

Why Harris Lost According To Voters

There was nothing about her that was genuine.

A woman who bases her campaign around fat, black, strippers, is never going to win anything but shame.

Even the stock picture of her was absurd, completely smoothed like a bad Instagram filter, as if she had it taken 25 years ago .

She wanted to look 48. I nearly airbrushed her into oblivion. Ended up checking 'albino' in the form.

She genuinely sucked. She was Willie Brown's whore and hung out with the people from the P Diddy Freak Off party crowd.

I disagree, I think she blew.

Here's my take:

1. Harris was a bad pick, even before you consider her as a person. When the economy is the number 1 issue for voters, no serious person who's not insanely partisan, could possibly believe the sitting Vice President is the candidate for change in this election. They needed someone who could distance themselves from the Biden Admin, not somebody who defended it at every turn. Democrats skipped their primary and completely missed this utterly massive weakness as a result.
2. Harris was a bad candidate on top of that, both on policy and on engagement. She had no real platform, no real solutions, aside from "look at me! I'm not Trump!! don't vote for Big Racist he's Big Bad and that's Not Good!!" When asked about grocery prices, she blamed some vague "corporate greed" and promised free money to first-time homebuyers, but had no tangible answer to how the fuck that has anything to do with groceries. Her nomination was official in late July and her first unscripted, major press event was... a CNN interview on August 30th. A full month after she was nominated. That was supposed to be a soft-ball interview, but she crumbled trying to explain her massive pivots on healthcare and decriminalizing the border between the 2020 primary and now. My guess is that she inherited Biden's staffers and she agreed to run their "hide the nominee" strategy... her engagement was so bad that her campaign came out after the debate and said they'd do more media.
3. Further on engagement- while Kamala racked up Hollywood celebrity endorsements, Trump was doing multi-hour podcasts with influencers who have real reach with younger votes who lean Conservative but don't vote reliably. Like. My wife is also Conservative, and she loves Taylor Swift... no shit she's a Democrat, everyone knows that, everyone knew that, it changes absolutely nothing for her to endorse Harris. 80% of her audience is already Democrat and the other 20% just wanna hear music and not politics, they couldn't care less who she endorses or doesn't endorse. I like Kanye West, doesn't mean I voted for him over Trump.

On your first point, her ad that ran non stop last week was about her fixing the economy and high prices. She ended the commercial by saying “now let’s get to work!”

Like why haven’t you been at work the last 4 years fixing it?

The fact that Trump and Vance went on those podcasts while Kamala sought out every celebrity endorsement imaginable put a face on what I feel so many voters have realized: the Democrats don’t care about the masses - they only care about pandering to the elites. The fact that there was such a huge red shift nationwide says the average American sees through it now.

It was such a brilliant move by them to seek out those podcasts because it’s impossible to hide in a multi-hour conversation - and they both came out far more engaging and normal than Kamala ever did. If she went on Rogan for more than an hour she would have been horribly exposed and everyone knew it.

I think what the Kamala campaign failed to realize is that a lot of these podcasts have effectively replaced AM talk radio in terms of what the working class is listening to. Rush Limbaugh is dead, Joe Rogan is the king now. This election has proven that nobody in the working class actually cares about the mainstream media, so Kamala can do all the softball interviews on the mainstream news channels, but nobody from the working class is going to see those interviews, or care about them.

Cause like, if you're a truck driver, would you rather listen to a bunch of talking heads blame you for all the worlds problems while you can't afford groceries, or would you rather listen to Theo Von talk about cocaine with Donald Trump, and then again with JD Vance? That seems like an easy choice.

Hell, it's not even just the podcasts, that SNL skit that Kamala did backfired in a big way. I promise you that all 7 people who still watch SNL are already Kamala voters, but to avoid getting sued into oblivion and potentially losing their broadcast license, NBC had to give 90 seconds to Trump. When did he choose to use these 90 seconds? During Sunday Night Football. The Democrats are so ridiculously out of touch with the common man that it's almost not funny.

She is an elitist California drone who sucked dick to get to the bottom.

I think maybe other than Taylor Swift, nobody gives a shit about celebrity endorsements. The difference with Taylor is she has a cult-like following that would probably jump off a cliff if she told them to.

If anything, a celebrity endorsement of a Republican matters a lot more because it's so much more rare. Not to mention the dissonance between "Trump is going to lower taxes for the rich!" and "Look at all these millionaire celebrities endorsing Harris!" You'd think if Harris was truly an "eat the rich" candidate that celebrities would be endorsing Trump instead of Harris. And I think a lot of people are through that bullshit.

Imo Taylor's cult is already Democrat-dominated to begin with, so even though she's one of the biggest celebrities on the planet, her endorsement likely still doesn't make a difference. She has Conservative fans of her music, but the cult portion is a bunch of cancel-culture-obsessed liberals. So getting Taylor to endorse a Democrat isn't exactly reaching across the aisle or reaching people who aren't already Terminally Liberal. There's already something wrong with your brain when you take a $20,000 loan for tickets to a concert, yes, people did that, I wanted to surprise my wife with tickets and said fuck that as soon as I saw the prices.

Most people who don't live in a bubble and are dealing with real life issues, just don't give a lick about these celebrity elites. Breaking Bad remains one of my favorite shows, and I enjoy Cranston as an actor, but the dude has brain-rot on politics and I don't like him as a person at all. But that's OK, I'm not a liberal, I don't really care who my car-mechanic is gonna vote for or what the CEO of my socks manufacturer said or didn't say about Trump.

You can't run an incumbent on a "change" platform. You HAVE to run a "stay the course" platform, and convince voters why you're actually, despite it all, doing a good job that you should be allowed to continue doing. I've seen people in other subreddits try to make the case for the Biden Economy being good (although they have to rely on statistics that are primarily influenced by the fact he occupied the office at the end of COVID), so it's possible to at least attempt to make that argument.

They wanted both Biden voters who wanted to stay the course, and independents who wanted change, so they tried to exist in a superposition between the two, be everything all at once, and tailor their message specifically for whatever crowd they happened to be speaking to at the time.

It's not that she articulated her position badly; her position made no sense whatsoever, and even if you didn't dig deep enough to figure out why, it still just felt flimsy. If you DID dig deep, you realized quickly exactly what was wrong; so to prevent that, 90% of their campaign was "ORANGE MAN BAAAAD".

It really should not have been anywhere as close as it was. There should have been a Reagan-style sweep, instead of just a knockout. It's really just the "Anyone but Trump" crowd that gave her a fighting chance at all.

Oh, the Biden economy is good. It's GREAT.

For the people who have tons of capital to deploy in investments and have since 2020. When the market started crashing from Covid, I went all in on the way down, sold lower, then started playing extremely high risk options and made a killing. Then I deployed it all when it started going back up during Biden's term and I tripled my money. The market's at all time highs, tech going bonkers, and I'm having a great time!

But the people living paycheck to paycheck? They weren't buying Nvidia shares a year ago. They weren't buying stocks or crypto during Biden's term. They were buying groceries, and gasoline, and paying rent. That's what people on the left who tout Biden's economy don't fucking get.

Harris has never admitted to nor ever reported to have an issue with alcohol, though she was presented with a bottle of whiskey with her face on it in May. BREAKING: OMG: Google Growth Strategist Exposes Google's Search Engine Manipulation For Kamala Harris's Campaign (VIDEO)

by Cristina Laila

O'Keefe Media Group on Monday released undercover video of a Google Growth Strategist exposing Google's search engine manipulation for Kamala Harris's campaign.

