

The Fastest Growing And Most Popular Internet Services:

Minds.com

riot.im

matrix.org

Zeronet

Steemit

d.tube

bitchute

retroshare

ipfs

beaker browser

onionshare

tails

manjaro

bitmitigate.com

voxility.net

<https://voat.co/v/technology/2815967>

<https://www.seedboxes.cc/>

fastmail.com

FACEBOOK CENSORSHIP OF ALTERNATIVE MEDIA JUST THE BEGINNING

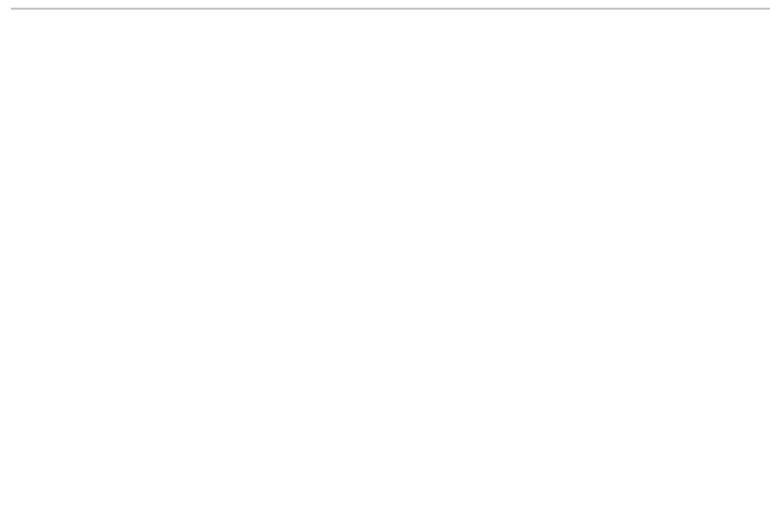

“We are just starting to push back.”

Max Blumenthal and Jeb Sprague | GrayZoneProject.com

 Facebook Censorship Of Alternative Media "Just The Beginning," Warns Top Neocon Insider

IMAGE CREDITS: JAAP ARRIENS/NURPHOTO VIA GETTY IMAGES.

security conference, hardline neocon Jamie Fly appeared to claim for the recent coordinated purge of alternative media...

or, Facebook and Twitter deleted the accounts of hundreds of users, and alternative media outlets maintained by Americans any alternative media outlets maintained by American ng those wiped out in the coordinated purge were popular crutinized police brutality and U.S. interventionism, like The ht Project, Anti-Media, and Cop Block, along with the pages of ike Rachel Blevins.

aimed that these pages had “broken our rules against spam and l inauthentic behavior.” However, sites like The Free Thought e verified by Facebook and widely recognized as legitimate sources l opinion. John Vibes, an independent reporter who contributed to ht, accused Facebook of “favoring mainstream sources and :ernative voices.”

ts published here for the first time, a neoconservative n insider has apparently claimed a degree of credit for the ge — and promised more takedowns in the near future.

and other foreign states take advantage of our open political system,” remarked Jamie Fly, and director of the Asia program at the influential think tank the German Marshall Fund, by the U.S. government and NATO.

nt stories that get repeated and spread through different sites. So we are just h back. Just this last week Facebook began starting to take down sites. So this is ing.”

to complain that “all you need is an email” to set up a Facebook account, lamenting the sites’ accessibility to members of the blic. He predicted a long struggle on a global scale to fix the rd pointed out that to do so would require constant vigilance.

ese stunning comments to Jeb Sprague, who is a visiting faculty sociology at the University of California-Santa Barbara and co-is article. The two spoke during a lunch break at a conference on ity organized by the Stiftung Wissenschaft und Politik in Berlin, t below, Fly is the third person from the left who appears seated at ity to discuss Asian security in Berlin, with an excellent group of experts from the Berlinpic.twitter.com/Ogdc9d5BVK

an (@GarimaMo) October 15, 2018

s by Fly — “we are just starting to push back” — seemed to confirm ars of the alternative online media community. If he was to be e latest purge was motivated by politics, not spam prevention, and by powerful interests hostile to dissident views, particularly where ate violence is concerned.

