see also id. (stating that other agents have supported his whistleblowing but “when they see something that’s wrong, most of them don’t report it, because they’re trying to get to that 20-year mark and get that pension or whatever ... is inhibiting them”).

III. Committee Democrats Attacked and Defamed FBI Whistleblowers to Advance a Political Agenda.

On March 2, 2023, Committee Democrats released a misleading document based on selective, cherry-picked information to attack some of the FBI whistleblowers who bravely testified to the Committee and Select Subcommittee.¹⁷³ Rather than engage in good faith with the substance of the concerns raised by these FBI whistleblowers, the Democrats mischaracterized much of the whistleblowers' testimony, reached conclusions not based in fact or law, and denigrated these Americans with ad hominem attacks. The Democrat's report was so egregiously inaccurate that news organizations reporting on it were forced to later correct the record about the whistleblowers.¹⁷⁴

Wildly, the Democrat report asserted that “[n]o law protects witnesses who speak to Congress.”¹⁷⁵ This assertion is plain wrong. But worse, it reveals the Democrats' broader posture toward these brave federal law-enforcement officers: distort, distract, and discredit any effort to expose federal bureaucratic misconduct. The Democrats similarly deployed this strategy during the Select Subcommittee's March 9, 2023, hearing to expose the government-censorship complex. During that hearing, several Democrat Members pressured two independent and highly respected journalists to reveal their sources, and Ranking Member Stacey Plaskett attacked them as “so-called journalists.”¹⁷⁶

A. The Democrat Report Erroneously Claims that the FBI Whistleblowers Who Have Appeared Before the Committee Are Not Real Whistleblowers.

During their transcribed interviews, each of the FBI whistleblowers detailed episodes in which they had firsthand knowledge of what they reasonably believed to constitute fraud, waste, abuse, mismanagement, or violations of a law, rule, or regulation at the FBI. Despite the unsupported conclusions in the Democrats' report asserting otherwise, these episodes as detailed by the whistleblowers in their own words are exactly the types of protected disclosures contemplated by whistleblower protection laws.

Federal law—specifically, 5 U.S.C. § 2303—protects federal employees, including FBI employees, from retaliation for disclosing what he or she reasonably believes to be evidence of a violation of any law, rule, or regulation, or mismanagement, a gross waste of funds, an abuse of authority, or a substantial and specific danger to public health or safety.¹⁷⁷ Under the law, a whistleblower is protected even if what he or she discloses ends up being wrong or mistaken, so long as it is a reasonable, good-faith belief.¹⁷⁸ The law is not overly complicated, yet the Democrats’ report claims without evidence that “[n]one of the three witnesses interviewed to date comes close to meeting that definition” of a whistleblower.¹⁷⁹ Democrats concede, as they must, that an FBI employee is protected from reprisal if a whistleblower makes a disclosure that he or she reasonably believes to evidence such violations.¹⁸⁰ Nevertheless, throughout their report, they ignored the reasonable belief standard and, instead, invented a beyond a reasonable doubt standard that whistleblowers must satisfy.¹⁸¹

The Democrats’ report improperly tries to disqualify the whistleblowers’ numerous meritorious claims by mischaracterizing their disclosures, manipulating their testimony, and making false claims to support the Democrats’ conclusion that Hill, O’Boyle, and Friend are not real whistleblowers. Despite the Democrat’s bluster, the record is crystal clear. Each of these whistleblowers had a good-faith basis for believing wrongdoing had occurred.

1. George Hill.

Retired FBI Supervisory Intelligence Analyst George Hill provided the Committee with detailed allegations of FBI abuses. However, instead of engaging with Hill’s allegations, the Democrat report minimized the allegations by trying to discredit Hill. The report claims that “Hill explained that he himself did not handle any cases . . . and, while he viewed an electronic communication referencing the list in the FBI’s case management system, he never opened or viewed the actual list himself.”¹⁸² Rolling Stone, in an article based on information leaked from Democrats, assumed this biased framing, asserting that Hill “learned about [the allegations] only through secondhand chatter from colleagues.”¹⁸³ In a response to Rolling Stone, Hill’s attorney explained that this assertion was “factually incorrect, misleading, and lacked context.”¹⁸⁴ An examination of Hill’s testimony demonstrates that the Rolling Stone article—and the Democrat assertion on which it is based—is wrong.

Hill testified that he observed the FBI Sentinel electronic message bringing the list of Bank of America customers’ transactions purportedly related to January 6th into the FBI’s internal system, and that “the [Supervisory Special Agent] and I had already talked about it, and the SSA had already talked to the [Assistant Special Agent in Charge] about it.”¹⁸⁵ Hill believed the FBI’s receipt of this information was a violation of law, explaining that “there was no legal process . . . asking for it . . . from the Bureau or from DOJ or anybody.”¹⁸⁶ On these facts, it is clear that Hill had a reasonable belief that there was a violation of law.

2. Garret O’Boyle.

The Democrat’s attempt to discredit the disclosures of O’Boyle by creating a procedural strawman around his allegations. They criticized O’Boyle for not providing information in his transcribed interview that was included in his protected disclosures to Congress. The Democrats concede “[t]hat material may well include relevant, probative evidence that would bear on the validity of his claims,” but still wrongly assert that O’Boyle provided no “evidence of a violation of law, rule, or regulation”¹⁸⁷ Here too, the Democrats ignored the substance of O’Boyle’s testimony.

During his transcribed interview, O’Boyle highlighted his numerous firsthand experiences with fraud, waste, and abuse at the FBI.

- In highlighting the FBI’s attempt to inflate DVE numbers, he testified to one instance in which the FBI instructed him to divide one case into four cases, to “open a case for every individual that I had an articulable, factual basis that there may have been potential Federal law being violated.”¹⁸⁸ He said this was done so the FBI could show Congress that DVE cases were on the rise and in turn receive more funding.¹⁸⁹
- In another part of his interview, O’Boyle testified about the EDUOFFICIALS threat tag, used by the FBI to investigate parents who attended school board meetings. O’Boyle testified that investigating parents for First Amendment-protected free speech was “absolutely not” a proper use of FBI resources.¹⁹⁰
- He also testified to the FBI’s use of “arbitrary” metrics to award bonuses to Special Agents in Charge.¹⁹¹ By basing bonuses on arbitrary metrics like how many Title III wiretaps or FISAs were obtained, O’Boyle stated that this focus on metrics “leads to a pervasive culture of not letting the cases dictate where the investigation goes, but it’s the manager or the agent pushing for a certain avenue.”¹⁹²

This testimony establishes that O’Boyle had a reasonable belief that the FBI was violating the law, abusing its authority, or wasting taxpayer funding.

3. Stephen Friend.

The Democrat report also presents a strawman to discount FBI whistleblower Friend’s allegations of FBI abuse. The report asserts that because the Office of Special Counsel (OSC) and the Department of Justice’s Office of Inspector General (OIG) declined to open an investigation into Friend’s claims, his whistleblower claims are invalid.¹⁹³ Neither the facts nor the law support the Democrats’ anti-whistleblower assertions.

While OSC and OIG did not open investigations into Friend’s whistleblower claims, OIG did not reject Friend’s retaliation claim.¹⁹⁴ In response to erroneous media reporting relying on the Democrats’ report in early March 2023, Friend’s attorney explained that “the OIG ’had not investigated Friend’s claims at that point, but did not reject them either—it simply claimed it did not have enough resources and chose not to open an investigation.¹⁹⁵ The OIG asked Friend for his permission to refer the disclosure back to the FBI to investigate itself, which Friend declined to provide.”¹⁹⁶

By obsessing on OSC’s failure to open an investigation, Democrats ignored serious allegations of FBI wrongdoing. Specifically, Friend’s written complaint, which he provided to the Democrats in advance of his transcribed interview, included allegations that the FBI engaged in at least three systemic abuses.¹⁹⁷ Friend testified about matters concerning:

- The manipulation of case management policies to drive a false narrative supporting an FBI priority;¹⁹⁸
- The violation of the DOJ’s Use of Force policy and FBI policy to send a message to disfavored actors; and¹⁹⁹
- Whistleblower retaliation.²⁰⁰

During his transcribed interview, Friend testified about how the FBI’s focus on January 6 cases led to wasted resources and a de-emphasis on child exploitation crimes.²⁰¹ Friend related one example in which the FBI ordered Friend to make a three-hour round-trip to conduct an in-person interview of a January 6 subject, even though other less-intrusive methods had not substantiated the allegations.²⁰² Friend explained that he learned the subject was not in D.C. on January 6 because he was at his son’s funeral in Florida.²⁰³ Friend testified that by confronting the man about his whereabouts on that day, he needlessly forced the man to re-live the worst day of his life.²⁰⁴ As Friend’s attorney explained to the media, “Friend’s disclosures are protected whistleblower disclosure about wasted resources²⁰⁵—and Friend testified accordingly²⁰⁶—but the Democrats edited that portion of the transcript out of their one-sided presentation.”²⁰⁷

B. The Democrat Report Slandered the Integrity of Veteran Federal Law Enforcement Officers in the Service of Partisan Politics.

Committee Democrats ignored the substance of O’Boyle’s, Friend’s, and Hill’s allegations of FBI wrongdoing. Instead, they attacked the messengers with ad hominem attacks. Throughout their report, Democrats implied and then explicitly accused these former FBI employees of being “insurrectionists” and “conspiracy theorists” who only sought to profit from their whistleblowing activities.

In their report, Democrats asserted that these FBI whistleblowers objected to the arrest of January 6 subjects who had committed crimes. This is wrong and easily contradicted by the actual whistleblower testimony. For example:

- In questioning from Democrat staff, Friend explicitly condemned the individuals who committed violence on January 6th. He testified: “[A] lot of these guys are bad dudes, and they should go to jail. And we didn’t follow our rules, and we set ourselves up to get crushed at trial . . . lose on appeal. I want to win.”²⁰⁸ Friend explained that his concern was with the process leading to the arrests, not with the people, especially when certain January 6 subjects were cooperating with investigators.²⁰⁹
- Hill similarly testified: “I don’t support, under any circumstances, attacking police officers, breaking into restricted areas, destroying of government property. . . . Every person that broke the law needs to be identified and prosecuted to the fullest extent. What I take umbrage with is casting in a sea net covering miles and scooping up everything that they can and the erosion of civil liberties surrounding that.”²¹⁰
- When asked whether he believes the government should be prosecuting individuals that were involved on January 6th, O’Boyle testified: “Some of them, yes.”²¹¹

Rather than address the content of the whistleblower allegations, Democrats attacked the whistleblowers for their personal, constitutionally protected views. At each transcribed interview, Democrats spent a majority of their time badgering the witnesses about their personal opinions on public matters. Democrats confronted the witnesses with cherry-picked social media posts, hoping to portray the whistleblowers as holding controversial, disfavored, or unpopular personal opinions.²¹² The Democrats used this information in their report to complain that each whistleblower “offered a wide range of personal opinions,” and suggest that the substance of their whistleblower disclosure was therefore discredited.²¹³

Democrats even pried into the private finances of the whistleblowers, hoping to malign them as having pecuniary motivations for disclosing FBI wrongdoing. The Democrats criticized Friend for receiving help from a former Trump Administration official in finding a job after the FBI all but forced him to resign.²¹⁴ Because Friend’s new employer supports the important work of the Select Subcommittee,²¹⁵ the Democrat report concluded that “[p]ublicity generated by the Committee’s investigation would benefit Friend in his new role by increasing the visibility of that organization” and, therefore, “Friend has a monetary incentive to continue pursuing his claims.”²¹⁶

Moreover, the Democrat report baselessly chastised Friend for accepting a monetary gift from a friendly organization during his FBI suspension. The Democrats implied that this gift colored the reliability of Friend’s testimony,²¹⁷ but they conveniently omitted that the FBI had denied Friend’s request to seek outside employment, leaving him to exhaust his accrued leave time, expend his personal savings, and eventually go without pay.²¹⁸ The Democrat report also failed to mention that Friend’s wife lost her job and, at the time, was recovering from a serious surgery.²¹⁹ When Friend again asked the FBI to seek outside employment and for his training records—so he could pursue other employment opportunities—he never heard back.²²⁰

In his testimony, Friend denied, clearly and unequivocally, that he was paid to come forward with his allegations against the FBI.²²¹ Friend testified that he never took money from a fundraising account that he promoted for suspended whistleblowers’ living expenses,²²² he denied making money from the articles he wrote,²²³ and he declared that he has not yet made any money off of a book he authored about his experience.²²⁴ Only after the FBI denied Friend’s requests for outside employment and only after Friend and his family survived 150 days of unpaid suspension did Friend take a job as a fellow with a conservative organization to provide for his family and “be a productive citizen.”²²⁵

Like Friend, O’Boyle experienced Democrat slander during and after his transcribed interview. The Democrat report insinuates that O’Boyle had a “financial connection” to a former Trump Administration official and his attorney “appeared to surprise his client with an announcement that he was now representing O’Boyle pro bono.”²²⁶ Conveniently, the Democrat report omitted that O’Boyle spent over $10,000 to retrieve his personal belongings from FBI storage after the FBI gave him the “run around” when it suspended him on his first day after a cross-country transfer.²²⁷

Notably, their attack on Hill’s credibility was so unfair that it prompted an apology from Democrats at the interview for impugning his credibility.²²⁸ Particularly, during Hill’s testimony to this Committee and Subcommittee, counsel for Democrats on the Committee and Subcommittee castigated Hill for some social media posts and podcast appearances in which Hill disseminated his political opinions based on his concerns that were apparent during his time at the FBI. After the Democrats’ counsel ceased the attacks, Hill testified:

Q. So, just before we close, the minority staff spent a lot of time going through various what I would call political opinions that you have posted since leaving the FBI. Is it fair to say that those opinions were based on the concerns that you had about what you saw while you were in the FBI as well as public reporting?

A. Yes. Nothing’s changed. I love the FBI. But, like with any parent, I mean—or if someone calls themselves your friend, if they’re not willing to say, “Hey, you need to adjust yourself,” they’re not your friend. If all they do is just say, “Hey, this is great, this is great, this is great, keep going the way you’re going,” they’re truly not your friend and they’re not a very good parent. Nothing’s changed. I want the FBI to be successful.

Q. So the minority staff also, in the first round of questioning, said that your statements on the podcast went to your claimed that they went to your credibility. I didn’t hear anything that suggested that you were dishonest in any way, in any form, anywhere, anytime. Is everything that you testified to today with regard to the facts accurate and truthful, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Regarding fact testimony, yes. Opinions are opinions, and, unfortunately, I probably gave too many of those.

[Minority Counsel]. And I should clarify. I did say “credibility.” I meant to say “bias.”

A. Huge difference.

C. Democrats Deployed the Same Abusive Tactics to Attempt to Discredit Journalists Matt Taibbi and Michael Shellenberger.