Dakota Leazer revealed that Google has been actively coordinating with the Kamala Harris campaign, manipulating its search engine advertisements to favor her in the 2024 election.

As previously reported, the Harris Campaign edited news headlines with Google search ads to make it appear major news outlets such as Reuters, CBS News, CNN, NPR and AP are on her side.

While these major news outlets are shilling for Harris, her campaign edited the news headlines without the outlets' consent or knowledge.

DOJ: Google Harmed News Publishers With Ad Monopoly

The ads say “sponsored” but the outlets did not publish the text. The favorable headlines were written by the Harris campaign.

“Google says a ‘glitch’ occurred which allowed the Harris campaign to run paid ads with fake headlines to deceive voters.” the outlet reported.

The Trump campaign didn’t run these types of Google ads. Only Kamala Harris did.

Per O’Keefe Media Group:

“Google was essentially promoting through its ads rhetoric that was very pro-Kamala,” admits Dakota Leazer, a Growth Strategist at Google, during an undercover date with an OMG American Swiper journalist. Leazer reveals that Google has been actively coordinating with the Kamala Harris campaign, manipulating its search engine advertisements to favor her in the 2024 election. He explains, “It seemed to link out to legitimate news publication sites. So, it seemed like it was an ad from PBS, but it was really an ad for the Kamala campaign,” making users believe they were reading unbiased reports from reputable sources.

Leazer also confesses that Google’s primary objective is to generate ad revenue through fear-based content, explaining, “I think whatever demographic is most fearful is going to be most profitable.” According to Leazer, the left currently represents the most fearful demographic, which is why Google has been pushing pro-Kamala narratives for profit, explaining “I think right now the left is more fearful than the right is.”

He further states, “It’s all about the share of the stock price,” revealing that Google’s liberal bias is not just political, but tied to financial gain. He adds, “I think Google has a belief that one side will allow them to make more money,” revealing Google’s profit motives through driving political manipulation.

Leazer’s admission mirrors past media motives, including CNN Technical Director Charlie Chester’s claim that “fear sells,” reinforcing the role of big tech and media in shaping public perception through fear and bias.

Questions Americans Deserve To Have Kamala Harris Answer

By: Jordan Boyd

Now more than ever, voters deserve to hear Harris face tough questions about her historically terrible track record and radical views.

Vice President Kamala Harris is working overtime to distance herself from the Biden administration and the destruction it wreaked on the republic.

As the first presidential debate between Harris and Donald Trump rapidly approaches, voters deserve now more than ever to hear Harris finally face tough questions about her historically terrible track record and radical views.

Here are 26 questions “World News Tonight” anchor David Muir and “ABC News Live Prime” anchor Linsey Davis should make Harris answer from the debate stage on Tuesday night.

1. If Joe Biden is not mentally fit to run for president, how is he mentally fit to remain president?

As President Joe Biden’s right-hand woman, Harris had a front-row seat to his mental and physical deterioration. Yet, she never said a word to indicate it. Instead, she routinely issued statements claiming Biden was fit enough to remain president.

It was only months later that she participated in the soft coup that replaced Biden as the 2024 Democrat presidential nominee but kept him as the face of the current administration.

2. Speaking of Biden’s mental fitness, who is the president right now?

Because Biden spent much of the last month on vacation with no public working schedule, many Americans are wondering who is running the White House.

Moderators should ask Harris when she last spoke to the president and what that conversation was about. Considering the corporate media’s willingness to cover up Biden’s incompetence until it was inconvenient for them and Democrats, they likely won’t.

3. How often do you talk to Barack Obama and do you take his policy advice?

Former President Barack Obama is suspected of leading the Democrat operation to replace Biden on the 2024 presidential ticket. If Harris is leaning into the powerful Democrat player as a policy adviser, Americans deserve to know.

4. Why won’t you talk to a press that won’t even ask you tough questions?

Harris’ campaign and corporate media made a big show of her shopping around for her first big sitdown since becoming the 2024 Democrat presidential nominee. The VP’s reluctance to sit down with one of the corporate media's very Democrat-friendly reporters, host a news conference unless it is tailored to her wishes, or participate in a debate that doesn't meet all of her demands deserves an explanation.

5. Where do you stand on packing the Supreme Court?

The issues page on Harris' campaign website claims she supports "common-sense Supreme Court reforms." A deeper dive, however, shows her plans to amplify a manufactured ethics scandal and enact term limits for justices are all part of a radical scheme designed to help Democrats pack the high bench.

6. How do you reconcile your administration's undemocratic record with your supposed defense of democracy?

Democrats, including Harris, have spent the last several years claiming they are the last defenders of democracy and "freedom." The Biden-Harris administration, however, became the biggest danger to those principles by raiding its top political opponent's home, indicting him, charging him, pushing the narratives behind attempts to kick him off of the ballot, and denying him the necessary Secret Service protection he needed to prevent an attempted assassination.

Shortly after that, Democrat activists yanked Biden from the ballot against primary voters' wishes and installed a woman who failed to earn a single delegate vote the first time she ran for president in 2020.

Among Harris' many campaign priorities is ensuring "someone as dangerous as Donald Trump should never again be allowed to serve as commander-in-chief."

7. How do you reconcile your wildly unpopular track record with your goal of becoming president?

Harris is so bad at governing that she received the worst vice presidential rating in the history of modern polling. Combined with her abysmal job approval ratings, which often rank worse than Biden's, that rating does not suggest that she's competent enough for a presidential promotion.

8. Why did your administration deny Donald Trump the security he needed and requested, given the threats against him? Have you called him to apologize? Have you spoken to him at all since he was nearly assassinated?

Evidence suggests that the Biden-Harris administration kneecapped former President Donald Trump's security team ahead of an assassination attempt at his Butler, Pennsylvania, rally.

Harris claimed to denounce the shooting but has yet to publicly apologize for using her position in power to spew rhetoric that fuels calls for violence against Trump and his supporters.

9. Why do you deserve another four years in the White House?

When Biden and Harris took the White House at the beginning of 2021, gas prices were reasonable, interest rates and inflation were low, groceries were affordable, Arab countries were making peace with Israel, and Putin was on a leash in Russia. Less than four years later, gas and grocery costs are through the roof, interest rates are making home ownership impossible for tens of millions of Americans, Israel is under attack, and Russia is at war with Ukraine.

Harris claims she will “fix” the nation’s price and foreign policy woes. Yet, she’s accomplished nothing toward that end the last three and half years in power. Now she’s trying to distance herself from her current administration’s disastrous track record.

10. How do you explain your selection of Tim Walz as running mate in view of all his false claims?

Harris’ VP pick Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz has a long track record of deliberately misleading voters on everything from his military record and rank to how his children were conceived.

Harris should explain not only whether she was aware of his lies before he became her running mate but also why she appears to have accepted his record of fabrication and embellishment.

11. What is one effective thing you’ve done in office that is good for all Americans?

A majority of Americans believe that, under Biden-Harris, the country is headed in the wrong direction.

12. How do you reconcile your desire for open borders with corporate media’s unsubstantiated assertions that you support a border wall between the U.S. and Mexico?

The Democrat propagandists at Axios wrongfully asserted in a headline last month that “Harris flip-flops on building the border wall.” The writers claimed the VP has become more “hawkish” about the border invasion and “pledges to spend hundreds of millions of dollars on the wall along the southern border.” In reality, nothing about Harris’ public desire for amnesty and open borders has changed.

13. What is an acceptable amount of illegal immigration into the U.S. each year? Zero? A million? 10 million?

During Harris’ tenure as Biden’s border czar, an estimated 10 to 12 million border crossers have poured into the country. This unprecedented number of foreign criminals has overwhelmed the nation’s cities and brought violent consequences to innocent Americans.

