

TESLA CARS EASILY SET ON FIRE

LAS VEGAS (KSNV) — Multiple cars were reportedly set on fire at a Tesla service center in Las Vegas Tuesday morning, according to authorities.

A vehicle fire was first reported around 2:45 a.m. at the Tesla Collision Center in the 6000 block of Badura Avenue, near Jones Boulevard and the 215 Beltway, Las Vegas Metropolitan Police said in an email.

"LVMPD Communications received information that an individual had set several vehicles on fire in the parking lot and caused damage to the property," police wrote.

No further details have been disclosed.

Investigators with the police department and Clark County Fire Department were on the scene.

The FBI has personnel on the scene to offer their assistance to LVMPD as well, said Sandy Breault, a spokesperson for the Las Vegas field office.

"We do not have any further comment at this time," Breault said in an email.

Multiple Tesla vehicles, dealerships and charging stations have been vandalized in recent weeks around the nation, including in Oregon and Washington state.

Protests have been staged at Tesla dealerships as well in response to the company's CEO Elon Musk and his work with President Donald Trump.

Trump staged a photo shoot at the White House with Musk last week to show his support for Tesla.

News 3 has reached out to Tesla for comment.