The Democrat report exemplifies their tactics of personal destruction. These tactics were on full display during the Select Subcommittee's March 9, 2023, hearing about government censorship revealed by two journalists in the Twitter files. There, as they did when they accused the FBI whistleblowers of not being real whistleblowers, Democrats suggested that the journalists covering the Twitter Files—Matt Taibbi and Michael Shellenberger—were not real journalists, but merely “so-called journalists.”²³⁰

During her line of questioning at the hearing, Democrat Representative Debbie Wasserman Schultz told Taibbi, “Being a Republican witness today certainly cast[s] a cloud over your objectivity.”²³¹ This is no different from the attack Democrats lodged against the whistleblowers, telling the New York Times that by testifying to a Republican-led Committee, the whistleblowers “have engaged in partisan conduct that calls into question their credibility.”²³² Just as the Democrat report accused Friend and O'Boyle of receiving money from a conservative organization in order to shape their testimony, Democrat members asked Taibbi if he benefitted financially from exposing misconduct. During her questioning, Representative Wasserman Schultz admonished Taibbi:

Before the release of the emails . . . in August of last year, you had 661,000 Twitter followers. After the Twitter Files, your followers doubled, and now it's three times what it was last August. I imagine your Substack [r]eadership, which is a subscription, increased significantly because of the work you did for Elon Musk. Now, I'm not asking you to put a dollar figure on it, but it's quite obvious that you've profited from the Twitter Files. You hit the jackpot on that Vegas slot machine to which you referred. That's true, isn't it?²³³

Taibbi denied the insinuation that his reporting was profit-motivated—calling it “a wash” between income generated and income spent on his reporting—and defended the integrity of his work.²³⁴

The startling Democrat attacks on the First Amendment continued when they pressed the journalists to reveal their sources for the information contained in the Twitter Files. They pressed Taibbi and Shellenberger:

Ms. Plaskett: And then who gave you access to these emails? Who was the individual that gave you permission to access the emails?

Mr. Taibbi: Well, the attribution from my story is sources at Twitter, and that’s what I’m going to refer to.

Ms. Plaskett: Okay. Did Mr. Musk contact you, Mr. Taibbi?

Mr. Taibbi: Again, the attribution from my story is sources at Twitter.

Ms. Plaskett: Mr. Shellenberger, did Mr. Musk contact you?

Mr. Shellenberger: Actually, no. I was brought in by my friend, Bari Weiss.²³⁵

Ms. Garcia: Mr. Taibbi, I want to follow up a little bit on the ranking member’s questions. When was the first time that Mr. Musk approached you about writing The Twitter Files?

Mr. Taibbi: Again, Congresswoman, that would –

Ms. Garcia: I just need a date, sir.

Mr. Taibbi: But I can’t give it to you, unfortunately, because this is a question of sourcing, and I don’t give up – I’m a journalist. I don’t reveal my sources.

Ms. Garcia: It’s not a question of sources. It’s a question of chronology.

- Mr. Taibbi: Again, Congresswoman, you're asking me to –
- Ms. Garcia: You can answer yes or no.
- Mr. Taibbi: You're asking a journalist to reveal a source.
- Ms. Garcia: So do you consider Mr. Musk to be the direct source of all of this?
- Mr. Taibbi: No. Now you're trying to get me to say that he is the source. I just can't answer your question about sources.
- Ms. Garcia: Well, he either is or he isn't. If you're telling me you can't answer because it's your source, well, then, the only logical conclusion is that he is, in fact, your source.²³⁶

Committee Democrats have opposed the Committee's critical oversight work since its inception. The conduct of Democrats in attacking brave FBI whistleblowers and intrepid investigative journalists speaks volumes to their motives. Although deeply disappointing, it is consistent with their promises to sabotage the Committee's work. As Leader Jeffries and Ranking Member Nadler promised: Democrats would fight our work "tooth and nail."²³⁷

From the outset of the 118th Congress, Democrats have reached new lows in their obstruction. They released nonpublic copies of the Committee's first subpoenas to the White House, which in turn provided them to Punchbowl. Committee Democrats were the source of the leak because only the Committee—and not any subpoena recipients—had possession of the versions of the subpoenas that later appeared in Punchbowl.²³⁸ Just weeks later, Democrats provided cherry-picked excerpts of transcripts of whistleblower interviews to Rolling Stone and CNN to preemptively discredit their testimony. The Democrats' tactics in their subsequent report and the hearing is more of the same.

A. The Actions of Committee Democrats Discourage Whistleblowing and Facilitate Citizens' Fear of Government.

Because the Committee Democrats' report outed FBI whistleblowers' identities and substance of their testimonies to the public, one whistleblower, Allen, approached the Committee on the condition that they could speak initially only in presence of Republicans. Regarding this choice, Allen testified:

While I have agreed to this voluntary transcribed interview to help the committee fulfill its constitutional oversight function, I have concerns about the ability of the committee to protect me from further retaliation and protect confidential information I share during the interview. I have seen news coverage where excerpts of other FBI whistleblower testimony to this committee has been selectively leaked to fuel deceptive political attacks on those who have cooperated and provided voluntary testimony. That naturally makes me reluctant to subject myself to the same abuse, and that is why I was not comfortable agreeing to testify in a private setting with the same staff who are responsible for the previous leak and smear campaign against other whistleblowers. I am comfortable testifying to the chairman's staff based on assurances that confidential information provided during this interview will not be released without my consent and authorization by the chairman.²³⁹

Democrats' behavior regarding their treatment of brave FBI whistleblowers is a disgrace and an affront to the service that these whistleblowers have provided to this country. It is obvious from whistleblowers' testimonies that the Democrats' actions have had their desired chilling effect on whistleblowers who wish to come forward to expose unlawful activities within the FBI.

Conclusion

The FBI, under Director Christopher Wray and Attorney General Merrick Garland, is broken. The leadership at the FBI and Justice Department have weaponized federal law enforcement against everyday Americans, seeking to silence those who dare to have a different viewpoint. Whistleblowers play a vital role in identifying and rooting out waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement in the federal government. When they speak out against such abuses, federal law protects them from retaliation.²⁴⁰ If you are an FBI whistleblower, however, this is not the case. As detailed above, the brave agents who have testified to the Committee and Subcommittee have faced devastating retaliation from the agency for their protected disclosures, with such retaliation taking the form of indefinite suspensions without pay and being left homeless and without income by the country's once-preeminent law enforcement agency.

Meanwhile, whistleblower testimony highlights that the FBI's partisan leadership is currently engaging in a "purge" of agents who hold conservative political beliefs. Particularly, the testimony from Friend demonstrates the agency's blatant targeting and dismissal of conservatives within its ranks. In Friend's case, he was indefinitely suspended and had his security clearance suspended for simply asking why the FBI was unnecessarily using force to arrest individuals suspected of participating in the events at the U.S. Capitol on January 6, 2021. The agency's attacks on bold agents must cease, and this Committee and Select Subcommittee will consider legislation aimed to curb such attacks. Additionally, the matters concerning the FBI's treatment of O'Boyle, Friend, Hill, and Allen will be referred to the U.S. Office of Special Counsel and the Inspector General for further investigation.

The Committee's and Select Subcommittee's investigation into the weaponization of the federal law enforcement apparatus continues. Consistent with the charge to keep the House of Representatives informed of the oversight work, this interim report provides a summary of the whistleblower testimony received so far. The Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to uncover facts to inform legislative reforms to protect civil liberties and rein in federal law enforcement.

THE FBI'S BREACH OF RELIGIOUS FREEDOM: THE WEAPONIZATION OF LAW ENFORCEMENT AGAINST CATHOLIC AMERICANS

Interim Staff Report of the Committee on the Judiciary
and the
Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government

U.S. House of Representatives

December 4, 2023

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government have been investigating the Federal Bureau of Investigation's (FBI) categorization of certain Catholic Americans as potential domestic terrorists. While the FBI claims it “does not categorize investigations as domestic terrorism based on the religious beliefs—to include Catholicism—of the subject involved,” an FBI-wide memorandum originating from the FBI's Richmond Field Office did just that.¹ Under the guise of tackling the threat of domestic terrorism, the memorandum painted certain “radical-traditionalist Catholics” (RTCs) as violent extremists and proposed opportunities for the FBI to infiltrate Catholic churches as a form of “threat mitigation.”² The FBI's Richmond memorandum is a startling reminder that Americans' civil liberties and core Constitutional rights must be vigorously guarded against government overreach, including in this case from an overzealous law enforcement agency.

In February 2023, the Committee began its oversight after whistleblower Kyle Seraphin revealed the existence of the Richmond memorandum in internal FBI systems.³ In April 2023, after the FBI failed to fully cooperate with the oversight, Chairman Jordan issued a subpoena to Director Christopher Wray, requesting documents related to the memorandum.⁴ The Committee and Select Subcommittee's oversight shows that the FBI abused its counterterrorism tools to target Catholic Americans as potential domestic terrorists. The Committee and Select Subcommittee discovered that the FBI relied on at least one undercover agent to develop its assessment and the FBI even proposed developing sources among the Catholic clergy and church leadership.⁵ Not only did the FBI propose to develop sources, but it already interviewed a priest and choir director affiliated with a Catholic church in Richmond, Virginia for the memorandum.⁶ Most concerning of all, without the disclosure of the brave whistleblower, the Richmond memorandum would still be operative in FBI systems, violating the religious liberties of millions of Catholic Americans.

From witness testimony and FBI internal documents, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have learned that there were errors at every step of the drafting, review, approval, and removal process of the memorandum. For example:

⁶ Whistleblower disclosure to Committee.

- The documents received pursuant to the Committee’s subpoena show there was no legitimate basis for the memorandum to insert federal law enforcement into Catholic houses of worship.
- The basis for the Richmond memorandum relied on a single investigation in the Richmond Field Office’s area of responsibility in which the subject “self-described” as a “radical-traditionalist Catholic” (RTC).⁷ However, FBI employees could not define the meaning of an RTC when preparing, editing, or reviewing the memorandum. Even so, this single investigation became the basis for an FBI-wide memorandum warning about the dangers of “radical” Catholics.
- Whistleblower disclosures reveal that the FBI interviewed a priest and choir director affiliated with a Catholic church in Richmond, Virginia while preparing the memorandum to inform on the parishioner under investigation.⁸
- In addition to the investigation in Virginia, FBI Richmond relied on reporting from other field offices across the country, including FBI Los Angeles, FBI Milwaukee, and FBI Portland in making its assessment.⁹
- The two FBI employees who co-authored the memorandum later told FBI internal investigators that they knew the sources cited in the memorandum had a political bias—sources including the Southern Poverty Law Center, Salon, and The Atlantic.¹⁰
- The documents received pursuant to the Committee’s subpoena show that the FBI singled out Americans who are pro-life, pro-family, and support the biological basis for sex and gender distinction as potential domestic terrorists. The memorandum recognized “the run-up to the next general election cycle”¹¹ as a key time frame and cited the Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Organization decision that overturned Roe v. Wade as a flash point.
- Without considerable criticism in the wake of the disclosure of the memorandum, the document would have remained in an FBI-wide system. At the time of the memorandum’s disclosure, FBI officials were discussing turning the memorandum into an external, public-facing document highlighting the threats of “radical” Catholics. Most concerning, FBI Richmond still desires to convey this information to other field offices about “radical-traditionalist Catholics.”¹²

¹² Transcribed Interview with Stanley Meador, Special Agent in Charge, Fed. Bureau of Investigation at 115-116 (Aug 24, 2023) (on file with the Comm.) [hereinafter Meador Interview].

- FBI Richmond’s senior leadership saw the memorandum as an opportunity to insert federal law enforcement into places of worship and support outreach efforts to the Diocese of Richmond and other Catholic parishes.¹³
- Following public criticism about the memorandum, FBI Richmond’s Special Agent in Charge Stanley Meador met with members of the clergy, including the Most Reverend Barry Knestout, Bishop of the Diocese of Richmond, and a Cardinal of the Catholic Church to mend the FBI’s relationship with the Catholic community.
- Whistleblower disclosures to the Committee further reveal that the memorandum was accessible to other field offices across the country. However, the FBI still has no idea how many FBI employees accessed the memorandum before its removal and cannot confirm whether any outreach occurred to Catholic parishes as a result of the memorandum.

The Committee on the Judiciary, through and with its Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government, is charged with investigating “violations of the civil liberties of citizens of the United States.”¹⁴ This interim staff report fulfills the ongoing obligation to identify and report on instances of the weaponization of the federal government—here, the FBI’s mishandling of domestic violent extremism investigations against Catholic Americans exercising their First Amendment rights. While the documents and information received to date help to better understand what transpired, they do not tell the whole story. The Committee and the Select Subcommittee will continue to pursue the relevant facts to inform legislative reforms and to protect American civil liberties from government overreach.

BACKGROUND

On January 23, 2023, the FBI's Richmond Field Office published an eleven-page document, known as a domain perspective, that linked “racially or ethnically motivated violent extremists” (RMVEs) with individuals who hold a “radical-traditionalist Catholic” (RTC) ideology.¹⁵ In this memorandum, the FBI purported to distinguish what it called “traditional Catholics” from the RTC adherents, whom the FBI characterized as embracing “anti-Semitic, anti-immigrant, anti-LGBTQ, and white supremacist ideology.”¹⁶ The FBI identified certain public policy issues—such as conservative stances on immigration, affirmative action, and life issues—that it believed would “catalyz[e]” RTC adherents.¹⁷ In addition to attempting to separate and categorize Catholic Americans based on theological distinctions, the FBI underscored the political nature of its actions: “FBI Richmond assesses RMVE interest in RTCs is likely to increase over the next 12 or 24 months in the run-up to the next general election cycle.”¹⁸

The memorandum cited biased and partisan sources, including the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC), Salon, and The Atlantic, to support its assessment.¹⁹ For example, the SPLC misleadingly defines RTCs as “the largest single group of serious antisemites in America” and claims to have identified nine RTC “hate groups” across the United States.²⁰ The SPLC also identifies the broad term “Christian identity” as a hate group—a term that could arguably encompass millions of Americans with sincerely held religious beliefs.²¹ In addition, the SPLC routinely maligns several mainstream conservative and religious organizations as “hate” groups, simply because the SPLC disagrees with their views.²² The fact that the FBI would accept and circulate the SPLC’s partisan spin is highly concerning and undercuts the FBI’s assertion that it is unbiased and politically neutral.