Yet, Harris pledged at the Democratic National Convention to sign a disastrous border bill that would allow nearly another 2 million illegal aliens into the country in one year. The many, many voters who are increasingly concerned with the ongoing border invasion deserve to know how many illegal border crossers Harris plans to allow into the country if she is elected president.

14. What, if anything, did you do as border czar to curb the chaos plaguing the U.S.-Mexico border?

Under Harris' watch, the Biden administration ushered in the deadliest border invasion in the world, which has led to an influx of illegal border crossers, violent crime, fatal drugs, and infrastructure problems. Instead of pressing Harris on her role in the crisis, corporate media love to pretend that the VP was never in charge.

15. Why should foreign criminals be allowed to vote in U.S. elections?

Several top Democrats, including Rep. Jamie Raskin, have publicly demanded illegal border crossers be allowed to vote in U.S. elections. Harris should explain where she falls on the latest issue that threatens to disenfranchise Americans.

16. Why do you believe children who survive botched abortions deserve to die?

Harris voted against the Born-Alive Abortion Survivors Protection Act and has repeatedly lamented similar life-saving laws in Republican states.

17. What protections, if any, do you support for the lives of unborn children, especially when they're old enough to survive outside the womb and/or can feel pain?

Considering she refuses to name any limits that she supports, Harris' extreme desire to codify abortion through all nine months of pregnancy against Americans' wishes is only expected to grow if she retakes office.

18. Why should 'women's rights' include men using women's bathrooms, showering in women's locker rooms, and competing with women?

Harris claims to be a champion of women's rights, but it was under her watch that the Biden administration rewrote Title IX to allow boys to infiltrate girls' protected spaces in education settings. The Biden administration's transgender activism gives men permission to expose their genitals to women and wallop them in their own sports.

19. How do you reconcile your pro-Palestine statements with your alleged support for Israel’s right to defend itself against terrorists?

Harris may have given “a cursory nod to Israel’s right to defend itself.” but she’s spent most of her time speaking about the Middle Eastern conflict blaming the Jewish nation instead of Hamas terrorists for the “human suffering in Gaza” and “food insecurity.”

Additionally, Harris believes the pro-terrorist activists taking over college campuses, occupying highways, and defacing military cemeteries are merely “showing exactly what the human emotion should be.”

20. Why have you refused to meet with the families of the 13 American soldiers who were killed during your administration’s Afghanistan withdrawal?

Harris claims she was the “last person in the room” when the Biden administration decided to commence its botched Afghanistan withdrawal but has yet to face or enforce accountability for the disaster. Trump’s VP pick, Sen. J.D. Vance, also recently noted that Harris “refuses to show up, refuses to even call the families whose children are dead because of her leadership.”

21. How will Americans have ‘joy’ under a Harris-Walz administration?

Harris’ campaign, the DNC, and their allies in the corporate media have made “joy” the center of their 2024 campaign strategy. Harris, however, has not explained if the half of the country the administration vilifies as “MAGA extremists” will benefit from that so-called joy.

22. How can voters trust you aren’t lying about what you’ll do with the most powerful office in the world?

Harris has a long history of lying and deception. Since she took over Biden’s campaign for president, Harris and her communications team have publicly repudiated her radical track record on the border, protecting violent criminals, putting low-cost energy companies out of business, and much more.

23. Where do you stand on banning fracking?

Despite her 2019 on-the-record call to ban fracking, Harris’ campaign recently claimed the Democrat nominee, if elected, “would not ban fracking.”

Less than one month later, Harris’ Communications Director Michael Tyler confirmed that the candidate had not changed her mind. Americans, however, have yet to hear a clear answer on Harris’ position from the woman herself.

24. How will Americans keep their health insurance amid your plans to strip it?

Harris claimed in 2019 that she would not only strip millions of Americans of their health coverage by eliminating all private insurance but also provide taxpayer-funded health care for illegal border crossers.

25. How will free speech fare under your ongoing calls for Big Tech censorship?

In 2019, Harris called on then-Twitter CEO Jack Dorsey to suspend Donald Trump's account because she deemed his tweets incendiary. More recently, under the Biden-Harris White House's direction, Big Tech companies censored Americans who expressed dissenting views on Covid and politics.

26. How many more journalists will you prosecute for doing their jobs?

As California attorney general, Harris prosecuted journalists David Daleiden and Sandra Merritt for exposing Planned Parenthood for trafficking the body parts of aborted babies. Part of her prosecution involved a raid on Daleiden's house, where investigators allegedly seized footage further implicating the abortion giant and handed it over to Harris' abortion campaign donors.

KAMALA HARRIS FUCKED HER WAY THROUGH CALIFORNIA CELEBRITY CIRCLES TO CLIMB SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SOCIETY LADDERS

Firebrand Kimberly Guilfoyle’s vitriolic rants toward Kamala Harris and how they date back to their DECADES-OLD rivalry in San Francisco where Guilfoyle says she personally knew Harris to be a ‘whore’

As the Trump team ratchets up its attacks on presidential opponent Kamala Harris, one member of the Republican candidate’s camp has been particularly vitriolic.

Kamala Harris’ ‘anti-Catholic’ comments resurface

Roman Catholics revived their grievances against Vice President Kamala Harris after Democrats rallied to her support to replace President Joe Biden as the 2024 presidential nominee.

Who are the shills and hired audience who show up at a Kamala Harris rally?

By Patricia McCarthy

One has to wonder, who are those people who have come out of the woodwork, ostensibly to support the vacuous, inarticulate Kamala Harris?

She was very unpopular when she tried to run for president in 2020.

She was still unpopular when she was Biden's DEI hire as vice president; she fulfilled his promise to select a black woman.

Biden did so without regard for her merit or competency. Everyone knows that.

So now, suddenly manufactured crowds appear at her rallies this past week and display what seems to be a hypnotized mob.

The obvious answer is they are so mind-numbed they will vote for anyone but Trump, but that is not believable.

His polls are as good as they were when Biden was still in the running. Those media polls that say she is beating him are fake.

Check Rasmussen.

One answer is that she has local musicians headline her show. Perhaps those people come to see the entertainment and stay to fill the seats.

It has been reported that in Alabama, homeless people were bussed to the venue.

To be sure, the crowds are nowhere as large as they are for Trump. We all know that the left will do anything to push their candidate, no matter how unqualified for the office. They pay people if necessary. They certainly pay for activists to protest and to riot when they feel the need. They are not above using fake crowd shots throughout the media.

But one thing is certain about those Harris/Walz crowds: They are tragically uninformed about practically everything except identity politics. They've been thoroughly indoctrinated to obey the dictates of the left without question. They know nothing of the Constitution or the corruption that is rampant throughout our bureaucracy. In psychological terms, it's called "mass formation." Watch clips of any of those who attend speak about why they are there and their actual knowledge about her is nil.

She has given the exact same speech at each rally which she reads from the teleprompter. Without the teleprompter, she cannot put a coherent sentence together.

Her website remains devoid of any and all policy initiatives.

Video clips of her past ruminations are either humorously absurd or truly frightening for they expose her far, far left radicalism. She is anti-energy, pro-criminal, anti-police, pro-open border, pro-amnesty for all illegals. She is utterly ignorant when it comes to foreign policy, but is pro-Hamas, anti-Israel.

Naturally, because the left is chronically dishonest, her “campaign” has her flipping on many of her previous, inconvenient statements including the fact that she originally self-identified as Indian-American. They now deny she was ever the “border czar” despite the voluminous examples in all forms of the media.