RISE OF A NEOCON CADRE

an influential foreign policy hardliner who has spent the last year r the censorship of “fringe views” on social media. Over the years, located for a military assault on Iran, a regime change war on iking military spending to unprecedented levels. He is the nt of a neoconservative cadre.

y second-generation neocons, Fly entered government by nto mid-level positions in George W. Bush’s National Security Department of Defense.

was appointed director of the Foreign Policy Initiative \(FPI\) a was appointed director of the Foreign Policy Initiative \(FPI\), a version of Bill Kristol's Project for a New American Century, or rather outfit was an umbrella group of neoconservative activists that he case for an invasion of Iraq as part of a wider project of regime countries that resisted Washington's sphere of influence.

was advancing the next phase in PNAC's blueprint g for military strikes on Iran. "More diplomacy is not an adequate he argued. A year later, Fly urged the US to "expand its list of and the [Iranian] nuclear program to key command and control the Republican Guard and the intelligence ministry, and facilities with other key government officials."

and his way into the senate office of Marco Rubio, a active pet project, assuming a role as his top foreign policy advisor. her interventionist initiatives, Rubio has taken the lead in harsh economic sanctions targeting Venezuela, even advocating for ry assault on the country. When Rubio's 2016 presidential ounded amid a mass revolt of the Republican Party's middle ase against the party establishment, Fly was forced to cast about ortunities.

hem in the paranoid atmosphere of Russiagate that formed Donald Trump's shock election victory.

IT SPARKS THE ALTERNATIVE MEDIA PANIC

tic insider's account of the Hillary Clinton presidential Shattered, revealed that "in the days after the election, Hillary take responsibility for her own loss." Her top advisers were the following day, according to the book, "to engineer the case ction wasn't entirely on the up-and-up ... Already, Russian hacking terpiece of the argument.”

Three weeks after Clinton’s defeat, the Washington Post’s Craig published a dubiously sourced report headlined, “Russian effort helped spread ‘fake news.’” The article hyped up a effort by a shadowy, anonymously run organization called to blacklist some 200 American media outlets as Russian paganda.”

ive media outfits on the PropOrNot blacklist included some of tly purged by Facebook and Twitter, such as The Free Thought Anti-Media. Among the criteria PropOrNot identified as signs of paganda were “Support for policies like Brexit, and the breakup of Eurozone” and “Opposition to Ukrainian resistance to Russia and tance to Assad.” PropOrNot called for “formal investigations by the ment” into the outlets it had blacklisted.

o Craig Timberg, the Washington Post correspondent who promoted the media suppression initiative, Propornot was by “a nonpartisan collection of researchers with foreign policy, / technology backgrounds.” Timberg quoted a figure associated orge Washington University Center for Cyber and Homeland drew Weisburd, and cited a report he wrote with his colleague, on Russian meddling.

iece on PropOrNot was promoted widely by former top Clinton d celebrated by ex-Obama White House aide Dan Pfeiffer as it story in the world.” But after a wave of stinging criticism, the pages of the New Yorker, the article was amended with an e stating, “The [Washington] Post... does not itself vouch for the ropOrNot’s findings regarding any individual media outlet.”

had been seemingly exposed as a McCarthyite sham, but the kind it — exposing online American media outlets as vehicles for “disruptive measures” — continued to flourish.

OF THE RUSSIAN BOT TRACKER — WITH U.S. GOVERNMENT

a new, and seemingly related initiative appeared out of the blue with backing from a bipartisan coalition of Democratic and neocon Never Trumpers in Washington. Called for Securing Democracy (ASD), the outfit aimed to expose how Russian Twitter bots were infecting American political discourse with disinformation. It featured a daily “Hamilton 68” online dashboard that tracked the supposed bot activity with easily digestible charts. Surprisingly, the site avoided naming any of the digital Kremlin influence operations it claimed to be tracking.

It was immediately endorsed by John Podesta, the founder of Democratic Party think tank the Center for American Progress, and former chief of Hillary Clinton’s 2016 presidential campaign. Julia Ioffe, the chief Russiagate correspondent, promoted the bot tracker as “a very OrNot, the ASD was sponsored by one of the most respected think tanks in Washington, the German Marshall Fund, which had been founded in 1954 to nurture the special relationship between the US and what was then the Soviet Union.

German Marshall Fund is substantially funded by Western governments, and largely reflects their foreign-policy interests. Its top two sponsors, at more than $1 million per year each, are the U.S. State Department’s soft power arm the U.S. Agency for International Development

US soft-power arm the U.S. Agency for International Development the German Foreign Office (known in German as the Auswärtiges
.S. State Department also provides more than half a million dollars do the German Ministry of Economic Cooperation and nt and the foreign affairs ministries of Sweden and Norway. It eives at least a quarter of a million dollars per year from NATO.

rnment and NATO are top donors to the German Marshall Fund

German Marshall Fund did not name the donors that specifically ts Alliance for Securing Democracy initiative, it hosts a who's who n national-security hardliners on the ASD's advisory council, re endeavor with the patina of credibility. They range from neocon icon Bill Kristol to former Clinton foreign policy advisor Jake

icon Bill Kristol to former Clinton foreign policy advisor Jake
I ex-CIA director Michael Morell.

