

I Was A Private Contractor for Various DoD Agencies - I am Speaking Now Because This Sh*t Has Gone too Far Off the Deep-End. I Will Provide (Some) Evidence

Whistleblower

I really did not want to write this. However after careful discussion with colleagues, I am going to go with what my gut tells I should do. I cannot sit on the sidelines while I observe the UAP field / narrative get filled with half-truths and obfuscations.

In this post, I will be providing evidence of documents that cannot be FOIA'd. I'll even give my perspective on Anti-Gravity and the overall landscape of the current UAP field when it comes to intelligence agents that are masquerading as "truthers". What I speak on is based on my own experiences and observations from being in the field for almost four decades.

I have a degree in electrical engineering from a college somewhere in the South of the USA. I will not say the name of the school because it will be very easy for people inside DoD to track me down if I give away too much considering not many were recruited from the college that I graduated from. I was recruited shortly out of college to work in black operations, specifically on the electrical engineering microelectronics & pulsed power side. These black programs do not necessarily care about your academic credentials as much as they are about two things: Can you think outside of the box, and can you shut the f*ck up about it.

I do not know everything, but the things I am sure of, I will write about here. Why am I doing this now? Because I was given 8 months to live and I will do what I can while alive to try and make a positive impact in the community. I sometimes cannot sleep seeing some of the blatant lies being fed to the community.

Let me put this bluntly before I get into the anti gravity and tech:

Jay Stratton and Lue Elizondo are one of the reasons that various inventors' ZPE (zero point energy) devices have never seen the light of day. They have been personally responsible for destroying careers, families, and the mental well-being of various physicists and engineers over many decades. Lue used to be a counter intel agent for more than one WUSAP (Waived Unacknowledged Special Access Program) and did NOT get involved in the subject "by chance". He and Stratton were involved long before the whole AATIP/AAWSAP saga.

Lue is not a bad person at heart, but it makes you wonder WHY he has done what he's done in order to destroy others. I know many of you may judge this statement and think that I am defending him, but there ARE many good things that he has done in this field as well that many people likely will never know about. With that said, he is definitely compromised in terms of putting USA NAT SEC above all else, and that is a concern at this point. It is a concern because the DoD has long been infiltrated with war-mongers and profiteering cranks that want to keep all of this tech and knowledge silent for the sake of their own self-preservation. I gave him the benefit of the doubt at first, but this is getting to the point of blatant stupidity. To a very small extent, I don't blame them. However, to hide this from humanity is becoming more of a curse than anything else. People have the right to know.

Jay Stratton, however, is a real scummy person. Don't get me started on the shit that guy has done to some of my colleagues. I have zero sympathy for that man.

Sean Kirkpatrick is a pawn. He lies through his teeth like Ron Pandolfi has and does. To add, please do not ask me about Jack Sarfatti. He is considered a laughing stock to those involved in various programs.

Also, there are just over 2000 Legacy Programs working on reverse-engineering UAP. Hal Puthoff recently said on Joe Rogan that we have "more than ten" recovered craft in the USA. The number is in the hundreds. At a minimum.

Jeremy Corbell is a useful idiot in many cases. Some of what he releases is accurate, but when he says that us humans "cannot replicate or understand any propulsion systems" that craft use, or whatever nonsense he spews, is a blatant lie. I doubt he actually knows the truth to be fair so I do not believe that he is deliberately lying.

Dave Grusch, Jake Barber, Mike Herrera are the real deal. I respect them and their efforts. Let me say now: please do not ask me about Immaculate Constellation because I know nothing of any of those alleged specified programs. I am an electrical engineer, not a spy. However, being in this field, you pick up tradecraft methods and learn how to 'run with the wolves' so to speak.

Human beings, through both novel innovation and also through reverse-engineering (not mutually exclusive), have mastered anti-gravity to a certain degree. When I say "certain degree", I mean operational craft that can leave our solar system. It sounds nuts, but it is the truth. Some have succeeded by means of pure human ingenuity, and others did it with access to recovered UAP materials. This level of mastery exceeds ANYTHING that even our most traditionally "secret" .MIL programs have. Booze Allen, Honeywell, Lockheed Martin, MITRE Corp, Raytheon, Boeing, etc all have their own versions of various anti gravity technologies. There is a difference between gravitational shielding/repulsion and actually generating HFGW (High Frequency Gravitational Waves).

