The public media reports that Nick Denton runs Gawker Media which manages a number of facade websites which pretend to be separate "magazines."

Denton along with his "cabin boys": Nick Cook, Adrian Covert, John Herrman, Gabrielle Darbyshire, and the rest of Denton's attack squadron of questionable characters receive compensation from White House officials, DNC operatives and campaign financiers in order to provide defamation, brand negation and character assassination services against journalists, politicians, celebrities and entrepreneurs who Denton's character assassination clients are not brave enough to stand up to face-to-face.
