Google workers demand end to company's involvement in drone murders

By Andre Damon

Revelations last month that Google was designing software for the US military's illegal drone warfare program have sparked outrage among employees. More than 3,000 Google workers have signed a letter to executives demanding that it end its involvement with the Pentagon.

The program, known as "Project Maven," involves the use of artificial intelligence systems to analyze drone footage, potentially assisting the Pentagon in identifying targets for drone assassinations, which have led to the deaths of tens of thousands of people, most of them bystanders, across the Middle East and North Africa. Google's involvement in the program was reported by Gizmodo last month.

The letter, addressed to CEO Sundar Pichai, declares, "We believe that Google should not be in the business of war. Therefore we ask that Project Maven be cancelled, and that Google draft, publicize and enforce a clear policy stating that neither Google nor its contractors will ever build warfare technology."

Responding to earlier criticism by Google employees last month, Diane Greene, CEO of the company's cloud business, said the software would not "operate or fly drones" and "will not be used to launch weapons."

The letter dismisses these feeble pretexts, declaring, "While this eliminates a narrow set of direct applications, the technology is being built for the military, and once it's delivered it could easily be used to assist in these tasks."

The US government's drone murder program, involving the assassination of people without trial, violates both the US Constitution and international law, implicating Google in activity that could lead to criminal prosecution.

The letter warns that the company's actions "will irreparably damage Google's brand," and that "by entering into this contract, Google will join the ranks of companies like Palantir, Raytheon, and General Dynamics. The argument that other firms, like Microsoft and Amazon, are participating doesn't make this any less risky for Google. Google's unique history, its motto Don't Be Evil, and its direct reach into the lives of billions of users sets it apart."

It concludes, "Building this technology to assist the US Government in military surveillance and potentially lethal outcomes is not acceptable."

Google's relationship with the military is in fact not new. Eric Schmidt, the executive chairman for Google from 2001 to 2017, has a position on the Pentagon's Defense Advisory Board, along with Google Vice President Milo Medin.

The letter points to the growing divide between the employees of technology companies, among the most highly-skilled workers anywhere in the world—many of whom have imbibed an ethos of opposition to concentrated power, surveillance, and the military—and leading executives determined to integrate Google, Facebook, and Twitter into the military/intelligence apparatus.

While workers at technology companies are some of the best-paid in the United States, nearly all of them are compelled to work grueling schedules, regularly involving workweeks of at least 60 hours, making raising a family nearly impossible. Much of their salary is taken up by housing costs. Rents have shot up by more than 50 percent in the San Francisco Bay area, the most expensive real estate market in America. The average one-bedroom apartment rent is $3,390 per month, forcing some workers to live in their cars.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

Amid a growing nationwide strike wave that has led to walkouts by teachers in West Virginia and Oklahoma, technology workers throughout the San Francisco Bay Area, the United States, and the world no doubt increasingly feel themselves at odds with their employers, who lured many away from careers in the sciences with promises of â changing the worldâ for the better.

Now, these workers are being told by these same executives to create systems for mass murder, surveillance, and censorship.

The New York Times, which first reported the letter, wrote that it could not get a single employee to speak on the record, no doubt testifying to the climate of intimidation and repression within the company.

Googleâs relationship with the military is connected to its involvement, along with Facebook and other technology companies, in the effort to censor the Internet. Beginning in April, Google initiated modified its search algorithms â to surface more authoritative content,â claiming that this was aimed at countering â the phenomenon of â fake news.â â

As the WSWS documented in an open letter to Google sent in August, the aim of these changes was â to restrict public awareness of and access to socialist, anti-war and left-wing websites.â The consequences of the changes included a nearly 70 percent (now more than 75 percent) drop in Google referrals to the WSWS.

At the time, the WSWS noted that Googleâs moves to align itself with the demands of the military/intelligence apparatus would inevitably engender opposition within the company. These warnings have been confirmed.

Googleâs actions last year were followed by similar moves by Facebook in January, when it announced changes to its News Feed to material from â broadly trusted and high-quality sources,â a euphemism for the New York Times, Wall Street Journal and other corporate news publications.

Last month, Google also announced a new â News Initiativeâ aimed at elevating â authoritative contentâ in its widely-used Google News section.

The involvement of Google with the military and its collaboration with intelligence agencies in censoring information online are two sides of the same process. As the ruling class prepares for an immense expansion of war and domestic repression, it is seeking to utilize the services of the giant technology companies.

Head Of Russian Military Intelligence Dies Mysteriously From "Serious Illness" Poisoning

by Tyler Durden

One of Russia's highest ranking spies and the powerful head of military intelligence has died after a long and serious illness, a Defense Ministry spokesperson told the news agency RIA Novosti. Gen. Col. Igor Korobov, the 63-year old head of Russia's Military Intelligence Directorate (GRU), was reported dead early Thursday morning; currently there's no reports of foul play though officials did not reveal specific details or the circumstances of his death.

Crucially Korobov had been dubbed by the West the "Novichok spymaster" as the Russian GRU chief ultimately blamed for the Salisbury attack as well as the downing of MH17 over Ukraine in 2014, which the Kremlin in turn had blamed on pro-Kiev national forces.

GRU director Igor

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

Korobov, via The Daily Mail

Korobov had for two years been under US sanctions, added by US Treasury in December 2016 related to allegations of Russian hacking and efforts to undermine democracy. Ironically, however, he was seen at times as a cooperative ally in Washington's "war on terror" efforts since 9/11. In one particular stunning and unprecedented case, he was still allowed to participate as part of a high level Russian intelligence delegation to the United States in February 2018 to meet with American intelligence officials to discuss counter-terror initiatives.

At that time Korobov made the trip to D.C. despite officially being under US sanctions while accompanied by the directors of Russia's Federal Security Service (FSB) and Foreign Intelligence Service (SVR).

According to Korobov's bio in Meduza he ascended the ranks of the USSR's military intelligence wing starting in the 1980's:

He served in the Soviet and Russian armed forces since 1973, joining the USSR's military intelligence in 1985 and becoming Russia's GRU director in 2016.

A career intelligence officer who started out in the 1980s, Korobov graduated from the Conservatory and went on to oversee Russia's strategic intelligence gathering, including the management of all foreign stations. His appointment was no surprise: since the 1990s, the president has traditionally entrusted the job to lieutenants who supervised Russia's foreign stations.

According to TASS, "in 2016 he was appointed by a presidential decree as the head of the Main Directorate of the General Staff of the Russian Armed Forces and Deputy Chief of General Staff of the Russian Armed Forces."

Korobov had been ill since early October, when reports revealed he was severely reprimanded by President Putin himself over mishandling accusations surrounding the alleged Salisbury poison attack the West pinned on Russian intelligence.

According to The Daily Mail:

President Vladimir Putin personally gave a dressing down to the head of Russian spy agency GRU over 'deep incompetence' shown in the Salisbury poisonings and other international operations.

GRU chief Col-Gen Igor Korobov, 62, reportedly emerged shaken and in sudden 'ill health' after his confrontation with the furious Russian president.

This detail alone means we could soon hear more to the story and circumstances surrounding his death, which the defense ministry has yet to be forthcoming about in terms of details or exact cause of death.

An official defense ministry statement called Korobov a wonderful person, a faithful son of Russia and a patriot of his homeland.

Within three years, the Pentagon's non-lethal weapons lab hopes to have a direct energy weapon that can produce an effect like a haunted walkie-talkie or the biblical burning bush.

Watch the video above and listen carefully for what sounds like a human voice during the second spin. That's not an audio recording or a broadcast transmitted over radio—it's not human at all. It's an auditory effect that's created by military scientists who manipulated the air with lasers—and it's the Pentagon's most interesting idea for stopping people charging checkpoints, or just scaring the crap out of them.

The U.S. military's Joint Non-Lethal Weapons Program, or JNLWD, is inching closer to a weapon that alters atoms to literally create words from thin air. It's called the Laser-Induced Plasma Effect and, fingers crossed, they hope to be able to say intelligible words within the next three years.

The weapon is composed of two parts: first, a femtosecond laser, which shoots a burst of focused light for 10–15 seconds, just long enough to rip the electrons from air molecules and create a ball of plasma. (Sometimes called the fourth state of matter, plasma is a field of electrified gas, highly responsive to electromagnetic effects.) The scientists then hit that plasma field with a second nanolaser, tuned to an extremely narrow range of wavelengths. They use that to manipulate the plasma field in a way that can produce light and noise. Get the interaction precise enough and you get something that sounds like a haunted walkie-talkie.

“We’re this close to getting it to speak to us. I need three or four more kilohertz,” says David Law, who runs JNLWD’s technology division. Ultimately, he wants a single system that can produce multiple effects—noise, light, even heat—and replace a wide variety of non-lethal weapons that the military has been testing. We have the exclusive video.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

The weapon's most interesting aspect may be the way it creates noise: at a specific and distant point in space, rather than blasting it out of a nearby speaker. That means that soldiers between the weapon and the target are unaffected.

How far away can that point be? "Range is a function of the optics. The bigger the mirrors, the farther the range," Law said. A five-inch mirror creates the effect about one kilometer away; an 8-inch mirror, about five kilometers, he said. "They've created plasmas at 20 or 30 kilometers," he said. "This is the first non-lethal weapon that could go out tens of kilometers."

The Kerr effect, a term that refers to minute changes in the refractive index as a result of electromagnetic field changes, makes it actually easier to create the effect at a distance.

"One of the things about the ultra short pulse, it wants to form at longer ranges. It's harder to form at shorter ranges," said Law.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The blaring, grinding noise jolted the American diplomat from his bed in a Havana hotel. He moved just a few feet, and there was silence. He climbed back into bed. Inexplicably, the agonizing sound hit him again. It was as if he'd walked through some invisible wall cutting straight through his room.

Soon came the hearing loss, and the speech problems, symptoms both similar and altogether different from others among at least 21 U.S. victims in an astonishing international mystery still unfolding in Cuba. The top U.S. diplomat has called them "health attacks." New details learned by The Associated Press indicate at least some of the incidents were confined to specific rooms or even parts of rooms with laser-like specificity, baffling U.S. officials who say the facts and the physics don't add up.

"None of this has a reasonable explanation," said Fulton Armstrong, a former CIA official who served in Havana long before America re-opened an embassy there. "It's just mystery after mystery after mystery."

Suspicion initially focused on a sonic weapon, and on the Cubans. Yet the diagnosis of mild brain injury, considered unlikely to result from sound, has confounded the FBI, the State Department and U.S. intelligence agencies involved in the investigation.

Some victims now have problems concentrating or recalling specific words, several officials said, the latest signs of more serious damage than the U.S. government initially realized. The United States first acknowledged the attacks in August — nine months after symptoms were first reported.

It may seem the stuff of sci-fi novels, of the cloak-and-dagger rivalries that haven't fully dissipated despite the historic U.S.-Cuban rapprochement two years ago that seemed to bury the weight of the two nations' Cold War enmity. But this is Cuba, the land of poisoned cigars, exploding seashells and covert subterfuge by Washington and Havana, where the unimaginable in espionage has often been all too real.

The Trump administration still hasn't identified a culprit or a device to explain the attacks, according to interviews with more than a dozen current and former U.S. officials, Cuban officials and others briefed on the investigation. Most weren't authorized to discuss the probe and demanded anonymity.

"The investigation into all of this is still under way. It is an aggressive investigation," State Department spokeswoman Heather Nauert said Thursday. "We will continue doing this until we find out who or what is responsible for this."

In fact, almost nothing about what went down in Havana is clear. Investigators have tested several theories about an intentional attack — by Cuba's government, a rogue faction of its security forces, a third country like Russia, or some combination thereof. Yet they've left open the possibility an advanced espionage operation went horribly awry, or that some other, less nefarious explanation is to blame.

Aside from their homes, officials said Americans were attacked in at least one hotel, a fact not previously disclosed. An incident occurred on an upper floor of the recently renovated Hotel Capri, a 60-year-old concrete tower steps from the Malecon, Havana's iconic, waterside promenade.

The cases vary deeply: different symptoms, different recollections of what happened. That's what makes the puzzle so difficult to crack.

In several episodes recounted by U.S. officials, victims knew it was happening in real time, and there were strong indications of a sonic attack.

Some felt vibrations, and heard sounds — loud ringing or a high-pitch chirping similar to crickets or cicadas. Others heard the grinding noise. Some victims awoke with ringing in their ears and fumbled for their alarm clocks, only to discover the ringing stopped when they moved away from their beds.

The attacks seemed to come at night. Several victims reported they came in minute-long bursts.

Yet others heard nothing, felt nothing. Later, their symptoms came.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

The scope keeps widening. On Tuesday, the State Department disclosed that doctors had confirmed another two cases, bringing the total American victims to 21. Some have mild traumatic brain injury, known as a concussion, and others permanent hearing loss.

Even the potential motive is unclear. Investigators are at a loss to explain why Canadians were harmed, too, including some who reported nosebleeds. Fewer than 10 Canadian diplomatic households in Cuba were affected, a Canadian official said. Unlike the U.S., Canada has maintained warm ties to Cuba for decades.

Sound and health experts are equally baffled. Targeted, localized beams of sound are possible, but the laws of acoustics suggest such a device would probably be large and not easily concealed. Officials said it's unclear whether the device's effects were localized by design or due to some other technical factor.

And no single, sonic gadget seems to explain such an odd, inconsistent array of physical responses.

"Brain damage and concussions, it's not possible," said Joseph Pompei, a former MIT researcher and psychoacoustics expert. "Somebody would have to submerge their head into a pool lined with very powerful ultrasound transducers."

Other symptoms have included brain swelling, dizziness, nausea, severe headaches, balance problems and tinnitus, or prolonged ringing in the ears. Many victims have shown improvement since leaving Cuba and some suffered only minor or temporary symptoms.

After the U.S. complained to Cuba's government earlier this year and Canada detected its own cases, the FBI and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police traveled to Havana to investigate.

FBI investigators swept the rooms, looking for devices. They found nothing, several officials briefed on the investigation said.

In May, Washington expelled two Cuban diplomats to protest the communist government's failure to protect Americans serving there. But the U.S. has taken pains not to accuse Havana of perpetrating the attacks. It's a sign investigators believe that even if elements of Cuba's security forces were involved, it wasn't necessarily directed from the top.

Cuba's government declined to answer specific questions about the incidents, pointing to a previous Foreign Affairs Ministry statement denying any involvement, vowing full cooperation and saying it was treating the situation "with utmost importance."

"Cuba has never, nor would it ever, allow that the Cuban territory be used for any action against accredited diplomatic agents or their families, without exception," the Cuban statement said.

After half a century of estrangement, the U.S. and Cuba in 2015 restored diplomatic ties between countries separated by a mere 90 miles of water. Embassies were re-opened and restrictions on travel and commerce eased. President Donald Trump has reversed some of those changes, but left others in place.

Mark Feierstein, who oversaw the Cuba detente on President Barack Obama's National Security Council, noted that Cuban authorities have been uncharacteristically cooperative with the investigation.

If the Trump administration felt confident Raul Castro's government was to blame, it's likely the U.S. would have already taken major punitive steps, like shuttering the newly re-established American Embassy. And the U.S. hasn't stopped sending new diplomats to Cuba even as the victim list grows.

"Had they thought the Cuban government was deliberately attacking American diplomats, that would have had a much more negative effect," Feierstein said. "We haven't seen that yet."

How the Silicon Valley Mafia Reaches Into Every Corner and Corruption of Silicon Valley...Including Murders

The self-titled PayPal mafia was forged during the creation of the online-payments giant. This group of alumni continues to drive innovation through their advice and investment in over 400 tech companies.

It isn't unusual for a group of students from school to do everything together, become fast friends, and stay in touch after college is over. Some even go into business together. It is, however, very unusual for a group to become some of the most visionary leaders in the tech industry, establish several of the world's best-known companies, and become millionaires and even billionaires in the process.