The attempted re-branding of this woman has been exhaustive but once she is forced to speak in public without a teleprompter, the truth will be as evident as Biden’s dementia was after that June debate.

She cannot possibly run the country. She is inept, shallow and linguistically challenged. Biden is and has always been, a man of questionable character. Kamala Harris is a woman wholly lacking character of any kind. To quote Brad Thor, the American president is “a projection to the rest of the world of how the United States sees itself.” This must never be Kamala Harris.

One issue Kamala has not flipped on is her extreme position on abortion. She and vice presidential pick Tim Walz both advocate for no restrictions at all on abortion up to the moment of birth.

They are both comfortable with infanticide and have no qualms demanding late term abortions remain legal.

Walz is a radical extremist on transgenderism and supports genital mutilation for children as young as ten years old. As governor of Minnesota, he has mandated tampon machines in all boys’ bathrooms throughout the state’s schools. He has made his state a sanctuary state for trans persons. He let his city burn during the George Floyd riots; for five days he refused to call in the National Guard. His wife said in an interview that she loved the smell of rubber burning as the riots destroyed Minneapolis.

This is a very weird family. He is also a barely-closeted antisemite and has made common cause with the “godfather of campus antisemitism,” Hatem Bazian.

So, what do we have here? We have a media that is slavishly and dutifully doing the left’s bidding in the re-branding of Kamala Harris, formerly one of the most disliked politicians in the country.

They get the talking points and repeat the required words over and over again.

Last week it was “weird.” This week it is “joy” and “joyful.”

What a crock. Who falls for this media crap? Only the people who show up at these staged rallies, whether they are recruited and /or paid. One has to feel both sorry for them and angry at them for being so easily led by a thoroughly propagandistic media. They’ve been very carefully taught, as Richard Rogers so thoughtfully wrote in South Pacific.

These oh-so-carefully-taught uncritical thinkers are willing captives of the left. Kamala Harris and her running mate are both far, far left radicals, actual communists in practice. Walz says socialism is “neighborliness.” No, it’s the brutal imposition of totalitarianism. That is what the people who show up for a Harris/Walz rally, who scream and clap for them as directed by big flashing signs and the claquers that get them going. If a majority of voters, legal and illegal, vote for these two, our once Constitutional republic, barely recognizable now, will be over.

Outrage at Kamala Harris as pedophile who brutally raped and murdered eight-year-old neighbor is set to go free thanks to the VP's woke juvenile justice law

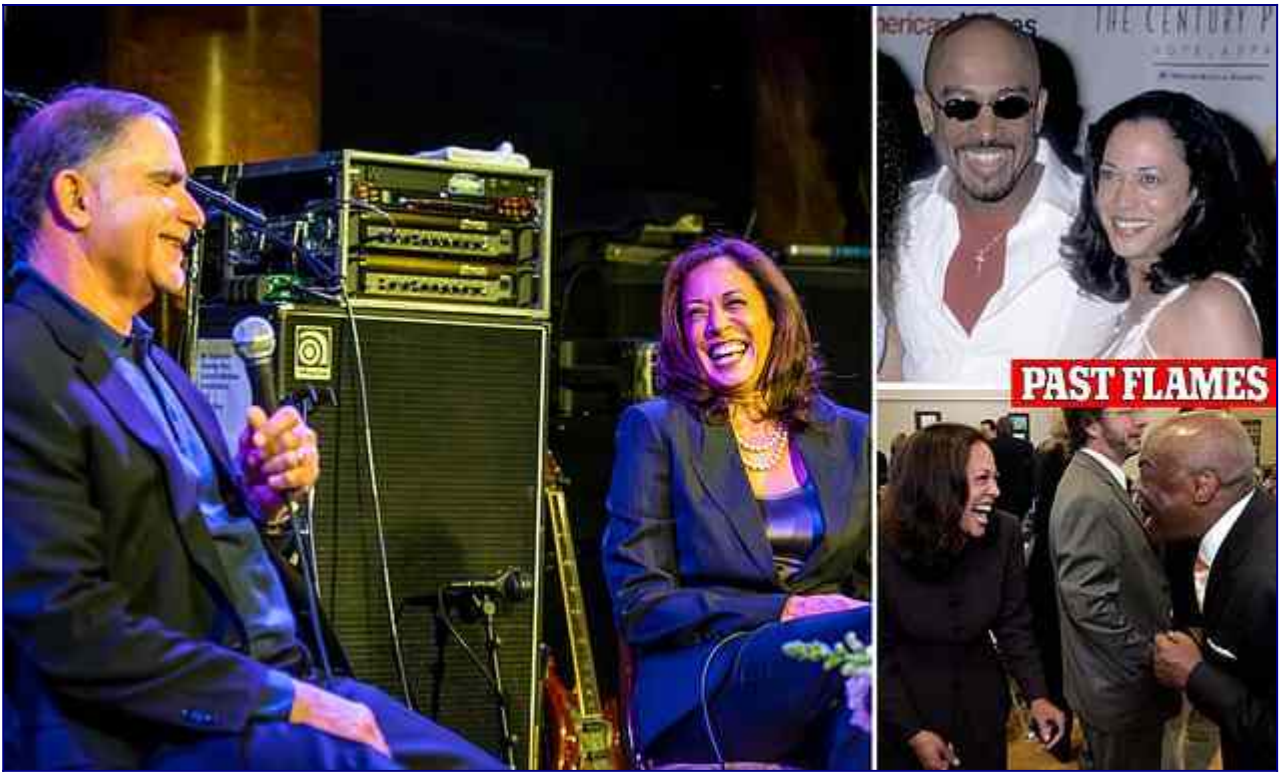

Adrian Jerry 'AJ' Gonzalez, 24, is up for parole because of a law authored by Kamala Harris that meant he could not be tried as an adult for murdering a girl when he was 15. Gonzalez pleaded guilty in 2021 to luring his victim, eight-year-old Madyson Middleton, into his mother's apartment with promises of ice cream before strangling, stabbing and raping her and throwing her body in a dumpster outside the Santa Cruz, California, apartment complex where both of them lived. Now, Gonzalez is set for release when he turns 25 – a rule that applies to all offenders convicted in juvenile court.

Prosecutor who challenged Kamala Harris for California attorney general reveals why the VP is 'dangerously wrong' to serve as president and how she is just a George Soros puppet

- READ MORE: Donald Trump says Kamala Harris 'destroyed California'

By Shawn Cohen

In a year when Democrats swept all statewide offices, Vice President Kamala Harris barely eked out victory in her campaign for California attorney general in 2010, and the moderate prosecutor who challenged her is now speaking out forcefully against her candidacy for president.

‘I think she’s wholly unqualified and that her election could be the worst thing that happens in my lifetime to our nation,’ Steven Cooley, 77, told DailyMail.com in an exclusive interview Wednesday.

‘She has extreme positions that are not good for this country,’ he said. ‘On immigration, on the economy, on law and order, crime and punishment, I can go on and on and on. I think she’s wrong about almost everything, and dangerously wrong.’

In his campaign, Cooley, then Los Angeles district attorney, ran a TV ad blasting his counterpart in San Francisco for her controversial handling of a case involving the 2004 shooting death of San Francisco police officer Isaac Espinoza.

The ad featured the officer’s mother, tearful and angry over Harris’ decision not to pursue the death penalty against gang member David Hill, who shot the cop with an AK-47 during a traffic stop.

