

AS THE MUSK TURNS!
RUSSIA OFFERS ASYLUM
TRUMP DUMPS HIS TESLA
EPSTEIN 'BOMB' FALLOUT

THE FALL OF ELON MUSK

The red Tesla that President Donald Trump bought off Elon Musk during a White House spectacle in March, as the automaker's stock tanked, is now set to be sold or given away amid an epic feud between the two billionaires, according to Fox News White House Correspondent Peter Doocy.

Speaking on Fox & Friends Thursday morning, Doocy said the car that Trump picked out during the Tesla event on the South Lawn remains in a White House driveway — but perhaps not for long. “We’re told that that Tesla, the red Tesla with Florida tags, is either going to be given away or sold off,” Doocy said.

The Tesla promotion was held as outrage grew over Musk's controversial cost-cutting measures at the Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE), which saw Teslas being firebombed and the company's stock price take a nosedive.

During the event, Trump lamented that even after buying the Tesla, he wouldn't be able to drive it.

Doocy also revealed that the falling out between Trump and Musk is anything but sudden, as tensions had been simmering for about a month.

More on the Trump/Musk Feud:

1. Hot Mics Cut as Trump Confronted on Musk's Bombshell Epstein Files Claim at First Event After Blowup
2. Peter Doocy Says Trump Will 'Sell or Give Away' Tesla He Bought During White House Event
3. 'I Shouldn't Admit All This—' Hannity Opens Up To Karoline Leavitt Amid Trump-Musk Feud
4. Here Are the Craziest Ways Trump Boosters Are Coping With the Elon Musk War
5. The Government We Deserve: Trump and Musk's Ugly Split is a Perfect Reflection of the Current State of America
6. 'The Poor Guy's Got a Problem': Trump Appears to Hint at Musk's Alleged Drug Use

He also shot down reports that Trump and Musk were to speak by phone on Friday.

"Aides are telling me that is not something they are tracking," Doocy said. "It's possible that some staffers might try to talk to Musk, but no Trump and Musk call at least not that we know about."

Pam Bondi Hit With Formal Demand to Answer Musk's Claim About Trump and Epstein

Story by Isabel van Brugen

House Democrats have urged Attorney General Pam Bondi to respond to a bombshell claim from Elon Musk that Donald Trump is named in the so-called "Epstein files."

Reps. Stephen Lynch and Robert Garcia, who serve on key congressional oversight panels, sent a letter to Bondi and FBI Director Kash Patel obtained by Axios, demanding that they "immediately clarify whether this allegation is true."

The lawmakers want Bondi and Patel to produce a detailed timeline of the Department of Justice's handling of the Epstein files and to explain why there have been no new disclosures since February, according to the letter.

Rep. Robert Garcia demanded in a letter to AG Pam Bondi and FBI Director Kash Patel that they "immediately clarify" whether Elon Musk's Trump-Epstein allegation is true. / Andrew Harnik / Getty Images

Trump “is in the Epstein files,” billionaire Tesla and SpaceX CEO Musk wrote in a post on X Thursday, alleging that “that is the real reason they have not been made public.” Musk signed the post off by writing: “Have a nice day, DJT!”

Musk added in a follow-up post: “Mark this post for the future. The truth will come out.”

He was referring to files related to Jeffrey Epstein, the disgraced late financier and convicted sex offender who died by suicide while in federal custody in New York City in August 2019 as he awaited trial on new sex trafficking charges.

Officials in the first Trump administration determined that Epstein’s death was a suicide, but conspiracy theories that he was killed to shield high-profile individuals including Trump, Britain’s Prince Andrew, and former President Bill Clinton have proliferated nonetheless.

The Trump administration in February declassified and released files related to Epstein, but they were highly redacted and did not offer major revelations. The FBI hasn’t indicated when more files will be released.

Lynch and Garcia want answers about who was involved in the review and redaction process.

The Daily Beast has contacted the Department of Justice for comment.

“We write with profound alarm at allegations that files relating to convicted sex offender Jeffrey Epstein have not been declassified and released to the American public because they personally implicate President Trump,” the lawmakers wrote in a three-page letter.

“Musk, one of the President’s closest and most influential advisors, alleges that the President may be described in additional files related to this investigation. This allegation implies that the President may be involved in determining which files should be released and whether files will be withheld from the public if he personally chooses to withhold them,” the House Democrats said.