That is precisely the case for founders and the early employees of PayPal Holdings, Inc. (NASDAQ:PYPL), which eBay Inc. (NASDAQ:EBAY) acquired for $1.5 billion in October 2002, six months after its IPO. After the deal closed, this group of serial entrepreneurs fanned out across the tech landscape with their newfound wealth and a pocketful of experiences that would forever change how start-ups operate.

EARLY PAYPAL FOUNDERS AND EXECUTIVES BECAME INSTRUMENTAL IN EMPOWERING THE NEXT GENERATION OF SILICON VALLEY START-UPS. IMAGE SOURCE: PAYPAL.

The PayPal mafia

The label "PayPal mafia" refers to the team of former founders and early employees of PayPal that have established massive reach and influence in Silicon Valley. This group of high-net-worth alumni, which includes Peter Thiel, Elon Musk, Max Levchin, and Keith Rabois, were later the creators of a surprising number of highly successful technology companies.

Thiel estimates that the PayPal mafia numbers about 220, and many have since emerged as tech icons -- founding new companies, starting venture-capital funds, and assuming prominent roles in hedge funds. To this day, they call on each other for advice or for the funds needed to help finance their latest venture.

Why were they so successful?

After a breakfast meeting in 1998 to discuss the creation of an online currency, founders Thiel and Levchin recruited classmates from their respective schools, Stanford University and the University of Illinois. PayPal's early employees were cut from remarkably similar cloth. As a group, they were well educated, highly competitive, multilingual, and talented in math, though they were dismissive of jocks, fraternity members, and MBAs. They were also largely workaholics. Above all, they wanted the business to consist of a group of friends, and they recruited from their inner circles.

Some credit the similar personality types for PayPal's success, while others single out the pressure-cooker atmosphere, confrontational culture, and collaborative environment of the fledgling company. The group encountered and solved a significant number of high-profile problems internally that included fierce competition from eventual suitor eBay, outright hostility from the banking and credit card companies, and issues of consumer fraud. Some believe this trial by fire helped mold the PayPal team into the visionaries they would later become. Their ability to meet and deal with these challenges created the alliances that continue today.

Thiel's unorthodox leadership style was also credited. This involved all-hands-on-deck presentations of customer information, financials, and fraud statistics, laid out for all to see, down to even the most junior employees. Staff championed their ideas to the group, every concept was considered regardless of the source, and the best proposals were adopted. There were also no offices, even for the founders and executives.

THE PAYPAL MAFIA CONTINUES TO INFLUENCE THE NEXT GENERATION OF TECH VISIONARIES. IMAGE SOURCE: PAYPAL.

The payoff

A "unicorn" is tech parlance for that rare breed of start-up company that can survive long enough to exceed a valuation of $1 billion. While PayPal itself achieved that distinction, members of the PayPal mafia went on to found seven unicorn companies that became some of the best-known and most successful technology companies.

Company Name	Ticker	Price/Value/Market Cap	PayPal Mafia Founders	Outcome
Tesla, Inc.	TSLA	$58 billion	Elon Musk	Public Acquired by Microsoft Corporation in 2016
LinkedIn	N/A	$26.2 billion	Reid Hoffman	Private
Palantir	N/A	$20 billion	Peter Thiel	Private
SpaceX	N/A	$15 billion	Elon Musk	Private
Yelp Inc.	YELP	$2.4 billion	Jeremy Stoppelman, Max Levchin, Russel Simmons	Public Bought by Alphabet Inc. 's Google in 2006
YouTube		$1.65 billion	Chad Hurley, Steve Chen, Jawed Karim	Bought by Microsoft 2012
Yammer		$1.2 billion	David Sacks	Bought by Microsoft 2012

This group was also instrumental in advising or funding a number of current tech unicorns and household names. These start-ups including ride-hailing service Uber, online home-rental site AirBNB, image-sharing social network Pinterest, internet payments company Stripe, and payments system Square, Inc., which has since gone public. They can all trace their roots to support provided by members of the PayPal mafia.

Final analysis

While no one knows the precise combination of elements or the exact sequence of events that molded this group of tech visionaries, we do know that their shared experiences have had a lasting impact on the nature of

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

how tech start-ups were approached. Their shared success with PayPal emboldened them to take the lessons learned and share them with others to create the next generation of tech unicorns. If you offend their Frat Boy, covertly Gay insider club, though, some of them will have you killed.

Inventor of a water-powered car died at restaurant, shouting "They poisoned me"

Have you ever heard of Stanley Meyer, creator of the water fuel cell? If so, you will likely know that although he claimed to have invented a "perpetual motion machine," in 1996 an Ohio court found his claims to be fraudulent.

Meyer claimed that an automobile fixed with his fuel cell device could use water instead of gasoline; essentially the cell could split water into its basic component elements, oxygen and hydrogen (which burned to generate energy, in a process that reconstituted the water molecules), violating the first and second scientific laws of thermodynamics.

It was also alleged to involve "Brown's gas," a substance that has kind of gathered a cult following, a mixture of oxyhydrogen with a ratio of 2:1, the same composition of liquid water, which according to Wikipedia, "which would then be mixed with ambient air (nitrogen, oxygen, carbon dioxide, carbon monoxide, methane, chlorofluorocarbons, free radicals/electrons, radiation, among others)."

Academic journals were published, in Nature, about Meyer's claims amounting to pseudoscience. The report said "It's not easy to establish how Meyer's car was meant to work, except that it involved a fuel cell that was able to split water using less energy than was released by recombination of the elements." Crusaders against pseudoscience can rant and rave as much as they like, but in the end they might as well accept that the myth of water as a fuel is never going to go away. 1

In 1998, while eating in a restaurant with two Belgian investors, Meyer suddenly died. According to his brother, during the meal, he suddenly stood up, ran outside, and shouted: "They poisoned me!"

What did he really know? We may never know. If Meyer's invention would have allowed us to travel from New York to Los Angeles on only 22 gallons of water, maybe there was a good reason to keep him quiet.

People may call us conspiracy theorists but as always my only goal is to educate the public by giving them access to things the mainstream doesn't always want them to see. What you do with this information is up to you.

Investigative Journalist Jen Moore was found dead in a suburban Washington D.C. hotel room Monday, according to police and shocked and distraught friends and colleagues.

Moore died of an apparent seizure. Police are closely investigating the cause of death after former FBI Agent Robyn Gritz, a friend of Moore's, made inquiries with homicide detectives Monday afternoon in Prince Georges County, Maryland. Preliminary reports from police said the death was not the result of suicide.

Moore's body was found by employees at the Country Inn & Suites by Radisson, Washington, D.C. East in Capitol Heights, Maryland. The investigation is ongoing. An autopsy had not been scheduled as of late Monday.

Moore, an advocate who investigated abused and trafficked children, had been in the process of investigating allegations by a 26-year-old man that as a young boy he was sexually assaulted by Bill Clinton and pimped out at private sex parties attended by other D.C. elites.

In fact, just four weeks before her death, Moore filed details of the alleged victim's claims with the Department of Homeland Security, detailing the allegations against Clinton. Moore contacted Homeland Security beginning on July 6th through July 9th, records show. A week later, she contacted the FBI with identical details about the victim and the shocking allegations against Clinton.

FBI sources report no case has been opened on the evidence supplied by Moore. Homeland Security officials could not be reached for comment.

Moore had approached True Pundit's Thomas Paine in June with the allegations against Clinton. Paine conducted a series of face-to-face interviews with Moore and the alleged victim in various locales. By July, the victim agreed to tell his story to Paine. But Moore and the traumatized victim wanted to contact Homeland Security and the FBI first to see if they would open a criminal case against Clinton prior to publicizing the claims.

Jen thought that with a criminal probe, federal agents could use the victim possibly to dangle in front of Clinton to see if he made a mistake or tried to pay him off, Paine said. She was worried about the safety of the victim and was working to find him safe harbor until this story broke.

Now she is the one who turned up dead.

Paine and True Pundit were vetting the details provided by the victim. Paine said the allegations were credible and the victim's testimony and details were beyond convincing.

Paine said Moore accepted the risks with the story and understood things could get very ugly very fast. Per conversations with True Pundit's Paine:

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

â She was worried about the victim because he was the first to break the ice,â Paine said. â There were others waiting to tell their stories but he was the catalyst.

Did she think she could be harmed? Absolutely. This woman was fearless. Absolute warrior. A former cop. I donât think she was afraid of anyone or anything.â

According to interviews, the victim in this case claimed he was sexually assaulted by Clinton on a yacht in New England and knows the identities of several other child victims who were subjected to identical abuses. The victim also confirmed he witnessed other children and people being sexually and physically abused and possibly worse on numerous â boat parties.â These parties were attended by elite members of D.C. political class, according to Moore and the victim.

Both young boys and young girls, the victim said.

Moore supplied these details to federal agents and documented the interactions with a number of alleged victims. Within a month, she is dead.

In the exchange below, Moore discusses an extended stay with the alleged Clinton victim after his interview with Paine. During the interview, the victim sporadically vomited and shivered as he recalled details of his alleged abuse, Paine said.

So if you or somebody you know was behind this latest alleged attempt on McAfee's life (he has reportedly been the subject of 11 attempts on his life, along with a "conspiracy" by Belize authorities that he was involved in the death of a neighbor while living in the tropical South American state) be wary: McAfee is coming for you.

This isn't the first time McAfee has been in the news this week: the tech entrepreneur tweeted earlier this week that he would no longer be promoting ICOs due to a warning from the SEC, which has lately been cracking down on celebrity endorsements of the often dubious ICOs. But according to RT, McAfee has been promoting Docademic, which is focused on "reshaping the medical world." man charged with murdering George H.W. Bush's former cardiologist committed suicide Friday after being confronted by two members of the Houston Police department, officials said.

Houston Police Chief Art Acevedo declared "This is our suspect" at a press conference less than an hour after Joseph Pappas, 62, shot himself near his home in Houston.

Acevedo explained that a witness called authorities at 9:21 A.M. to say he had seen a suspect he believed was Pappas, as well as a wallet with his ID that he left on the ground. Acevedo said he wasn't sure if Pappas left the wallet on purpose or by accident.

Joseph Pappas, 62, (pictured right) committed suicide on Friday morning after being confronted by two members of the Houston Police Department. He was suspected of shooting dead Houston cardiologist Dr Mark Hausknecht (left)

When police arrived, they found Pappas wearing body armor. He did not comply with officers' commands and, when more officers closed in, Pappas shot himself in the head, around 3.5 miles from his home.

Acevedo said he was convinced there may have been a shootout with police had a second officer not arrived.

Authorities released a sketch of the gunman and surveillance video days after the shooting (Houston Police)

"You don't wear body armor when you're thinking of suicide," he said.

He added police believe Pappas had been camping since Wednesday, when he was identified as the suspect in Dr. Mark Hausknecht's death. Pappas was found with a backpack and a bullet proof vest under his shirt.

Acevedo also addressed reports of a "hit list" Pappas had. He said that the suspect had put together an extensive file on Hausknecht, and inside the file there was a sheet with several names of other doctors and employees of the Texas Medical Center, all of whom were informed.

The confrontation with police came the day after Houston police searched and cleared his home after a neighbor alerted authorities when they saw an open gate and spotted someone resembling him. A light was also on inside the residence.

Police believed Pappas was seeking revenge for his mother, who died on Hausknecht's operating table more than 20 years ago.

Hausknecht was shot three times while riding his bike on July 20. Pappas, who was also riding a bike, rode past the doctor before turning around and pulling the trigger, according to police.

SUSPECT IDENTIFIED IN MURDER OF GEORGE H.W. BUSH'S FORMER DOCTOR

Hausknecht was a well-known doctor who once treated former President George H.W. Bush (AP)

Pappas worked from 1983 through 1995 as a peace officer with two Houston-area constable offices. He also worked from 1995 through 2013 as a reserve officer for the same constable offices, according to records from the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement.

Ever since Hausknecht was shot dead, Pappas appeared to have been putting his affairs in order.

An Ohio woman claimed he deeded his Houston home to her three days after the attack.

Jeanette Spencer, from Painseville, said she received notification in the mail from family friend Joseph James Pappas, 62, according to The News-Herald.

She said upon receiving the deed, which was executed in February 2017, but recorded July 23 at the Harris County Courthouse, that she phoned him.

â I called him on the 24th and he said he had a terminal illness, and thatâ s why he deed [me] the house,â she said.

Spencer, who has known Pappas for 25 years, says she subsequently received a text message on July 30, the day one of her daughters was going to meet with him in Houston, claiming he was going to commit suicide.

â Sorry for handling this this way. House and property is now yours. Please make best use of it for you and [your daughter]â , the text read.

Upon receiving the text, Spencer phoned her daughter and the police.

She added another of her daughters, who Pappas took under his wing when the woman lived in Houston, was aware he was angry with â a doctorâ over his motherâ s death but she did not know any more.

SUSPECT IN MURDER OF HW BUSH'S FORMER DOCTOR APPARENTLY TRIED TO SELL GUNS ONLINE DAYS AFTER SLAYING

Pappas also apparently tried to sell guns online days after carrying out the murder.

Five days after the killing, a stash of weapons — including two tactical vests, a .38-caliber revolver and ammunition — was listed for sale on a popular firearms website, the Houston Chronicle reported. The seller's number was traced back to Pappas' real estate company. It's unclear if any of the weapons were used to kill Hausknecht.

President Bush was treated by Hausknecht in 2000 for an irregular heartbeat after he complained about lightheadedness. Bush paid tribute to him as a "fantastic cardiologist and a good man."

Journalist Who Broke Story Of Mueller Deleting Text Messages Dies Suddenly

In Brief

- The Facts:

Bre Payton, the journalist who broke the story of Robert Mueller's team deleting text messages, died very suddenly of a mysterious illness.

- Reflect On:

Can we look at these incidences based on the facts as well as by recognizing patterns, before we jump to either accept or reject possible explanations?

Editor Update Jan 3rd, 2018: We have made a slight change to the title of this article as social media comments reflected people were not reading the facts laid out in the article and instead simply reading the headline. This led to falsities being spread about the story including that it was fake news. Nothing in the story has changed as the facts are the facts.

Bre Payton was a writer for the conservative online news magazine The Federalist and a guest commentator on the Fox News Channel. And she was a rising star.

“From the moment we started talking I realized she was a potential star,” Ben Domenech, the publisher of The Federalist, said in an essay on Saturday. “She was raw, yes, but that could be honed. She was eager to learn, to write, and to go places—not because of ambition, but because she wanted to change the world.”

She seemed unafraid to take on things that mattered, including breaking the hard-hitting piece DOJ Destroyed Missing Strzok/Page Text Messages Before The IG Could Review Them on December 13th, where, unlike the mainstream media who later focused on the idea that there was “no evidence” that these text messages were deliberately destroyed, Payton leaned towards the conclusion that there was criminal intent in these deletions, a notion supported by Donald Trump.

And then she died suddenly on Friday in San Diego. She was 26.

I don’t have any definitive “proof” for the notion that Payton was killed because she was going to disclose some type of sensitive information against the Deep State; however, it must be said that the cause and circumstances of her death are befuddling enough for one to consider such an idea. My only intention is to explain the facts and allow you to draw your own conclusions.

This web page for Bre on the Caring Bridge website, which appears to be a site that gives updated information on people who are in hospital, seems to be where Bre's death was first announced. This was the page that Murtaugh had referred to in her tweet above, although at the time she tweeted it, it had obviously not declared that Bre had passed away. There is no way of checking what it had said at that time, because unlike Twitter, this website only shows the latest update. Currently it reads as follows:

Around 8:30, on December 27th, Bre's friend went into her room and found her unresponsive and barely breathing. She immediately called 911 and Bre was taken to the hospital where she was admitted to the ICU, sedated & intubated, and doctors began working up a diagnosis. After a CT scan and hours of testing, they have determined she has the H1N1 flu and meningitis. George stayed at the hospital with her in San Diego for a long time, but her condition worsened and worsened.

She fought her illness with strength but, passed on December 28th, 2018. She will be survived by her four siblings and parents. She fought strong and lived a life worth noting in the books. We are so incredibly honored to have known this wonderful human being.