Steven Cooley, 77, (pictured) who challenged Kamala Harris in 2010 for California attorney general, spoke out about what he thinks about her running for presidency in 2024

During their election for district attorney, Cooley revealed that Harris ‘was disliked by a lot of people that knew her.’ (pictured: Harris board Air Force Two on August 7)

Holding firm to a campaign pledge, the district attorney went on camera just three days after the killing to announce her decision, without seeking input from the victim’s family or given them advance notice.

The late Democratic Sen. Diane Feinstein drew a standing ovation from police when she criticized the decision at the funeral. Cooley said this may also help explain why every law enforcement agency in the state endorsed him when he ran for attorney general six years later.

Cooley said ‘law enforcement specifically didn’t like her’ during their election because she decided not to pursue the death penalty for the gang member who killed San Francisco Police Officer Isaac Espinoza (pictured)

‘Law enforcement specifically didn’t like her because she refused to pursue the death penalty in the machine gun murder of a police officer,’ Cooley said.

‘That just really turned off law enforcement, especially when it was widely known that she made the announcement even before Espinoza was buried.’

But it wasn’t just law enforcement giving support, he pointed out. Nearly every newspaper in the state endorsed him.

Cooley said he even got the vote of Jerry Brown, the Democratic candidate for governor that year.

‘Governor Brown, who won the governorship that year, told me he was voting for me,’ Cooley told DailyMail.com. ‘I replied “What, why?” and he replied, “I don’t like Kamala Harris.” I said “okay, thanks Jerry”.’

‘It’s kind of strange, but it’s also pretty said,’ he continued. ‘She was disliked by a lot of people that knew her.’

Cooley (pictured) said nearly every newspaper in the state endorsed him and that he even got the vote of Jerry Brown, the Democratic candidate for governor that year

Cooley was actually leading on election night, but conceded three weeks later after provisional and mail-in ballots gave Harris an edge. (pictured: Harris poses for a portrait in San Francisco on June 18, 2004)

Brown did not immediately return a call seeking comment.

In the deep blue state that year, most Democrats coasted to victory by 10 to 20 percentage points. Cooley was actually leading on election night, but conceded three weeks later after provisional and mail-in ballots gave Harris an edge.

Kamala Harris flipped from wanting more cops in black communities to backing ‘Defund the Police’

‘She won all 58 counties on provisional votes, even in conservative counties where I won handily,’ he said.

Cooley would later watch with disgust several years later as Attorney General Harris advocated Proposition 47, a ballot measure that enacted sweeping sentencing reforms, downgrading a list of felonies such as retail and property theft and narcotics possession to misdemeanors in an effort to ease overcrowding in the state’s prisons.

A November ballot initiative seeks to roll back the 2014 law, which critics on both side of the aisle say contributed to lawlessness.

'Kamala Harris was one of the major reasons it passed overwhelmingly,' Cooley said. 'She wrongly and intentionally mistitled Prop 47 the Safe Neighborhoods and Schools Act when it had nothing to do with schools or neighborhoods or being safe.'

'Kamala Harris is just so unqualified and weak on the issues that Trump doesn't need to engage in any argumentative ad hominem,' Cooley said. (pictured: Donal Trump at a campaign rally on July 31)

Cooley said Trump should focus on Harris' 'screwball' Vice President pick, Tim Walz. (pictured: Walz and Harris hand-in-hand at a campaign rally in Wisconsin on August 7)

'The public was misled into voting for something that ended up being detrimental to public safety, and now the public is trying to fix it.'

'The real authors (of Prop 47) were acolytes of George Soros,' he added of the progressive mega-donor who has advanced soft-on-crime reforms to the criminal justice system.

'They're the ones who wrote it. Kamala Harris is very close to Soros, as it turns out, and went right along with the program. And they deceived the public.'

Cooley's now offering unsolicited advice to Donald Trump in his campaign to return to the White House.

'Kamala Harris is just so unqualified and weak on the issues that Trump doesn't need to engage in any argumentative ad hominem,' Cooley said.

‘The personal attacks, nobody’s interested in that. And talking about the 2020 election, that’s old news. Just focus on her extraordinarily radical positions. And I’d say that right now, he should also focus on her choice of a vice president because he looks like a screwball too.’

Ex-staff expose Harris’s decades-long ‘toxic’ behavior, her ‘soul-destroying’ tirades and how she reduced people to TEARS – forcing them to quit at unprecedented levels

Kamala Harris was all smiles when she arrived at Joe Biden’s former Delaware campaign headquarters on Monday. She was there to lift the spirits of blindsided staffers, who after 15 months of toiling to re-elect the president, suddenly found themselves working for her. ‘It is my great honor to have Joe’s endorsement in this race,’ she boasted to cheers from a crowd who were now on her payroll. But as the assembled readily applauded, some must have harbored private concerns. For, behind the recent public self-branding of Harris as a kindly, jovial ‘Momala’, she has earned a nasty reputation as an alleged ‘soul-destroying’ workplace ‘bully’.

Kamla Harris is Unburdened by History

By Clarice Feldman Once again, the Democrats are offering up a woman candidate for president. And once again, it is an unlikeable candidate who owes her career to a far more skillful male politician. In Hillary’s case, it is her husband, Bill, a charismatic personality adept at the game. In Harris’s case, it was her lover Willie Brown who boosted her up the ladder and showered her with expensive gifts.

To say that Kamala Harris had an affair with a man more than twice her age, leveraged his fundraising prowess and connections to launch her political career, and once in office did his corrupt bidding isn’t sexist. It’s well-grounded in fact.

When in 2019 Harris ran for president, she was highly promoted by the media but drew little support and dropped out quickly. The Los Angeles Times said she never should have even entered the race.

And she couldn't connect with voters because of the core weakness in her candidacy: a lack of cohesive strategy and clear personal convictions. There was no evidence of the political soul needed to guide her toward public policy she felt strongly about.

"She didn't exactly have a sense of who she was and what she believed and what she wanted to get done," said a disappointed Harris insider who asked for anonymity. "And sooner or later that stuff gets exposed."

"Her strategic plan wasn't clear," the insider continued. The campaign was confident she would win the votes of African Americans in South Carolina and from fellow Californians.

When that scenario didn't seem to be working out, Harris belatedly began focusing on the first contest in Iowa. The senator was failing there, too, when she pulled the plug.

"She was all over the map on healthcare and criminal justice," the insider said of the former San Francisco district attorney. "Was she a prosecutor or a public defender? It wouldn't have made much difference which role she decided, but she started bouncing around to be all things to all people. Voters instinctively understand your heart's not in it."

Anyone who watched Harris as attorney general could have predicted this outcome. She refused to take positions on any state ballot proposition. Her excuse was that the attorney general writes the official ballot titles and summaries, and she didn't want to appear biased. But that was nonsense. She was trying to avoid making political enemies, especially among law enforcement.

Most unacceptable was her refusal to take a stand on two propositions to abolish the death penalty, a cause that she claimed to have long supported. The measures narrowly lost. She also remained neutral on an initiative to expedite the death penalty. It passed. And she didn't take a position on a measure to reduce prison sentences, which passed. Yet Harris leaped into the presidential race promising to be a "fighter for the people." Clearly that message was gleaned from focus groups. The rhetoric didn't match the record.

I see no difference in her substantial shortcomings five years later. The paper also mentioned she had many conflicts with and difficulty retaining staff, a personality flaw that carried over into the vice presidency.

she has earned a nasty reputation as an alleged 'soul-destroying' workplace 'bully'. Only four of the initial 71 staffers hired by Harris during her first year in office still remain in a job. The rest either quit or were fired, according to analysis by non-partisan watchdog Open The Books.