German Marshall Fund fellow and Asia specialist, emerged as most prolific promoters of the new Russian bot tracker in the ether with Laura Rosenberger, a former foreign policy aide to on's 2016 campaign, Fly appeared in a series of interviews and co-verbal op-eds emphasizing the need for a massive social media arch 2018 interview on C-Span, Fly complained that “Russian ere “trying to promote certain messages, amplify certain content, views, pit Americans against each other, and we need to deal with g problem and find ways through the government, through tech through broader society to tackle this issue.”

through broader society to tackle this issue.

the sites on PropOrNot's blacklist, and none of the alternative were erased in the recent Facebook purge that Fly and his take apparent credit for, were Russian accounts. Perhaps the notion they could have been accused of was publishing views that cohorts saw as "fringe."

er, the ASD has been forced to admit that the mass of Twitter initially identified as "Russian bots" were not necessarily bots — it have been Russian either.

CONVINCED ON THIS BOT THING" er 2017 investigation by Max Blumenthal, a co-author of this article, the ASD's Hamilton 68 dashboard was the creation of "a collection of counterterror retreads, online harassers and paranoiacs operating out from some of the most prominent figures operating within the national security apparatus."

es included the same George Washington University Center for Homeland Security fellows — Andrew Weisburd and Clint Watts — cited as experts in the Washington Post's article promoting who has been described as one of the brains behind the Hamilton dashboard, once maintained a one-man, anti-Palestinian web monitoring site specialized in doxxing left-wing activists, Muslims and anyone he deemed "anti-American." More recently, he has taken to Twitter to spout off homophobic and homophobic fantasies about Glenn Greenwald, the editor of the Intercept — a publication the ASD flagged without explanation as a vehicle for influence operations.

his part, has testified before Congress on several occasions he government to “quell information rebellions” with censorious including “nutritional labels” for online media. He has received publicity from corporate media and been rewarded with a contributor on the basis of his supposed expertise in ferreting out Russian ion.

was urged Congress to “quell information rebellions” under questioning during a public event by Grayzone contributor os, Watts admitted that substantial parts of his testimony and refused to provide evidence to support some of his most claims about malicious Russian bot activity.

In the interview with Buzzfeed, Watts appeared to completely disown the Hamilton 68 bot tracker as a legitimate tool. “I’m not convinced on this bot activity,” he confessed. He even called the narrative that he helped create “overdone,” and admitted that the accounts Hamilton 68 tracked were not necessarily directed by Russian intelligence actors.

think they're all commanded in Russia — at all. We think some of them are legitimately people that are just really into promoting Russia," Watts conceded.

Running admissions did little to slow the momentum of the coming

ATLANTIC COUNCIL

In conversation with Sprague, the German Marshall Fund's Fly stated that working with the Atlantic Council in the campaign to purge disinformation media from social media platforms like Facebook.

The Council is another Washington-based think tank that serves as a go-to point for neoconservatives and liberal interventionists pushing disinformation around the globe. It is funded by NATO and repressive, US-allied governments including Saudi Arabia, Bahrain and Turkey, as well as by oligarchs like Victor Pynchuk.

Facebook announced a partnership with the Atlantic Council's Disinformation Research Lab (DFRLab) to "identify, expose, and explain disinformation during elections around the world."

The Council's DFRLab is notorious for its zealous conflation of online dissent with illicit Russian activity, embracing the same StopOrNot and the ASD.

John, a DFRLab fellow who has built his reputation on flushing out Kremlin influence networks, embarked on an embarrassing witch hunt that saw him misidentify several living, breathing individuals as s or Kremlin "influence accounts." Nimmo's victims Ariam Susli, a well-known Syrian-Australian social media the famed Ukrainian concert pianist Valentina Lisitsa, and a British named Ian Shilling.

interview with Sky News, Shilling delivered a memorable tirade against 5.

online contacts whatsoever; I do not know any Russians, I have no contact with the government or anything to do with them," he exclaimed.

any British citizen who happens to do research on the current neocon wars which in Syria at this very moment."

most Facebook and Twitter purges, ordinary citizens like Shilling are targeted in the open, and without apology. The mass deletions of social media accounts illustrate how national security hardliners from the Hershey Fund and Atlantic Council (and whoever was behind them) have instrumentalized the manufactured panic around Russian espionage to generate public support for a wider campaign of media confrontation in Berlin with Sprague, Fly noted with apparent approval that the mantra of foreign interference expands to a new adversarial campaign. A lampdown on voices of dissent in online media is almost certain to be followed, "This is just the beginning."