Something Just Doesn't Seem Right

Trying to put some pieces together here, Morgan Murtaugh never mentioned noticing anything wrong with Bre on Wednesday night, so we are left to assume that a healthy, vibrant 26-year old girl became fully incapacitated during a night's sleep without showing any prior symptoms, and then was dead 24 hours later, with doctors saying that she had the Swine Flu (H1N1) and meningitis. Surprisingly, a New York Times obituary for Bre Payton said that â Ms. Payton had the H1N1 flu, also known as the swine flu, and encephalitis, according to her family.â So, is it encephalitis or meningitis? And what is the actual cause of her death, one of these ailments or the H1N1 flu? I have not found an answer to this.

While the cause of death does not seem to have been determined, several mainstream media outlets are taking the opportunity to use this to subtly warn people that they should remember to take their flu vaccine, which includes an H1N1 component. The way mainstream media writes about this story is to ask how she died, mention and go into depth about the diagnosis and the history of the H1N1 virus, talk a little about her life, and then leave the initial question unanswered. They sway the typical mainstream reader to believe she died of the H1N1 virus without really saying it.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

Some hypothesize that Bre Payton might have actually taken the flu shot and that led to her illness. But this tweet from her a few years back makes it highly unlikely that she would consent to any vaccine:

â @latimes: Whooping cough: State urges more people to get vaccinated <http://t.co/Aee82iJ> // NOOO! vaccines are from the devil!

â Bre Payton (@Bre_payton) June 13, 2011

I donâ t know enough to say itâ s impossible that Bre Payton died so suddenly from a virus she had contracted naturally without any prior symptoms, but it just doesnâ t feel right. You would expect that she would have some pretty significant symptoms in the days prior. Add that to the fact that we have covered many stories of people who have died mysterious deaths who all happened to be courageous, outspoken people who were willing to challenge the establishment, and might have had some information that was damaging to the Deep State and were willing to reveal it, as she showed in breaking the Mueller story, you can begin to understand the suspicions.

The Takeaway

There is certainly a pattern of untimely and mysterious deaths that have been on the rise in recent times, which involve people who are seen as a threat to the Deep State. Several of these suspicious deaths have been made to look like suicides, but other forms of sudden â naturalâ deaths have been occurring as well, with some victims even being able to hint that they had been poisoned or otherwise targeted just before their deaths. The case of Bre Payton is uncertain and unproven, but all the signs certainly raise the suspicion of those who follow these patterns of events. The best we can do here is put together the facts that we have access to and allow you to consider and decide the most likely explanation for yourselves.

For the better part of a decade, a San Francisco Bay Area drug ring sold tons of cocaine to the Crips and Bloods street gangs of Los Angeles and funneled millions in drug profits to an arm of the contra guerrillas of Nicaragua run by the Central Intelligence Agency, the San Jose Mercury News has found.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

On August 22nd, 1996 the San Jose Mercury News shocked the country with a series of articles entitled “The Dark Alliance” detailing the CIA’s connection to the crack epidemic that terrorized the nation in the 1980s and destroyed countless lives in its wake.

After the article’s publication, the story’s author, award winning journalist Gary Webb, was initially hailed as a hero, before a massive smear campaign attacked his credibility and destroyed his career.

The Origins of “An American Hero”

Gary Webb was born on August 31st, 1955 in Corona, California. He began his career in investigative journalism in 1978 as a local reporter for the Kentucky post.

In 1980, Gary won his first professional award for a 17 part series called “The Coal Connection” which investigated the murder of an international coal company president with ties to organized crime.

Webb followed “The Coal Connection” with a scathing 1985 report entitled “Doctoring the Truth”. The report led to an Ohio house investigation and subsequent changes to the state’s medical practice act.

Gary began working as an investigative reporter for the San Jose Mercury News in 1988. Within a year his reporting contributed to the paper winning a Pulitzer prize for their coverage of the 1989 Bay Area Earthquake and its aftermath.

CIA, Crack & The Contras: The Story of a Lifetime

It wasn’t until 1995 that Gary began work on what would become the biggest story of his career when he received a tip about a cocaine trafficker named Danilo Blandin, and his relationship with LA drug dealer Freeway Ricky Ross.

Over the course of a year he interviewed dozens of witnesses, high level Government officials and drug cartel leaders. After meticulously piecing together his shocking discovery, Webb and the San Jose Mercury Times published “The Dark Alliance”.

While the importance of his report cannot be understated, “The Dark Alliance” was not the first time reporters had established the connection between the CIA and cocaine trafficking.

In 1985, journalists Robert Parry and Brian Barger from the Associated Press reported that various groups of the CIA-backed Contras “engaged in cocaine trafficking, in part to help finance their war against Nicaragua.” Parry would later call Webb “an American hero” for his in-depth investigation and reporting on the topic.

In a time when the internet was in its infancy, Webb’s report was released online, with links included to all of his sources. Demonstrating the power of free and open access to information, Webb’s story quickly went “viral” before the term “viral” existed. The article garnered hundreds of thousands of clicks every single day prompting responses from the mainstream media, congressional leaders, activists, and the CIA itself.

Initially, the agency seemingly failed to respond to Webb’s story, but in true government fashion, it wasn’t long before an army of mainstream media outlets began to defend the CIA and attempt to discredit Webb.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

In 2014, the CIA released documents detailing how they used a complicit media and a targeted strategy to denounce Webb's 20,000 word report. Nicholas Dujmovic, the author of a CIA report entitled, Managing a Nightmare: CIA Public Affairs and the Drug Conspiracy Story, noted:

“ The CIA watched these developments closely, collaborating where it could with outlets who wanted to challenge Webb's reporting. Media inquiries had started almost immediately following the publication of “ Dark Alliance,”

You Can Kill the Messenger, but Not the Message

Due to the backlash from Webb's article, the Mercury news published an editorial calling his report “ flawed” and reassigned him, which eventually prompted Gary to resign.

Despite his resignation, Gary continued investigating the scandal he exposed and published his book Dark Alliance: The CIA, the Contras, and the Crack Cocaine Explosion in 1998. He also continued to contribute to numerous reports and documentaries.

Sadly, the story that became the most important of his career, helped lead to Webb's downfall. Gary divorced from his wife in 2000, though the two remained close during his final years.

After divorcing his wife, being unable to obtain work from newspapers and facing increasing debts, Gary was forced to sell his home.

On December 10th, 2004 Gary Webb was found dead of two (allegedly self inflicted) gun shots to the head. As The Independent reported, in an interview with Gary's ex wife Susan Webb:

“ When removal men arrived, on the morning of 10 December 2004, they found a sign on his front door, which read: “ Please do not enter. Call 911 for assistance. Thank you.” Webb's corpse was found in the bedroom, with two gunshot wounds to the head.”

While we may never know what happened to Gary Webb on the day of his death, We must never forget the truth about what he exposed and the extraordinary measures the government took to silence him.

The California senator paused before answering the question.

“ Does one of us have to come out alive?” she responded, cracking up at her own joke.

She did not answer the original question.

Laurene Powell Jobs Saudi crown prince ordered Khashoggi's assassination says CIA

- Saudi's did 9-11 and have murdered tens of thousands
- Saudi's say all of the killers will be "beheaded" except for Crown Prince

By Shane Harris & Greg Miller

Washington: The CIA has concluded that Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman ordered the assassination of journalist Jamal Khashoggi in Istanbul last month, contradicting the Saudi government's claims that he was not involved.

The CIA's assessment, in which officials have said they have high confidence, is the most definitive to date linking Mohammed to the operation and complicates the Trump administration's efforts to preserve its relationship with a close ally.

A team of 15 Saudi agents flew to Istanbul on government aircraft in October and killed Khashoggi inside the Saudi consulate, where he had come to pick up documents that he needed for his planned marriage to a Turkish woman.

In reaching its conclusions, the CIA examined multiple sources of intelligence, including a phone call that the prince's brother Khalid bin Salman, the Saudi ambassador to the United States, had with Khashoggi, according to the people familiar with the matter who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Khalid told Khashoggi, a contributing columnist to The Washington Post, that he should go to the Saudi consulate in Istanbul to retrieve the documents and gave him assurances that it would be safe to do so.

It is not clear if Khalid knew that Khashoggi would be killed, but he made the call at his brother's direction, according to the people familiar with the call, which was intercepted by US intelligence.

Fatimah Baeshen, a spokeswoman for the Saudi embassy in Washington DC, said the ambassador and Khashoggi never discussed "anything related to going to Turkey." She added that the claims in the CIA's "purported assessment are false. We have and continue to hear various theories without seeing the primary basis for these speculations."

The CIA's conclusion about Mohammed's role was also based on the agency's assessment of the prince as the country's de facto ruler who oversees even minor affairs in the kingdom.

"The accepted position is that there is no way this happened without him being aware or involved," said a US official familiar with the CIA's conclusions.

The CIA sees Mohammed as a "good technocrat," the US official said, but volatile and arrogant, someone who "goes from zero to 60, doesn't seem to understand that there are some things you can't do."

CIA analysts believe he has a firm grip on power and is not in danger of losing his status as heir to the throne despite the Khashoggi scandal. "The general agreement is that he is likely to survive," the official said, adding that Mohammed's role as the future Saudi king is "taken for granted."

A spokesperson for the CIA declined to comment.

Over the past several weeks, the Saudis have offered multiple, contradictory explanations for what happened at the consulate. This week, the Saudi public prosecutor blamed the operation on a rogue band of operatives who were sent to Istanbul to return Khashoggi to Saudi Arabia, in an operation that veered off course when the journalist "was forcibly restrained and injected with a large amount of a drug resulting in an overdose that led to his death," according to a report by the prosecutor.

The president has asked the CIA where Khashoggi's body is and has grown frustrated that they have not been able to provide an answer

The prosecutor announced charges against 11 alleged participants and said he would seek the death penalty against five of them.

The assassination of Khashoggi, a prominent critic of Mohammed's policies, has sparked a foreign policy crisis for the White House and raised questions about the administration's reliance on Saudi Arabia as a key ally in the Middle East and bulwark against Iran.

President Donald Trump has resisted pinning the blame for the killing on Mohammed, who enjoys a close relationship with Jared Kushner, the president's son-in-law and senior adviser. Privately, aides said, Trump has been shown evidence of the prince's involvement but remains skeptical that Mohammed ordered the killing.

The president has also asked CIA and State Department officials where Khashoggi's body is and has grown frustrated that they have not been able to provide an answer. The CIA does not know the location of Khashoggi's remains, according to the people familiar with the agency's assessment.

Among the intelligence assembled by the CIA is an audio recording from a listening device that the Turks placed inside the Saudi consulate, according to the people familiar with the matter. The Turks gave the CIA a copy of that audio, and the agency's director, Gina Haspel, has listened to it.

The audio shows that Khashoggi was killed within moments of entering the consulate, according to officials in multiple countries who have listened to it or been briefed on its contents. Khashoggi died in the office of the Saudi consul general, who can be heard expressing his displeasure that Khashoggi's body now needed to be disposed of and the facility cleaned of any evidence, according to people familiar with the audio recording.

The CIA also examined a call placed from inside the consulate after the killing by an alleged member of the Saudi hit team, Maher Mutreb, a security official who has often been seen at the crown prince's side and who was photographed entering and leaving the consulate on the day of the killing.

Mutreb called Saud al-Qahtani, then one of the top aides to Mohammed, and informed him that the operation had been completed, according to people familiar with the call.

This week, the Treasury Department sanctioned 17 individuals it said were involved in Khashoggi's death, including Qahtani, Mutreb and the Saudi consul general in Turkey, Mohammad al-Otaibi.

The CIA's assessment of Mohammed's role in the assassination also tracks with information developed by foreign governments, according to officials in several European capitals who have concluded that the operation was too brazen to have taken place without Mohammed's direction.

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has said his government has shared the audio with Germany, France, the United Kingdom and Saudi Arabia.

In addition to calls and audio recordings, CIA analysts also linked some members of the Saudi hit team directly to Mohammed himself. Some of the 15 members have served on his security team and travelled in the United States during visits by senior Saudi officials, including the crown prince, according to passport records reviewed by The Washington Post.

The US had also obtained intelligence before Khashoggi's death that indicated he might be in danger. But it wasn't until after he disappeared, on October 2, that US intelligence agencies began searching archives of intercepted communications and discovered material indicating that the Saudi royal family had been seeking to lure Khashoggi back to Riyadh.

Two US officials said there has been no indication that officials were aware of this intelligence in advance of Khashoggi's disappearance or had missed any chance to warn him.

Khashoggi "was not a person of interest," before his disappearance, and the fact that he was residing in Virginia meant that he was regarded as a US person and therefore shielded from US intelligence gathering, one of the officials said.

Trump has told senior White House officials that he wants Mohammed to remain in power because Saudi Arabia helps to check Iran, which the administration considers its top security challenge in the Middle East. He has said that he does not want the controversy over Khashoggi's death to impede oil production by the kingdom.

One lingering question is why Mohammed decided to kill Khashoggi, who was not agitating for the crown prince's removal.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

A theory the CIA has developed is that Mohammed believed Khashoggi was a dangerous Islamist who was too sympathetic to the Muslim Brotherhood, according to people familiar with the assessment. Days after Khashoggi disappeared, Mohammed relayed that view in a phone call with Kushner and John Bolton, the national security adviser, who has long opposed the Brotherhood and seen it as a regional security threat.

Mohammed's private condemnation of the slain journalist stood in contrast to his government's public comments, which mourned Khashoggi's killing as a "terrible mistake" and a "tragedy."

US officials are unclear on when or whether the Saudi government will follow through with its threatened executions of the individuals blamed for Khashoggi's killing. "It could happen overnight or take 20 years," the US official said, adding that the treatment of subordinates could erode Mohammed's standing going forward.

In killing those who followed his orders, "it's hard to get the next set [of subordinates] to help," the official said.

continues to be debated, various manmade poisons have been suggested as possible causes

- Yuri Shchekochikhin (d. 2003), Russian investigative journalist; died presumably from poisoning by radioactive thallium
- Yasser Arafat (d. 2004); reputedly died from liver cirrhosis, which may be a consequence of chronic alcohol use or poisoning. Some Arafat supporters feel it is unlikely that Arafat habitually used alcohol (forbidden by Islam), and so suspect poisoning. However, it is also important to note that cirrhosis is not necessarily caused by alcohol use, or indeed any poison at all.
- Ardehsir Hosseinpour (d. 2007), Iranian nuclear scientist; possibly assassinated by Mossad with "radioactive poisoning" or "gas poisoning"^{[2][3][4]}

Highly likely that Magnitsky was poisoned by toxic chemicals on Bill Browder's orders in Moscow

Kremlin critic Bill Browder may have given the order for his employee Sergei Magnitsky to be poisoned with a rare toxin in a Russian prison cell, along with other suspects in a tax-evasion probe against him, prosecutors have said.

British financier Browder was once a well-connected investor in post-Soviet Russia, but he became a fugitive from the law in the country after being accused of financial crimes. In the West, however, he is best known as the employer of Sergei Magnitsky, a Russian accountant who died in police custody while being investigated in connection to the Browder case. Magnitsky's death became an international scandal, with Browder accusing Russian officials of killing him.

Russian prosecutors on Monday claimed that Magnitsky and several other people familiar with Browder's illicit activities in Russia may have been killed on his order. They said a new criminal case has been opened against Browder in Russia, and that Moscow will seek his extradition as an alleged ringleader of an international criminal enterprise involved in money laundering.

The prosecutors identified four people who were suspects in the Browder case, all of whom died over the course of less than two years as the investigation against him unfolded. Oktay Gasanov was the first of the four, dying in October 2007; while Magnitsky's death in November 2009 was the last. By the time of his death, Magnitsky had spent almost a year in pre-trial detention. The two others were Valery Kurochkin and Sergey Korobeinikov, who died in April 2008 and September 2008, respectively.