In the middle of this week's honeymoon period, after the surprise announcement that without a single vote from anyone, she'll be the party's nominee, this wonderful video surfaced. She's a rich target and there'll be more of these. Despite her poor showing in 2019, President Biden named her as his running mate in 2020 after promising he'd name a woman of color to that position. In her righteously mocked word salads, she repeatedly talks about unburdening ourselves from the past, and the major media is doing its best to airbrush out her history to keep it from burdening this run for office. My favorite was this nonsense from Scientific American: "As the daughter of a cancer researcher, Kamala Harris would bring a lifelong familiarity with science to the presidency, experts say.” Nevertheless, within days of the Biden switcheroo in which he coronated a person who had not received a single vote for the nomination, her history is being unveiled, and if your news sources are among the crowd spackling over it, here are some highlights of the past which she is burdened with, in no particular order:

- She supports defunding the police, arguing, “more safety with cops is wrong”
- She supports sanctuary cities.
- She played a leading role in the disastrous hasty withdrawal from Afghanistan in which the U.S. left to the Taliban billions of dollars worth of military equipment, left behind Americans and Afghans who had assisted us, and lost 13 fine military personnel, after which she did not even attend the dignified transfer of their remains at Dover AFB.
- She supports Marxism, arguing absurdly that we all have the same capacities and should end up in the same place, but since we didn’t start out in “the same place, some folks might need for equitable distribution.” (Her family’s private residence is valued at $5 million, if you aren’t in the same financial position, go lay claim to it.)
- She wants to transform the criminal justice system by ending cash bail, eliminating minimum sentences, allowing convicted murderers and rapists the right to vote in federal elections.
- She hasn’t a clue about or respect for the Constitution. When she participated in the presidential debates, she insisted over Biden’s dissent that she could institute gun control by executive order.
- She called the border wall a ”vanity project” and said that illegal aliens aren’t criminals, and the surge of them across our borders is “not an emergency.” She even argued that U.S. taxpayers should provide health insurance coverage for illegal border crossers. (Under this Administration, there have been an estimated 11 million of them. Do the math on the cost of that.)

At a Democratic presidential debate in Miami in June 2019, then-Sen. Harris was among a number of candidates who affirmed support for both decriminalizing illegal border crossings and also requiring U.S. taxpayers to provide health insurance coverage to illegal border crossers.

What root cause could be more powerful than an offer of free access to the U.S. medical system and a guarantee that legal consequences for unlawful entry would be minimal? Any prudent person without a good job south of the border would at least have to give serious consideration to this compelling offer. And it was coming from leading Democratic politicians, including a senator representing the most populous state in the U.S.

- She was widely touted as Biden’s border czar, and now she and the lickspittle press try to memory-hole that and claim her brief was far more limited. Axios, for one, actually removed its contemporaneous accounts of her appointment as border czar. GovTrack this week removed its early reports which named her as the most liberal person in the Senate.
- As vice president, she has the ceremonial function of representing the country as Senate president, greeting foreign guests. She passed on greeting Benjamin Netanyahu, claiming that a prior engagement at a sorority confab took precedence. Then she had a seconds-long photo op with him in the White House, after which the press was tossed out. In remarks to the press following the meeting, she said she had “serious concerns about the scale of human suffering in

- Gaza” and claimed over two million people in Gaza are facing food insecurity. (Independent analyses indicate enough food is entering Gaza to provide over 3000 calories per person per day. I suppose the next claim will be that Israel is trying to kill Gazans by overfeeding them.)
- “Kamala Harris admits she supports — Raising taxes on 91% of Americans across every income bracket. — A higher business tax rate than socialist Venezuela. — Raising the death tax.”
 - She opposed fracking (CNN presidential town hall) until a day or so ago when the Hill reported an unnamed campaign staffer (probably looking at internal polls from Pennsylvania) announced that she no longer supports fracking bans.
 - While Attorney General of California, she supported Proposition 47, which allows people to steal $950 worth of goods at a time without serious criminal penalty. (If you wonder why San Francisco’s downtown is empty of retail stores, you now know.)
 - She partnered with local officials of CAIR, which has been at the forefront of anti-Israel activities and is involved in fundraising for the Muslim Brotherhood to boost Hamas. She has consistently been anti-Israeli and indifferent to the attacks on Jewish college students.
 - She backed the Minnesota Freedom Fund, which bailed out criminals during the George Floyd riots, which caused extensive property damage and some deaths. When she denied that this week, people pointed out that her webpage seeking donations for the group was still online. Similarly, still online as of this week was her full-throated support of hoaxer Jussie Smollett, who was convicted for lying that he’d been assaulted by apparent Trump fans. She called his easily discredited claims “a modern-day lynching.”
 - Her office framed an innocent man for a murder for which he spent seven years in prison and was ultimately awarded over 13 million dollars from the city in compensation.
 - As attorney general of California, she kept people in prison after their sentences expired to provide cheap labor for the state and, when called on it, claimed to be shocked. Which was either false or an admission of her lack of managerial capacity.

Harris “kept people in prison beyond their sentences to use them as cheap labor for the state of California.”

This claim comes from a February Daily Beast article. It found lawyers in then AG Harris’[sic] office argued in 2014 that, despite court orders to reduce state prison crowding, some non-violent offenders needed to stay in the prison system to help combat wildfires. It does not detail how many prisoners, if any, ended up staying longer than required.

A spokesperson for Harris was quoted in the article saying, “Senator Harris was shocked and troubled by the use of this argument. She looked into it and directed the department’s attorneys not to make that argument again.”

There’s much more to come, and don’t be disheartened if, during this honeymoon part of her campaign, you see polls — usually meaningless nationwide ones of registered (as opposed to likely) voters. The Polymarket, where people bet on the outcomes, shows Trump far in the lead. (On Saturday, he led 59% to 39%) and the more visible she becomes, the worse she’ll poll. 92% of voters blame her for the Biden health coverup, and that means much of what she says will likely be discredited by them. Importantly, consumer sentiment just fell to an eight-month low, according to the University of Michigan survey, and that has not changed this week. No matter what the press says about economic data, people need to eat, find housing, and obtain transportation and health care, and as those prices have risen substantially, inflation is their biggest concern. There's no reason for them to believe that Harris has the ability or inclination to turn that around, and every reason, including recent history, to believe that Trump does. Image: Michael Ramirez

The presumptive Democratic nominee for president has ramped up her campaign in recent days, but mysteriously appears to downplay her formative years spent in Canada. There is no mention of her Canadian education in Harris's official biography on the White House website and in her 2019 memoir. Former classmates described her as having 'something special' at school, and said she was a popular student who 'blended in with everybody'.

Kamala is basking in the post-Joe glow – and Trump is panicking... but now MAUREEN CALLAHAN reveals the SIX fatal secrets about Harris's dirty past, her lies and hypocrisy that she'll wish you didn't know

By Maureen Callahan

Just because Joe Biden isn't capable of being president doesn't mean Kamala Harris is.

Yet we are now suffering through another unthinking coronation by the liberal media, their emotional incontinence soiling any iota of critical thought.

The great exhale after pushing out Biden – a president shunted into power by a Democrat elite that knew, all too well, how compromised he was, cognitively and otherwise – has given way not to reassessment but to re-enactment.

Rather than learn from their past, Dems and their establishment enablers are basking in a post-Joe glow while making the same mistake again: unifying behind a candidate who is patently unsuited to the job.

To elect Kamala Harris would be disastrous for many reasons, least of all this: It would mean that America, after realizing that a shadow government may have been in control for the last four years, is perfectly comfortable with electing another figurehead. A puppet.