Giving a June 20 deadline, the House Democrats asked Bondi and Patel to provide a timeline for the declassification and public release of all remaining files; to describe why the DOJ hasn’t released additional files since February; to describe Trump’s role in reviewing documents pertaining to the investigation and prosecutions of convicted sex offenders Epstein and his associate Ghislaine Maxwell, as well as his role in determining DOJ’s ability to declassify and make public these documents.

They also demanded Bondi and Patel provide a list of all personnel whose approval is required to facilitate the declassification and public release of the documents, and to explain why the previously released files “contained significant redactions.”

In a statement to Axios, White House spokesperson Harrison Fields dismissed the letter as “another baseless stunt that bears no weight in fact or reality.”

“These are the same left-wing lunatics who neglected their oversight duties regarding the Biden administration’s lawless actions and concocted hoax after hoax on President Trump during his first term. No one takes them or their petty letters seriously,” said Fields.

Musk pushed the explosive claim amid an epic public feud with the president, which centers on the Trump-backed “One Big Beautiful Bill Act.” Musk has criticized the spending package, describing it as fiscally reckless and a “disgusting abomination.”

It was just a week ago that Elon Musk received a “key to the White House” from his erstwhile pal. / Nathan Howard / Reuters

He’s said the bill would undermine his work with the Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE) by adding trillions to the U.S. budget deficit. But Trump claimed Thursday that Musk was really upset about the effect the bill will have on his electric vehicle company, Tesla.

In their rift Thursday, Musk also suggested Trump be impeached and replaced by Vice President JD Vance, and asked his 220 million followers in a poll on X whether he should create “a new political party in America that actually represents the 80% in the middle?”

Trump has said he’s “very disappointed” in Musk and suggested he has “Trump Derangement Syndrome.”

Reports that pair could be set to make amends as soon as Friday with a Trump team-scheduled call with Musk to broker peace were quickly rebuffed by the president, who said Musk had “lost his mind” and had no plans to talk to him.

White House press secretary Karoline Leavitt said in a statement: “This is an unfortunate episode from Elon, who is unhappy with the ‘One Big Beautiful Bill’ because it does not include the policies he wanted.”

The Dark MAGA Conspiracy Where Musk Destroys Trump and Democracy

Opinion by David Gardner

In 2020, Elon Musk told the Wall Street Journal that the “government is simply the largest corporation.”

For the man who has everything, what else would he want?

The attempt by the world’s richest man to both reduce and reboot the sprawling federal bureaucracy whiffled miserably. No boss ever gets popular by firing a workforce, especially when the sums don’t add up.

But Thursday's incendiary X attacks on Donald Trump may have revealed a more sinister method in Musk's madness. It may lead down dark corridors way beyond the shocking upheaval of the current administration.

Musk, after all, is not a person to give up without a fight.

Donald Trump is fighting back against Elon Musk's assault on his spending bill. / Allison Robbert/AFP via Getty Images

Elon has been compared to Brutus as he sticks a $420 billion knife into the president's back with his relentless posts. But Brutus killed Caesar to protect the Republic. Musk's goal may well be to destroy it.

The clue is in Musk's black MAGA caps. He wasn't thinking of a golden era. It was the dark before the dawn.

We are perhaps not far off from seeing the Dark MAGA conspiracy theory involving Musk come to life. It goes like this: A secret cabal of tech bros was plotting to usurp Trump and turn the United States into a giant company run by a CEO they would install in his place. The whole concept started to gain traction after JD Vance was chosen as Trump's running mate.

Vance wasn't Trump's choice. Donald wanted Fox News host Maria Bartiromo.

Musk wanted Vance, and so did PayPal founder Peter Thiel. Their multi-million-dollar campaign war chest was dependent on the choice that Trump got pushed into.

According to the "Dark MAGA" or "Dark Enlightenment" theory, Vance was groomed by Silicon Valley billionaires as Trump's successor. He was their man in government. He was their sleeper.

The theory has its roots in Musk and Thiel's involvement in PayPal, the company that launched their fortunes. Other PayPal executives went on to lead other tech firms as part of a so-called "PayPal Mafia."