Korobeinikov died after falling off a high-rise building, while the others had health complications. The Russian prosecutors believe all four of them may have been killed with a rare water-soluble compound of aluminum. Each of the men showed symptoms consistent with being poisoned by the toxin prior to their deaths, while Korobeinikov had traces of it in his liver, according to a post mortem. An investigation into four possible murders has been opened.

Considering that the three individuals, with the exception of Magnitsky, died within months of each other while being investigated as part of Browder's case, it is highly likely that they were killed to get rid of accomplices who could give an incriminating testimony against Browder, a senior official with the Russian General Prosecutor's office told journalists. The same may be true for Magnitsky, he said. The prosecutor stressed that Russia didn't conduct detailed studies into how the suspected poison affects living organisms, but several research institutions based in the US, France and Italy did.

The prosecutors claim that Browder was the party who benefited most from the death of Magnitsky. They cited journalist Oleg Lurie, who shared a prison cell with Magnitsky before the latter's death. Speaking under oath during a court hearing in New York, Lurie said that his cellmate had complained to him that Browder's lawyers were pressuring him into signing a false statement. Magnitsky's testimony claimed that he had uncovered a conspiracy to embezzle taxpayers' money involving Russian officials.

The Russian prosecutors said Browder allegedly wanted to silence his employee after obtaining the false claim. The statement itself was used to blame Russian officials for Magnitsky's death and accuse the Russian government of a cover-up.

Last year, Browder was sentenced by a Russian court to nine years in prison for tax evasion. The trial was held in absentia and Moscow failed to have him extradited to serve the term. The prosecutors said that they will renew attempts to get custody of Browder as part of the new criminal case, using a UN convention on fighting transnational crime to have him arrested.

Browder is a US-born British financier, whose change of citizenship had the benefit of allowing him to avoid paying tax on foreign earnings. However, he claimed the switch was prompted by his family being persecuted in the US during the McCarthyism witch hunt, while the UK seemed like the land of law and order.

He made a fortune in Russia during the country's chaotic transition to a market economy, having invested before there was a stock exchange in Moscow. His Hermitage Capital Management fund was a leading foreign investment entity in the late 1990s and early 2000s.

Described by critics as a "vulture capitalist," Browder seemed quite comfortable earning millions of dollars in the financial wild west. In 2005, as fallen oil tycoon Mikhail Khodorkovsky was standing trial for tax evasion, Browder scolded him on the BBC for using personal wealth to grasp at political power, and for leaving "in his wake aggrieved investors too numerous to count." He was also a staunch public supporter of the policies of Russian President Vladimir Putin.

The transformation of his public image from a financial shark into a human rights crusader started when Browder himself entered the spotlight of Russian law enforcement. In 2007, the foundation he ran was targeted by a probe into possible large-scale embezzlement of Russian taxpayers' money. Magnitsky, who worked for Browder and had knowledge of his firm's finances, was arrested and held in pre-trial detention until his death in November 2009. The British businessman insisted that the entire case was fabricated and that Magnitsky had been assassinated for exposing a criminal scheme involving several Russian tax officials.

The investor then reinvented himself as an anti-Putin figure, using the death of Magnitsky to lobby various countries to impose sanctions on the Russian officials he blamed for his employee's death. The US Magnitsky Act was passed in 2012, allowing people accused by Washington of human rights violations to be targeted. However, it is perceived by the Kremlin as just a tool to restrain Russia for the sake of global political and economic competition.

Browder's new-found status as a rights advocate and self-proclaimed worst enemy of Putin helps him deflect Russia's attempts to prosecute him. On several occasions, Russia filed international arrest warrants against him with Interpol, which even led to his brief detention in Spain last May.

Among Browder's latest exploits is playing a role in the "Russiagate" story. A key part of the elusive search for collusion between US President Donald Trump and the Russian government is a meeting between Donald Trump Jr. and a Russian lawyer. The meeting was apparently organized with a view to lobbying for the repeal of the Magnitsky Act. Its architect, Browder, has therefore been eager to lend his expertise on â Russian machinationsâ to US lawmakers and media outlets.

Mexican's Want To Kill You. Record Murders Plague Mexico In First Half Of 2018: "The Figures Are Horrible"

by Tyler Durden

Mexico's next president Andrés Manuel López Obrador, a former Mexico City mayor and outspoken critic of the political establishment - has a significant uphill battle once he is inaugurated as President on December 01: deadly violence in the country is intensifying and has hit an all-time high.

Mexico posted its highest homicides on record, with a new government report Sunday showing murders in the country rose by 16 percent in the first half of 2018.

The Interior Department said there were 15,973 homicides in the first half of the year, compared to 13,751 killings in the same period of 2017.

According to the AP, the record-breaking homicides have surpassed the violence seen during the dark years of Mexico's drug war in 2011, along with exceeding all government data since records began in 1997.

At these crisis levels, the department's homicide rate for the country stands around 22 per 100,000 population for year-end estimates - near the level of Columbia 24.2 and Guatemala 26.0.

Security analyst Alejandro Hope told the AP, "the figures are horrible, but there are some signs that are halfway encouraging."

For example, the growth in homicides could be slowing; murders were up only about 4 percent compared to the second half of 2017. "The curve may be flattening out," Hope noted, though he warned his forecast could be incorrect.

Hope noted that the northern border state of Baja California exhibited the largest surge in homicide rates, while other states saw declines.

Baja California, home to the border city of Tijuana, saw 1,463 homicides in the first half of the year, a 44 percent increase over the same period of 2017. Authorities have attributed the spate of killings to battles between the Jalisco and Sinaloa drug cartels for control of trafficking routes in Baja California. The state is now Mexico's second most violent, with a homicide rate for the first six months of the year equivalent to 71 murders per 100,000 inhabitants,â said AP.

By comparison, El Salvador and Venezuela are among the deadliest countries in the world â have homicide rates of around 54 to 60 per 100,000.

Thanks to the Jalisco drug cartel, Mexico's most dangerous state is Colima, on the central Pacific coast, which experienced a 27-percent increase in killings and now has a shocking homicide rate of about 80 per 100,000

Guanajuato, a central Mexican state, saw a 122 percent increase in homicides, which now has a rate of about 40 per 100,000. Government officials have reported that much of violent crime is linked to gangs of fuel thieves who drill taps into government pipelines.

Here are Mexico's eight most violent states by annual homicide rate, based on federal data. Over the past few years, killings rebounded in Baja California and Chihuahua states:

Mexico is on pace to top the record-setting violence of 2017. The 15,973 murders over the first six months of 2018 exceed the 13,503 reported over the same period last year.

According to the IgarapÃ© Institute, a Brazilian-based think tank that focuses on emerging security and development issues, the murder epidemic is not just limited to Mexico, but across all of Latin America.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

The Institute stated the current situation is incredibly complex and results from decades of corruption, drug trafficking, organized crime, contraband, illegal mining, land rights, and in some cases, violence by state military forces.

President Andr s Manuel L pez Obrador is dealing with a population of Aztec descendants whose innate propensities gravitate toward the primitive. The populace of Mexico will revert to their base instincts regardless of whatever First World policies are posited. The concept of race is paramount when addressing any proposals of governance. Of course, in this modern politically-correct age, this all-important thesis will be ignored in any proposition toward solving the problem.

Water and oil always separate when combined. This is the ultimate clue as to any workable solution.

What is happening in Mexico is an absolute tragedy, imo. I LOVE Mexico, and have been to Guerrero and Michoacan, among other "Do Not Travel" places there. I love the history, the architecture, the culture, the people, and the food. If it wasn't for the violence, I would have another home there in a heartbeat; corruption is everywhere you go, our crooks are just a little more subtle about it, usually.

This will only get worse since the US will no longer be a relief valve for Mexico's troublemakers.

Imagine if Mexico descends into civil war or anarchy. Will the US have to take in even more Mexicans as refugees? It's outrageous to ask Americans to sacrifice any more for that country.

Missing Wikileaks Security Expert Most Likely Dead And Killed by Deep State (technology)

by shadow332

Arjen KamphuisJPG

AN ASSOCIATE OF WIKILEAKS AND SECURITY EXPERT WHO HAS BEEN MISSING IS LIKELY TO HAVE BEEN MURDERED AFTER HIS BELONGINGS ARE FOUND IN THE OCEAN

The article has been shoaed but archive is live.

The personal belongings of a WikiLeaks associate who has been missing for three weeks have been found at sea. Arjen Kamphuis left his hotel in Bodoe, Norway, where he was on holiday, on 20 August and has not been seen since. His belongings were found by a fisherman on 11 September, in an area east of the town.

Police and the Red Cross are now searching the area where the belongings were found with a rescue vessel. Norwegian police said: "Due to the ongoing investigation the police do not at this time wish to release any information about which specific items that have been found." Officers have no main theory about his disappearance, and have not determined whether he was the victim of a criminal act. WikiLeaks tweeted on 2 September, to say the 47-year-old's disappearance was "strange". Mr Kamphuis, from the Netherlands, describes himself as a "free software advocate" and "IT security adviser" in his Twitter profile.

Dutch investigators have arrived in Bodoe to help with the search, Norwegian police said in a statement. It added: "Kamphuis has still not been found and the case is open for different outcomes, but we still haven't found anything that indicates a crime has been committed." Mr Kamphuis, who is shown in pictures with blond hair and a thin beard, had a ticket for a flight to Trondheim on 22 August. A phone linked to him was switched on near Stavanger, a city 990 miles (1600km) from Bodoe, on 30 August, but police have not been able to confirm if he was using it. A German SIM card was inserted when the phone was on.

Have you ever asked yourself "how does Wikileaks operate on the day-to-day level?" Assange has been Man-in-the-Iron-Mask'd for 164 days, effectively imprisoned in solitary confinement like in a Supermax prison. Who is writing the tweets coming from @Wikileaks? Even before October 16, 2016, Assange was still living like a rat inside a Skinner Box.

Who were the sysadmin's running, upgrading, and monitoring the dozen or so Wikileaks servers?

There is no way Assange was doing that, because the moment he ssh'd into a server, the NSA would steal his RSA key and then backdoor the Wikileaks servers. Who was running the Wikileaks hidden onion service on Tor and receiving any potential uploaded leaks of classified documents?

I can't see Assange single handedly running that, for the same reasons of interception and sabotage. Assange is just a front man, a hype man, a spokesman. Who are the real operators of Wikileaks behind the Wikileaks?

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

This new dead guy fits the profile. Here's my theory: the CIA has been stalking the dozen or so technical wizards who are the true operators of Wikileaks. CIA just sits and waits for the right opportunity to kill them, under circumstances which will appear accidental or mysterious and not lead back to CIA in any way. One by one, CIA plans to pick off the operators of Wikileaks until there is nobody left. Assange won't matter after he is alone.

The CIA is playing a very dangerous game by whacking Wikileaks sysadmins and developers. If i were a Glow in the Dark nigger, I'd tread like Grasshopper on Rice Paper, because even if you think you can win by simply assassinating Wikileaks, be careful what you wish for. Because you'll end up with something much worse than Wikileaks.

A smarter CIA would nominate itself as Assange's personal secret bodyguard, silently protecting him at all times and places. because if anything ever happens to Julian, the whole world is going to blame CIA regardless of the truth. The CIA is blinded by its myopia and deluded by its own propaganda reflecting back at itself in the mirror. It vastly underestimates just how beloved a figure that Assange is world-wide. Assange is the new Che, MLK and Gandhi rolled into one.

Turns out that when you want to run a private non-government intelligence agency, you also have to run a division that murders people or the government agencies just murder you

Well, it's not supposed to work like that, but if you're a high level target, who the fuck knows how anything actually works? For all we we know they've backdoored the compilers all the way down. Who the fuck is going to write their own C compiler? Some HolyC compiler you might call it. Nobody but a prophet, blessings be upon him, to whom, blessings be upon him, were given the two edged spiritual gift of spiritual sight would be crazy enough to go to that kind of an extreme. May God damn the glowing CIA niggers.

PALO ALTO MAFIA Running Largest Political Dirty Tricks Campaign In History

President Trump's 2020 campaign manager Brad Parscale renewed his criticism of social media companies on Monday for silencing conservative voices across several platforms, reports CNBC.

"I think that when the left found out that Facebook, a tool built by Silicon Valley, helped elect President Trump, they weren't very happy," Parscale told CBS This Morning. "And I think that you have multiple platforms I call the 'Palo Alto mafia' trying to stop that."

In the interview, Parscale credited the Trump campaign's dominance in Facebook advertising as a key contributor to its success in 2016. He referenced the wide gap between the number of Facebook ads Trump and Hillary Clinton placed during the run up to the election. Trump's team placed 5.9 million ads compared to Clinton's 66,000. -CNBC

Parscale, who was promoted to Trump's 2020 campaign manager after spearheading his digital media strategy in 2016, was originally hired to build a website for Trump's exploratory campaign in 2015.

Trump and other conservatives have slammed social media platforms over allegations of anti-Republican bias. In July, Trump accused Twitter of "shadow banning" prominent Republicans, vowing to "look into this discriminatory and illegal practice at once!"

Trump's tweet came after Brad Parscale, along with Republican National Committee (RNC) Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel, wrote a letter in May calling for the CEOs of Facebook and Twitter to address concerns over conservative censorship ahead of the 2020 election, as well as a call for transparency.

"We recognize that Facebook and Twitter operate in liberal corporate cultures," the letter reads. "However, rampant political bias is inappropriate for a widely used public forum."

In August, President Trump tweeted that Google is "controlling what we can & cannot see. This is a very serious situation-will be addressed!"

The GOP controlled congress has explored the issue throughout 2018, with executives from Facebook, Google and Twitter testifying before lawmakers over issues of bias and security breaches.

In April, Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg was questioned on the issue at a congressional hearing.

"There are a great many Americans who I think are deeply concerned that that Facebook and other tech companies are engaged in a pervasive pattern of bias and political censorship," Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, said at the time.

The companies have all said that they do not filter content based on political ideology. -CNBC

Parscale claims that even if social media companies exclude conservatives, people will always find a way to spread ideas.

POLITICAL POISONINGS ARE INCREASING ALMOST 80%

While the public has been led to believe that a Russian double agent was poisoned by Moscow as payback, evidence shows that he had ties to the author of the Trump/Russia dossier.

Washington, D.C. There are no coincidences when it comes to deep politics. Regardless of the propaganda operations undertaken to mask the truth, there is always much more taking place than the general public is allowed to see. Take for instance the case of poisoned Russian double agent Col Sergei Skripal.

The western public has been led by the mass media to believe that Skripal and his daughter were poisoned by Russia as payback for his betrayal of Russia. However, a close look at the facts brings about some astounding conclusions. The poisoning was likely carried out by western actors operating with an intention to either scare or kill Skripal after it was revealed that his handler was one Pablo Miller, an MI6 agent the UK claims is a diplomat, and who was also a colleague in both MI6 and Orbis Intelligence of Trump dossier author, Christopher Steele.

It is important to remember that Orbis Intelligence is Christopher Steele's company that was paid by the Clinton campaign to create a dossier of opposition research that was used as a basis for FISA warrants on the Trump campaign. In fact, as the New Yorker reported, Steele's position itself within MI6 likely involved direct contact with Skripal:

Steele had spent more than twenty years in M.I.6, most of it focusing on Russia. For three years, in the nineties, he spied in Moscow under diplomatic cover. Between 2006 and 2009, he ran the service's Russia desk, at its headquarters, in London. He was fluent in Russian and widely considered to be an expert on the country.

Moon of Alabama reported that Steele was an MI6 undercover agent in Moscow around the time when Skripal was recruited and handed over Russian secrets to the MI6. He also ran the MI6 Russia desk so anything about Skripal will have passed through him. It is very likely that they personally knew each other. Pablo Miller, who worked for Steele's private company, lived in the same town as Skripal and they seem to have been friends since Miller had recruited him.

Orbis Business Intelligence was co-founded by Steele and would employ Skripal's handler, Pablo Miller, as soon as he left MI6.

Further indicative of something likely suspicious afoot, a D Notice, which effectively bans British media outlets and journalists from mentioning Pablo Miller, was put in place on the day of the Salisbury chemical attack.

