BY JACQUELINE PALANK

Solyndra LLC, whose abrupt bankruptcy filing last summer put the Obama administration's solar-power efforts in the spotlight, kept the government well informed of its finances and business prospects, according to a report by the company's chief restructuring officer.

The report—whose author was hired by Solyndra's board—is based on a four-month investigation and was filed in bankruptcy court on Tuesday. It concludes that the Department of Energy, which had guaranteed a $535 million loan to Solyndra, was fully aware of the risks and kept up to date on the solar-power company's deteriorating finances.

Solyndra's failure led to a criminal probe by ...