On February 8, 2023, whistleblower Kyle Seraphin published a redacted version of the memorandum, condemning its partisan content.²³ The following day, news outlets immediately began reporting on the memorandum and its dangerous effect on protected First Amendment activity.²⁴ Virginia Attorney General Jason Miyares and 19 other state attorneys general even wrote a letter to Attorney General Garland and FBI Director Wray calling the memorandum “un-American and unconstitutional.”²⁵ Another whistleblower further told the Committee that the memorandum was available to FBI employees in field offices across the country, and many of these employees were “uniformly disappointed” that the memorandum was published in the first place.²⁶ Not only did these FBI employees recognize the memorandum’s clear constitutional breach, but they also feared that the document could have potentially served as the basis for future intelligence products.²⁷

In the wake of widespread criticism about the memorandum, the FBI withdrew the memorandum and blamed the Richmond Field Office for its creation and dissemination. On February 9, 2023, the FBI released a public statement to supplement its retraction of the memorandum:

While our standard practice is to not comment on specific intelligence products, this particular field office product—disseminated only within the FBI—regarding racially or ethnically motivated violent extremism does not meet the exacting standards of the FBI. Upon learning of the document, FBI Headquarters quickly began taking action to remove the document from FBI systems and conduct a review of the basis for the document. The

FBI is committed to sound analytic tradecraft and to investigating and preventing acts of violence and other crimes while upholding the constitutional rights of all Americans and will never conduct investigative activities or open an investigation based solely on First Amendment protected activity.²⁸

In response to these revelations, the Committee and Select Subcommittee began oversight into how the FBI could allow such a memorandum to be prepared, reviewed, approved, and disseminated. Although the FBI claims that it “will never conduct investigative activities or open an investigation based solely on First Amendment protected activity,” this memorandum itself is proof that the FBI has done just that, using taxpayer dollars. The FBI’s intrusion on Americans’ First Amendment rights demands that the Committee and Select Subcommittee conduct oversight into the circumstances of the memorandum’s creation and distribution, and to consider potential legislative reforms to ensure the FBI upholds the First Amendment.

Accordingly, on February 16, 2023, the Committee wrote to FBI Director Wray requesting documents and information regarding the FBI’s targeting of a set of Catholic Americans for their religious beliefs.²⁹ After receiving no response, the Committee sent a second letter on March 20, 2023.³⁰ On March 23, 2023, the Committee received a partial response consisting of only 18 pages—many with significant redactions—that prevented the Committee and Select Subcommittee from fully assessing the content and context of the documents.³¹

From this limited production, however, it was clear that the FBI, relying on information derived from at least one undercover employee, sought to use local religious organizations as “new avenues for tripwire and source development.”³² For example, in a section of the memorandum entitled “Opportunities,” the FBI wrote:

In addition to [redaction], engage in outreach to the leadership of other [Society of Saint Pius X (SSPX)] chapels in the FBI Richmond [area of responsibility] to sensitize these congregations to the warning signs of radicalization and enlist their assistance to serve as suspicious activity tripwires.³³

The FBI similarly noted two other opportunities to engage in outreach with “mainline Catholic parishes,” including St. Joseph Parish leadership and the local “diocesan leadership[.]”³⁴ The FBI also expressed an interest in “leverag[ing] existing sources and/or initiat[ing] Type 5 Assessments to develop new sources with the placement and access” to report on suspicious activity.³⁵

Although the FBI claimed in its response to the Committee and Select Subcommittee to have “numerous” and “rigorous” policies to protect First Amendment rights,³⁶ the memorandum was reviewed and approved by two senior intelligence analysts and the Chief Division Counsel—the FBI’s top lawyer in the Richmond Field Office.³⁷ There are no indications that any FBI employees in Richmond had any concern with the content of the memorandum until after it was disclosed publicly.

This shocking, but limited, information reinforced the need for all material responsive to the Committee’s requests. To that end, on April 10, 2023, Chairman Jordan issued a subpoena to compel Director Wray to produce additional material regarding the memorandum.³⁸ On April 28, 2023—the day the FBI was due to comply in full with the subpoena—the Bureau produced an additional 248 pages of documents in response to the subpoena.³⁹

On July 25, 2023, the FBI produced a version of the memorandum with fewer redactions than the two previous versions it had produced for the Committee.⁴⁰ This new version showed that the FBI’s actions were not limited to “a single field office” as Director Wray testified to the Committee on July 12, 2023.⁴¹ Rather, the FBI relied on reporting from field offices around the country, including FBI Los Angeles and FBI Milwaukee, and in “[c]oordinat[ion] with” FBI Portland in making the assessment that led to the creation of the memorandum.⁴²

Since then, the Committee has received additional information about the genesis, review, and approval of the Richmond memorandum. On August 22, 2023, the Committee received a briefing from the FBI’s Inspection Division (INSD) about the FBI’s internal review of the memorandum. Following the briefing, the FBI produced another 31 pages of documents, including a redacted version of its report findings and another less-redacted version of the memorandum.⁴³ The Committee also conducted a transcribed interview with the Special Agent in Charge of the Richmond Field Office, Stanley Meador. Two months later, on October 27, the FBI produced an additional 261 pages of documents in response to the subpoena.⁴⁴

While this information sheds some light on how the FBI could abuse civil liberties so egregiously, the FBI’s responses remain deficient. The FBI has failed to produce the names of the FBI employees who were involved in drafting, reviewing, approving, or disseminating the memorandum. Furthermore, the FBI's internal review is not a substitute for the Committee's independent and constitutional duty to oversee the FBI and to ensure the First Amendment's guarantee of the free exercise of religion is protected from government overreach.

NEW INFORMATION ABOUT THE FBI’S TARGETING OF CATHOLIC AMERICANS

The Committee and Select Subcommittee’s oversight reveals how the FBI abused its federal law-enforcement resources to single out a specific sect of Catholic Americans because of their religious beliefs. The documents and testimony recently obtained shed new light on the genesis, review, and approval of the Richmond memorandum that equated “racially or ethnically motivated violent extremists” (RMVEs) with persons holding a “radical-traditionalist Catholic” (RTC) ideology. It is evident that the FBI violated the First Amendment, and without widespread criticism, the memorandum may have remained in an FBI-wide system indefinitely.

I. The FBI’s own internal review identified errors at every step of the drafting, review, and approval of Richmond’s Catholic “intelligence product.”

Even after the Committee’s subpoena, the FBI neglected to fulfill the Committee’s requests, and instead delayed its compliance until the conclusion of an internal review spearheaded by the FBI’s Inspection Division (INSD). Several months later, the Committee finally received a briefing from the INSD, as well as the FBI’s Directorate of Intelligence (DI) and the Counterterrorism Division (CTD), regarding its internal review of the Richmond memorandum. As a part of this internal review, the FBI conducted 26 interviews with employees involved in drafting, reviewing, and approving the memorandum. Following the briefing, the FBI made two additional document productions, including a redacted version of its internal review report, which provides additional details about the creation of the memorandum, and email communications between the co-authors, peer reviewers, and supervisory analysts before the memorandum was published. In addition, on August 24, 2022, the Committee conducted an interview with Special Agent in Charge (SAC) Stanley Meador regarding the memorandum.

A. The two experienced Intelligence Analysts who authored the memorandum knew they were citing unreliable sources with a political bias.

The FBI’s internal review found that the idea of the memorandum was first conceived of in mid-September 2022 by two Richmond-based Intelligence Analysts (IA), whose names are redacted in the FBI’s internal report. At that time, the analysts started to discuss potential intelligence products to support Richmond’s outreach efforts in conjunction with the Richmond Field Office’s Strategic Plan for the fiscal year. The strategic plan for the year recognized “RMVE [racially or ethnically motivated violent extremists] as a DT [domestic terrorism] National Threat Priority” and included the objective of “strengthen[ing] [liaison] relationships through outreach.”⁴⁵

The analysts relied on a single investigation as an “opportunity” for FBI Richmond to conduct outreach with Catholic parishes in the Richmond area of responsibility.⁴⁶ The subject under investigation was “Richmond’s highest priority DT [domestic terrorism] subject” and was ranked likely to mobilize to violence.⁴⁷ The analysts examined the subject’s social media, where he “self-identified” as a “radical traditionalist Catholic Clerical Fascist.”⁴⁸ According to the interviews conducted during the FBI’s internal review, this social media examination is how the analysts learned of the term “RTC”—the terminology they maintained in the subsequent memorandum without fully understanding its meaning.⁴⁹

A whistleblower also revealed that the FBI interviewed a priest and choir director of an SSPX-affiliated church in Richmond, Virginia.⁵⁰ The interviews appear to have occurred in November and December 2022—the same time the analysts started drafting the memorandum.⁵¹ This information, which the FBI has refused to disclose, confirms that the FBI directly communicated with Catholic clergy and staff about parishioners practicing their faith.

From November to December 2022, the analysts began researching and drafting the Richmond memorandum. On November 11, 2022, one analyst created a working document in an online collaborative platform for the Richmond Field Office.⁵² Meanwhile, the other analyst focused on finding “operational intelligence” reporting from other field offices, where he identified similar cases to the Richmond investigation in both the Milwaukee Field Office and the Portland Field Office—even though the Portland investigation was closed because the subject was recently deceased.⁵³ On December 30, 2022, the analyst contacted the case managers at FBI Milwaukee to confirm the details of its investigation.⁵⁴ Four days later, the analyst also reached out to the case managers at FBI Portland to coordinate an “evidence bullet point” that was eventually included in the final Richmond memorandum.⁵⁵ The FBI’s internal review maintained that “the agents and analysts in Milwaukee and Portland only reviewed the bullet points associated with their respective investigation and did not review or contribute to the broader [memorandum].”⁵⁶ To date, however, the FBI has been unable to confirm whether the investigations in Milwaukee and Portland also included self-described RTC subjects.⁵⁷ Instead, it appears that the Richmond analysts adopted the RTC term after use by a criminal in one case occurring in Richmond’s area of responsibility.

While one analyst led the effort to find operational intelligence from other field offices, the other analyst focused on gathering open-source information that would inform the memorandum’s narrative.⁵⁸ As previously known from public reporting on the memorandum, the analyst utilized sources such as the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC), Salon, and The Atlantic.⁵⁹ During an interview as part of the FBI’s internal review, one of the analysts even acknowledged that the “SPLC was known to have a political bias.”⁶⁰ Yet, the analysts did not provide any caveats about the bias or credibility of the source in the memorandum. Instead, they wrote in the memorandum that “FBI Richmond makes this assessment with high confidence.”⁶¹ In other words, the analysts cited and relied on the SPLC, Salon, and The Atlantic knowing the sources were politically biased to support a false narrative.⁶²

During his transcribed interview with the Committee, SAC Meador testified about the experience levels of the analysts who co-authored the Richmond memorandum. Meador revealed that the primary author has been with the FBI for about 18 years, while the other analyst has been with the FBI for over 20 years. Meador testified:

Q: And how long had each of the intelligence analysts worked at Richmond at the time of the drafting of the—

A: I have general—I don’t know the specific in Richmond, but I know their – their approximate tenure in doing the job.

Q: Ten years in doing the—

A: Oh, no, no. The primary author is, I believe, 18 years, 18. The coauthor is—he may be upwards 20 plus years, maybe even as much as 25.

Q: And would they be considered senior intelligence analysts or just regular intelligence analysts?

A: . . . I don’t think we have a classification. We have supervisory intelligence analysts, but they’re—they’d be senior, the tenure they’d been doing it, yeah.⁶³

It is concerning that these “senior” analysts—having done the job for 18 and over 20 years, respectively—could produce a memorandum with such grave civil liberties concerns. Yet, Meador testified that the analysts are still responsible for drafting intelligence products.⁶⁴ If these seasoned analysts do not understand the parameters of the First Amendment, it raises concerns about the FBI’s training of its analysts and whether other such unconstitutional intelligence products exist on FBI systems—a question that the FBI could not answer to the Committee.⁶⁵

B. The memorandum was peer-reviewed by other Richmond Field Office employees, who did not have any concerns about the substance of the memorandum.

During the FBI’s internal review, it found that FBI Richmond had no formal peer review process for intelligence products.⁶⁶ The general practice in the field office was to have other senior analysts review a draft of the document before the Supervisory Intelligence Analyst (SIA) reviewed it for final approval.⁶⁷ The FBI Richmond’s careless review process resulted in a prejudiced memorandum despite being reviewed by multiple employees in leadership positions. To date, these analysts who peer-reviewed the memorandum are still responsible for creating and peer-reviewing intelligence products.⁶⁸

When the draft of the memorandum was complete, the analysts requested that two other analysts—one familiar with the issue and one senior analyst—peer review the memorandum. This peer-review process occurred on January 12, 2023.⁶⁹ In particular, the primary authoring analyst specifically asked another analyst, “who had completed two years of Catholic seminary,” to review the memorandum for proper usage of “unique Catholic terms.”⁷⁰ In his email response to the co-authoring analysts, the peer reviewer wrote, “[g]reat product, I really enjoyed the read!”⁷¹ The peer-reviewing analyst did not comment on the substance of the memorandum and only suggested “some items” for clarification.⁷² Meador testified to the Committee that this analyst had worked at FBI Richmond for less than two years.⁷³

In addition, the co-authors also requested that a senior intelligence analyst peer review the memorandum. Although the senior analyst was trained as an “Analytical Tradecraft Reviewer,” bound by the Office of the Directorate of Intelligence’s (ODNI) Analytic Tradecraft Standards (ATS), she only edited the memorandum for “mechanical” and “structural” edits.⁷⁴ According to the FBI’s report, the senior reviewer “did not conduct a tradecraft review or edit for substance because the [memorandum] was not an external product,” which purportedly requires intelligence products to undergo more scrutiny.⁷⁵ Therefore, the memorandum contained issues regarding the “readability, main assessment, sourcing, assumptions, perspective, analysis, and outlook,” which the FBI asserted would have all been avoided by conducting a “tradecraft review.”⁷⁶ Meador testified to the Committee that this senior analyst who reviewed the memorandum had worked at FBI Richmond for approximately 18 years.⁷⁷ Perhaps most concerning, the FBI found that no Richmond employee reviewed the memorandum for substance or tradecraft standards, especially Meador.⁷⁸ In fact, Meador testified to the Committee that he does “not recall in [his] career . . . ever having seen . . . analytic tradecraft standards.”⁷⁹

The rubber-stamp peer review process does not appear to be limited to the Richmond Field Office. In fact, the FBI has no “delineated” roles and responsibilities in its policy that require intelligence products to undergo a more scrutinizing peer review process.⁸⁰ According to Meador, “some offices have [review processes] and “some don’t.”⁸¹ So when FBI Headquarters identified issues with the memorandum, Meador requested that a supervisory analyst, who was ultimately responsible for approving the memorandum, to “start finding those peer-review processes throughout the Bureau so that [FBI Richmond] could formalize a peer review process.”⁸² The fact that there is no instituted peer-review process for intelligence products that drive federal law-enforcement investigations raises the question of how many other unconstitutional intelligence products the FBI has allowed to remain in its systems. Even the FBI briefers to the Committee could not answer this question as they admitted that the FBI has not conducted an internal review of any other existing intelligence products in FBI systems.⁸³

C. FBI Richmond’s top lawyer had no concerns with the memorandum and did not believe its content was unconstitutional.

On January 12, 2023, the authoring analysts requested legal review from Richmond’s Chief Division Counsel (CDC)—the field office’s top lawyer tasked with providing legal advice and services. Although the CDC had been with the Richmond Field Office for over 15 years, the FBI’s report found that he had never reviewed a domain perspective in his entire career.⁸⁴ This revelation is antithetical to internal FBI documents indicating that CDCs are the primary resource for reviewing intelligence products, especially if they contain “certain legally sensitive categories of information.”⁸⁵ Given that FBI Richmond’s top lawyer did not see the memorandum as a violation of religious freedom, there seem to be serious shortcomings with respect to how the FBI institutionally views constitutional rights.

