The Entire Internet Hates Google

This small sample of millions of the same points of view from REDDIT, VOAT, FACEBOOK, TWITTER and the rest of the citizen journalist sites in the world prove that Google is pure evil!:

GOOGLE BUSTED RIGGING THE NEWS ACROSS THE PLANET!

I just went there to check what garbage they were posting today, and there are some very, very deceiving articles there. Blame Eric Schmidt.

EDIT:

I have had little to no trouble not using google search for the past two years. I use duckduckgo (ddg), startpage, disconnect, and there's a type of search engine that anyone can host and therefore it's loosely connect network and can't be tracked fully or taken down. I'll have to get back to you with that if I can dig up that info again.

Also, when avoiding google it's importation to think like this: what you want your goal to be is to prevent google from getting any scrap of data about you and your search that you can. So even though startpage uses google, if you use that you've anonymized your search so google has less info about you. I take it a step further and use ddg for anything that I think it would be hard for a search engine to miss so this way google doesn't even get the anonymous search. It's very important to know that this is becoming especially effective since google and other tech companies are relying on AI to do free work for them (and not pay humans for doing work, while they pocket all the money gained from efficiencies and assert their political agenda), and that AI feeds 100% off of data.

If you stop the data flow, you stop google.

EDIT 2: And remember Mark Zuckerberg agreed to enforce chinese style censorship on facebook.

Also, some additional info here. The tech companies are now squirming that their efforts have failed and they think Trump will be elected. Remember that polls have come out now, outside of the democratic party (DNC) and their associated press, that show Trump solidly ahead. I like how they sat in the background until this, they were obviously trying to let people believe that Hillary was just going to win "because that's what everyone wanted. How could she get elected otherwise? Crazy person."

Oh god yes. A couple years ago I used to go to Google news frequently, but over the last year or so it went to complete shit. The 100% shilling for Hillary is so blatantly obvious.

Eric Schmidt man. That guy has openly proclaimed his support of Obama, then Hillary and there's a clip of him online after controversy hit claiming that all of google "hasn't taken a position in the US presidential election." This guy, as far as I know, used to not lie this openly and deceivingly, now he's doing it on a regular basis, and it's my belief that he is purposefully trying to deceive people to pursue a personal and definitely a globalist agenda.

He went from "do no evil" to "do all the evil" in a pretty short time frame. I wonder who threatened him.

I hate Google, and I tried for months to boycott them.

It's just so hard. Why is their search engine so much better at finding what I want with vague search terms. (Except for porn, Bing is king of porn).

I actually tend to like Bing better. It's duckduckgo that sucks.

I use Breitbart and Drudge.

I understand going to sources that follow your beliefs, but only using those really puts you in an echochamber and never allows you to challenge your viewpoint.

The echochamber is ok for the foreseeable future because there is change that needs to be made, and support needs to be given for the proposed changes ASAP. The key is to take action to enforce these things. Without real life interaction, you have nothing.

I wish news would report news instead of being a full time editorial. Then I would just know what going on instead of how a news anchor thinks I should feel about an event.

I don't want to read someone's opinion about the news. The very concept of having a "viewpoint" challenged is the antithesis of the objectivity that news reporting is meant to be. Someone Else's personal desire to rain shit on my mind from the dark clouds of their psycho-political crisis has nothing to do with news. I want to know what's going on in the world today - preferably without being lied to. Thank you.

Got a good alternative news aggregates?

I still use google news for quick overviews in the morning and after work (as well as for searching historical news items), but solely for the lack of viable competition.

[–] CARDTaTURT [S] 0 points (+0|-0) ago

I'd be interested in an alternative as well. What I do to avoid using google is I go and look at a few places on the internet that I think will be turning up information at the source and then I make generic searches about that on a non-google search engine.

Careful using google news even for an overview. I do the same thing from time to time, and I do it after I get my fill on news to see how the news aggregated there might be socially engineered to sway even people like voaters - and it is very, very tricky sometimes. Those people make their living off of "journalism," and we all know what journalism has turned into nowadays.

Why Google Must Be Eradicated From The Earth

By Wendy Ives

Google is the Enron of the internet, The Stasi of the web, the Jim Jones of information, the Nazi's of politics, the cancer of networking, the Scientology of corporate culture and the social hemorrhoid of the planet Earth.

As of today, there are over a million articles on the web itemizing the horrific evils and crimes against the public that Google has engaged in.

From data abuse to bribery, from White House take-overs to epic tax evasion, from monopolization and anti-trust to hooker murders and sex penthouses, from the abuse of school children to reading the public's emails, from spying on the public for secret police services to misogynistic corporate culture, from not hiring blacks to creating immigration conflicts, from age-ism to elitism, to hundreds of other social crimes: Google no longer has a right to exist!

Eric Schmidt, Larry Page, Eric Schmidt, Jared Cohen and the rest of the billionaire madmen at Google have proven that they are incapable of existence without a glut of sex scandals, bribes, illegal manipulations of public policy and other societal ills.

Everyone should contact every company that they see advertising on Google and tell them to STOP advertising on Google. When you see those top sets of search results on any Google search; you know, the ones with special highlights at the top and side of the page of Google search results? Write those companies and tell them you are boycotting them until they stop appearing on Google.

Write your elected representatives and demand that Google be investigated.

Tell your friends that they are "dumb" if they continue to use Google. Warn them of the dangers and evils of the Google empire.

Join every anti-google group you can find and follow their suggestions for shutting down Google.

Use your social media to further expand the distribution of stories exposing the raw criminality of Google. Get the word out. Don't let the information flow lapse. Get your friends on social media to pass the word, too.

Google spends nearly a billion dollars a year bribing politicians to keep law enforcement away from them. That is a crime. It is a crime against YOU, personally. You pay part of your payroll to politicians in order to get protection, yet Google pays them ten times more to keep those same politicians from doing their jobs.

You owe it to your family, society and your own safety to do what you can to stop Google from spreading it's festering debauched tech billionaire tunnel-vision across the land.