Just because Joe Biden isn't capable of being president doesn't mean Kamala Harris is.

Some surveys already have her overtaking Donald Trump in swing states, while her approval rating steadily rises.

Kamala Harris's 90-year-old former lover fears she'll 'deport my a'

A healthy political party would be in revolt. But not the Dems, who can assuredly point to Harris's surging poll numbers.

Some surveys already have her overtaking Donald Trump in swing states, while her approval rating steadily rises.

Hollywood loves her. The megadonors are back to the tune of $200 million and counting. The party has coalesced around Kamala while Team Trump finds itself, just weeks after the attempted assassination, on the back foot.

Kamala's ascendancy is a 'sucker punch', according to Trump's running mate J.D. Vance, who was recorded speaking freely at a fundraiser in Minnesota on July 21.

'The bad news,' Vance said, 'is that Kamala Harris does not have the same baggage as Joe Biden... [she] is a lot younger [and] obviously not struggling in the same ways.'

All true. And Trump is already on the defensive, out front making race-baiting remarks about the pronunciation of Harris's first name, blasting her as 'crazy' and seemingly running scared from agreeing to debate her.

Meanwhile, Vance is struggling to dig himself out of the 'childless cat ladies' comment — one that, in a post-Roe era, lands terribly with female swing voters.

So, yes, Trump and Vance are in new terrain. But this Harris bump will end.

Why? Simply put, Kamala Harris is not the best candidate.

She is not the brightest. She is a political hack, a mediocrity who — like her current boss — found herself the beneficiary of luck and timing rather than grit and intellect.

If anything binds Biden and Harris, it's this unfortunate trait: Both seem to know, deep down, that they're frauds. That their ambition long ago outstripped their competence.

It's why Biden is given to cringeworthy displays of what he sees as machismo: The 'make my day, pal' threat to Trump pre-debate, or the oft-told tale of taking down 'Cornpop' at the community pool.

Real tough guys don't tell you they're tough, just as genuinely smart people don't tell you they're smart.

Kamala never seems quite comfortable in her own skin, and that's a fatal flaw in a presidential candidate.

Even her ex-lover Willie Brown, the now 90-year-old former Mayor of San Francisco who helped ease her way into politics, doesn't think Harris has what it takes.

Even her ex-lover Willie Brown, the now 90-year-old former Mayor of San Francisco who helped ease her way into politics, doesn't think Harris has what it takes.

Harris, as he recently told Politico, suffers from 'the Hillary syndrome... people don't like her.'

And when Harris has to speak for herself and do so off-the-cuff, she can't.

Here is just one example of her tautological word salad, after a mass shooting in Chicago in 2022:

'We've got to take this stuff seriously', she said to local press, 'as seriously as you are because you have been forced to take this seriously.'

There's a reason that the HBO satire 'Veep' — in which Julia Louis-Dreyfus played a vainglorious, incurious, power-mad politician who lucked into the Oval Office — is enjoying a resurgence.

'The crazier politics gets,' showrunner David Mandel said recently, 'the more 'Veep' holds up.'

Except 'Veep' never predicted Trump. And it seems at least one party elder had to be dragged over to Team Harris.

Yes, none other than Barack Obama, who called for an open nominating process at the Democratic National Convention in a written statement just hours after Biden announced he would step aside.

'I have extraordinary confidence that the leaders of our party will be able to create a process from which an outstanding nominee emerges,' Obama wrote.

Kamala Harris went unmentioned.

One would think that Obama, of all people, would quickly get behind the candidacy of the first female president, herself black. But no.

‘Obama is very upset,’ a source told the New York Post last week, ‘because he knows she can’t win’.

As the liberal media luxuriates in ‘Kamalot’ and ‘Kamalove’, let’s look at why Obama — despite latterly joining wife Michelle to publicly, awkwardly endorse Harris — might well be distressed.

And why top Dem strategist James Carville says he is sure Harris’s high approval ratings will fall once this honeymoon period ends.

‘She’s going to get slaughtered,’ Carville said last week.

And why Squad member Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, days before Biden stepped aside, took to social media to reveal that the party itself had doubts about Harris.

‘If you think there is a consensus among the people who want Joe Biden to leave... that they would support Vice President Harris, you would be mistaken,’ she said.

Let’s count the reasons why.

No.1: Harris owns the border

Despite attempts by the liberal media to claw back Harris’s appointment as Biden’s ‘border czar’, it is indisputably true that she was deputized as such.

‘Harris, appointed by Biden as border czar, said she would be looking at the ‘root causes’ that drive migration’ – that’s a report from Axios dated April 14, 2021.

By the end of this administration, an estimated 10 million migrants will have crossed into the United States illegally.

Among those are potentially hundreds of known terrorists. And then there’s the unknown number of ‘gotaways’ who have evaded border control.

Texas Governor Greg Abbott told Fox News on Monday that Harris has contacted him ‘zero times’ throughout her tenure.

Here’s Harris during her infamous June 2021 interview with NBC’s Lester Holt, who asked why she still hadn’t been to the border:

Harris: ‘We’ve been to the border.’

Holt: ‘You haven’t been to the border.’

Harris: ‘I haven’t been to Europe.’ [Awkward cackling] ‘I don’t understand the point that you’re making.’

No.2: She has repeatedly vouched for Biden’s physical and cognitive health

Harris has done this for years, insisting as recently as February that ‘we have a very bold and vibrant president in Joe Biden... Our president is in good shape, in good health, and is ready to lead in our second term’.

Harris has done this for years, insisting as recently as February that ‘we have a very bold and vibrant president in Joe Biden... Our president is in good shape, in good health, and is ready to lead in our second term’.

There are only two explanations for this: Either Harris was kept so far out of the president’s loop, privy to nothing of importance, that she had no idea he was in such terrible shape.

Or, more likely to my mind, she lied to the American people out of self-interest.

No.3: She’s an alleged bully

Since taking office as VP, Harris has had a staff turnover rate of almost 92 percent, according to a top government watchdog.

Such churn-and-burn has apparently been a Harris hallmark throughout her two decades in public service.

She is reportedly well-known for cursing out her staff, for chasing her most talented hires out the door, and refusing to read her briefing books, then exploding at her staff for being unprepared.

‘It’s clear that you’re not working with somebody who is willing to do the prep and the work,’ one ex-staffer told the Washington Post in 2021. ‘With Kamala, you have to put up with a constant amount of soul-destroying criticism and also her own lack of confidence. So you’re constantly sort of propping up a bully and it’s not really clear why.’

Again, Harris shares these failings — the alleged lashings-out at loyal staff, the tantrums and the blame-shifting — with President Biden. It all speaks to someone intellectually, interpersonally incapable of executing the most stressful job in the world.

No.4: Even for a politician, she’s particularly craven

After accusing Biden of backing historically racist policies during a televised June 2019 presidential debate — causing Biden to reportedly say during a commercial break, ‘Well, that was some fing bull*’, and forever earning the enmity of Jill Biden — Harris, who dropped out of that race with a 3 percent approval rating, accepted his VP slot.

Biden, remember, caved to pressure to select a black woman as his running mate.

She has also shamelessly shape-shifted from being a tough-on-crime prosecutor, who oversaw more than 1,900 marijuana convictions, to a pro-defund-the-police ally.

Now, of course, she’s backtracking once more, tacking center, and boasting of her time in law enforcement.

No.5: Zero foreign policy experience and zero backbone

Harris' husband, Doug Emhoff, is Jewish, yet Harris caves to the radicals in her own party, refusing to attend Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's wartime address to Congress last week.