A day after receiving the draft memorandum, the CDC concluded his analysis and indicated that the memorandum “look[ed] good” and that there were “no legal issues” with the content.⁸⁶ The CDC’s main suggestion was that the final product should explicitly include a “First Amendment legal caveat.”⁸⁷ Other than that, the CDC had no other concerns with the document so long as the memorandum “remained an internal product”—the same perception held by the peer-reviewing senior analyst.⁸⁸ In this same email thread, the author thanked the CDC for his suggestions and replied, “[t]his product is internal, however, we plan to write an external product and will follow your guidance.”⁸⁹ The CDC also “did not review the terminology and deferred to the SIAs [supervisory intelligence analysts] to use accurate terminology.”⁹⁰ Ultimately, the FBI report found that the CDC did not believe “the information in the [memorandum] violated the law” and “was not based solely on First Amendment protected information” even after hearing the plans to make the document into an external product.⁹¹

During his transcribed interview, SAC Meador testified that following public reporting of the memorandum, he had a conversation with the CDC about the CDC’s legal review of the document.⁹² Meador testified that he told the CDC to use “more care and caution” when it comes to reviewing intelligence products, especially when First Amendment rights are on the line.⁹³ Meador further testified that before the memorandum, he never had any previous concerns about the CDC’s performance.⁹⁴ To this date, the CDC still maintains responsibility for reviewing intelligence products originating from the Richmond Field Office.⁹⁵

D. Two supervisory analysts approved the memorandum without providing feedback or making any substantive edits.

Following the CDC’s review, the authoring analysts requested approval of the memorandum from two supervisory analysts. On January 17, 2023, the authoring analysts provided the final draft to the supervisory analyst who oversees all of FBI Richmond’s intelligence analysts.⁹⁶ Meador testified to the Committee that this supervisory analyst had worked at FBI Richmond for approximately three years and is still approving intelligence products.⁹⁷ This supervisory analyst made “[m]ostly minor word changes and suggestions” to the draft memorandum before forwarding it to another supervisory analyst, known as the Intelligence Program Coordinator, who oversees the Richmond Field Office’s intelligence program, for final approval on January 20, 2023.⁹⁸

On January 20, 2023, the final supervisory analyst reviewed and approved the memorandum and opined the memorandum was “[n]icely done.”⁹⁹ Although this supervisory analyst holds a “fairly senior”¹⁰⁰ position at FBI Richmond, “he did not know where the term ‘RTC’ originated,” but he still maintained the terminology.¹⁰¹ Although the CDC indicated that he deferred the accuracy of the memorandum's terminology to the final approvers, the supervisory intelligence analysts also apparently did not try to correct the biased terminology.¹⁰²

FBI Richmond published the memorandum on Sentinel—the FBI's official record keeping system—on January 24, 2023, and then added the memorandum to its online collaborative platform on January 26, 2023.¹⁰³ That same day, a redacted employee informed SAC Meador and eleven other employees about the new product. The individual stated:

FYI A new [Richmond] Domain Perspective posted to the [online collaborative platform] . . . IAs [redacted] and [redacted] published the DP titled, “. . . Interest of Racially or Ethnically Motivated Violent Extremists in Radical-Traditionalist Catholic Ideology Almost Certainly Presents New Mitigation Opportunities.” Your feedback is appreciated.¹⁰⁴

While the FBI claims that all pre-existing information concerning the Richmond memorandum has been permanently deleted, the FBI was able to retrieve a comment from SAC Meador in response to this notification. In addition, despite its affirmation that documents referring to the memorandum had been deleted, the FBI produced more relevant documents in its most recent production.

E. SAC Meador viewed the memorandum as an opportunity to conduct outreach with the Diocese of Richmond and Catholic parishes.

A week after receiving an email notification about the memorandum, SAC Meador provided feedback about the document through FBI Richmond's internal collaborative site. On February 3, 2023, Meador made the following comment:

Appreciate the perspective, especially after what was gleaned from the [redacted] investigation. I plan to engage in additional conversation regarding engagement at the Dioceses of Richmond. I think there is an opportunity here to consider putting several folks in a room (from different locations) to have this conversation.¹⁰⁵

During his transcribed interview with the Committee, Meador testified that the investigation he referred to in his comment was the same Richmond case referenced in the memorandum.¹⁰⁶ He testified that he was familiar with that specific Richmond investigation because it was an “extremely” high-profile case.¹⁰⁷ According to the FBI, Meador's comment is the only one that exists in response to the Richmond memorandum because all references to the document were removed from FBI systems.¹⁰⁸ The FBI explicitly maintained “it is unknown if any other feedback was provided on the [memorandum].”¹⁰⁹

During his transcribed interview, Meador testified that he did not read the memorandum in its entirety but wanted to show appreciation for his employees’ work.¹¹⁰ Meador testified that when he saw the memorandum for the first time, he “remember[ed] pulling it up and skimming some” of the document.¹¹¹ In addition, Meador testified that he made the comment because “one of the important things in the FBI is to have executive management engagement with the intelligence program.”¹¹² He explained further:

[O]nce a document has been approved and published, the supervisors will send . . . an email to supervisors and command staff letting us know a new product has been posted in the [online collaborative platform] For me, what’s important is that periodically I go in there so that my intelligence team knows that I pay attention and I care about their work, I appreciate their perspective.¹¹³

Thus, from his testimony, it appears that Meador did not perform any due diligence on the memorandum, but instead commented as a way of showing engagement with his team.

During his transcribed interview, Meador provided more detail about what he meant in his comment, making it clear that he wanted to conduct outreach with the Diocese of Richmond and local Catholic parishes. Meador testified that the memorandum was specifically “an outreach document.”¹¹⁴ He further testified that his goal with the memorandum would have been to “put [FBI] folks around the table and talk about this and what that outreach would look like.”¹¹⁵ However, he testified that “we didn’t even get to that point” before the memorandum was released publicly.¹¹⁶

Meador’s attempt to rationalize the purpose of the memorandum as simply a mechanism for community “outreach” is a weak effort to gloss over the concerning rhetoric directed towards Catholic sects and conservative viewpoints. During his transcribed interview, Meador repeatedly testified to the Committee that he was unable to conduct outreach with Catholic parishes because the memorandum was revealed to the public by a whistleblower.¹¹⁷ However, he later conceded that the existence of the memorandum was not a necessary condition for conducting outreach in the community.¹¹⁸ When asked if he needed a formal intelligence document to conduct outreach in the community, he admitted “No, I can just do it.”¹¹⁹ Meador’s rationalization of the memorandum as a community engagement exercise defies belief.

F. The FBI acknowledged that the memorandum lacked “sufficient evidence” and any “articulable support.”

The FBI found that the authors of the memorandum first conceived of the idea for the intelligence product from a single investigation in the Richmond area. Because the subject under investigation identified as a “self-described” “radical-traditionalist Catholic” the memorandum’s authors kept the terminology and associated it with “racially or ethnically motivated violent extremists (RMVE).”¹²⁰ The FBI further concluded that this association between “radical-traditionalist Catholics” and RMVEs lacked “sufficient evidence or articulable support” to justify the FBI’s attempt to conduct investigative activity on Catholic parishes.¹²¹ The FBI also found that the memorandum “failed to consider the potential bias and credibility of open-source information cited in support of the [document’s] assessment” such as the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC), Salon, and The Atlantic.¹²²

The FBI also found that the employees involved in drafting, reviewing, and approving the memorandum failed to adhere to FBI standards. The employees “lacked professional judgement” and “lack[ed] . . . training and awareness” of Domestic Terrorism (DT) terminology, causing them to utilize amorphous and ill-defined terms such as “RTC” and “far-right.”¹²³ Furthermore, the FBI’s internal review found that the Richmond Field Office lacked a formal review process.¹²⁴ As a result, the reviewers used “less scrutiny because it was an internal intelligence product.”¹²⁵ Ultimately, according to the FBI, this “lack of adherence” to FBI standards “led to the creation of the final version” of the Richmond memorandum.¹²⁶

In response to the problems with the Richmond memorandum, the FBI proposed a few corrective actions to address the deficiencies identified in the document. The FBI’s internal review concluded that all employees involved in drafting, reviewing, and approving the memorandum “shall be admonished” and “their respective supervisors will engage with [the] Human Resources Division to ensure deficiencies are addressed.”¹²⁷ The review also required additional training on “analytical tradecraft standards” and “DT [Domestic Terrorism] terminology.”¹²⁸ Furthermore, the FBI indicated that it will now require “heightened approval,” which now requires the SAC and FBI Headquarters to review and approve intelligence products involving “sensitive investigative matter[s]” such as protected First Amendment activity.¹²⁹ Lastly, the FBI promised to update its policy regarding the use of third-party sources, which will include “consideration and documentation of the access, reliability, bias, and other factors affecting the credibility of all sources cited” in future intelligence documents.¹³⁰

Although these corrective measures are warranted, they alone are not sufficient. The FBI must be held accountable for its actions. It is not enough for the FBI to investigate itself and remedy its own wrongdoings, especially when it involves law-enforcement overreach involving fundamental religious freedoms. While the FBI’s internal report affirmed the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s suspicions of the Richmond memorandum, the report does not encompass the complete picture of the memorandum’s inception and fallout. For example, following news reporting, FBI Deputy Director Paul Abbate ordered a permanent removal of the memorandum, as well as any edits or references, from all FBI systems.¹³¹ The FBI asserts that due to this order, there is no other communication or documentation about the memorandum, other than what has been already given to the Committee. The redactions in the FBI report also leave gaps in the information provided, such as the names of the employees responsible for drafting, reviewing, and approving the memorandum. It seems clear, then, that the FBI’s internal report, in addition to its latest document production, does not encompass the entire picture.

II. Without widespread criticism from other agents and public reporting about the Richmond memorandum, the document would have remained in FBI systems.

Shortly after the memorandum was published on an FBI-wide system, an intelligence analyst with the FBI’s Milwaukee Field Office sent an email announcement to agents across the other field offices about recently published intelligence products, including the Richmond memorandum.¹³² One agent, whose name was redacted by the FBI, responded to the email thread: “Is anyone really asking for a product like this? Apparently we are at the behest of the SPLC [Southern Poverty Law Center]”¹³³ Another agent who appears to be from the Milwaukee Field Office replied, “yeah, our overreliance on the SPLC for hate designations is . . . problematic.”¹³⁴ From these comments, it is apparent that some line agents disagreed with the content of the memorandum, especially for its reliance on biased information. These documents also directly show that the memorandum was spread throughout the FBI, which is contrary to previous assertions that the memorandum was limited to the Richmond Field Office.

On February 8, 2023, news organizations started to report on a redacted version of the Richmond memorandum.¹³⁵ In the wake of backlash against the content of the memorandum, the FBI ordered the Richmond Field Office to withdraw it.¹³⁶ While the FBI’s internal review sheds some light on how the memorandum was removed, it does not show the complete picture, especially as the FBI alleges it permanently deleted the memorandum. The transcribed interview with SAC Meador, however, highlighted some details that were omitted or neglected in the FBI internal report provided to the Committee.

A. Meador coordinated with FBI Headquarters leadership to immediately and permanently delete the memorandum.

On the same day that the memorandum became publicly available, Deputy Director Abbate ordered Meador to “pull it down.”¹³⁷ Meador interpreted Abbate’s instruction as an order to expunge the memorandum from all FBI Richmond systems.¹³⁸ Soon after, Meador notified two Assistant Special Agents in Charge (ASAC) of the news reporting on the memorandum and how to facilitate its removal.¹³⁹ On February 9, 2023, Meador conducted a morning meeting with his Executive Management, Supervisory Intelligence Analysts (SIAs), and CDC to discuss the news reporting on the memorandum and how to remove the document, and any references made to the document, from FBI Richmond’s online collaborative platform.¹⁴⁰ Following the meeting, Meador ordered another intelligence analyst, who had no earlier involvement with the memorandum, to remove the document from FBI Richmond’s online collaborative platform, including any edits and references made to it.¹⁴¹ The analyst deleted everything associated with the memorandum that same day, and “ensured the deleted [memorandum] was removed from the site’s recycle bin.”¹⁴²

Meanwhile, Meador tasked the CDC to work with the FBI’s Office of General Counsel (OGC) to facilitate the memorandum’s removal from the FBI-wide Sentinel program.¹⁴³ To do so, the Richmond Field Office had to perform a process called a “Permanent Charge-Out” (PCO), which “refers to a deletion of a record from all [FBI] electronic recordkeeping systems.”¹⁴⁴ An ASAC was assigned to oversee the removal of the memorandum from FBI systems.¹⁴⁵ To justify the removal, the ASAC noted in a “lead” that the memorandum contained information that “should have been restricted or prohibited” and indicated that OGC “concurred” with the need for removal.¹⁴⁶ On February 10, 2023, the removal process was officially completed.¹⁴⁷

Meador’s testimony provides more information about how FBI Executive Management directed and monitored the removal process. Meador testified that the decision to pull the memorandum off FBI systems “was made after” public reporting and after he received direction from Deputy Director Abbate to “pull it down” he also received a “follow-up call” from Tonya Ugoretz, the FBI’s Assistant Director of the Directorate of Intelligence.¹⁴⁸ According to Meador, Ugoretz told Meador that he needed to notify both the Deputy Director and herself “when [he] had taken the necessary steps” to remove the memorandum, and anything referring to the document, from FBI systems.¹⁴⁹

B. There were no prior concerns about the memorandum before news reporting. In fact, Meador was interested in quickly effectuating the memorandum.

If the memorandum had not become public knowledge, the document would have remained in an FBI-wide system. During his transcribed interview, Meador testified that the Richmond Field Office had received no concerns about the contents of the memorandum until it became public. Meador testified:

Q: And prior to February 8th, when the existence of the domain perspective hit the news, had anyone raised concerns to you about the propriety of the domain perspective?

A: “Propriety” meaning what?

Q: Whether or not it held up to the exacting standards of the FBI?

A: No.

Q: Had you had any discussions with anyone at headquarters prior to February 8th about the domain perspective?

A: No.¹⁵⁰

Meador also testified that if the memorandum did not become public, it would still be in FBI systems.¹⁵¹ In fact, Meador testified that he would have prioritized outreach to the Diocese of Richmond as a result of the memorandum.¹⁵² He stated:

Q: Do you know, if the domain perspective had not been . . . made public, would it still be in FBI systems?

A: Yes.

Q: Would outreach have been conducted based upon the domain perspective?

A: . . . I would’ve prioritized and had the discussion. Quite likely, I would’ve reached out to the Diocese.¹⁵³

It is concerning that if a whistleblower had not disclosed the existence of the memorandum, then an official FBI document of its nature—one that infringes on religious liberties—would still be in effect. During the briefing, the Committee asked the FBI whether it conducts periodic reviews of other intelligence products to see if other concerning memorandums may be in existence.¹⁵⁴ The FBI’s briefers responded that the FBI does not conduct periodic reviews, and if it were to do reviews, they were doubtful they would have caught the memorandum.¹⁵⁵ This information, coupled with Meador’s testimony, is alarming, especially as Meador maintained that “the purpose of [the memorandum] was to engage in outreach to [the Diocese of Richmond].”¹⁵⁶

C. The memorandum originated as an internal product but was proposed to leadership to become an external, FBI-wide product, and discussions toward that goal are ongoing.