Former British diplomat Craig Murray posted a screenshot of a tweet that he called a vital confirmation from Channel 4 News (serial rebel Alex Thomson) of the D Notice in place on mention of Pablo Miller.

UK government sent out a media suppression instruction ("DMSA notice" aka "D notice") for Skripal's MI6 handler living nearby according to UK's Channel 4. Skripal's handler was historically reported to be "Pablo Miller"â more recently connected to Orbis and Christopher Steele. <https://t.co/70ZPJdZtRP>

â WikiLeaks (@wikileaks) April 29, 2018

Additionally, although declining to name him, almost certainly due to the D Notice, the British Telegraph reported on Pablo Miller doing â consultancy workâ for Steeleâ s Orbis:

A security consultant who has worked for the company that compiled the controversial dossier on Donald Trump was close to the Russian double agent poisoned last weekend, it has been claimed.

The consultant, who The Telegraph is declining to identify, lived close to Col Skripal and is understood to have known him for some time.

â ;

The Telegraph understands that Col Skripal moved to Salisbury in 2010 in a spy swap and became close to a security consultant employed by Christopher Steele, who compiled the Trump dossier.

The British security consultant, according to a LinkedIn social network account that was removed from the internet in the past few days, is also based in Salisbury.

On the same LinkedIn account, the man listed consultancy work with Orbis Business Intelligence, according to reports.

Clearly, Miller or someone else attempted to cover up the connection to Steele by editing his LinkedIn profile. The man that the Telegraph declined to identify was later named by Meduza as Pablo Miller:

Pablo Miller, who at the time was posing as Antonio Alvarez de Hidalgo and working in Britainâ s embassy in Tallinn, Russiaâ s Federal Security Service says Miller was actually an undercover MI6 agent tasked with recruiting Russians.

Although Orbis issued a weak denial of Skripalâ s involvement in producing the dossier, Murray, the former UK ambassador to Uzbekistan, noted that it was "extremely probable" that Skripalâ s work on the Trump/Russia dossier was related to the his poisoning:

Back then I did not realise what I now know, that the person being protected was Pablo Miller, colleague in both MI6 then Orbis Intelligence of Christopher Steele, author of the fabrications of the Trump/Russia golden shower dossier. That the government's very first act on the poisoning was to ban all media mention of Pablo Miller makes it extremely probable that this whole incident is related to the Trump dossier and that Skripal had worked on it, as I immediately suspected. The most probable cause is that Skripal who you should remember had traded the names of Russian agents to Britain for cash had worked on the dossier with Miller but was threatening to expose its lies for cash.

One thing is certain, if there is a connection between the dossier and Skripal, which seems extremely likely, tying up a potential loose end seems much more likely to be the reason for his poisoning than the widely reported story that Russia tried to kill him. The fact of the matter is that timing of the assassination attempt, being one week before the Russian presidential election and prior to the World Cup, seems to ring of a western intelligence operation meant to tie up a loose end and ratchet up the ongoing information/propaganda war against Russia.

Russia had Skripal imprisoned for 4 years and he lived in the UK for 8 years. This would seem to have allowed for much more studious timing if the Russians had wanted him dead. Are we to believe that the Russians would pick the worst possible time or is there a more logical explanation?

The reality is that the Trump administration's investigation into the use of the unverified dossier as a tool to weaponize the U.S. intelligence apparatus for political purposes as parts were clearly used to gain FISA warrants to spy on the Trump campaign is coming to the public forefront. As this information becomes more readily available there will be a much more in-depth investigation into the sources and methods used by Steele.

Make no mistake that contrary to the statement from Orbis, there is a great likelihood that Skripal was intimately involved as a source in the creation of the Trump/Russia dossier. There are clearly too many connections between Steele, Miller, and Skripal to simply be ignored or passed off as mere coincidence of circumstance!

Prescott newspaper owner says he was poisoned

A co-owner of the Prescott newspaper the Daily Courier said he was poisoned with thallium, a tasteless, odorless heavy metal formerly used in rat poison.

Joseph Soldwedel's account was published in a Courier article last week. He said he was going public to address rumors in the Yavapai County community.

Though it is unclear whether Soldwedel was poisoned intentionally, Prescott police said they are investigating the situation as a criminal matter. No arrests have been made, and Officer Dave Fuller declined to comment on possible suspects.

But Soldwedel told his newspaper that he has a "good idea" who may have poisoned him. He declined to air his suspicions until the police and prosecutors finish their review, but he said neither his son, daughter nor sister was involved.

'Elevated levels' of poison reported

Soldwedel declined to speak to The Arizona Republic and referred questions to his attorney, Norman Katz. The attorney also remained tight-lipped about the investigation and declined to comment on his client's symptoms or the timeline of the alleged poisoning.

At some point in the past year, Soldwedel enlisted the expertise of Dr. Ernest P. Chiodo, a Michigan-based physician who specializes in forensic toxicology.

Chiodo told The Republic that Soldwedel had "elevated levels" of the chemical in his system and noted that its existence couldn't be explained by environmental issues. Soldwedel's water was tested and came back clean, and his career in the media industry doesn't lend itself to accidental poisoning.

Some people who work in electronics, mining or at cement plants may be more susceptible to exposure, Chiodo said.

The Courier reported lab results indicated that between Nov. 29 and Dec. 27, 2016, thallium levels in Soldwedel's body were 15 times higher than that of an average person. The report noted that additional toxic chemicals including lithium, aluminum, barium and zinc were found in his system.

Katz declined to provide The Republic a copy of the lab results.

"The question is, what is causing him to have elevated thallium levels?" Chiodo said. "I do not know that he's been intentionally poisoned, and I don't know who would be doing it, but based on my findings, the police should look into it."

Soldwedel is president, CEO and co-owner of Western News&Info Inc., a family-owned and -operated multimedia company that also publishes the Kingman Daily Miner, Today's News-Herald in Lake Havasu

City and other newspapers, shopper publications and magazines.

Thallium's checkered history

Thallium has not been produced in the United States since 1984, but it's still imported to produce products such as electronics and optical lenses, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The metal was historically used as a rodenticide, but the use was banned in the U.S. in 1965 following several poisonings of people.

But the blue-white metal is perhaps most notorious for its illicit use in murders. Colloquially, Chiodo said, the material used to be known as the "inheritance powder."

Thallium's qualities make it difficult for a person to detect upon ingestion, but its presence makes itself known soon thereafter. The CDC says adverse effects begin 12-24 hours after ingestion, and hit their climax two to three weeks after exposure.

Symptoms begin with nausea and vomiting, and progress to painful sensations in the body's extremities. Severe cases can include respiratory failure; unusual, painful or burning sensations; muscle aches and weakness; headache; and seizures, delirium, coma and death after five to seven days, according to the CDC.

Perhaps the best-known case of thallium poisoning was that of Zhu Ling, a 19-year-old college student in Beijing believed to have been intentionally poisoned in 1995.

Zhu fell into a coma but ultimately survived, though she was left partially paralyzed and nearly blind, according to a report in the New York Times. Though Zhu's roommate was a suspect, she was never charged, and the case remains unsolved.

RE-OPEN THE GARY D. CONLEY AND RAJEEV MOTWANI DEATH CASES. WERE THEY MURDERED BY SILICON VALLEY OLIGARCHS TO SHUT THEM UP?

Gary D. Conley and Rajeev Motwani knew the dirty secret behind Google's crony kickbacks in Obama's Election rigging, Cleantech Payola and CIA-Like manipulation of the internet to rig cash-for-Cleantech deals as massive graft. They blew the whistle and then they died in strange, inexplicable CIA-Like deaths. The biggest suspects are the CIA partners and In-Q-Tel financiers that run Google. Was Eric Schmidt involved in these deaths? Why did AG Kamala Harris halt the investigations into these deaths? Did it have to do with the fact that Google funded her campaign?

Saudi ties entangle Laurene Powell Jobs' Emerson Collective

Jamal Khashoggi's disappearance has become a litmus test for business leaders, but some ties are more nuanced and perhaps more complicated.

by Dylan Byers / Oct. 15, 2018 / 7:59 AM PDT / Updated 10:12 AM PDT

Jamal Khashoggi's disappearance has become a litmus test for business leaders.

The allegation that Khashoggi, a Saudi journalist who wrote for The Washington Post, was brutally murdered at the hands of Saudi officials has forced executives to reckon with their ties to the Arab kingdom. Some, like Virgin Group founder Richard Branson, have suspended business dealings there. Several, including JPMorgan CEO Jamie Dimon, have backed out of the high-profile Future Investment Initiative conference in Riyadh.

For others, like Laurene Powell Jobs, the founder of the powerful philanthropic investment group Emerson Collective, which owns a majority stake in The Atlantic, the ties are more nuanced and perhaps more complicated.

Powell Jobs does not have business dealings with Saudi Arabia. She was never scheduled to attend the Future Investment Initiative. But one of her closest aides at Emerson, Michael Klein, is a highly influential power broker for the Saudi kingdom and its U.S. investments.

Klein, a Wall Street rainmaker and former Citigroup executive, is a managing partner at Emerson and helps manage the company's business, which includes investments in a variety of media properties such as Axios and OZY Media in addition to its majority stake in The Atlantic. Jeffrey Goldberg, the editor-in-chief of The Atlantic, declined to comment.

Klein, who runs his own boutique investing firm, M. Klein & Company, is also a top adviser to the Saudi kingdom's Public Investment Fund and a key conduit between Saudi Arabia and the U.S. business community, according to multiple people who know him and are familiar with his business. They asked not to be identified so as not to jeopardize their relationships to Klein or Emerson.

Powell Jobs has known Klein since college, even before she met her husband Steve Jobs, the late Apple co-founder and CEO. In addition to handling business affairs for Emerson, those familiar with Klein describe him as an informal adviser to Powell Jobs.

"He's kind of the final voice in Laurene's ear," said one source with knowledge of their relationship.

A spokesperson for Emerson declined to comment on the ties.

Saudi Arabia faces fallout for Khashoggi disappearance

OCT. 14, 201801:54

Klein is hardly the only Wall Street powerbroker to work with Saudi Arabia. But he may be the only one to serve at an organization like Emerson. While other media organizations, including The New York Times, CNBC, Bloomberg and Financial Times, have backed out of the Future Investment Initiative due to Khashoggi's disappearance, Klein has played a key role in bringing the annual summit together. Some sources described him as the event's unofficial "organizer."

Ahead of last year's inaugural summit, Klein advised Saudi Arabia on its $20 billion investment in a U.S. infrastructure fund managed by Blackstone, which was one of the main draws of the first FII conference. Sources familiar with that event say Klein also helped bring business leaders and Wall Street power brokers to Riyadh that year, and was at the center of all the action.

A spokesperson for Klein declined to say whether he is still planning to attend this year's conference and said he was not an organizer of this year's event or last year's event, nor does he sit on any of this year's event advisory boards.

Klein also has a relationship with Saudi oil giant Aramco through his advisory work for Dow Chemical, and sources said he advised Aramco on restructuring for a planned IPO that was expected to be the biggest IPO in world history. The plan was called off earlier this year when the wealth fund decided to sell a stake of the petrochemicals maker Saudi Basic Industries Corp. to Aramco — a deal Klein was also brought in to advise on.

As questions rise over Khashoggi, so does the price of oil

For Klein, as for many bankers and business leaders, Khashoggi's disappearance forces an uncomfortable question: Whether it is acceptable to keep doing business with the Saudi kingdom if — as Turkish officials allege — the kingdom sent 15 officials into the country to kill Khashoggi and dispose of his body.

For Powell Jobs, it may force a different sort of question: Whether it is acceptable to do business with a man — a friend — even if he is working with the perpetrators of that alleged murder.

CORRECTION (Oct. 15, 2018, 1:12 p.m. ET): An earlier version of this article misspelled the name of the founder of Emerson Collective in the headline. She is Laurene Powell Jobs, not Lauren.

Seth Rich Hush Money?

During the 2016 Presidential Election, the biggest story became how Russia â hackedâ the election. The â 17 intelligence agenciesâ that Hillary Rodham Clinton cited all relied on word from a contracted company, CrowdStrike.

CrowdStrike is a technology company that specializes in cyber-security. Not only is there conflict of interest with CrowdStrike receiving payments, campaign data shows some incredible correlations with the payments that were made.

All payments cited below are part of the Federal Election Committee data of campaign spending on the www.fec.gov website.

The first payments made were preemptive measures on May 5th, 2016 when the DNC was looking to figure out where the breach of security was. Payments made on May 5th, 2016 of $7,650.00 and $1,462.50 were likely paid for CrowdStrike to install their Falcon software, a stellar technology security suite that would identify any internal or external security breach.

The final email on Wikileaks from the DNC is dated May 25th, 2016. CrowdStrike would have had complete knowledge of the party that ripped the emails from the server.

The next payment that was made to CrowdStrike occurred on July 11th, 2016 for the amount of $98,849.84. The relationship to this date happens to be the day after DNC Data Director of New Voter Registration Seth Rich was murdered.

The final payment to date is August 3rd, 2016. This coincides with another murder in the District of Columbia. Shawn Lucas, who died on August 2nd of last year, was the DNC Process Server and close friend of Seth Rich. The payment on August 3rd included two checks, one for $113,645.77 and the other for $4,275.00.

We find it highly coincidental that both of these payments came within 24 hours of two high profile murders in Washington D.C., which both have connection to the DNC.

Updates:

The initial and final payment was referring to Technology Consulting and Technology Infrastructure Maintenance, linked here. It does not include the licensing of the software under the description of Data Services Subscription.

Giving evidence to the culture select committee of MPs, Mr Wylie told how rumours that Mr Muresan had been killed circulated around the controversial data firm.

And he heard talk the Kenyan police had been bribed not to enter the hotel room for 24 hours in a bid to cover up the possible murder.

He made the explosive comments to a committee of MPs investigating the spread of fake news.

Rumours that the death could have been murdered will fuel concerns about Cambridge Analytica and the shady world it operated in.

Who was Dan Muresan, the former Cambridge Analytica employee who died in Kenya?

Dan Muresan was found dead in 2012 amid suspicious circumstances, Parliament has been told (file pic)

Dan Muresan was Cambridge Analytica's elections chief when he died in mysterious circumstances in 2012.

He had been working for the Kenyan President Uhuru Kenyatta's reelection campaign when he died.

Rumours which later surfaced suggested he may have been poisoned after a deal went 'sour'.

Mr Muresan was the only child of Romania's former Agriculture Minister Ioan Avram Muresan, who is now serving a seven year jail stint for corruption.

His family reportedly chose to keep the cause of his death private - a choice Romanian citizens are offered/.

and the results of the postmortem were never revealed publicly.

He studied at the prestigious LSE university before moving to the Us where he got a master's degree in political management from the George Washington University.

He joined Cambridge Analytica working on their elections team and headed up campaigns in various states of south Africa, south-east Asia and eastern Europe.

At the time of his death, Romania's Foreign Ministry told the Bucharest Herald: 'The Romanian citizen was working with a British telecommunications company, being in Kenya for a while.

'He had not yet registered his presence on Kenyan territory with the Romanian diplomatic mission. The same source shows that after the police arrived, the body was taken by an undertaker company for an autopsy.'

'Dan was my predecessor....what I heard was that he was working on some kind of deal of some sort - I'm not sure what.

'The deal went sour.

'People suspected he was poisoned in his hotel room. I also heard that the police had got bribed not to enter the hotel room for 24 hours.'

He added: 'That is what I was told - I was not there so I speak to the veracity of it.'

Mr Wylie said that when he joined Cambridge Analytica in 2012 he did not know the name of his predecessor or what happened to him.

But he asked his colleagues after he could not find a file he was hunting for. It was then that he heard the rumours about the death, MPs were told.

Mr Muresan was the son of former Romanian Agriculture Minister Ioan Avram Muresan, who is now in prison for corruption charges.

His mysterious death made the news in his home country.

According to a report of his death which ran in 2012 in the Bucharest Herald, the 32 year-old had studied at the LSE in London and had coordinated election campaigns in Europe, Africa and the US.

