

Elon Musk fights with National Transportation Safety Board as his bad spell is about to get WORSE

- Corrupt DNC Crony Mobster Musk Still Thinks He Is "Untouchable"...So did Al Capone!

Kevin McCoy, USA TODAY

The U.S. National Transportation Safety Board said it's "unhappy" that Tesla made public information about a deadly crash involving a Model X vehicle. Fred Katayama reports. Video provided by ReutersNewslook

(Photo: PETER PARKS, AFP/Getty Images)

CONNECT | TWEET | LINKEDIN | COMMENT | EMAIL | MORE

Tech billionaire Elon Musk's bad spell is continuing into a second month, amid a spat with a federal safety agency, an auto recall and production issues, an adverse court ruling, and a debt rating downgrade.

Shares of the Musk-led electric car company Tesla (TSLA) closed down 5.1% at $252.48 in Monday trading, as the influential executive responded to National Transportation Safety Board displeasure with the firm's disclosure of preliminary details about a fatal crash.

Christopher O'Neil, an NTSB spokesman over the weekend said the safety agency was unhappy with Tesla's announcement that its Autopilot partial self-driving system was engaged when a Model X electric crossover SUV crashed on March 23 in Mountain View, Cal., killing the driver.

"In each of our investigations involving a Tesla vehicle, Tesla has been extremely cooperative on assisting with the vehicle data," O'Neil said, according to an Associated Press report.