The FBI’s report revealed that the FBI had plans for an external, FBI-wide product based on the Richmond memorandum.¹⁵⁷ Not only is this concerning because other field offices around the country would effectuate the memorandum by using federal law enforcement resources to surveil Catholic parishes, but it would also allow other intelligence products to build upon the unconstitutional foundation of the Richmond memorandum. The Committee and Select Subcommittee have also learned that the FBI may still be attempting to fashion information from the Richmond memorandum into an external-facing document.

During his transcribed interview, Meador provided information about the differences between an internal and external intelligence product. Meador testified that an external product is “Bureau-wide” and “all external products go through headquarters” for review.¹⁵⁸ On the other hand, internal products do not go to headquarters for review.¹⁵⁹ However, an internal product does not mean that it stays solely within the Richmond Field Office. Meador testified that although the memorandum was an internal product, “it could be [used] to inform . . . management in the Richmond Field Office, but it also could be [used] to inform . . . other intelligence analysts across the country.”¹⁶⁰

As the first draft of the memorandum was nearly completed, the co-authors began informing leadership of its contents.¹⁶¹ On January 5, 2023, one of the authoring analysts emailed the Richmond’s domestic terrorism supervisory agent that an “internal intelligence product” was being written.¹⁶² In the same email, the analyst also informed the supervisory agent that the other co-authoring analyst was coordinating with the Counterterrorism Division on an “external product” known as a Strategic Perspective Executive Analytic Report (SPEAR).¹⁶³ On January 12, the supervisory analyst received a draft of the memorandum for his awareness.¹⁶⁴

After FBI Richmond published the memorandum internally, a subsequent draft of the memorandum was proposed to leadership to become an external product.¹⁶⁵ By February 2, 2023, an FBI employee sent a draft of the external-facing SPEAR report to the Counterterrorism Division.¹⁶⁶ In the FBI's latest production, the draft of the external SPEAR report had a pending release for February 2023, suggesting an interest for a prompt release.¹⁶⁷ On February 6, 2023, the Counterterrorism Division viewed the draft of the report and suggested making the document into an Emerging Intelligence Report (EIR).¹⁶⁸ During his transcribed interview, Meador described his awareness of the interest in making the memorandum into an external product. He testified:

A: Post the leak and the discussions I did learn . . . as I was having conversations, asking questions, that there . . . had been communication with [the Counterterrorism Division] on the release of this information in an external product, in a SPEAR, and that the response from them based on the [memorandum] was that the information should go into a different type of product, which is called an EI—for an external release, an EIR, emerging intelligence report, . . . versus a SPEAR.

Q: And was the topic of the external product, whatever the form, the SPEAR or the EIR, what was the topic going to be for that external product?

A: I don't know. I know—I think I would have to defer back to the inspection, because I think there's an indication that it was based on the [memorandum].¹⁶⁹

SAC Meador gleaned that the proposed external product was going to be based on the memorandum.¹⁷⁰ While this is concerning, knowing that the FBI wanted to further infringe on religious liberties Bureau-wide, equally concerning is that there are discussions still taking place with FBI Richmond on how to effectuate this external memorandum. Meador further testified:

Q: Do you know if the FBI is still pursuing an external product based upon the [memorandum]?

A: There—I know internally there have been some discussions . . . throughout the months of a desire to still try and get this information out somehow, but . . . I've not seen anything as

Despite all the problems that the FBI found with the memorandum, FBI Richmond still “desires” to get this information out about “radical-traditionalist Catholics.” This revelation is disturbing because the memorandum relied on biased sources and a single investigation, suggesting that the memorandum and its contents are not fully supported. Yet, despite the shortcomings of the Richmond memorandum and the widespread criticism for its creation, the FBI still apparently desires to convey the outrageous message that some Catholic Americans with traditional beliefs pose a domestic terror threat to our country.

III. SAC Meador met with several members of the clergy to mend the FBI’s relationship with the Catholic community.

After the leak of the Richmond memorandum and the ensuing backlash from the religious community, leaders of the Catholic faith, and news outlets, SAC Meador sought to repair the FBI’s relationship with leaders of the Diocese of Richmond. In particular, SAC Meador requested a meeting with the Bishop of the Diocese of Richmond and attended a meeting with a Cardinal of the Catholic Church to discuss issues with the Richmond memorandum.¹⁷² During these meetings, SAC Meador claimed that the purpose of the memorandum was to promote outreach by the FBI and offered private apologies for the “negative light that it had placed the organization in,” but not for the memorandum’s content.¹⁷³ Despite SAC Meador’s efforts, many in the religious and Catholic community continue to have concerns that the FBI is targeting them because of their sincerely held beliefs and that the FBI has shown an alarming disregard for religious liberty rights as protected by the First Amendment of the Constitution.¹⁷⁴

A. SAC Meador reached out to the Catholic Diocese of Richmond to meet with the Bishop and apologize for the memorandum.

After the disclosure of the memorandum began receiving coverage in news media outlets, the Catholic Diocese of Richmond issued a public statement about it on February 13, 2023.¹⁷⁵ In his statement, Bishop Knestout wrote that he was “alarmed” to read the memorandum and that it

Bishop Knestout's Statement Following Leaked Internal Memo from the FBI Richmond Field Office about Traditional Catholics and the Virginia Attorney General's Response

On Monday, Feb. 13, 2023, Bishop Knestout issued a statement following a January 10, 2023 memorandum generated by the Richmond Field Office made public last week. The memorandum targeted Virginia Catholics, specifically traditional Catholics, some of whom are not in full communion with the Roman Catholic Church. On Feb. 10, 2023, Virginia's Attorney General announced that he had received a leaked internal memo from the FBI Richmond Field Office that included multiple attorneys general from other states.

"People of all faith groups have long found refuge in the constitutional protections of our great nation. We all seek to share in God's gift of life, enjoy the fruits of liberty that our nation offers and assist one another in ensuring the common good.

"I was alarmed to read the reports written late last week about the contents of the internal memo created by the Richmond Field Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. I was also surprised to learn that the memo mentioned the Priestly Fraternity of Saint Peter (FSSP), a religious order, which celebrates the Mass. FSSP has served with devotion for many years the parishes within our diocese. FSSP members are faithful of our diocese who appreciate this form of the Catholic Mass in our diocese.

"The leaked document should be troubling and offensive to all communities of faith, as well as all Americans. I am grateful for the Virginia Attorney General and 19 attorneys general who have called upon the government to publicly release all materials related to the production of this memo. If evidence of such targeting is rooted out, but not at the expense of religious freedom. A preference for traditional forms of worship and holding closely to the Church's teachings on marriage, family, human sexuality, and the dignity of the human person does not equate with extremism.

"Religious freedom is an important matter acknowledged every June by the U.S. President. The U.S. Catholic Bishops (USCCB) in which my brother bishops and I value and celebrate religious freedom. Most recently, on Jan. 16, 2023, the U.S. celebrated Religious Freedom Day with USCCB Chair for Religious Liberty, Cardinal Timothy M. Dolan, noting "there is no freedom without the truth." It is my hope we get to the truth of the memo published last week.

"Our faith and our Church instruct us to be a people of peace and to uphold human dignity. We must reject violence. As Pope Francis wrote in his 2017 letter for the celebration of World Day of Prayer for the Unity of Religions, "the name of God cannot be used to justify violence. Peace is the fruit of justice."

"I call on all national representatives from the Commonwealth of Virginia in the House and Senate to exercise their role of oversight, to publicly condemn this threat to religious liberty, and to ensure that such offenses against the constitutionally protected free exercise of religion do not occur again. We must ensure that violence, and discrimination have no place in our Church or teachings."

Within the memo, it mentioned the targeting of Virginia Catholics, specifically traditional Catholics, some of whom are not in full communion with the Roman Catholic Church.

"I was alarmed to read the reports written late last week about the contents of the internal memo created by the Richmond Field Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"The leaked document should be troubling and offensive to all communities of faith, as well as all Americans. I am grateful for the Virginia Attorney General and 19 attorneys general who have called upon the government to publicly release all materials related to the production of this memo.

"I call on all national representatives from the Commonwealth of Virginia in the House and Senate to exercise their role of oversight, to publicly condemn this threat to religious liberty, and to ensure that such offenses against the constitutionally protected free exercise of religion do not occur again.

On March 9, 2023, after receiving permission from the Deputy Director of the FBI, SAC Meador went to the Diocese of Richmond to meet with clergy officials to apologize for the memorandum, including the Vicar General, the general counsel, and the Bishop of the Diocese of Richmond.¹⁷⁹ During his transcribed interview, SAC Meador testified that although he had never met with anyone from the Diocese of Richmond prior to the disclosure of the memorandum, he wanted to offer “an apology on behalf of the field office for the negative attention . . . and inform them as to why—and give them what information I could as to why this—what it was and what it wasn’t and help inform them.”¹⁸⁰ However, it does not appear that SAC Meador offered an apology for the content of the memorandum or for his role in approving it, despite the memorandum failing to meet the “exacting standards” of the FBI.¹⁸¹ SAC Meador did acknowledge that the Diocese of Richmond took issue with the memorandum, testifying that “common sense, to me, is that they would’ve been concerned.”¹⁸² SAC Meador went on to say that he wanted to explain through his conversation with the Bishop that “the purpose of [the memorandum] was to engage in outreach to them.”¹⁸³

After their meeting, on March 13, 2023, SAC Meador reached out to the Diocese of Richmond again, thanking it for the opportunity to meet.¹⁸⁴ He wrote the following email:

Father [redacted],

Thank you for allowing me the opportunity to meet with you and Bishop Knestout. I sincerely appreciate you taking the time to meet and do hope the discussion was helpful. I wanted to follow up and extend an open invitation to you and Bishop Knestout to visit our Richmond FBI Field Office. In addition to showing you around, I think it would be a great opportunity to have you both meet some of our team members, who could also, if you like, provide a short briefing on some of our priority threats. My team and I would be happy to host so please feel free to reach out to me directly if you feel this would be of interest.... Look forward to hearing from you. In the interim, if you need anything from my direction, please do not hesitate to reach out anytime.¹⁸⁵

SAC Meador later extended an invitation for a second meeting with the Diocese at the FBI Richmond Field Office.¹⁸⁶ In response, a diocesan attorney accepted the invitation, but advised SAC Meador that:

Bishop Knestout recognizes that a cooperative relationship with law enforcement could prove useful to protect the diocese and its parishioners from current threats and any identified in the future. However, he would prefer that any such cooperation occur through his legal team, to that end, the diocesan attorney, including myself and [redacted], would make ourselves available to come to your office.¹⁸⁷

Routing all communications through his legal team may be evidence of the Bishop’s reluctance to engage with the FBI directly and further evidence of the FBI’s strained relationship with religious leaders in the community as a result of the memorandum. However, Diocesan attorneys still coordinated a visit to the field office on March 24, 2023, during which FBI Richmond briefed officials from the Diocese on domestic terrorism, international terrorism, and hate crimes.¹⁸⁸ The Bishop did not attend the briefing.¹⁸⁹ Since that meeting, SAC Meador has not had any contact with the Diocese of Richmond.¹⁹⁰

B. SAC Meador also met with a Cardinal of the Catholic Church to discuss the memorandum.

As part of more outreach to the Catholic community, SAC Meador informed the Committee during his transcribed interview that he also met with a Cardinal of the Catholic Church, along with the Assistant Director in Charge (ADIC) of the Washington Field Office (WFO).¹⁹¹ Meador testified:

A: I learned of the meeting from one of the special agents in charge of the Washington Field Office. He had told me that he was coordinating that meeting and wanted me to know. And I asked if I could attend to help with that meeting, and they said, of course. . . .

Q: Did the cardinal request that meeting, or did WFO reach out to the cardinal?

A: That's in WFO's territory.

Q: What was discussed at the meeting?

A: . . . I presented similar information that I did with the Bishop.

Q: Did you get the sense that the cardinal was concerned about the domain perspective?

A: Well, I think they were just concerned at large. I don't have any information expressed to me from the cardinal on his thoughts, on his stance related to it. I was there in a proactive sense and to help the ADIC because I had more of the firsthand information on the product.¹⁹²

Despite the apparent efforts at mending the FBI's relationship with the Catholic community, the memorandum has clearly created a lasting cause for concern. An FBI visit alone falls far short of the action necessary to repair the damage that is caused by a federal law enforcement intelligence product, such as the Richmond memorandum, that demonstrates an animus towards a particular faith group. FBI Richmond's failure to issue a public apology for the content of the memorandum will only delay the process of rebuilding trust in communities of faith.

CONCLUSION

“Religious Liberty is under attack in many places because it is dangerous to those who want to hold complete power.”
– Justice Samuel Alito, July 28, 2022

Religious liberty is enshrined in the First Amendment to the Constitution.¹⁹³ Accordingly, the FBI’s own policy claims it “never conduct[s] investigative activities or open[s] an investigation based solely on First Amendment protected activity.”¹⁹⁴ The Richmond memorandum, however, paints a different picture. It is a stark reminder that sincerely held religious beliefs must be vigorously protected or be subjugated to an overzealous federal law enforcement focused on the ends, with little regard for the means. In the words of Stanley Meador, the Special Agent in Charge in Richmond, when he first “saw the document, I did not give it the review that it’s being given today.”¹⁹⁵ This ill-conceived and ill-administered memorandum is a stark warning of the need for scrupulous review of FBI documents with the potential to circumvent Americans’ civil liberties and the right to free exercise of religion.

Under the guise of domestic terrorism, the Richmond memorandum cast swaths of Catholic Americans as “radical-traditionalist Catholics” and those practicing it as ripe opportunities for FBI “threat mitigation.”¹⁹⁶ Due to the actions of a brave whistleblower, this document was introduced into the public eye largely before it could be acted on. Perhaps most concerning is that without the whistleblower, this document would still be actionable in FBI systems, potentially endangering the religious liberties of countless Americans who might be investigated simply for espousing certain sincerely held views.¹⁹⁷ That is unacceptable and antithetical to the protections of the First Amendment.

In the interim, the FBI must take decisive action to rebuild public trust. FBI Richmond has not issued a public apology or removed any of the employees involved in creating the document.¹⁹⁸ Moreover, the FBI continues to resist several of the Committee’s requests for transparency and answers.¹⁹⁹ While the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s oversight continues, this work will continue to inform potential legislative reforms that are necessary to protect the right to religious liberty from government overreach.

FIGHTING THE WEAPONIZATION OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE: THE END OF ABUSIVE UNANNOUNCED FIELD VISITS

Interim Staff Report of the Committee on the Judiciary
and the
Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government
U.S. House of Representatives

October 27, 2023

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Committee on the Judiciary and its Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government are empowered by the House of Representatives to examine how the Executive Branch interacts with American citizens and to investigate civil liberties abuses. History has shown how the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), with its vast power to reach into the lives of Americans, has the tremendous potential to violate the civil liberties of American citizens.¹ As Justice John Marshall noted over two-hundred years ago, the “power to tax involves the power to destroy.”² The Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s oversight demonstrates that Justice Marshall’s warning is as potent now as it was then.