Peter Thiel worked with Elon Musk at PayPal and the two entrepreneurs backed JD Vance for vice president. / NBCU Photo Bank/NBCUniversal via

The supposed guru of the Dark Enlightenment movement was Curtis Yarvin, 51, a Brown-educated, one-time pony-tailed computer coder. He preaches that the media and academia are a "Cathedral" that secretly controls the country. Harvard was the deep state ruler. The New York Times was the devil. You can see where this is going.

Under the alias of "Mencius Moldbug", Yarvin wrote a 120,000-word blog called 'An Open Letter to Open-Minded Progressives.' It lobbed a hand grenade at the heart of democracy as long ago as 2008.

At that time, the U.S. was enthralled by the idea of "Hope," instilled by the election of Barack Obama as president.

Democracy was at the very heart of Obama's philosophy.

Yarvin believed differently. He argued that America should be run by a "monarchy" presided over by a dictator CEO.

Federal employees would be fired in such quantities that the government would no longer be manageable. Elections would be deemed obsolete. Policies would engender fear and distract the population. The Dark MAGA or Dark Enlightenment theory says it is the remit of the tech billionaires to run the world because they are the only ones with the resources and the know-how to fix it. To Yarvin, who likes to philosophize in computer idioms, democracy was "outdated software" and government needed a "reboot."

For years, Yarvin's views were marginalized and ridiculed.

Then, in 2025, they began to become a reality.

Venture capitalist Marc Andreessen, an adviser to Trump, has cited Yarvin, as has Musk. Yarvin, often referred to in this geeky techie circle as the "Dark Elf" philosopher, was invited to the inauguration. He has appeared on shows with Tucker Carlson and Charlie Kirk. Steve Bannon is an admirer.

Entrepreneur Marc Andreessen has cited Curtis Yarvin. / Steve Jennings/Getty Images

His theories became Executive Orders. They found a home in the Trump administration.

But Trump was the messenger of chaos. Musk was the arbiter.

Some of Washington's biggest institutions have been briefed about Dark Enlightenment. They are taking it seriously. We may have expected the great bromance between the president and his prince to end, but few expected it to be so vicious.

In a matter of hours, Trump was facing a challenge to his authority that could damage him more than Joe Biden or Kamala Harris ever could.

Musk's virulent opposition—taking the gloves off with a reference to Jeffrey Epstein, for example—poses an existential threat to the presidency.

Trump thought long and hard about reacting to Musk's outspoken opposition to his "big, beautiful bill." But he couldn't help himself. He is the scorpion. He will sting because that's his nature.

Musk will win, because that's his.

Elon Musk is not backing down in his split with Donald Trump. / Kevin Dietsch/Getty Images

The swords are drawn now.

The Trump Show has taken a much darker turn. In 2020, Elon Musk told the Wall Street Journal that the "government is simply the largest corporation."

For the man who has everything, what else would he want?

The attempt by the world's richest man to both reduce and reboot the sprawling federal bureaucracy whiffled miserably. No boss ever gets popular by firing a workforce, especially when the sums don't add up.

But Thursday's incendiary X attacks on Donald Trump may have revealed a more sinister method in Musk's madness. It may lead down dark corridors way beyond the shocking upheaval of the current administration.

Musk, after all, is not a person to give up without a fight.

Donald Trump is fighting back against Elon Musk's assault on his spending bill. / Allison Robbert/AFP via Getty Images

Donald Trump is fighting back against Elon Musk's assault on his spending bill. / Allison Robbert/AFP via Getty Images

Elon has been compared to Brutus as he sticks a $420 billion knife into the president's back with his relentless posts. But Brutus killed Caesar to protect the Republic. Musk's goal may well be to destroy it.

The clue is in Musk's black MAGA caps. He wasn't thinking of a golden era. It was the dark before the dawn.

We are perhaps not far off from seeing the Dark MAGA conspiracy theory involving Musk come to life. It goes like this: A secret cabal of tech bros was plotting to usurp Trump and turn the United States into a giant company run by a CEO they would install in his place. The whole concept started to gain traction after JD Vance was chosen as Trump's running mate.

Vance wasn't Trump's choice. Donald wanted Fox News host Maria Bartiromo.

Musk wanted Vance, and so did PayPal founder Peter Thiel. Their multi-million-dollar campaign war chest was dependent on the choice that Trump got pushed into.