Romania's Foreign Ministry told the Bucharest Herald at the time: 'The Romanian citizen was working with a British telecommunications company, being in Kenya for a while.

'He had not yet registered his presence on Kenyan territory with the Romanian diplomatic mission.

'The same source shows that after the police arrived, the body was taken by an undertaker company for an autopsy.'

Paul-Olivier Dehaye, an IT expert, told the committee: "My understanding relating back to your predecessor Dan Muresan.

" There are stories that have come out in India " he was working for Congress apparently according to reports.

" But apparently he was really paid for by an Indian billionaire who actually wanted Congress to loose.

" So he was pretending to work for one party while actually paid by someone else."

He called for collaboration between the three countries to get to the bottom of what happened to Mr Muresan.

In a lengthy appearance in front of the select committee, Mr Wylie also made more claims about questionable activities carried out by the SCL Group, a strategic communications company linked to CA.

Christopher Wylie (pictured last night with Vote Leave whistleblower Shahmir Sanni) also said that Cambridge Analytica's parent company SCL was involved in the distribution of kompromat during the Nigerian elections in 2015 in an effort to intimidate voters

He claimed that SCL had been involved in a project in Nigeria in 2015 which had involved hacking the private information of Muhammadu Buhari, who was running for president.

Cambridge Analytica's parent company involved in distributing kompromat to intimidate voters in Nigeria, MPs hear

Cambridge Analytica's parent company was involved in the distribution of kompromat to try to intimate voters in the Nigerian election in 2015, a whistleblower today claimed.

Christopher Wylie said SCL was involved in a project involving the hacking the private information of Muhammadu Buhari, who was running for president.

He claimed AIQ distributed compromising material - known as kompromat - and videos designed of people having their throats slit to intimidate Mr Buhari's supporters.

He told MPs: 'The company utilised the services of an Israeli private intelligence firm, Black Cube.

'Black Cube on the Nigeria project was engaged to hack the now-president Buhari to get access to his medical records and private emails.

'AIQ worked on that project. AIQ was handed material in Nigeria from Cambridge Analytica to distribute online.

'That's distribution of kompromat and of incredibly threatening and violent video content which I've passed on to the committee.

'The videos that AIQ distributed in Nigeria with the sole intent of intimidating voters included content where people were being dismembered, where people were having their throats cut and bled to death in a ditch, they were being burned alive.

'There were incredibly anti-Islamic and threatening messages portraying Muslims as violent.'

Mr Wylie also alleged AIQ had worked on a project in Trinidad & Tobago, which involved attempting to harvest the internet data of the country's entire population.

He said: 'You've got AggregateIQ, who received 40 per cent of Vote Leave's spending, also involved in projects which involved hacked material and kompromat and distributing violent videos of people being bled to death to intimidate voters.

'This is the company that played an incredibly pivotal role in politics here.'

In a statement issued after the hearing, Black Cube said it has always operated within the law.

It said: 'Whilst we are flattered that we are seemingly being connected with every international incident that occurs, we will state that Chris Wylie's testimony is a flagrant lie.'

'We categorically declare that neither Black Cube, nor any of its affiliates and subsidiaries, have ever worked for, or engaged with, SCL, Cambridge Analytica, or any of their affiliates and subsidiaries.'

'Black Cube has never operated in Nigeria nor has it worked on any project connected to Nigeria, and none of its employees have ever set foot in Nigeria.'

'Black Cube will investigate this claim on a pro bono basis, and will reveal the truth and the motive behind Wylie's defamatory lie.'

They also threatened to sue Mr Wylie.

He said that SCL would help politicians win elections in African countries so it could use its influence to broker commercial deals and line their pockets.

Describing how SCL operates, Mr Wylie said: 'You can be a colonial master in these countries...it was very much like a privatized colonial operation'

He also revealed more details about the characters behind Cambridge Analytica and SCL Group.

He said that Alexander Nix, CA's chief executive, set up a fake office in Cambridge in a bid to woo Steve Bannon - Donald Trump's former chief strategist, who was more at home speaking to students than sitting in the firm's plush Mayfair offices.

He also revealed that Mr Nix was very wealthy.

He said: 'You have to remember that a lot of these people are very wealthy already.

'Alexander Nix in particular - there was one time when we were running late because he had to pick up a Â£200,000 chandelier.

'These are people who don't need to make a lot of money, but the thing that I learned is that for certain wealthy people, they need something to keep them occupied and they need projects.

Mr Wylie told MPs that Vote Leave strategist Dominic Cummings (pictured) cheated election spending rules in the referendum by telling other organisations how to spend their money

'Going into the developing world and running a country is something that appeals to them.'

Cambridge Analytica has been plunged into controversy after Mr Wylie blew the whistle on claims that it harvested data from 50 million Facebook users without getting their permission.

Mr Wylie told MPs that thought Mr Nix was 'exceptionally misleading' in his evidence to the committee adding: 'Not just misleading but dishonest.'

He also accused Dominic Cummings, the strategist at Vote Leave who is credited with masterminding the victory, of finding ways of cheating in the Brexit referendum.

Mr Wylie said he found ways to bust spending limits by telling other Brexit backing organisations including BeLeave to use their money to pay for a digital advertising blitz by AIQ.

He said: 'This is cheating....if you cheat on an exam you get a fail if you cheat on the Olympics you lose your medal. You should not win by cheating.'

He added: 'There could have been a different outcome in the referendum had there not been cheating.'

He said Cambridge Analytica is not a legitimate firm and that 'no good' has come from it.

So Why Does the NSA Have 32 Pages of Secret/Top Secret Documents on Seth Rich?

Most people probably missed this intriguing blogpost by Publius Tacitus which appeared yesterday.:

https://turcopolier.typepad.com/sic_semper_tyrannis/2018/10/dnc-emails-a-seth-attack-not-a-russian-hack-by-publius-

Although this provides a good summary of what is currently known about the Seth Rich case, the intriguing new info in it is this:

But now there is new information that may corroborate what the human sources quoted in the Fox article claimed about Seth's role in getting the DNC documents to Wikileaks. Borne from a FOIA request filed in November 2017 by attorney Ty Clevenger, who requested any information regarding Seth Rich and Julian Assange. The NSA informed Clevenger in a letter dated 4 October 2018 that:

Your request has been processed under the provisions of the FOIA. Fifteen documents (32 pages) responsive to your request have been reviewed by this Agency as required by the FOIA and have found to be currently and properly classified in accordance with Executive Order 13526. These documents meet the criteria for classification as set forth in Subparagraph (c) of Section 1.4 and remains classified TOP SECRET and SECRET.

If NSA had come back and said, "No, we do not have anything pertaining to Seth Rich," that would have been news. It would have been especially unwelcome news for those who believe that Seth was the source on the DNC emails. But now the opposite is true. The NSA says that it has documents that are classified TS and S. What do those documents say or prove? That remains to be seen.

Although the letter cited here was dated October 4th, I had not seen any previous news about this, nor could I find this cited elsewhere on the web. When I and others queried the author (in the Comments section) about his source for this info, he responded:

The source is the letter that the lawyer, Ty Clevenger, received from the NSA. I have seen the letter.

Presumably Publius Tacitus knows Clevenger.

So the key question is this: why does the NSA have 32 pages of secret or top secret documents (which of course they refuse to release) pertinent to Seth Rich and Julian Assange?

The Deep State expects us to believe that Russian agents (presumably "Guccifer 2.0") hacked the DNC and provided Wikileaks with the DNC emails they subsequently published. Hence, there would be no reason to think that Seth Rich was ever in touch with Wikileaks, and the NSA couldn't have captured any correspondence between Seth and Wikileaks officials. Moreover, the FBI was at pains to deny rumors that they had examined Seth's laptop soon after the murder. Though they didn't say that specifically, rather, they said that they were not investigating the Seth Rich murder, as the FBI does not investigate murders. (After which the MSM had a good laugh at the absurd Seth Rich conspiracy theorists.)

<https://www.newsweek.com/seth-rich-dnc-staffer-wikileaks-leaked-emails-fbi-610383>

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

However, what if the FBI was investigating Rich for espionage rather than probing his murder? The FBI did not flatly state that they had not looked at his laptop.

The Fox News report was withdrawn at the insistence of the Murdochs which prompted public concern about Seth's laptop, was evidently based on info which Sy Hersh supplied to Ed Butowsky in a phone call that Butowsky secretly recorded:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gYzB96_EK7s

Although Hersh has refused to go public with this story (he likely has only one source for it), he had an opportunity to state that he had been BSing Butowsky but refused to do so. Which likely means he was being honest when he told Butowsky about a source inside the FBI, considered highly reliable by Hersh, who described to Hersh seeing an FBI memo regarding an FBI analysis of Seth's laptop. That analysis indicated that Seth had arranged with Gavin Macfayden of Wikileaks to provide DNC emails to Wikileaks via drop box in exchange for a payment.

Another pertinent issue has recently caught my attention. There is strong reason to suspect that Guccifer 2.0, far from being a Russian intelligence agent, is a Deep State creation meant to establish the hoax that Russian hackers were the source of the Wikileaks DNC releases.

<https://medium.com/@markfmccarty/how-did-crowdstrike-guccifer-2-0-know-that-wikileaks-was-planning-to-release->

Yet it is clear that, as of June 15th, 2016, when G2.0 made his first appearance, he was aware that Wikileaks was planning to release DNC emails. On June 12th, Assange announced that Wikileaks would soon release upcoming leaks in relation to Hillary Clinton; he never mentioned the DNC. But, soon thereafter, Crowdstrike indicated that the DNC had been hacked, and Guccifer 2.0 claimed that he was the hacker, and had provided Wikileaks with DNC emails which he had purloined. This suggests strongly to me that both Crowdstrike and G2.0 (possibly one and the same?) had been tipped off by elements of the Deep State that DNC emails had been transferred to Wikileaks.

Since the NSA has omniscient ability to intercept electronic communications, what is the chance that they were not carefully monitoring communications to and from the principals of Wikileaks including Gavin Macfayden? If they were doing such monitoring, then they would have intercepted Seth's offer to provide the DNC emails in a drop box to Macfayden. And this finding could then have been conveyed to the DNC. Almost as soon as Assange had confirmed that new material related to Hillary Clinton was soon to be released, the DNC and Crowdstrike quickly deduced that leaked DNC emails would soon be made public. And to distract attention from the incriminating content of the emails, they hit on the clever stratagem of proving that Russian intelligence hackers, bent on Hillary's destruction, were the actual source of the emails. Almost as soon as Crowdstrike's claim that Russian intelligence had hacked the DNC was made public, G2.0 popped up to claim that he was the hacker, and had provided his trove to Wikileaks. To prove his hacking credentials, he released a Trump Opposition Research document cited by Crowdstrike the day before as having been taken by the hackers from the DNC on which he had intentionally placed Russian fingerprints in the meta-data that he knew would lead cybersleuths to conclude that he was Russian. (The only small problem with this charade is that we now know that the opposition research document had been a file attachment to the Podesta emails; apparently we are dealing here with another gang that can't shoot straight.)

If the NSA had unmasked Seth as the source of the DNC leak, and had provided this info to the DNC, this might be quite pertinent to Seth's subsequent murder. (And possibly also the mysterious death of Seth's confederate Shawn Lucas.) Although the Deep State could be confident that Assange would not reveal his source for the DNC emails, Seth Rich would have been in a position to destroy the Guccifer 2.0

hoax as long as he was alive.

You'll note that the alleged FBI analysis of Seth's laptop claims that Seth had indicated he had friends who were aware of his drop box. One of these friends might have been Shawn Lucas, the process server for the lawsuit against the DNC. About a month after Seth's murder, Lucas died mysteriously of a drug overdose involving multiple potent drugs. Quite a mysterious death for someone not known to abuse drugs. It has also been pointed out that the DNC made large payments to CrowdStrike the day after the murders of both Seth and Shawn. Sheer coincidence? Maybe.

Okay, so maybe Sy Hersh's trusted source is actually just a lunatic, and there was no FBI investigation of Seth's laptop. And maybe Seth never made any effort to contact Wikileaks, and the NSA therefore had no need to intercept his non-existent communications with that organization.

Which however then leaves us with the question: Why does the NSA have 32 pages of documents, marked Secret and Top Secret, pertinent to Seth Rich and Wikileaks?

Perhaps those who will be quick to deride this essay as a conspiracy theory will have a clever answer for this. And will they also be eager for those NSA documents to be declassified and released, so that my crackpot suspicions can be put to rest? Perhaps I shouldn't hold my breath.

Twitter Blocks The Alt-Right, But Allows Racist Death Threats To Non-Democrats

Twitter began a massive purge of users on Monday the company claims violate its new terms of service.

As predicted, nearly every account that was banned by Twitter was affiliated with the alt-right or far right.

White nationalist Jared Taylor, his group American Renaissance, and Britain First leader Jayda Fransen, the woman who posted the "Islamophobic" videos famously retweeted by President Trump, were some of the entities that received the boot from Twitter.

The standard by which Twitter decided which users were no longer welcome seemed remarkably arbitrary, as noted by a few observers like right-wing watcher Will Sommer.

The entire alt-right wasn't banned, only random accounts, some of whom appeared to go out of their way to conform to Twitter's terms of service.

While the standard for Twitter's purge is unknown, it is pretty obvious the new rules aren't being equally applied to any left-wing accounts.

The case made for the social media platform to ban so many accounts is that harassment and violent racist rhetoric is out of control on the website. Surprisingly enough, plenty of leftists engage in that behavior on social media as well.

But that seems to only be a problem Twitter cares about if it comes from the Right, as the example of Federal Communications chairman Ajit Pai proves.

Hundreds of left-wing users have recently taken to issuing death threats and other promises of violence to Pai over his decision to scrap net neutrality regulations.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

Pai, an Indian-American, told The Daily Caller last week that he was shocked at the amount of racism he received on social media for his decision. (RELATED: FCC Chairman Ajit Pai Reflects On Racist Backlash)

Here are a few examples of leftists tweeting racist death threats at him.

@AjitPaiFCC I will kill you Ajit Pai you fucking nigger

JK (@josdkoger) December 18, 2017

As you can see, all of these users are still active on Twitter following Monday's purge.

Play Video

Pai's children have been threatened, his home address has been doxxed and tons of people are wanting to kill him because of the false notion he destroyed internet freedom. But Twitter does nothing to stop this dangerous rhetoric from continuing.

Maybe it has something to do with Pai calling Twitter out for its censorious policies. In speeches refuting accusations that net neutrality ensures free speech survives on the internet, the FCC chair made a point to highlight how Twitter, a big supporter of net neutrality, censors views on the Right and undermines its own claims of supporting free speech. (RELATED: Ajit Pai Is Right On Big Tech's Threat To An Open Internet)

When it comes to an open Internet, Twitter is part of the problem, Pai said in one speech last month. The company has a viewpoint and uses that viewpoint to discriminate.

[T]o say the least, the company appears to have a double standard when it comes to suspending or deactivating conservative users' accounts as opposed to those of liberal users. This conduct is many things, but it isn't fighting for an open Internet, he added in that speech.

Monday's purge only further confirms Pai's criticism of Twitter.

Some conservatives may not be worried by the purge because it only affects white nationalists and other extremists. But what's stopping Twitter from going after respectable conservatives who criticize Islam and mainstream immigration reduction groups?

Twitter has already blocked ads from the Center of Immigration Studies what if Twitter decides to agree with the Southern Poverty Law Center that that group is too hateful to deserve a platform? (RELATED: Google Is Using Its Immense Power To Censor Content That Doesn't Fit Its Political Goals)

It is certain, however, that Twitter's move Monday had nothing to do with stopping harassment. Pai will still be getting a flood of death threats today and every day.

It's all about suppressing views Twitter disagrees with.

Twitter gave Saudi Arabia information about another journalist who the Saudi Arabians tortured and killed

Twitter has come under fire after another dissident journalist was reportedly tortured and killed in Saudi Arabia.

Turki Bin Abdul Aziz Al-Jasser was arrested on March 15 for allegedly running a Twitter account called Kashkool, which exposed human rights violations by Saudi authorities and royals.