In 2022, Democrats in Congress flooded the IRS with $78.9 billion in new funding, $45 billion of which was earmarked solely for tax enforcement purposes.³ Democrats chose to enable the IRS to hire as many as 87,000 agents to aggressively pursue American taxpayers.⁴ One of the first priorities for the new Republican majority in the 118th Congress was to severely curtail this new funding.⁵ The Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s oversight shows the wisdom of this action.

In just the first nine months of this Congress, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have shed light on several civil liberties abuses at the IRS. For example:

- The IRS conducted an unannounced field visit to the home of journalist Matt Taibbi the same day he testified before Congress about government abuse. The IRS opened a case against Mr. Taibbi on Christmas Eve—a Saturday—just three weeks after Mr. Taibbi began reporting on the Twitter Files. In the four-and-one-half years between when the IRS alleges it last tried to contact Mr. Taibbi and the day it conducted an unannounced field visit, neither he nor his accountant ever received notice from the IRS about an issue with his tax return. The IRS conducted its field visit even though Mr. Taibbi did not owe the IRS anything, rather, the IRS owed Mr. Taibbi a substantial refund. The unannounced field visit alarmed Mr. Taibbi, who viewed it as an attempt to chill his reporting about government abuses.
- An IRS agent gave a fake name and used deception to gain entry into the house of an Ohio taxpayer and then threatened her when asked to leave. Without any notice, an IRS revenue officer conducted an unannounced field visit to the home of a taxpayer in Ohio. The revenue officer used an alias and was deceptive about his purposes for appearing at the taxpayer’s home. After the taxpayer’s attorney told the revenue officer to leave, the revenue officer defiantly stated, “I can be at and go into anyone’s house at any time I want to be.” The revenue officer threatened to put a lien on the taxpayer’s home and freeze her assets if she did not immediately give the IRS a substantial amount of money. After the taxpayer called the police, the revenue officer even filed a complaint against the police department. The IRS later confirmed that the taxpayer owed nothing and acknowledged the situation “never should have gotten this far.” This shocking abuse of power is a startling indication that the IRS believes it may do what it wants, when it wants.

- The IRS has repealed its policy of unannounced field visits after the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s oversight uncovered IRS abuses. Pressure and oversight about these abusive field visits led the IRS to repeal its policy of allowing its agents to conduct unannounced field visits to taxpayers’ homes. The IRS is no longer able to weaponize its field visits to target, harass, and intimidate taxpayers.

It has been over ten years since the IRS disclosed its targeting of conservative groups seeking tax-exempt status.⁶ The man who President Obama chose to clean up the IRS’s mess in 2013, Danny Werfel, is the same man who President Biden chose to lead the agency today. The agency that felt emboldened ten years ago to intentionally and unfairly scrutinize conservative nonprofit organizations is the same agency that feels emboldened now to force its way into a taxpayer’s home. As the National Review observed:

It is a tax code so perverse, ambiguous, and complex that it cedes to those IRS agents unwarranted power to interpret the law and, along with that, power to neglect, pester, or tyrannize citizens.⁷

Consistent with the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s obligations to keep the House of Representatives informed of its oversight, this interim report documents the weaponization of the IRS against Americans. Although more information continues to surface concerning the IRS’s weaponization, this report presents the findings to date. The Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to pursue additional information about the actions and events described in this report.

I. Background on the IRS's Abuses

As President Ronald Reagan famously said, “the nine most terrifying words in the English language are: I’m from the government, and I’m here to help.”⁸ The IRS, with its tax collection authority, represents this threat unlike any other agency in government.

A. The IRS's abusive history

The IRS has a long history of weaponizing its power. In the 1930s, President Franklin Roosevelt weaponized the IRS against his political enemies, including newspaper publishers who opposed the New Deal.⁹ In the 1940s and 1950s, corruption and bribery became so widespread at the IRS that the Truman Administration dismissed and indicted hundreds of staffers as the agency was reorganized to prevent political influence.¹⁰ In the late 1990s, the Senate Finance Committee held several oversight hearings to investigate the IRS's “Gestapo-like” conduct against taxpayers.¹¹ In response to these hearings, Congress passed the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 to put limits on the IRS's enforcement powers and to make right a “tax agency out of control.”¹² In 2013, during the Obama Administration, the IRS targeted dozens of conservative nonprofits seeking tax-exempt status by subjecting the nonprofits to “heightened scrutiny and inordinate delays.”¹³ Congress investigated this scandal at length,¹⁴ and several top IRS officials resigned in shame.¹⁵

With the extensiveness of the IRS's past abuses, it is no surprise that the IRS is the least trusted federal agency in government.¹⁶ Americans ranked the IRS the lowest among 16 agencies in terms of favorability, with 51 percent expressing an unfavorable view of the agency and only 42 percent expressing a favorable view.¹⁷ Seventy-three percent of Americans do not believe the government is spending their tax dollars wisely, and 72 percent of Americans believe their tax rate is already far too high.¹⁸ But mismanagement and over-taxation is only half of the issue.

The IRS's greatest challenge is a trust deficit. In 2021, only 66 percent of Americans reported that they trusted the IRS to fairly enforce the tax laws—the lowest percentage since 2014.¹⁹ A more recent Gallup Poll from October 2022 found Americans’ disapproval of the IRS is as consistent as the agency’s history of abuse—just 35 percent of Americans have a fair view of the IRS, with another 31 percent having a poor view of the agency.²⁰ The IRS would like Americans to believe that its problems are budget related and that more money will resolve its issues. But the more money Congress gives the IRS, the more problems that seem to result.

B. The potential for abuse in the IRS’s unannounced field visits

For decades, the IRS has authorized its officers to appear at taxpayers’ homes or businesses without prior notice to collect delinquent taxes. These unannounced field visits have traditionally been reserved for rare cases in which a taxpayer or business is unresponsive to prior IRS communications and the agency’s requests for information. Surprisingly, these supposedly rare instances add up. Each year, the IRS makes tens of thousands of unannounced visits to homes and businesses.²¹

In most cases involving delinquent tax accounts, the IRS’s Automated Collection System (ACS) is the main avenue for taxpayers to resolve their tax issues.²² This system is managed by the Taxpayer Advocate System, which is an “independent organization within the IRS” that “helps taxpayers resolve problems and recommends changes that will prevent problems.”²³ Every year, ACS mails millions of tax delinquency notices, levy notices, and federal tax lien notices to taxpayers and businesses.²⁴

For other accounts, generally those with a tax debt that exceeds $100,000, the IRS assigns a revenue officer to the case to resolve the outstanding balance.²⁵ These officers, of which the IRS currently employs roughly 2,300 nationwide, “are unarmed civil agency employees whose duties include visiting households and businesses to . . . collect taxes that are delinquent and have not been paid to the IRS and to secure tax returns that are overdue from taxpayers.”²⁶ The power revenue officers wield is not insignificant; they can “[g]arnish bank accounts and wages as well as seize real and personal property to satisfy delinquent taxes.”²⁷

Once assigned to a case, the revenue officer makes initial contact with the taxpayer to resolve his or her accounts. Normally, a revenue officer’s first effort to contact a taxpayer is in writing to notify and/or remind the taxpayer of his or her delinquency and the date the outstanding balances and forms are due.²⁸ Only in rare instances with “unique, specific circumstances” may these officers initiate contact with taxpayers in person as opposed to a phone call or by mail.²⁹ However, with tens of thousands of unannounced field visits occurring each year as revenue officers carry out investigative actions, it is apparent that unannounced field visits are not just reserved for exceptional cases.

Prior to the IRS’s recent change in policy due to the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s oversight, these officers frequently conducted unannounced, unprompted field visits at taxpayers’ homes and businesses without attempting to first contact the taxpayer by other less intrusive means. The IRS has now discontinued this decades-long practice of revenue officers conducting unannounced field visits on unsuspecting taxpayers.³⁰ While the IRS promises that “taxpayers should know they have a tax issue before these visits occur since multiple mailings occur,”³¹ the abusive field visits the Committee and Select Subcommittee exposed included no prior notice whatsoever. Worse yet, neither instance involved the taxpayer owing the IRS any balance on their accounts.

II. The IRS Visits the Home of Journalist Matt Taibbi While He Testified Before Congress

After Elon Musk purchased Twitter in October 2022,³² Twitter granted access to a handful of journalists to review its internal communications to examine the degree to which Twitter colluded with the federal government to censor lawful speech online.³³ The resulting “Twitter Files,” a series of 20 threads published by these journalists, confirmed the existence of the “censorship industrial complex” and its prevalence in stifling free speech.³⁴ The Twitter Files detailed extensively how various federal agencies colluded with Twitter and other Big Tech companies to censor lawful speech and silence dissent online.³⁵ Matt Taibbi, an award-winning reporter,³⁶ was one journalist who contributed to the Twitter Files.

A. Twitter Files journalist Matt Taibbi testified before the Select Subcommittee about how the Biden Administration worked with Big Tech to censor Americans

The Committee and Select Subcommittee have conducted aggressive oversight in the 118th Congress to investigate the degree to which the Executive Branch censored Americans. As a necessary part of this oversight, the Select Subcommittee has convened hearings on the weaponization of the federal government to obtain public testimony about the Executive Branch’s censorship regime.

On March 9, 2023, Mr. Taibbi, along with fellow journalist Michael Shellenberger, testified before the Select Subcommittee about his reporting on the Twitter Files.³⁷ Mr. Taibbi authored 12 of the 20 threads that make up the Twitter Files, including the very first segment.³⁸ During the hearing, Mr. Taibbi described the serious government abuse. He testified:

The original promise of the internet was that it might democratize the exchange of information globally. . . . What we found is in the [Twitter] files was a sweeping effort to reverse that promise and use machine learning and other tools to turn the internet into an instrument of censorship and social control. Unfortunately, our own government appears to be playing a lead role.³⁹

Mr. Taibbi later elaborated on the magnitude of the scandal. He said:

[T]his Twitter Files story and what we’re looking at now and what we’re investigating now . . . is by far the most serious thing that I’ve ever looked at, and it’s certainly the most grave story that I’ve ever worked on, personally.⁴⁰

Mr. Taibbi’s and Mr. Shellenberger’s testimony came on the heels of the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s discovery that an arm of the Executive Branch—the Federal Trade Commission—demanded from Twitter the identities of all journalists given access to Twitter’s internal communications.⁴¹ The FTC also demanded Twitter to describe the “nature of access granted [to] each person” and how allowing such access was consistent with Twitter’s privacy and information security obligations under an existing consent order.⁴² Elon Musk responded to the FTC’s demands for information about journalists and said it was “a serious attack on the Constitution by a federal agency” and “a shameful case of weaponization of a government agency for political purposes and suppression of the truth!”⁴³ In his testimony, Mr. Taibbi said in response to the FTC’s weaponization,

I was upset, obviously. . . . This kind of thing—when the government is looking for information about reporters—is usually a canary in the coal mine that something worse is coming in terms of an effort to exercise control over the press. So, on that level, it’s absolutely disturbing.⁴⁴

As an additional layer of attack, during the hearing itself, Democrats on the Select Subcommittee, including Ranking Member Stacey Plaskett and Representative Sylvia Garcia, attempted to slander Mr. Taibbi and Mr. Shellenberger as “so-called journalists” and pressured them to reveal their sources.⁴⁵ The following exchange between Select Subcommittee Democrats and Mr. Taibbi exemplifies this pressure:

Rep. Plaskett: Who is the individual that gave you permission to access the emails?

Mr. Taibbi: Well, the attribution from my story is sources at Twitter, and that's what I am going to refer to.

Rep. Plaskett: Okay. Did Mr. Musk contact you, Mr. Taibbi?

Mr. Taibbi: Again, the attribution for my story is sources at Twitter.

Rep. Garcia: Mr. Taibbi, I want to follow up a little bit on the Ranking Member's questions. When was the first time that Mr. Musk approached you about writing the Twitter Files?

Mr. Taibbi: Again, Congresswoman . . . I can't give it to you unfortunately because this a question of sourcing and I don't give them. I'm a journalist. I don't give up my sources.

Rep. Garcia: So, you're not going to tell us when Musk first approached you?

Mr. Taibbi: Again, Congresswoman, you're asking a journalist to reveal his sources.

Rep. Garcia: So, then you consider Mr. Musk to be the direct source of all of this?

Mr. Taibbi: No, now you're trying to get me to say that he is the source. I just can't answer your question.

Rep. Garcia: Well, he either is or he isn't. If you're telling me [that] you can't answer because it's your source, well then the only logical conclusion is that he is, in fact, your source. . . . You can't have it both ways.

B. The IRS conducted an unannounced field visit to Mr. Taibbi's home on the same day he testified before the Select Subcommittee

As Mr. Taibbi testified before the Select Subcommittee, an IRS agent visited, unannounced and unprompted, Mr. Taibbi's home. The agent, after receiving no response from Mr. Taibbi because he was in Washington for his testimony, left a note for Mr. Taibbi to call the IRS four days later.⁴⁷

When Mr. Taibbi called the IRS, the IRS informed him that the agency had rejected his electronic 2018 and 2021 tax return filings due to concerns of identity theft.⁴⁸ However, in 2019, the IRS notified his accountant that it had accepted his 2018 filing, and in the four-and-a-half years since then, the IRS never notified Mr. Taibbi or his accountant of any issue with this return.⁴⁹ With respect to his 2021 return, Mr. Taibbi was aware the IRS rejected his electronic filing twice, even after his accountant filed with an IRS-provided pin number.⁵⁰ However, in both cases, the IRS did not attempt to make contact with Mr. Taibbi by other means before its unannounced field visit. The IRS further informed Mr. Taibbi during the call that the problems were not “monetary” or due to a delinquent amount owed; in fact, the IRS owed Mr. Taibbi a substantial tax return for both years.⁵¹

Due to the circumstances surrounding the IRS's unannounced and unprompted visit to Mr. Taibbi's home—at the exact time that he was testifying to Congress about “the most serious” government abuse he witnessed in his career as a journalist—the Committee and Select Subcommittee set out to determine whether the field visit was a thinly-veiled attempt by the IRS to influence or intimidate a witness before Congress. On March 27, 2023, the Committee and Select Subcommittee sent a letter to the IRS asking about the unannounced field visit to Mr. Taibbi's home.⁵² The Committee and Select Subcommittee provided the IRS with express permission from Mr. Taibbi to receive and review these documents.⁵³

⁵³ Mr. Taibbi signed a waiver to give the Committee and Select Subcommittee access to his tax return information pursuant to 26 U.S.C. § 6103(c).