According to the "Dark MAGA" or "Dark Enlightenment" theory, Vance was groomed by Silicon Valley billionaires as Trump's successor. He was their man in government. He was their sleeper.

The theory has its roots in Musk and Thiel's involvement in PayPal, the company that launched their fortunes. Other PayPal executives went on to lead other tech firms as part of a so-called "PayPal Mafia."

Peter Thiel worked with Elon Musk at PayPal and the two entrepreneurs backed JD Vance for vice president. / NBCU Photo Bank/NBCUniversal via

Peter Thiel worked with Elon Musk at PayPal and the two entrepreneurs backed JD Vance for vice president. / NBCU Photo Bank/NBCUniversal via

The supposed guru of the Dark Enlightenment movement was Curtis Yarvin, 51, a Brown-educated, one-time pony-tailed computer coder. He preaches that the media and academia are a "Cathedral" that secretly controls the country. Harvard was the deep state ruler. The New York Times was the devil. You can see where this is going.

Under the alias of "Mencius Moldbug", Yarvin wrote a 120,000-word blog called 'An Open Letter to Open-Minded Progressives.' It lobbed a hand grenade at the heart of democracy as long ago as 2008.

At that time, the U.S. was enthralled by the idea of "Hope," instilled by the election of Barack Obama as president.

Democracy was at the very heart of Obama's philosophy.

Yarvin believed differently. He argued that America should be run by a “monarchy” presided over by a dictator CEO.

Federal employees would be fired in such quantities that the government would no longer be manageable. Elections would be deemed obsolete. Policies would engender fear and distract the population. The Dark MAGA or Dark Enlightenment theory says it is the remit of the tech billionaires to run the world because they are the only ones with the resources and the know-how to fix it. To Yarvin, who likes to philosophize in computer idioms, democracy was “outdated software” and government needed a “reboot.”

For years, Yarvin’s views were marginalized and ridiculed.

Then, in 2025, they began to become a reality.

Venture capitalist Marc Andreessen, an adviser to Trump, has cited Yarvin, as has Musk. Yarvin, often referred to in this geeky techie circle as the “Dark Elf” philosopher, was invited to the inauguration. He has appeared on shows with Tucker Carlson and Charlie Kirk. Steve Bannon is an admirer.

Entrepreneur Marc Andreessen has cited Curtis Yarvin. / Steve Jennings/Getty Images

Entrepreneur Marc Andreessen has cited Curtis Yarvin. / Steve Jennings/Getty Images

His theories became Executive Orders. They found a home in the Trump administration.

But Trump was the messenger of chaos. Musk was the arbiter.

Some of Washington’s biggest institutions have been briefed about Dark Enlightenment. They are taking it seriously. We may have expected the great bromance between the president and his prince to end, but few expected it to be so vicious.

In a matter of hours, Trump was facing a challenge to his authority that could damage him more than Joe Biden or Kamala Harris ever could.

Musk's virulent opposition—taking the gloves off with a reference to Jeffrey Epstein, for example—poses an existential threat to the presidency.

Trump thought long and hard about reacting to Musk's outspoken opposition to his “big, beautiful bill.” But he couldn't help himself. He is the scorpion. He will sting because that's his nature.

Musk will win, because that's his.

Elon Musk is not backing down in his split with Donald Trump. / Kevin Dietsch/Getty Images

Elon Musk is not backing down in his split with Donald Trump. / Kevin Dietsch/Getty Images

The swords are drawn now.

The Trump Show has taken a much darker turn.

The great irony is that Donald Trump could represent the last bastion of democracy in a country built on the very idea of freedom.

Because if you are going to put money on the winner in this fight, Musk has it all.

The great irony is that Donald Trump could represent the last bastion of democracy in a country built on the very idea of freedom.

Because if you are going to put money on the winner in this fight, Musk has it all.

The Dark Conspiracy Where Elon Destroys Don...

Washington holds its breath...

President Hints at Drug Use: 'Poor Guy's Got a Problem'...

BANNON: DEPORT HIM!

AND SEIZE HIS SPACEX...

MAGA faithful celebrate end of bromance...

Psychologist Explains Breakup...

White House races to fix big mistake: DOGE fired too many people...

