Tesla suddenly announces new funding raise but lies about what it is for:

Only a week after Elon Musk told the market on a live global phone-cast that Tesla did not need to raise more money, they suddenly need to raise massive amounts of money.

Using the pretext that it is "just so we can pay back the loan" ('Public give us your money again so we can give you your money back that we got by lies') Can you say: IT DOESN'T WASH?

In the usual Elon Musk "It's not a tornado, it is lovely spinning air" spin on bad news he hypes the hype.

Just like when he said he would "guarantee resale value" when all of the cheap KIA's and Fusions came out looking just like a Tesla and when he said "here's a new battery warranty" when the investigations showed that his batteries burn your family alive when they get wet.

Tesla may realize the jig is up and be in fire-drill mode...