He then died while being tortured in detention, The New Khaleej states â prompting fresh outrage over an alleged leak of information that lead to his capture.

â They got his information from the Twitter office in Dubai. That is how he was arrested,â a source, who wishes to remain anonymous, told Metro.co.uk.

â Twitter has become insecure for dissidents or critics. Everyone speaks under threat and pressure.

â The accounts of Saudi dissidents are spied on. We are not safe using Twitter.â

The source also claimed that Saud al-Qahtani, the former adviser to the Royal Court, leads a â cyber spy ringâ and has contacts inside the Dubai Twitter office.

They allege that a so-called â Twitter moleâ handed over information on Al-Jasser, leading to his arrest earlier this year.

They're not the only one. After news of Al-Jasser's alleged death broke, many people began using the hashtag #TwitterKilledTurkiAlJasser in an attempt to call out the platform for being unsafe.

"We want justice for activists who arrested because of Twitter," one person tweeted.

Another said: "Twitter [is] not safe any more", while a third wrote: "Twitter must revise its privacy policy. Literally, lives are at stake here."

Al-Qahtani, who was dismissed from his role over journalist Jamal Khashoggi's death, alluded to the "three methods" officials use to unmask activists on social media last year.

In a tweet from 2017, he warned that fake names could not protect dissidents.

Saud al-Qahtani tweeted about the "methods" used to find dissidents who use Twitter

"Does your nickname protect you from the #blacklist?" Al-Qahtani wrote online.

"No. 1. States have a way of knowing the owner of the name. 2 IP can be identified in many technical ways. 3- The secret I am not going to say."

The source said his tweet is "considered to be an intended threat".

A Twitter spokesperson stated that they work hard to protect their users' voices.

"We do not comment on individual cases for privacy and security reasons," they said.

"Twitter has a well-documented, strong track record of protecting user information and data.

"We require law enforcement to meet a high legal threshold and to undergo strict process when making information requests to Twitter.

WHY IS ERIC SCHMIDT CONNECTED TO SO MANY MURDERS IN THE X-KEY-SCORE DATABASE?

You can look these murders, and possible murders, up yourself. You will find that they did happen, they were all suspicious and that every one of them had a connection to Eric Schmidt, a man who thinks he is a CIA operative and political 'gate-keeper' for the world.

The dead half naked girl from Google, Chuchu Ma, found floating in San Francisco Bay may have been killed by Eric Schmidt in one of his sex romps.

Forrest Hayes rigged the Obama elections for Eric Schmidt at Google. Hayes died on his sex yacht when a hooker gave him a loaded lethal heroin dose known as a "hot shot", used by the CIA to kill people. Ask Meredith Fowke at www.cmjprod.ca about him.

Rajeev Motwani taught Google how to Google. Suddenly, in perfect health, he was found floating face-down, dead, in his Silicon Valley swimming pool. Eric Schmidt felt that Rajeev knew too much about Google's election manipulations. Shellfish toxins or a portable EKG are suspected as the murder technologies for Motwani.

Gary D. Conley was the CleanTech competitor to, and whistle-blower on, Eric Schmidt, Elon Musk and Solyndra. Conley, after whistle-blowing, was suddenly found with a bullet in his head behind Beale Air Force base. Beale has nuclear warheads and is surrounded by cameras on miles of roads leading to the death site but California AG Kamala Harris said all the videos were "missing" in order to protect Eric Schmidt. Eric Schmidt's friend, Google associate and Tesla Investments founder Ravi Kumar was also killed by a hooker so that he could not reveal what he knew.

Deep Google investor VC liaison and husband of Facebook executive Cheryl Sandberg, Dave Goldberg was suddenly found dead with a hole in his head. The "official" story is that he was the first person in history to be killed by his treadmill. But Eric Schmidt said "he knew too much" about Schmidt's Silicon Valley Cartel.

David Bird was the Wall Street Journal energy reporter who was working on a story that involved Eric Schmidt's Cleantech energy connections of some of the suspects. He was working on a story about who controlled the modern energy industry and cleantech. He went for a walk and was found a long time later, dead, floating in a pond. It helps certain people that he can no longer talk.

Andrew Breitbart suddenly died after saying he would expose Schmidt.

Karl Slym, of Tata Motors was involved in an electric car deal that threaten Schmidt's and Elon Musk's electric car monopoly. Slym was pushed off the roof of a building and killed.

Doug Bourn, The senior electrical engineer at Tesla (Google's covert partner), Andrew Ingram of Palo Alto, a top systems electrical engineer at Tesla; and Brian M. Finn the senior manager of interactive electronics, at Tesla, had deep knowledge of financial misdeeds and technical cover-ups at Tesla Motors. They were key parts of the Tesla operation. For some reason, they all got into a private airplane, in perfect health, and then the airplane plowed into the ground, killing all three at once. It helps certain people that they can no longer talk. They wrote, and helped describe, in Tesla's own federal patent filings, the fact that Tesla's batteries would kill you, maim you and/or burn your house down. Tesla did not realize this when they paid the federal patent filing fees. When Tesla, later realized this, they were forced to give all of their patents away for free. These three senior engineers had deep inside knowledge of the Tesla Motors operations. Their aircraft suffered an "Engineering failure". Eric Schmidt and Larry Page are covert backers of Elon Musk.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

Stanley Meyer - Hydrogen car developer whose technology would have obsoleted Tesla Motors lithium ion battery and threatened Schmidt's green energy scheme, died strangely. Obama White House liaison Dan Turton helped Google take over the White House and rig Cleantech deals.

Ashley Turton, his wife, was burned to death in her car when he implied he might rat out the Cleantech scam.

Michael Hastings suddenly had his car crash and burn him to death when he was investigating Google's actions.

Robin Copeland was a Dept.of Energy official who Gary D. Conley spoke to and who then strangely died. There are hundreds of other Google shut-them-up deaths.

WIGS OFF! Maxine Waters tears into Chuck Schumer: â Will do anythingâ including murder, to protect power

BY KYLE OLSON

Maxine Waters isnât about to let Nancy Pelosi and Chuck Schumer hold her back from calling for members of the Trump administration to be harassed in public.

During an appearance on MSNBC on Sunday, Waters listened to a clip of Schumer denouncing her rhetoric as â un-American,â and was asked if she was â surprisedâ that Democratic leaders called her out.

â Well, Iâm surprised that Chuck Schumer, you know, reached into the other house (of Congress) to do that. Iâve not quite seen that done before, but one of the things I recognize, being an elected official, is in the final analysis, leadership like Chuck Schumer will do anything that they think is necessary to protect their leadership,â she said.

â Already, you have members of your Cabinet that are being booed out of restaurants,â Waters said in LA last Saturday, as the crowd erupted, â who have protesters taking up at their house, who say, â No peace, no sleep. No peace, no sleep,â she continued.

â And guess what,â she predicted, â weâre going to win this battle because while you try and quote the Bible, Jeff Sessions and others, you really donât know the Bible.

â God is on OUR side!â she declared, as the crowd went wild. â On the side of the children. On the side of whatâs right. On the side of whatâs honorable.â â And so, letâs stay the course. Letâs make sure we show up wherever we have to show up and if you see anybody from that Cabinet in a restaurant, in a department store, at a gasoline station, you get out and you create a crowd and you push back on them, and you tell them theyâre not welcome anymore, anywhere,â she yelled.

Waters remarks were then marred by a screeching microphone.

â Mr. President, we will see you every day, every hour of the day, everywhere that we are to let you know you cannot get away with this!â she yelled.

What Happens When You Investigate Election Fraud in Florida? The Bizarre Murder of Beranton J. Whisenant Jr.

Investigating election/voter fraud in Florida can be a dangerous task. If U.S. District Attorney Beranton Whisenant were still alive heâd tell you from personal experience.

Flashback 2017:

Arguably, however, most Americans have never heard about the DNC voter fraud, mainly because the mainstream media is camped out on the alleged collusion between Trumpâs campaign and Russia. Shrouded in mystery, one of the DNC lawsuitâs most jaw-dropping events occurred May 24, when the body of U.S. District Attorney Beranton J. Whisenant, Jr. was found on a Hollywood, Florida beach.

When his body was originally found, police announced they were investigating Whisenantâs death from a head wound as a homicide, but detectives and the medical examiner reported this week that the married father of three â had shot himself in the head,â according to The Sun Sentinel.

And just like thatâ A story that might have made national headlines was dead before ever achieving much media attention.

Funny how that happens!

Hereâs an excerpt from my previous article â Dead Men Tell No Tales in Broward County: 3 Recent Whistleblowers Who Ended Up DEADâ â :

Whisenant was a federal prosecutor that was murdered in 2017 while investigating voter fraud. Biz Pac Review reported:

A federal prosecutor from the U.S. attorneyâs office in Miami who happened to be investigating voter fraud has been found dead along a Hollywood Florida beach, and itâs being investigated as a homicide.

According to Hollywood police spokeswoman Miranda Grossman, although the â investigation is still very preliminary,â 37-year-old Beranton J. Whisenant Jr. likely suffered a head wound from a gunshot or other direct trauma. His body was found by a passerby washed up on the Hollywood beach shore south of Magnolia Terrace. It isnât clear where the victim actually died.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

For now, the FBI's Miami office is referring all questions related to Whisenant's death to Hollywood police, but if the death is found to be retaliatory or related to a case Whisenant was working on, standard procedure would mean the FBI and U.S. attorney's office aggressively working together on the case.

News spread quickly on social media that Whisenant was involved in a recent fraud probe involving the DNC, though none of the news reports mentioned that as fact.

A graduate of the University of Florida law school, Whisenant has been a member of the Florida Bar since 2004, joining the U.S. attorney's office in January 2017 in the major crimes section.

His office happens to be in Congressman Debbie Wasserman Schultz's district.

There is more. Much more. The police seemed to have concluded the investigation rather quickly and, in fact, ruled Whisenant's death a suicide despite never finding a gun.

Jack Burns reported last year:

Now, investigators have concluded their investigation into Whisenant's death and they've ruled it a suicide. Whisenant's body was found shortly before 6:30 pm on the 24th of May by a random stranger. At the time, police were trying to determine if his death was a suicide, homicide, or something else. All that has changed now with the department ruling Whisenant's death a suicide, but in doing so, an even greater mystery has emerged. Police did not find a gun.

According to the Sun-Sentinel:

Beranton Whisenant, 38, was found dead by a beachgoer in Hollywood near Magnolia Terrace shortly before 6:30 a.m. on May 24. Detectives and a medical examiner found Whisenant had shot himself in the head, Hollywood police said. Police searched for two blocks north and south of the crime scene but couldn't find the gun or any other weapon. He was assigned to the Miami office of the U.S. Attorney's office and been hired as a federal prosecutor a few months earlier

If Whisenant did kill himself, the firearm should be within reach of his body. There's even enough steel in a polymer handgun to force the gun to be sunk in the sand. Nevertheless, no gun has been found, and Americans are simply supposed to accept the police department's findings.

Corruption anyone?

Isn't it convenient that Whisenant was found dead while investigating the DNC?

TRENDING: California forced vaccinations a blatant violation of the Nuremberg Code that outlawed medical experiments on humans

And how convenient (for the DNC) that the police were able to conclude their investigation so quickly, before cries of foul play started circling in the media?

Johnny Salvatore of Flag and Cross sums it up very well:

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

Beranton J. Whisenant, Jr., a federal prosecutor, committed suicide in May 2017.

Actually, suicide should really be in quotes.

The official report said Whisenant, 37, shot himself in the head, which means a gun wouldâ ve been found right next to his body â unless a passerby managed to swipe it before authorities showed up.

Amazing cover-up.

I would bet 95% of America has never heard anything about this â suicideâ or the investigation that it ended.

The story was primarily reported locally and in the alternative media on a national level.

If there was a passerby that happened to retrieve that gun, what would you bet that passerby voted for Hillary?

Will anything happen with the current appearances of voter/election fraud in Florida?

At This Pointâ !

Where the Seth Rich murder leads

By Andres Ligne and Audrey Anderson

There can, by now, be no doubt in anyoneâs mind that Donna Brazille, Debbie Wasserman Schultz, John Podesta, George Soros and their financiers John Doerr, Eric Schmidt, Larry Page, Elon Musk, Vinod Khosla and the Silicon Valley Oligarchs will lie, cheat, bribe, steal and murder.

All of these people, and their associates, are proven criminals. They have all been caught, in multiple investigations.

Did John Podesta and Debbie Wasserman point the guns at Seth Rich and pull the triggers, probably not?

Did they order the murder of Seth Rich? Possibly.

Did they order the murders of the over one hundred other connected dead people? Maybe not all of them.

Why would these people kill, lie, hack, character assassinate and rig elections?

Are they so into their political party that they believe, Hitler-like, that all ends justify the means? Would they put Conservatives in ovens if they thought they could get away with it?

OR...

Were the bucket-loads of crony government cash they were hauling off to the Cayman Islands just too sweet a deal to let guys like Seth mess up?

The answer is almost certainly the later.

Their facade front company: Google, has daily cash going out the door that sometimes exceeds one hundred million dollars.

Stop and think about that, a company, that their boss Obama gave a monopoly too, shells out $100M in a single day. Google has so much extra money that its staff buy private rockets, space parachutes and other Frat boy crap just to say â *look at me!*â . The Wasserman/Podesta folks get bribes and â feesâ from Google, Facebook, Sony Pictures, et al. What are a few dead bodies in exchange for excess to $100M/Day?

Donna Brazille, Debbie Wasserman Schultz, John Podesta, George Soros and their financiers John Doerr, Eric Schmidt, Larry Page, Elon Musk, Vinod Khosla and the Silicon Valley Oligarchs certainly killed Seth Rich, Rajeeve Motwani, Gary D. Conley, David Bird and many more in order to keep their scam going.

Their deal has nothing to do with politics and everything to do with a criminal operation.

Corruption anyone?

While attention focuses on a mafia boss on trial in Brooklyn, the billionaire heads a power elite preserving inequality in Mexico

Every weekday morning at seven o'clock, a dozen or so reporters line up outside the federal courthouse in Brooklyn to assure themselves a seat at the trial of Joaquín Guzmán, the Sinaloa cartel boss. Articles have touted the many garish revelations that have emerged, including Guzmán's private zoo, his use of a diamond-encrusted pistol, his smuggling tunnels underneath the US-Mexico border, the huge bribes paid to officials, and the murder of a cartel leader's brother who refused to shake his hand.

How Many Gory Details Can One Jury Take? asked a headline in the New York Times, which has supplied its readers a steady stream. Vice News is offering an eight-part podcast, Chapo: Kingpin on Trial, based on years of reporting on the people affected by El Chapo's rise and fall.

I've avoided using that moniker, for it feeds the sense of chummy celebrity that's arisen around the man. The trial's coverage recalls the star treatment given Pablo Escobar and the Medellín cartel three decades ago. The Kings of Cocaine, they were then called, and their legend has been sustained by such blood-drenched productions as Narcos.

Such glamorizing not only insults the families of those who were murdered and disappeared by these criminals, but also blurs the fact that the drug war has been a dismal failure. In fact, that war has fed the violence, since removing cartel leaders disrupts the market, creating a vacuum that gangs fight to fill. It was the DEA's success in shutting down the cocaine transportation routes long used by the Colombians through the Caribbean that led them to redirect their trade through Mexico, giving rise to the national nightmare that over the last decade has claimed an estimated 150,000 lives. If the Guzmán trial has had one salutary effect, it's been to show the impossibility of trying to keep drugs from entering the United States. By plane, train, truck and submarine they continue to arrive, drawn by Americans' insatiable demand for illicit intoxicants.

The coverage of the Guzmán trial reflects a deeper problem, too. For most western journalists, Mexico means kingpins, cartels, murders, military abuses, corrupt cops and migrants. They pay far less attention to another, even more significant feature of Mexican life: its extreme poverty and inequality.