The curious timing of the IRS’s visit, on the heels of the FTC demand that Twitter turn over names of journalists, raised serious “questions about potential intimidation.”⁵⁴ In Mr. Taibbi’s own words, “[I]t’s hard not to see [my case] as some kind of retaliation or an attempt to intimidate. Maybe not me, but future reporters who would look at this kind of material.”⁵⁵

C. Internal IRS documents revealed how the IRS used a field visit to intimidate Mr. Taibbi

On May 6, 2023, the IRS produced 267 pages of documents, some of which were responsive to the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s request.⁵⁶ The IRS asserted that it sent a letter to Mr. Taibbi on October 24, 2019—nine days after Mr. Taibbi filed his 2018 tax return—asking Mr. Taibbi to verify his return because it met identity theft criteria.⁵⁷ The IRS also alleged that it sent a second letter to Mr. Taibbi on March 23, 2020.⁵⁸ However, according to Mr. Taibbi, neither he nor his accountant received either of these letters or any other notification from the IRS that there was an issue with his 2018 tax return before the IRS conducted a field visit at Mr. Taibbi’s home several years later. Furthermore, the IRS failed to include proof of these letters in its production to the Committee and Select Subcommittee.

The IRS’s production revealed that the IRS opened its examination of Mr. Taibbi’s 2018 tax return on December 24, 2022, over three years after the IRS alleged it tried to contact Mr. Taibbi the first time.⁵⁹ Not only was December 24, 2022, a Saturday and Christmas Eve, but it also happened to be just three weeks after Mr. Taibbi published the first Twitter Files thread, detailing government abuses, and the same day that Mr. Taibbi published the ninth segment of the Twitter Files, detailing how federal government agencies “from the State Department to the Pentagon to the CIA” coordinated to censor and coerce speech on various social media platforms.⁶⁰ The IRS’s production failed to explain why the IRS opened its examination of Mr. Taibbi’s tax return on such an unusual date.

The production revealed that one month later, on January 27, 2023, the IRS assigned a revenue officer to Mr. Taibbi’s case to initiate face-to-face contact, rather than attempt to contact Mr. Taibbi through less intrusive means. It was at this point, the IRS alleged, that the officer discovered the IRS had not processed Mr. Taibbi’s 2021 tax return either.⁶¹ The IRS documents revealed that the revenue officer performed an extensive investigation into Mr. Taibbi, using both publicly available search engines and commercial investigative software to compile a dossier about Mr. Taibbi. The IRS's dossier on Mr. Taibbi included information such as Mr. Taibbi's voter registration records, whether he possessed a hunting or fishing license, and whether he had a concealed weapons permit. The revenue officer also examined and saved Mr. Taibbi's Wikipedia page, which contained extensive details about Mr. Taibbi's work on the Twitter Files.⁶² Instead of reinitiating contact with Mr. Taibbi by less intrusive means after several years had passed since he filed his 2018 return,⁶³ the revenue officer scheduled its field visit for March 9, 2023—the day Mr. Taibbi was to testify before Congress.

The IRS's production confirmed one crucial fact—Mr. Taibbi did not owe the IRS anything. Rather, the IRS owed Mr. Taibbi a substantial refund. After the IRS's field visit, Mr. Taibbi promptly resolved his tax filing on March 21, 2023. The IRS closed Mr. Taibbi's case the next day, and on March 23, 2023, the IRS sent Mr. Taibbi a Notice of Case Resolution to inform Mr. Taibbi that his case had been closed and that no taxes or tax returns were due.

After the Committee and Select Subcommittee sent a follow-up letter to IRS Commissioner Daniel Werfel on May 24, 2023,⁶⁴ the IRS repealed the practice of unannounced field visits altogether. Nevertheless, the IRS’s unannounced visit to Mr. Taibbi’s home only stokes the fear of many Americans that the IRS, flush with its new $80 billion in funding from Congress, will “unleash its fearsome power against political opponents.”⁶⁵

III. The IRS Lied to an Ohio Taxpayer to Gain Access to Her House During an Unannounced Field Visit

In addition to the IRS's harassment of Mr. Taibbi, the Committee and Select Subcommittee learned that the IRS has used similarly abusive tactics against other American taxpayers, including one egregious example from Marion County, Ohio.⁶⁶

A. An IRS agent, using a false name, harassed and intimidated an Ohio taxpayer

On April 25, 2023, an IRS revenue officer conducted an unannounced field visit to the home of a Marion County, Ohio taxpayer. This agent, who introduced himself to the taxpayer as "Bill Haus" with the IRS's Criminal Division, informed the taxpayer he was at her home to discuss issues concerning an estate for which the taxpayer was the fiduciary. After Agent "Haus" shared details about the estate that only the IRS would know, the taxpayer let him into her home. Agent "Haus" told the taxpayer that she did not properly complete the filings for the estate and that she owed the IRS "a substantial amount." Prior to the visit, however, the taxpayer had not received any notice from the IRS of an outstanding balance on the estate.

During the visit, the taxpayer told Agent "Haus" that the estate was resolved in January 2023 and provided him with documentary proof that she had paid all taxes for the decedent's estate. At this point, Agent "Haus" conceded that the true purpose of his visit was not due to any issue with the decedent's estate, rather Agent "Haus" was at the taxpayer's home because the decedent allegedly had several delinquent tax return filings.⁶⁷

Agent "Haus" then furnished several documents to the taxpayer for her to complete. Because these documents included sensitive information about the decedent, the taxpayer offered Agent "Haus" the opportunity to speak with her accountant, which he accepted. However, when her accountant did not answer, the taxpayer called her attorney who immediately and repeatedly told Agent "Haus" to leave the taxpayer's home since the taxpayer had not received any prior notice from the IRS of any issue with the decedent's estate or delinquent tax returns. Agent "Haus" responded aggressively, insisting, "I am an IRS agent, I can be at and go into anyone's house at any time I want to be." At the end of his unannounced visit, Agent "Haus" told the taxpayer he would mail her paperwork for her to execute and threatened that she would have exactly one week to satisfy the remaining balance or he would freeze all her assets and put a lien on her house.

⁶⁶ See The Editorial Board, The IRS Makes Another House Call, WALL ST. J. (June 16, 2023). The taxpayer consented to the Committee's and the Select Subcommittee's use of this information.

⁶⁷ On May 4, 2023, Agent Haus's supervisor confirmed with the taxpayer that the decedent only had one delinquent filing from 2016. The supervisor also confirmed the decedent's 1041 final return was completed and that nothing was due.

B. The IRS Agent filed a complaint against the local police department for investigating his unusual conduct

Following the visit, the taxpayer immediately contacted the Marion, Ohio Police Department (MPD) to determine if Agent “Haus” was attempting to scam her.⁶⁸ The officer ran Agent “Haus’s” license plate and discovered the vehicle belonged to an individual whom the taxpayer confirmed was the agent, only Bill Haus was not the name on the registration.⁶⁹ The officer then called Agent “Haus” to verify his identity.⁷⁰ Agent “Haus” attested that he was an IRS agent but admitted Bill Haus was not his real name; he was using an alias.⁷¹ In response to the officer revealing his true identity, Agent “Haus” immediately filed a complaint against the officer with the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA).⁷² It was not until a major from the MPD called TIGTA in response to the complaint that the MPD learned Agent “Haus” was a legitimate IRS agent.⁷³

A police report filed by the responding officer detailed how the officer believed Agent “Haus” was truly trying to scam the taxpayer: “[Agent ‘Haus’] advised me that he was an IRS agent and I did not believe him . . . I then called the Summit County Sheriffs Office and explained to them the call that I handled and that it appears that [Agent ‘Haus’] is going around pretending to be an IRS agent[.]”⁷⁴

As detailed by a major at the MPD in correspondence with the Committee and Select Subcommittee, the circumstances surrounding this instance “certainly go[] against the grain of what we believe to be historical practice on the part of the IRS.”⁷⁵ The major indicated that he was surprised to learn that IRS agents are allowed to go by aliases to hide their true names: “I was informed by [the] Agent [at TIGTA] that IRS field agents are given alias names to perform their tasks and to avoid people knowing their true identity. I found this entire situation odd but [the] Agent [from TIGTA] sounded like a legitimate agent in our conversation.”⁷⁶

To House Committee on the Judiciary

From Major [REDACTED], Marion County Police Department

Mrs. [REDACTED] proceeded to call MPD believing that Haus was likely an imposter and we responded. The agent had already left and it was the belief of our responding officer that this individual was an imposter. The phone interaction that ensued between our officer and the agent was indicative of that belief. Agent Haus then proceeded to tell our officer that he filed a complaint against MPD with the Inspector General and provided us with the following information, demanding that we call the Inspector General's Office to participate in the complaint that he filed against our officers.

Agent Bill Haus
 Identification Number [REDACTED]
 IRS field employee identification center phone number [REDACTED]
 Office of Inspector General [REDACTED]

Haus' business card indicates that he is an "independent". Mrs. [REDACTED] told her that I did not know as I am unfamiliar with their processes.

Treasury Agent [REDACTED] (with office of Inspector General) phone number [REDACTED]

I called the Inspector General's number and spoke with an Agent [REDACTED] who works for Treasury and apparently assists in Inspector General Complaints. He indicated that this matter truly involved a legitimate (non LE) agent of the IRS. The IRS agent took issue with our officers running his license plate that apparently was connected to his personal vehicle and revealed his true name. I was informed by Agent [REDACTED] that IRS field agents are given alias names to perform their tasks and to avoid people knowing their true identity. I found this entire situation odd but Agent [REDACTED] sounded like a legitimate agent in our conversation.

However, even the agent at TIGTA recognized the degree to which Agent "Haus" weaponized his field visit against the Ohio taxpayer. As the major reported, "[The Agent from TIGTA] agreed with me that the agent should have notified MPD that he was in the area working so that we could know that he was legitimate (if he is legitimate)."⁷⁷

He agreed with me that the agent should have notified MPD that he was in the area working so that we could know that he was legitimate (if he is legitimate). When Haus spoke with Ofc. [REDACTED] he told him that they do not have to provide information to local agencies. While this is acknowledged as true, doing so allows us to legitimize his presence to people when they call and try to report an agent as an imposter, as was the case here.

The TIGTA agent assured the major that "the IRS only makes personal visits after receiving no response from the taxpayer."⁷⁸ However, like Mr. Taibbi, the Ohio taxpayer had not received any notice from the IRS about an issue prior to the unannounced field visit.

I again spoke with Agent [REDACTED] this past Friday when Mrs. [REDACTED] came to MPD to collect a copy of the police report. Agent [REDACTED] could only tell me that the version of events I was hearing from Mrs. [REDACTED] were largely the same reported to him by Agent Haus (or whatever his real name is) but he assured me that the IRS only makes personal visits after receiving no response from the taxpayer. He also told me that he has been with the Inspector General for 3 years and he gave me a sense that the IRS approach is changing to an extent that maybe he doesn't fully understand himself.

⁷⁸ Id.

The events left quite the mark on the taxpayer who remained incredibly fearful that Agent “Haus” would return to her house and that the IRS would target her again. As the major reported, “She is truly in fear of this man. What is more concerning, she contacted the IRS, verified she has a zero balance and she indicates that the person she spoke with on the phone had no idea why an agent would be coming to her home.”⁷⁹

When Mrs. ██████ stopped in, she was so concerned with this agent that she was asking our records clerk questions about how to secure her home, fearful that the agent would return and perhaps break into her house. She is truly in fear of this man. What is more concerning, she has contacted the IRS, verified she has a zero balance and she indicates that the person she spoke with on the phone has no idea why an agent would be coming to her home. Could this be a miscommunication between the IRS and their criminal division?

The IRS did nothing to ease the taxpayer’s fears. As the major explained to the Committee and Select Subcommittee, “When [the taxpayer] called the IRS to ask questions about this, she mentioned that the message on the IRS system warns callers to beware of imposters posing as IRS agents.”⁸⁰ Furthermore, the major attested that “MPD has indeed regularly shared information on [its] social media platforms warning of scams and telling our residents that the IRS WILL NOT do many of the things that this woman claims to have experienced.”⁸¹ Searching for clarity, the major stated, “Either [Agent ‘Haus’] is not who he says he is, he does things differently than the IRS has done before, or the IRS has aggressively changed their approach.”⁸²

Agent ██████ (phone number ██████) made clear to me that he could not provide specific details on this matter due to taxpayer privacy laws. While I was not trying to obtain any privileged details, I am certain that Mrs. ██████ is more fearful of this agent than she is of having info shared with her local police department. When she called the IRS to ask questions about this, she mentioned that the message on the IRS system warns callers to beware of imposters posing as IRS agents. MPD has indeed regularly shared information on our social media platforms warning of scams and telling our residents that the IRS WILL NOT do many of the things that this woman claims to have experienced. Either this person is not who he says he is, he does things differently than the IRS has before, or the IRS has aggressively changed their approach.

When the major inquired about how the taxpayer could file a complaint against Agent “Haus” to ensure something like this does not happen to her again in the future, the TIGTA agent told him that “it would be a waste of her time.”⁸³ The major aired his frustrations with how the IRS has either been weaponized or is entirely incompetent:

It is very concerning that the IRS does not know that the IRS is sending agents to the home of a taxpayer. It is concerning to me that they do not have to use their real names and can apparently make threats and so forth, against the narrative that the IRS publicly reports. It is concerning for me that it is so difficult for even a police agency to verify the credentials of a federal agent, who took such offense to his identity being challenged that he chose to file a complaint against the MPD officers with the Office of the Inspector General.⁸⁴

Lastly, the major spoke to the quality of the taxpayer and her husband as people, “The[y] . . . seem to be good, well-intentioned people that are easy to identify with. I truly feel bad for their situation (knowing only what they have told me).”⁸⁵

C. The IRS admitted its agent’s actions were improper

On May 4, 2023, the taxpayer spoke with Agent “Haus’s” direct supervisor who confirmed nothing was owed on the estate.⁸⁶ The supervisor apologized to the taxpayer for Agent “Haus’s” conduct and went so far as to admit that “some things that were said were wrong . . . things never should have gotten this far.”⁸⁷ On May 30, 2023, the taxpayer received a letter from the IRS that the case had been closed.⁸⁸ The next day, on May 31, 2023, an IRS liaison told the Committee and Select Subcommittee, “The IRS has long provided training and procedures to promote the proper customer experience, and also for confirming our identity for taxpayers and local law enforcement upon request. The interactions described to us suggest those procedures were not followed.”⁸⁹ Again, the IRS disregarded its own protocol by failing to contact the taxpayer through less intrusive means before conducting an unannounced field visit.

This weaponized behavior from an IRS agent to an American taxpayer—conducting an unannounced field visit, providing an alias, using deception to secure entry into the taxpayer’s home, abusing his authority, and then filing an Inspector General complaint against a police officer examining that matter—is highly concerning and reveals the degree to which the IRS is broken.

IV. As a Result of the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s Oversight, the IRS Terminated Its Policy of Conducting Unannounced Field Visits

As a result of the Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s oversight, the IRS terminated its unannounced field visit policy altogether, ending a decades-long practice that had been weaponized by the IRS and undermined American trust in the agency.⁹⁰

On July 24, 2023, the IRS publicly announced that it would no longer conduct most unannounced field visits to taxpayers’ homes, including those like what occurred with Mr. Taibbi and the Ohio taxpayer.⁹¹ As the IRS confirmed in its announcement: “Effective immediately, unannounced visits will end except in a few unique circumstances and will be replaced with mailed letters to schedule meetings.”⁹² Commissioner Werfel said the policy change was a “common-sense step” to better serve the taxpayers and increase public confidence in the IRS’s work.⁹³ Confidence in the IRS is, and has been, irreparably low in large part due to policies like unannounced field visits that undermine Americans’ trust in an impartial and apolitical IRS.⁹⁴

Commissioner Werfel stated in the IRS press release that unannounced field were a safety risk and that repealing the policy would “improve overall safety for taxpayers and IRS employees.”⁹⁵ The IRS’s attempt to justify its decision as being in the best interest of the safety of its revenue officers lacks concrete evidence. To the extent this data does exist, the IRS has not made it publicly available or supplied it to the Committee or Select Subcommittee.