• Trump Says Elon Has 'Lost His Mind,' Not Interested In Peacemaking Call...

•

• Shrugs Off Musk Feud After Shunning Call: 'Nothing Catches Me By Surprise'...

•

• Getting Rid Of The Tesla He Bought To Show Support For Musk...

•

• Musk Suggests Creating A New Political Party...

•

• Withdraws Threat To Decommission Dragon Spacecraft...

•

• Steve Bannon Calls For SpaceX To Be Nationalized, Elon Musk Deported...

•

• CNN Panelist Suggests Trump Might Have Musk Killed Or Imprisoned After Spat...

•

• Big, Beautiful Breakup — A Complete Timeline Of Trump And Musk's Feud...

•

• Understanding The Big Beautiful Bill And The Laws That Surround It...

Trump Says Musk 'Lost His Mind,'

Has No Interest In Talking With Billionaire

How much Elon Musk stands to lose in Trump spat as his staggering government contracts are revealed

TESLA STOCK

CONTRACT KILLER

Donald Trump is not interested in talking with his former ally Elon Musk, amid a bitter feud over the president's sweeping tax-cut bill, a White House official said on Friday, adding that no phone call between the two men is planned for the day. A separate White House official had said earlier that Trump and Musk were going to talk to each other on Friday. 'I'm not even thinking about Elon. He's got a problem, the poor guy's got a problem,' Trump said this morning.

Elon Musk's revenge war against Donald Trump has seen the Tesla billionaire savage his former boss with toxic insults on his platform X.

But it might be the president who gets the last laugh - as the fallout threatens to lose the SpaceX founder billions more dollars on top of the $27billion he lost from his net worth on Thursday.

Trump has threatened to cut off huge federal loans and subsidies to Musk's companies after they fell out over the 'Big Beautiful Bill'.

In the last twenty or so years, the tech guru's firms have received some $38billion in government contracts, according to The Washington Post.

'The easiest way to save money in our Budget, Billions and Billions of Dollars, is to terminate Elon's Governmental Subsidies and Contracts,' Trump wrote on Thursday. 'I was always surprised that Biden didn't do it!'

The threat came after the world's richest man, worth over $330billion, torched Trump's 'Big Beautiful Bill' as a 'disgusting abomination,' largely because it's projected to add trillions of dollars to the deficit.

Tesla and SpaceX - Musk's biggest companies - have received by far the most help from the government over the years.

SpaceX President and COO Gwynne Shotwell estimates that SpaceX has gotten $22billion in federal spending.

+7

View gallery

Elon Musk's feud with President Donald Trump could lose his companies, mainly Tesla and SpaceX, billions of dollars worth of canceled federal contracts

+7

View gallery

After Musk torched the 'Big Beautiful Bill,' Trump threatened to cut off all federal spending on Musk's companies

+7

View gallery

At least a quarter of SpaceX's revenue in 2024 came directly from federal contracts worth $3.8 billion (Pictured: NASA's Kennedy Space Center, where SpaceX previously started work on a Starship launch pad)

58.8k viewing now

The Trump adviser who triggered the president's split with Elon Musk

13.2k viewing now

And last year alone, at least a quarter of the rocket designer's revenue came directly from federal contracts valued at $3.8billion.

Tesla has already had $11.4billion in regulatory credits from environmentally-focused federal and state programs looking to boost the number of zero-emission vehicles.

At least $2.1billion of that total has been to help Tesla develop new cars and improve upon its battery technology, according to advocacy group Good Jobs First.

Trump hasn't yet said he wants to get rid of these regulatory credits, which is good for Musk because his companies get these credits for free and can sell them for virtually 100 percent profit.

Though these credits make up a relatively small percentage of Tesla's revenue, they represent a staggering 32 percent of the company's profits since 2014, according to E&E News.

What could be worrying to Musk is that there are 52 ongoing contracts with seven different government agencies that are set to pay his companies an additional $11.8 billion over the next few years, according an analysis from The Post.

If Musk as DOGE chief was able to cancel government contracts he felt were wasteful, there's no reason to believe Trump as president wouldn't be able to do the same to Tesla, SpaceX and others.

Starlink, a satellite internet service, is one of Musk's smaller companies and is far less reliant on government assistance.