With a GDP approaching $1.15tn, Mexico's economy is now the 15th largest in the world, but its per-capita income of about $9,000 ranks just 70th. According to the Gini scale of income inequality, Mexico is the world's 19th most unequal country—more so than even Nicaragua, Bolivia, the Dominican Republic, and Chad. A shocking 43.6% of Mexicans are considered poor.

That destitution is the root cause of many of Mexico's other ills. Drug trafficking, violence, corruption, impunity, migration — all are outgrowths of the country's high unemployment, low wages, poor schools, inadequate healthcare, farmers without land, youths without jobs. These conditions seem all the more intolerable in a country so blessed with resources, including fertile farmland, vast oil reserves, deep-water ports, a temperate climate, stunning beaches, and a population that the OECD ranks the most hard-working of the 37 nations surveyed.

Growing frustration with Mexico's stunted development helped propel last year's election of Andrés Manuel López Obrador as president. During the campaign, López Obrador, a fervent populist, promised to raise the minimum wage, freeze gas and electricity prices, expand scholarships and pensions, subsidize agriculture, provide loans to small businesses, and develop southern states like Chiapas. He won in a landslide, taking 53% of the vote in a four-person race — nearly 30% more than his nearest rival.

López Obrador's Morena party also won control of both houses of the Mexican Congress and of many state governorships, giving him enormous power. Yet he faces tremendous opposition as well, especially from the political and economic elite, which he calls la mafia del poder — the power mafia — and whose grip, he believes, must be broken if the system is to be reformed.

While every lurid revelation of the Guzmán trial has been breathlessly noted, the power of this mafia has gone largely unremarked. The group is dominated by a dozen or so oligarchs and their families, who have a lock on such key economic sectors as telecommunications, media, mining and banking. Repeated forecasts of rapid development for Mexico have come to naught due to the suffocating hold that this small circle of super-connected individuals continues to have over its economy; by eliminating competition, they can keep prices high and profits surging.

At the center of the power elite is Carlos Slim. His estimated net worth of about $60bn places him seventh on Forbes's international rich list

At the center of the power elite is Carlos Slim. His estimated net worth of about $60bn places him seventh on Forbes's international rich list. This one man's wealth is equivalent to more than 5% of Mexico's GDP. The core of his empire is América Móvil, Latin America's largest mobile phone company; its longtime domination of Mexico's telecommunications industry has kept the nation's phone rates among the highest in the world, costing the economy an estimated $25bn a year.

Slim also owns nearly 17% of the New York Times, making him its largest shareholder. Like other American news organizations, the Times rarely writes about him and the ways in which he and other Mexican oligarchs have used their power to stymie the tax policies, public investments and income transfers needed to enable more Mexicans to enjoy the type of comfortable middle-class life depicted in Roma, the recent acclaimed film set in Mexico City in the early 1970s.

Last year, while campaigning to be Mexico's president, López Obrador told his supporters that the election was the most significant moment in Mexican history since the start of the Mexican Revolution in 1910. To some, that was typical López Obrador bombast. He sometimes sounds like a demagogue, and he denounces critics with an asperity that has drawn inevitable comparisons to Trump.

Commentators have warned that López Obrador could become another Hugo Chávez and scare off foreign investors or, alternatively, that he might sell out his supporters in the pursuit of power. Certainly his actions bear close watching, but it's no less critical to keep an eye on the oligarchs and other elite groups who are determined to preserve the status quo. The political resistance of Mexico's power mafia, rather than the crimes of a Mexican mafia boss in Brooklyn, should be the main focus of the press.

If López Obrador fails to deliver on his promise to alleviate poverty and improve the lives of ordinary Mexicans, it might be decades before such an opportunity arises again.

Daphne Caruana Galizia: Who was the Maltese journalist murdered in a car bomb explosion?

On October 16, Maltese journalist Daphne Caruana Galizia wrote her last blog post. "There are crooks everywhere you look now. The situation is desperate," she wrote. Less than an hour later, she was murdered in a car bomb attack.

So, who was the woman dubbed "Malta's most controversial journalist"?

She was described as a 'one-woman WikiLeaks'

Caruana Galizia began her career as a columnist with the Sunday Times of Malta in 1987. She later became associate editor of The Malta Independent, and continued to write columns for the publication after stepping down from that role.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

In recent years she maintained her own news blog, Running Commentary, which Politico EU claimed attracted up to 400,000 readers "on a good day" â taken in context, Malta's population is just under 450,000.

Last year, she was included in a Politico EU list of 28 people "shaping, shaking and stirring Europe".

Describing her as "the blogging fury" and a "one-woman WikiLeaks", the publication said:

"No-one is exempt from [Caruana] Galizia's digital cross-examination, and her language is invariably scalding."

What's her connection to the Panama Papers?

Caruana Galizia was the first to report news that Malta government minister Konrad Mizzi and Prime Minister Joseph Muscat's chief of staff Keith Schembri were connected to the Panama Papers leak.

Both Mr Mizzi and Mr Schembri had trusts in New Zealand, which held companies in Panama, Caruana Galizia reported.

"She single-handedly brought the Government to the verge of collapse," one MP told Politico EU.

This year, she went further, alleging Panama company Egrant was owned by Michelle Muscat, the PM's wife.

The allegations triggered the country's general election in June, according to the Times of Malta.

What do we know about her murder?

The time stamp on Caruana Galizia's last blog entry was 2:35pm, October 16. According to the Times of Malta, the explosion came about half an hour later.

She had just driven away from her home in Mosta, a town outside Malta's capital of Valletta, when her car exploded.

Debris from the Peugeot 108 was scattered across the road and into a nearby field.

Her last blog post took aim at Mr Schembri, who was testifying in a libel case.

In the post, entitled "That crook Schembri was in court today, pleading that he is not a crook", Caruana Galizia wrote:

"Mr Schembri is claiming that he is not corrupt, despite moving to set up a secret company in Panama along with favourite minister Konrad Mizzi."

"There are crooks everywhere you look now. The situation is desperate."

What has the reaction been?

Malta has been left in shock, and the political leaders Caruana Galizia made a career of investigating have been quick to denounce her slaying.

Mr Muscat, who admitted Caruana Galizia was one of his "harshes critics", called her murder a "barbaric attack", amounting to an assault on freedom of expression.

Opposition Leader Adrian Delia labelled the bombing a "political murder".

In a tribute, Times of Malta online editor Herman Grech described her as "loved and resented in equal measure in politically divided Malta".

"Her scathing pen spared no punches," he wrote.

Why Do Those Who Expose Deep State Actors End Up Meeting An Untimely, Convenient, Demise?

By

Adina Kutnicki

IF there was little else to occupy these hands, still, there would never be enough time to document the trail of dead bodies that have been silenced by the Deep State. An endless task. Depressing. But, as always, those atop the criminal pyramid don't dirty their hands. Yes, they give the orders, albeit, they subcontract out this one and that one for assassination. Hired-guns. So too in the realm of political hits.

EVEN so, before we get to the latest sudden death, the following recaps of (some of the) set-ups by Clinton and Obama Inc. are mandatory reading even if so-called mainstream media screams: conspiracy theory!

RECAPS:

- Back in 2013 (a year into the inception of this site), the following was reported: Hill's Skeletons, Bodies, Pile Up At Her Door As She Positions For 2016. Business as usual.
- Fast forward to 2014, and another trail of corpses are not far behind. Tellingly, this go-around, their skeletons intersected with banksters, the CIA, and some top brass at the NYPD! Oh my.
- Moving right along to the summer of 2016, and, here we go again: Clinton Inc.'s (Recent) Dead Bodies: Their Nexus To Criminal Cartels & The Brotherhood Mafia. Never-ending.
- But there's more. To wit, November 2016 required an updated list! How can this be? Well, does dropping like flies sound like par for their course? It should.
- Still yet, don't ever forget this: HUSSEIN Obama has his own pile up! Indeed. As such, here's a few foretastes: Why are mysterious deaths littered in his wake? More specifically, what constitutes/underlies these cold, dead bodies be they sexually related or otherwise? Naturally, Obama Inc. and Clinton Inc. intersect in many ways, some of which are deadly. Read: Seth Rich's/Andrew Breitbart's/Tom Clancy's (and so on) hits.
- Within this realm of truth-telling, is it any wonder that in the summer of 2018 Clinton Inc.'s ASSASSINATION SQUAD struck again? Of course not.

When should abortion be legal?

EVEN so, the Deep State's (permanent) silencing of journalists who get too close to their underbellies is nothing new. In fact, several exposés can be found within these pages to document (and analyze) said charges. Consider:

- In February 2015, several alarm bells rang at this site. Not for nothing. Incontestably, U.S. journalists are dropping like flies with Hastings and Breitbart the most well-known and already six feet under! How many recall these mysterious and highly convenient deaths?
- And just like left-wing, radicals are wont to do, the Deep State has their goon squads deployed and at their disposal to silence one dissenting/exposing journalist at a time, as reported in 2016.

ALL of which leads straight back to the latest (convenient) demise, that is, the very sudden death of Bre Payton on December 28, 2018 a rising Federalist reporter, a conservative journalist and pundit, who just exposed explosive, radioactive, truth bombs re the Mueller, Strozok cover-up! Coinkydink? Say it ain't so.

Google Has Had More Murdered And Strangely Dead Employees Than Almost Any Other U.S. Company

A top conservative journalist and pundit has died suddenly, just days after she broke a news story alleging that special counsel Robert Mueller and his team had deleted evidence proving anti-Trump bias at the FBI and Justice Department.

26-year-old Bre Payton was considered a rising star, working as a staff writer at The Federalist, co-hosting the Problematic Women podcast, and frequently appearing as a guest on outlets like Fox News Channel, Fox Business Channel, and One America News Network. Bre was found, unresponsive and barely breathing, by her friend in San Diego last week. The 26-year-old California native was admitted to the ICU at a local hospital on early on Thursday morning and tragically passed away on Friday.

Doctors, according to Payton's family, believe that she had contracted the H1N1 strain of influenza aka Swine Flu and encephalitis. Around 8:30, on December 27th, Bre's friend went into her room and found her unresponsive and barely breathing, reads Bre's Story on CaringBridge.org.

She immediately called 911 and Bre was taken to the hospital where she was admitted to the ICU, sedated & intubated, and doctors began working up a diagnosis.

George Payton, Bre's father, stayed with her at the hospital as she fought for her life, though, tragically, her condition worsened and she slipped away on Friday. From the moment we started talking I realized she was a potential star, Ben Domenech, of The Federalist, said in a touching eulogy on Saturday.

Bre Payton embodied fearless journalism; uninterested in pushing narratives and unafraid to tackle subjects that truly mattered to the people. On December 13th, The Federalist published one of Payton's hard-hitting pieces, entitled, DOJ Destroyed Missing Strzok/Page Text Messages Before The IG Could Review Them.

Payton's article broke the story that special council Robert Mueller and his team may have deleted text messages from the phones of disgraced former FBI agent Peter Strzok and ex-Justice Department lawyer Lisa Page in an attempt to conceal evidence of anti-Trump bias at the departments during the ongoing Russia probe. Unlike the mainstream media networks, who pushed the idea that there was no evidence the texts were deliberately destroyed, Payton raised questions of whether there was criminal intent in these deletions, a notion supported by President Trump. continue reading the curious and curiouser reportage here.

MIND you, before believing said physicians and their (convenient) diagnosis, trust, this would not be the first time that hospital staff, including pathologists, doctored the truth when it comes to the sudden death of those who defy the Deep State!

NOT only that, to be sure, this poor girl's grieving family is in no emotional state of mind to question this and that. Besides, how many (who are not medical professionals) would recognize when docs blow smoke, especially, when ordered to do so by the highest echelons or else? Again, this site is rife with proof of the same, especially, re those who drop like flies at the most opportune time for the Deep State.

BESIDES, What are the chances that the individual responsible for authenticating Barack Hussein Obama's long form birth certificate, Loretta Fuddy, just happened to be the sole fatality out of nine on board a small plane that was forced to make an emergency water landing off the coast of Hawaii? SIGNIFICANTLY, the powers that be are so entrenched and dangerous to the nth degree that the above is just the tip of what they are capable of, as well as being a reliable predictor of what lies in wait.

IN this regard, consider the Arizona/Mexico/D.C.-Corridor Mafia (read: Mama Janet Napolitano and her gang of launderers) as the facilitating arm to the real-time border threat(s) as per the entry of millions of illegals, criminal and terror aligned.

IN tandem, internaliz this too: alongside a laundry list of political power brokers, the aforementioned illegal and treasonous operation went down throughout her ignoble career, most perniciously, while she was head of DHS and continues at her post-D.C. jump to the Presidency of the University of California. More than criminal. Wretched.

IN fact, via a mandated CA audit of University finances, guess what was discovered, more aptly, what was not found? Hint: 175 million went missing (euphemistically termed as a failure to disclose), thus, created for slush-fund accounts. Pray tell, to what end? Well, very simply, they were set up for the benefit of Mexican cartels, as well as to serve as distribution accounts to pay off accomplices within Congress (and elsewhere), in what is known as pay-for-play within dirty politics. Yes, the Arizona/Mexico/D.C.-Corridor Mafia is more than operational, and Napolitano is still at her Presidential perch. Imagine that. Inexorably, Pelosi is fully on board! Hence, under her watch (read: Demsters) there will NEVER be a wall if she/they remain in control.

MOST significantly, anyone who gets in the way of the Deep State for whatever reason will, sooner or later, be eliminated.

THAT is a fact. A wrap for now.

Why South African Elon Musk Hates Blacks: 70,000 Whites Murdered In South Africa Since 1994

POSTED BY WHISNEWS21 â â 652 COMMENTS

Alphabetical list of a Genocide as posted on Sunette Bridges Web Site in South Africa

I believe this is necessary to keep track of all the murdered white people in South Africa for future generations

According to various sources, almost 70 000 White People have been murdered by Blacks in South Africa since 1994! These people were shot, bludgeoned, hacked, tortured, burnt, stabbed and mutilated. There is no official list available with the names of all these victims and since 2007 it has become very difficult to keep any kind of record as police no longer mention the race of the victim nor the perpetrator on the official reports.

I have been working on a list for quite some time but it is impossible to complete this list without help from the public. Here are the names of the victims listed from A to Z. These names appear on various lists on the internet. Not all the detail I found on the internet is correct and in many cases these people were attacked but survived. I would like to do a complete list of actual murders on White people that doesn't contain any false information as this destroys the credibility of our case. If you find names that were wrongfully listed, please advise so this can be corrected.

I have not worked through the official â Farm Murdersâ list yet, but will post the names on confirmation. This list alone contains over 4 000 names. It will take some time to complete this list, so bare with me.

I would greatly appreciate your help in this regard! If you know of relatives and friends that have been murdered, whose names do not appear on the list, please provide me with the detail in the comment section so I can add their names to the list once verified. In cases where I did not have a first name I used an â Fâ for female and â MRâ for male. If you know the names of these victims, please provide the detail together with the number. If any of the detail is incorrect, please provide the correct detail together with the number. I will update the list at least once every 24 hours.

It is time we stop talking about figures, numbers and statistics and speak of the names of the people that died in a Genocide that is being denied, not only by the world but by our own government!

The World needs to know!

PS! To make the task easier, I have to remove the comments as soon as I have posted the detail! Thank you again for helping!

Special Note added on the 1st March 2017 by WHISNews21: Please be aware that this list is incomplete and we at WHISNews21 dont have the workforce or time to dedicate a full time person to keeping this very important list of white murdered people in South Africa up to date. Sunette Bridges has done the ground work for which we are very grateful, so please feel free to add your loved ones in the comments section. If you do this it will still serve as a record, for the day that one special person stands up and dedicates their time to continue with this list of Genocide victims in a world where no one wants to believe it is happening or even worse does not care. We believe the list, if completed, will be around 125,000 thousand and at the rate white people are being murdered today, it could soon reach one Million. It is a fact that the murders have increased in numbers and cruelty since January 1st 2017, and still no signs of being recognized as the first Genocide in the history of mankind to be totally ignored by the good and bad people of Planet Earth.
