Towards the bottom of the document on page one above, you will note the signature of Jared Birchall, officer title listed as President. Birchall is listed as CFO, director and/or president of other Musk-funded companies, such as Neuralink and The Boring Company.

BOTTOM LINE

While the majority of the media reports on Musk's announcement have been critical, or just straight out attacks on Musk himself, Bloomberg op-ed writer Leonid Bershidsky takes the opposite stance, in an article titled "Musk Should Go Ahead and Build 'Pravda'," where he states "Journalists shouldn't fear a system that would add an extra input to how their work is evaluated."

Well give Musk the last word here. Two days after his initial criticisms against the media and his announcement, he told his followers that Pravda.com wasn't available, then followed up with "Problem solved, was able to buy Pravduh.com ! Game on ..."