Commissioner Werfel further used the excuse of scam artists “bombarding taxpayers has increased confusion about home visits” as justification for repealing the IRS’s policy of unannounced field visits.⁹⁶ The Commissioner argued these visits “created extra anxiety for taxpayers already wary of potential scam artists” and promised that the “only losers with this change in policy are scammers posing as the IRS”⁹⁷ However, it was not just scam artists “bombarding” taxpayers and creating confusion about unannounced home visits—it was the IRS itself. The testimony of the Ohio taxpayer and the MPD make clear that the IRS’s own actions generated genuine fear, so much so that the Ohio taxpayer sought advice on how to secure her home in case Agent “Haus” returned.⁹⁸

The Committee’s and Select Subcommittee’s oversight and investigation of the IRS’s abusive actions yielded real results for the American people. The Committee and Select Subcommittee identified how IRS employees abused an IRS policy, and it forced the IRS to reevaluate its policy. Commissioner Werfel stated that ending the policy after decades was “the right thing to do and the right time to end it.”⁹⁹ While the policy should have been ended decades ago, taxpayers no longer have to worry the IRS will come knocking on their door without prior notice.

CONCLUSION

The Committee's and Select Subcommittee's oversight revealed, and led to the swift end of, the IRS's weaponization of unannounced field visits to harass, intimidate, and target taxpayers. Taxpayers can now rest assured the IRS will not come knocking without providing prior notice—something that should have been the IRS's practice all along. No American should fear again an unannounced visit from the powerful tax collector. No American should fall victim to deception from their own government to threaten and pressure them into submission. The details that the Committee and Select Subcommittee gathered about IRS abuses are shocking examples of the federal government's weaponization.

The IRS's swath of new funding and intentions to expand its enforcement activities compel the Committee and Select Subcommittee to stay vigilant for new ways the IRS will inevitably try to abuse its power. This means the Committee's and the Select Subcommittee's oversight of the IRS is only beginning. The Committee and Select Subcommittee are already aware that the IRS is intentionally, and repeatedly, backdating tax documents to levy insurmountable penalties against taxpayers and businesses seeking to lawfully capitalize on available avenues for tax relief.¹⁰⁰ The Committee and Select Subcommittee are also looking into the IRS's continued efforts to chill the political speech of nonprofit organizations.¹⁰¹ Taxpayers deserve better from the IRS; therefore, the Committee's and Select Subcommittee's oversight into the weaponization of the IRS will continue until the agency charts a new course and proves it is no longer a threat to Americans' civil liberties.

II. The Biden-Harris Administration’s coordination with financial institutions to surveil Americans

The Select Subcommittee began an investigation into government-led financial surveillance after a whistleblower disclosed that following the events of January 6, 2021, Bank of America (BoA), voluntarily and without legal process, provided the FBI with a list of names of all individuals who used a BoA credit or debit card in the Washington, D.C. region around that time.¹²⁸ In response to these allegations and corroborating testimony from FBI officials, the Select Subcommittee requested documents from BoA and six other national financial institutions about the provision of Americans’ private financial information to federal law enforcement without legal process.¹²⁹ On March 6, 2024, the Select Subcommittee released an interim report revealing that federal law enforcement had used sweeping search terms like “MAGA” and “TRUMP” to target Americans and even treated purchases of religious texts or firearms as indicators of “extremism.”¹³⁰ That report, “Financial Surveillance in the United States: How Federal Law Enforcement Commandeered Financial Institutions to Spy on Americans,” detailed how federal law enforcement derisively viewed American citizens—treating Americans who expressed opposition to firearm regulations, open borders, COVID-19 lockdowns, vaccine mandates, and the “deep state” as potential domestic terrorists.¹³¹ On March 7, 2024, the Select Subcommittee held a hearing examining how Big Government and Big Banks colluded to surveil Americans’ private financial data.¹³²

After it released the first interim report, the Select Subcommittee requested additional documents and communications from seventeen different entities—including national banks, crowdfunding sites, money service businesses, and the U.S. Treasury Department—to further examine whether the federal government was abusing its access to Americans’ sensitive financial information.¹³³ Upon reviewing these documents, the Select Subcommittee released a second interim report, “Financial Surveillance in the United States: How the Federal Government Weaponized the Bank Secrecy Act to Spy on Americans.” Those documents revealed that federal law enforcement has virtually unchecked access to private financial data, is testing out new methods and technology to embed financial surveillance into the American financial framework, and has deputized the financial sector as an investigative arm.¹³⁴ In particular, the Select Subcommittee received documents indicating that the FBI has manipulated the Suspicious Activity Report (SAR) filing process by encouraging banks to file SARs based on names and selectors the FBI sends to the financial institution.¹³⁵ The FBI uses this practice to obtain warrantless access to Americans' sensitive data.¹³⁶ In addition, the Select Subcommittee discovered that financial institutions confidentially report millions of Americans' transactions to the federal government and that tens of thousands of government officials have access to search and download Americans' financial information from government repositories without ever having to get a warrant.¹³⁷

Although the Select Subcommittee's oversight initially focused on the early days of 2021, further investigation revealed that financial surveillance goes far beyond the targeting of one political ideology. Indeed, Big Government and Big Banks have warped information-sharing into a tool designed to constantly surveil Americans' daily activities.

HOW FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMANDEERED FINANCIAL

Interim Staff Report of the Committee on the Judiciary
and the
Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government
U.S. House of Representatives

March 6, 2024

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Committee on the Judiciary and its Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government are charged by the House of Representatives with upholding fundamental American civil liberties.¹ As a part of this mission, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have uncovered startling evidence that the federal government was engaged in broad financial surveillance, prying into the private transactions of American consumers. This financial surveillance was not predicated on any specific evidence of particularized criminal conduct and, even worse, it keyed on terms and specific transactions that concerned core political and religious expression protected by the Constitution.

On February 7, 2023, the Committee and Select Subcommittee received testimony from retired Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) Supervisory Intelligence Analyst George Hill.² During his transcribed interview, Mr. Hill testified that, following the events at the U.S. Capitol on January 6, 2021, Bank of America (BoA), voluntarily and without legal process, provided the FBI with a list of names of all individuals who used a BoA credit or debit card in the Washington, D.C. region between the dates of January 5 and January 7, 2021.³ Mr. Hill also testified that this BoA “data dump” of customer information also included a list of individuals who had ever used a BoA credit or debit card to purchase a firearm, regardless of when or where it was purchased.⁴ This testimony was later confirmed by another former senior FBI official, Joseph Bonavolonta.⁵ In fact, when the BoA information was brought to the attention of Steven Jensen, the then-Section Chief of the FBI’s Domestic Terrorism Operations Section, he acted to “pull” the BoA information from FBI systems because the “leads lacked allegations of federal criminal conduct,” and out of “concern[.]” from where it “originated.”⁶

In response to this testimony, the Committee and Select Subcommittee requested documents from BoA and six other national financial institutions about the provision of Americans’ private financial information to federal law enforcement without legal process.⁷ In the months that followed this initial request, the Committee and Select Subcommittee’s oversight has uncovered the magnitude of law enforcement’s access to private financial records of American citizens.

These documents show that following the events of January 6, 2021, federal law enforcement officials from the Treasury Department’s Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) and the FBI initiated multiple discussions with financial institutions.⁸ These meetings included some of the largest financial institutions in the United States, including Barclays, U.S. Bank, Charles Schwab, HSBC, BoA, Paypal, KeyBank, Standard Chartered, Western Union,

Wells Fargo, Citibank, Santander, JPMorgan Chase, and MUFG.⁹ These meetings were geared toward discussing options for financial institutions to share customer information voluntarily with federal law enforcement outside of normal legal processes.¹⁰

The information obtained by the Committee and Select Subcommittee also shows that law enforcement and private institutions shared intelligence products in the aftermath of January 6 through a web portal run by the Domestic Security Alliance Council (DSAC).¹¹ The DSAC is a public-private partnership led by the FBI's Office of Private Sector and the Department of Homeland Security's (DHS) Office of Intelligence and Analysis.¹² The DSAC promotes the "exchange of security and intelligence information" between the federal government and its 650 "member" companies, collectively comprising "two-thirds of the U.S. Gross Domestic Product" and "35 million employees."¹³ Following January 6, the FBI shared an intelligence product titled "Domestic Violent Extremists Likely Emboldened in Aftermath of Capitol Breach," prepared by the FBI, DHS, and the National Counterterrorism Center (NCTC), with financial institutions to alert them to individuals that may fit the profile of criminal and domestic violent extremists (DVEs).¹⁴

This FBI intelligence product, along with other materials shared by federal law enforcement, detail the extent to which federal law enforcement derisively viewed American citizens. For example, one report shared with financial institutions noted that those Americans who expressed opposition to firearm regulations, open borders, COVID-19 lockdowns, vaccine mandates, and the "deep state" may be potential domestic terrorists.¹⁵ Federal law enforcement used this report and materials like it to commandeer financial institutions' databases and ask the financial institutions to conduct sweeping searches of individuals not suspected of committing any crimes. For example, federal law enforcement suggested that banks filter Zelle payments using keywords like "MAGA" and "TRUMP" as part of an ostensible investigation into the events on January 6, 2021, and also warned that "the purchase of books (including religious texts) and subscriptions to other media containing extremist views," could be evidence of "Homegrown Violent Extremism."¹⁶

FinCEN also distributed materials to financial institutions instructing them on how to use Merchant Category Codes (MCCs) to search through transactions to detect potential criminals or "extremists."¹⁷ These MCCs use keywords to comb through transactions, such as "small arms" purchases or recreational stores such as "Cabela's," "Bass Pro Shop," and "Dick's Sporting Goods."¹⁸ Americans doing nothing other than shopping or exercising their Second Amendment rights were being tracked by financial institutions and federal law enforcement. Despite these transactions having no criminal nexus, FinCEN seems to have adopted a characterization of these Americans as potential threat actors and subject to surveillance.

Without the FBI whistleblowers' disclosures to the Committee and Select Subcommittee, these documents would not have come to light. While it is alarming enough that federal law enforcement and Bank of America used January 6, 2021, as a pretext for surveilling potentially thousands of Americans without a warrant, the documents received by the Committee and Select Subcommittee show a pattern of financial surveillance aimed at millions of Americans who hold conservative viewpoints or simply exercise their Second Amendment rights. This raises serious concerns and doubts about federal law enforcement's and financial institutions' commitment to respecting Americans' privacy rights and fundamental civil liberties.

As the investigation continues, the Committee and Select Subcommittee will continue to work to understand the extent and status of this widespread financial surveillance while also exploring how Congress could enact legislation to further protect Americans' civil liberties.

BACKGROUND

As part of the oversight conducted by the Committee on the Judiciary and the Select Subcommittee on the Weaponization of the Federal Government, the Committee and Select Subcommittee received testimony from retired FBI Supervisory Intelligence Analyst George Hill on February 7, 2023.¹⁹ Mr. Hill testified that Bank of America (BoA) provided the FBI—voluntarily and without any legal process—with a list of individuals who had made transactions in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area with a BoA credit or debit card between January 5 and January 7, 2021, and that individuals who had previously purchased a firearm with a BoA debit card or credit card were elevated to the top of the list regardless of when or where the purchase was made.²⁰

In his transcribed interview, Mr. Hill stated:

The Bank of America, with no directive from the FBI, data-mined its customer base. And they data-mined a date range of 5 to 7 January [of 2021] any BOA customer who used a BOA product. And by ‘BOA product,’ I mean a debit card or a credit card. They compiled that list. And then, on top of that list, they put anyone who had purchased a firearm during any date. So it was a huge list²¹

Mr. Hill’s testimony was corroborated by the testimony of his former supervisor and former Special Agent-in-Charge of the Boston Field Office, Joseph Bonavolonta.²² Mr. Bonavolonta testified that Boston’s Joint Terrorism Task Force Squad Supervisor, Chief Division Counsel, and Assistant Special Agent-in Charge of Counterterrorism also brought the BoA data to his attention.²³ Mr. Bonavolonta testified:

[A] lead had been sent to our office from a unit within FBI Headquarters that fell under the Office of Private Sector . . . in the body of the lead, there was . . . information that was provided by Bank of America following a certain number of criteria that in essence aggregated a list of individuals that were supposedly living up in the New England area who . . . either had potentially made . . . certain credit card purchases . . . for hotel reservations or plane tickets, or potential purchases at certain gun stores in and around . . . January 6th or planned for the inauguration date.²⁴

Mr. Bonavolonta also testified that, “one of the [list’s] criteria . . . in terms of Bank of America’s data . . . was related to purchases that had been made at either gun shops or, you know, stores that would sell firearms.”²⁵ Mr. Bonavolonta also stated that the BoA customer data was sent to other FBI field offices across the country, including the Springfield, Illinois field office.²⁶

Mr. Bonavolonta’s testimony was further supported by Steven Jensen, the then-Section Chief of the FBI’s Domestic Terrorism Operations Section. In his transcribed interview, Mr. Jensen testified that the FBI “maintain[s] partnerships with the private sector, to include Bank of America” and that he was “aware that they provided information to the FBI,” but that, to his knowledge, the FBI did not ask for this information from BoA.²⁷ Instead, he testified that the information “was certain purchaser transaction records of individuals that Bank of America provided over to the FBI that wasn’t requested by the FBI. It was of their own volition . . . without any process being issued.”²⁸ When that information was brought to his attention, Mr. Jensen acted to “pull” the BoA information from FBI systems because “the leads lacked allegations of federal criminal conduct,” and out of “concern[]” from where “it originated.”²⁹ At a hearing before the Committee on July 12, 2023, FBI Director Chris Wray responded to a question about the BoA information and stated that “a number of business community partners all the time, including financial institutions, share information with us about possible criminal activity In the specific instance that you’re asking about, my understanding is that that information was shared with field offices for information only, but, then, recalled to avoid even the appearance of any kind of overreach.”³⁰

Mr. Hill, Mr. Bonavolonta, and Mr. Jensen’s testimony raise serious concerns about federal law enforcement’s compliance with existing legal processes designed to protect Americans’ financial privacy. In light of these revelations, the Committee and the Select Subcommittee requested information from BoA and six other financial institutions to understand how and to what extent financial institutions worked with federal law enforcement to collect, share, and monitor Americans’ data.³¹ In response to these requests, the Committee and Select Subcommittee have received, to date, over a thousand pages of documents from six of the largest financial institutions in the United States, that, together, are responsible for managing trillions of dollars in assets and millions of Americans’ bank accounts.³² Although the former FBI officials