The pursuit of Tomas Townsend Brown is exactly where people should be looking. Zero Point Energy manipulation has to do with the EM Vector Potential. That is as far as I will go on that.

I was involved in a project that utilized Tesla Turbines, Plasma Toroid chambers, Microwaves, Crystals, extremely strong Rotating Magnets, and various other obtainable components that generated many kilowatts of gravitational waves (or "gravitons" as some call it) in a private BaE Lab. The total cost of the project was just under 3 million USD to build the gravity generator. It can and has been done time and time again, successfully. Gravitational waves are measured electromagnetically due to it being a consequence of the curvature of spacetime itself.

Meta Materials are not needed to generate macroscopic proof of concept gravitational phenomena. Plain and simple.

You will notice in some of the files I am showing that the Soviets coined a term called “rotational gravitation” and believed that rotating masses acted as emitters and receivers of gravitational waves. I am not going to argue with those in the comments that say this isn’t possible, & I’m not going to argue with idiots that don’t know how to think outside of the box. My question is this: If the soviets thought it to be worthy of experimental investigation, then why is that not being done here?!! Oh wait, it is, it’s just going to stay forever classified. FOREVER.

Ask Jay Stratton why he prevented multiple inventors from getting their own laboratory. Because many of the inventors he suppressed focused on rotating capacitors, something the Soviets pursued very quickly. I’m sure his million-dollar book deal helped smooth over all the people he royally f*cked.

My beef is that we are classifying basic science that our adversaries are now discussing in more open forums and in peer-reviewed literature. It’s bullshit. All for what? So that Lockheed can make science breakthroughs proprietary and OWN it?

The closest I have seen anyone in the public domain get close to describing how the technology works is Lt. Col. Tom Bearden, and a few others. The tough part of all this is taking the theory and applying it to a practical experiment. Not many can bridge that divide, but a small, genius chunk of engineers (and some theoretical physicists) have.

You want to know who a REAL, high-level “gatekeeper” of this stuff is? Admiral John Micheal “Mike” McConnell. He currently works at Booze Allen, or at least that was the last I had heard of his whereabouts.

I realize now that being given limited time on this planet makes you think about what should REALLY matter. I want the next generation to have a chance.

PS, the Tic Tac is ours (humans). I worked on certain aspects of it personally.

We can define the following features as common for all developed theories:

- a) they treat physical vacuum as physical material environment;
- b) they acknowledge that this environment has a complicated structure;
- c) they acknowledge Einstein's tensor fields as an extremely simplified case in static approximation;
- d) they acknowledge wave gravitational processes, connected to "active masses" torsion.

IF experimentally confirmed, theoretical conclusions on quantized gravitational phenomena (their discrete character, made by G.V. Morozov, can be of utmost importance. According to the author, such discrete character explains experimental data dispersion on weight change during spinning from 5% to 10% of the weight when similar samples are used. This can cause a necessity to perform an experiment using ring structures and not massive objects which provide average diameter and mass characteristics.

In his review of "RINO" Center materials on "rotational gravitation", professor R.N. Kuzmin, Ph.D., physics and mathematics, states that Attachment 7, prepared by G.V. Morozov, "has some food for theoreticians' brains, and especially it applies to the part where the author says about "building bridges" between gravitational, electro-magnetic weak and strong interactions" /25/.

"Official" science representatives assessed G.I. Shipov's conclusion on correlation of translator motion and spinning motion in the environment as true and promising one. However, this very conclusion doesn't reveal any specific examples and calculations and thus it just "runs idle" /25/.

Thread III theory was based on the fact that "relativity shows that spinning masses can be sources and receivers of radiated power in the form of gravitational radiation flow."

Research in this area was planned to be performed in the second half of 1991, and performed in the Scientific and Consulting Center "RINO." The plan was to carry out four series of control tests:

1. Check objects mass transformation effect during spinning.
2. Reveal connection between spinning masses via gravitational waves and or environmental disturbance. Golutva experiments on spinning motion translation in space (vacuum) were planned to be repeated at this stage.
3. Build models to implement projects by G.I. Shipov and A.F. Chernyaev (based on Shipov's conclusion); it's possible to build new type of propulsive agents for spacecraft capable of moving from under the water, through the air, directly into space because these spacecraft don't use material environment but physical vacuum as their basis.
4. Check theoretical models and identify coefficients which are part of basic gravitational equations.

Note: Attachment 7 (not in BAASS possession) is said to contain results/discussion from the supposed experiments.

