DOE Sec. Chu testifies he might have met Obama bundler George Kaiser

Tuesday, March 13, 2012, FOX NATION.COM

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee held a full committee hearing today on Energy Department loan guarantees.

Department of Energy Secretary Steven Chu testified about his association with George Kaiser, billionaire and top Obama "bundler" who's been accused of pushing the White House for the Solyndra loan, which squandered $535 million of stimulus money in a little over a year.

Senator Rand Paul asked Chu directly if he had met Mr. Kaiser to which Chu replied that he might have met him at "round table meeting" once.

Paul pressed further on the topic, asking if Kaiser got a "better deal" on the loan deal but Chu dismissed the notion stating that Solyndra was at the "head of the line" because it was "picked by the previous administration"

It is difficult to determine which has the greatest number of zeros attached, the massive number that represents our national debt, or the Obama administration.

What is equally amusing is that Obama asked to be judged by the people he surrounded himself with...

Chu's testimony sounds like a Jeff Foxworthy comedy routine "You might be a redneck"... If You've ever contacted a high ranking official in a company who subsequently donates a large sum of money to your boss's campaign and then receives an astronomical amount of stimulus money... You might be an influence peddling crook"....

This is the most crooked administration since Nixon but there's a big difference. Back then Nixon's folks were responsible for trying to cover-up their misdeeds ... this time the press is responsible for providing cover for Obama and his people.

It would appear that Chu took Obama's correspondence course: Lying and Deceit, the Obama Way! It is a mandatory course for all of Obama's cabinet and czars!

So where are all the trolls saying he's not a liar? That's right, the story doesn't have Sarah Palin's name associated with it. LOL
