

Delta Gamma Rape Compliancy Club Forced Into Closure As Elites Realize They Suck Balls

 Waiting for new Deltas

Older members of sorority Delta Gamma wait outside the Sheraton Commander Hotel Tuesday afternoon while the new members receive their bids inside.

Photo: Varnel L Antoine

By Caroline S. Engelmayer and Michael E. Xie, Crimson Staff Writers

11 hours ago

Harvard's chapter of the Delta Gamma sorority is closing its doors — making it the first single-gender group to shut down in response to the College's social group penalties.

The national Delta Gamma organization announced the move in a press release Thursday and explicitly cited the sanctions as the impetus for the decision.

The College's policy, which took effect with the Class of 2021, bars members of single-gender final clubs, fraternities, and sororities from holding leadership positions in recognized student groups, captaining varsity athletic teams, and receiving College endorsement for a number of prestigious fellowships.

“We respect the chapter's decision and understand that the University's sanctions resulted in an environment in which Delta Gamma could not thrive,” Wilma Johnson Wilbanks, Delta Gamma's national president, wrote in a press release. “We sincerely hope this changes in the future.”