"Official" science representatives viewed "RINO" results to be favorable and determined the reviewed issues represent significant interest and research which should definitely be continued.

CLASSIFICATION: UNCLASSIFIED//FOUO

Mr. Lacatski,

The Bigelow facility has been assigned SCIF ID: DI-09-021. The facility packet (i.e. FFC, Concept Memo etc.) has been assigned to the DAC-2A2 West Region Team for review and to determine whether the facility will be granted preconstruction approval or final accreditation. They will coordinate with the facility security officer.

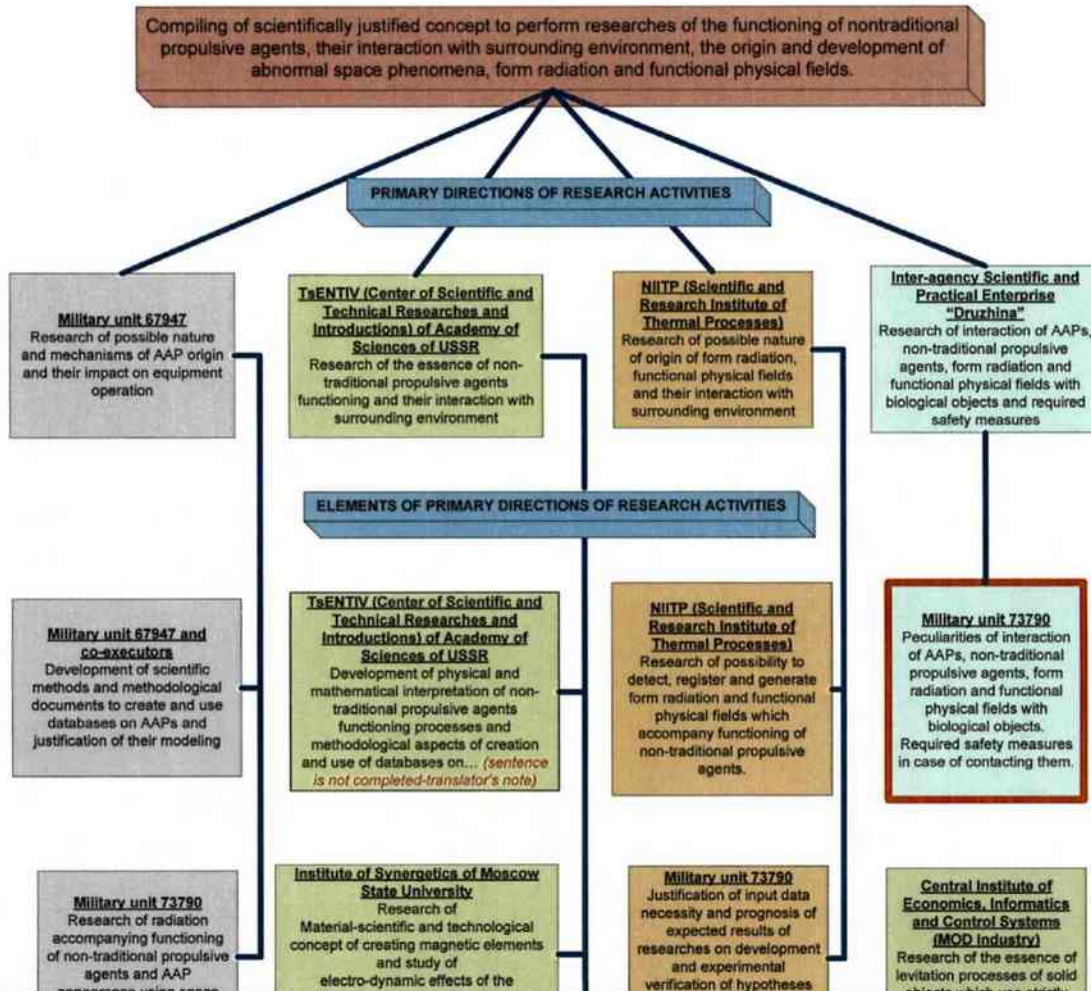

Mr. Miller is processing the DD Form 254. A copy of the approved 254 will be provided to DAC-2A2. The 254 is also one of the required documents for final accreditation.

Please note that the facility is not authorized to process or store SCI material until DAC-2A2 approves the physical and tempest accreditations.

If you have any questions please let me know.

v/r
Carlton G. Conley