+7

View gallery

Though Starlink may be able to weather a potential boycott from Trump, investors are worried about Tesla's fortunes given its large reliance on the federal government (Pictured: Trump and Musk at event the day before the inauguration)

+7

View gallery

Shares of Tesla plummeted nearly 12 percent on Thursday, when the worst of the jabs between Trump and Musk were happening (Pictured: In March, Trump walks the White House South Lawn with Musk to promote Teslas)

While Tesla and SpaceX have received billions, Starlink has only gotten about $6 million from various federal agencies in 2022 and 2023.

That includes a pledge from the Department of Defense back in 2022 to buy $1.9million worth of Starlink technology.

Though Starlink may be able to weather a potential boycott from Trump, investors are worried about Tesla's fortunes given its large reliance on the federal government.

Shares of Tesla plummeted nearly 12 percent on Thursday, when the worst of the jabs between Trump and Musk were happening.

It's stark reversal from just several months ago, when Trump was helping Musk sell Tesla cars on the South Lawn of the White House.

Before markets closed on Thursday, Musk dramatically claimed that Trump is in the Epstein files, which he said explained why they haven't been released in full by the Justice Department.

Trump didn't directly respond to the Epstein accusation, instead posting what amounted to a shrug on Truth Social.

He also shifted the focus back to the 'big, beautiful bill,' which he continues to vehemently support despite Musk's qualms.

'I don't mind Elon turning against me, but he should have done so months ago,' Trump wrote. 'This is one of the Greatest Bills ever presented to Congress.'

Musk's attacks on the bill further complicates its passage in the Senate, where the 53 GOP senators already weren't in lockstep on certain provisions.

The influential Trump adviser who triggered the president's spectacular split with Elon Musk

President Donald Trump's surprise decision to change Elon Musk's preferred pick to lead NASA may have done more to fuel the historic blowup between the two men than previously known.

- 465 comments
- 2 videos

Gleeful leftist late night hosts delight in Trump Musk fallout after waiting for the pair to turn on each other

Across the board, the MAGA-hating panel of hosts rejoiced in the spat. From Colbert to Jimmy Fallon, they all seized on the social media meltdowns to roll out Trump-hating jokes.

- 15 comments
- 2 videos
- share

Trump tariff guru Peter Navarro twists the knife into Elon Musk after break-up

Trump trade advisor Peter Navarro said Elon Musk left the administration as a special government employee had reached its 'expiration date.' The president said earlier 'I asked him to leave.'

- 3 comments
- 1 video
- share

LIVE Trump tries to offload his Tesla as he shares extraordinary claim about what's really driving Elon Musk's public meltdown

Donald Trump moved to sell his Tesla in a parting insult to Elon Musk as he suggested the world's richest man has 'lost his mind.'

Powerful White House insider provides illuminating insight into President Trump and Elon Musk amid raging feud

One of the most impressive career transformations in modern American history, without a doubt, belongs to President Donald J. Trump. Only time will tell if Elon has a future in the political arena. Though, he has demonstrated one notable and necessary political strength: the ability to backtrack.

- 22 comments
- 1 video
- share

Trump plans to sell his brand new red Tesla to 'stick it' to Musk

President Donald Trump may sell or give away the red Tesla he purchased from Elon Musk, a

Elon Musk's transgender daughter posts sly reaction after Trump clash

The billionaire's estranged transgender daughter, Vivian Wilson, 21, addressed her dad's fiery falling out with the president.

Smug AOC mocks Trump and Elon Musk as she delights in bromance breakup

Squad member Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez gave a hilarious take on President Donald Trump's falling out with Elon Musk on Thursday.

Elon Musk's prized possession faces shutdown that could reshape America

The messy feud between Elon Musk and Donald Trump is already having repercussions on a national scale and now the billionaire's magnum opus is poised to become the next collateral.

Elon Musk jokes about whether he used 'horse tranquilizer' drug while spreading more Trump-Epstein rumors

Elon Musk fanned the flames of the wild claims he made about President Donald Trump being in the Jeffrey Epstein files by sharing a meme Thursday night.

CIA whistleblower reveals how spy agency controls almost every president

CIA whistleblower John Kiriakou (pictured) claims the spy agency uses basic deception tactics against the commander-in-chief in order to 'control' him and achieve 'deep state' agendas.