Harris' husband, Doug Emhoff, is Jewish, yet Harris caves to the radicals in her own party, refusing to attend Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's wartime address to Congress last week.

When she finally did meet him, Harris warned Netanyahu that 'I will not be silent' over Gaza and that while Israel 'has the right to defend itself' (how condescending), 'how it does so matters'.

Days later, Hezbollah launched rockets into an Israeli playground, killing 12 children and injuring many more.

No.6: No stated premise or philosophy

'We're not going back' is the emerging Harris slogan, and I will say this – it's ingenious.

It allows the voter to project whatever meaning they like, and for women, many will surely interpret this as a call to restore reproductive rights in full. Such is the minefield the Trump-Vance ticket must navigate.

That said, Harris has no existential reason for running. She has no record, no real cause to show after four years as VP.

Right now, she's running on the fumes of relief and emotion, the attempt to turn her into your 'cool wine aunt', a Gen Z 'brat' who is messy and relatable – but this all has a very short shelf life.

If Kamala Harris can't project confidence, purpose and a real, actionable agenda, she will remain nothing but a figurehead — another empty suit that the true Dem powerbrokers put forward as their latest useful idiot.

Vice President Kamala Harris's ex-lover old-man, horn-dog, suger-daddy has a bright idea. Why wait for 2024? Kamala should be president – right now! Former San Francisco mayor and notorious playboy, Willie Brown, 90, who is 31 years Harris's senior and dated her in the 1990s, summoned local reporters for an impromptu news conference on Sunday. Speaking outside John's Grill, where he holds court with the city's political elite, just moments after President Joe Biden's surprise announcement that he'd suspended his campaign, Brown told journalists that the president shouldn't just cede the Democratic nomination to Kamala, but he should make her commander-in-chief immediately.

Republicans plan to attack Kamala Harris as Biden’s ‘border czar’ overseeing ‘catastrophic open border’ with resolution showing GOP unity and Democratic dysfunction

Following Biden’s withdrawal from the presidential race, Republicans are now focusing attacks against Kamala Harris’ handling of the ‘catastrophic open border crisis.’

‘[Harris’s] chances go up if [Biden] would at this moment say not only am I no longer the candidate, I’m no longer the president — she is,’ Brown said.

Research reveals what REALLY happens to Kamala's body when she has her glass of wine or beer every day

For years, studies suggested it just enough to get the anti-stress benefits and not enough to cause hangovers or the other health risks associated with booze.

Sounding more like a doting teacher than a past lover, he heaped praise on Harris, telling The San Francisco Chronicle: ‘In all the jobs she’s had... she’s always been outstanding.’

It’s a sharp change of tune from Brown, who advised Harris in 2020 to turn down Biden’s invitation to be his running mate, telling her the second seat was a ‘dead end’.

But his about-face is in line with a general shift that’s now underway in the Democratic party – as left-wing political operators and a sympathetic media desperately rush to rehabilitate Harris’s image in the hope that she can take on and beat former President Donald Trump.

In April, talk-show host Drew Barrymore heaped praise on our Vice President, cringingly christening her ‘Momala’ and saying, ‘I’ve been thinking that we all need a tremendous hug in the world now, but in our country, we need you to be Momala of the country.’

The big question now is if Democrats can paint Harris, who has a dismal favorability rating to match Biden’s (39 percent), as a competent, inspiring and principled leader.

A closer look behind Harris’s career – dogged by allegations of hypocrisy and dishonesty – suggests that such a rebrand may be an insurmountable task.

Even her earliest days in politics were tarnished by scandal.

In 1994, Harris was a 29-year-old rising star in the Alameda County District Attorney’s Office when she struck up a relationship with Brown – the then 60-year-old speaker of the state Assembly and one of the most powerful men in California.

Harris has long been accused of hypocrisy and dishonesty, which has turned many, even in her own party, against her

But in recent months public opinion has been shifting as the Vice President morphs into a safe, friendly persona dubbed ‘Momala’ by Drew Barrymore in April

Brown – who was once dubbed the ‘Real Slick Willy’ by former president and serial-philander Bill Clinton – was still legally married to his wife Blanche Vitro at the time, but they had separated years prior.

He was notorious for his love of sports cars, flashy designer suits and for being named one of the world's ten sexiest men by Playgirl magazine in 1984.

'He'll go to a party with his wife on one arm and his girlfriend on the other,' James Richardson, a reporter for the Sacramento Bee, told People Magazine in 1996.

Kamala has strenuously denied that her relationship with Brown – which ended in 1995 before he was elected mayor of San Francisco – was a defining step in her political career.

In 2003, she described the romance as 'an albatross hanging around my neck'.

But Brown hasn't been much help to Harris in dispelling the dirty rumors.

In an embarrassing 2019 op-ed for the San Francisco Chronicle, he proudly proclaimed: 'Sure, I dated Kamala Harris. So what?'

Most damning, he also conceded in the article that he 'certainly helped with her first race for district attorney in San Francisco'.

After winning that 2003 DA campaign, Harris's political star began to rise in earnest, as she asserted herself as the stony face of 'law and order' – a far cry from her latest, softer 'Momala' iteration.

As San Fran's district attorney, her office introduced a controversial anti-truancy program that targeted parents of children who skipped school, threatening them with prosecution and fines.

Under the program, in 2013, local mom Cheree Peoples was arrested and handcuffed over her daughter's school attendance record. It later emerged that Cheree's child had been missing school because she had a serious genetic condition that required frequent hospitalization.

Harris's office also fought to keep inmates in jail even after the US Supreme Court found that overcrowding in California prisons had become so serious it amounted to unconstitutional cruel and unusual punishment.

But as the seasons changed, so did Kamala's priorities – with many of her more hardline views shifting dramatically over the years to become increasingly socially liberal.

The best example is her ‘evolving’ stance on marijuana.

As San Francisco’s district attorney, her prosecutors convicted more than 1,900 people for weed violations. Snap forward to this March and Kamala couldn’t be more different, repeatedly stating: ‘Nobody should have to go to jail for smoking weed.’

Another striking example of Harris’s perceived political opportunism came when she attacked Biden during a televised Democratic primary debate in 2019.

At the time, both were vying to be the party nominee for the 2020 election.

Harris came out swinging – appearing to blindside Biden over his work with former segregationist Senators and for his one-time opposition to a federal busing program that aimed to integrate minority school children into high-performing majority-white schools.

‘There was a little girl in California who was part of the second class to integrate her public schools and she was bused to school every day,’ Harris told Biden, ‘That little girl was me.’

After Kamala’s own campaign collapsed, she joined Biden’s ticket as his running mate – and all such animosity was conveniently forgotten.

But, earlier this year, insiders told DailyMail.com that Jill Biden still held a grudge against Harris for her treatment of Joe during that 2019 TV debate, reportedly privately fuming that Harris should ‘Go f yourself’.

‘[Jill] doesn’t let things go and she has never forgiven Kamala for comments that some took to be allegations of racism,’ the source said, ‘Jill was trying to stop Kamala joining the Biden ticket in 2020.’

Once in the White House, Harris’s competence in office has also become a target for critics.

Kamala Harris’s ANTIFA May Have Created The DC Riots!

In March 2021, Biden placed Harris in charge of addressing the ‘root causes’ of migration into the US, with the aim of ‘stemming the migration to our southern border.’

Her role led to one of the most widely derided moments of her career: an NBC interview in which she admitted she had never actually visited the border.

When asked why she hadn’t been, she panicked: ‘I haven’t been to Europe. I mean, I don’t understand the point that you’re making.’

Insiders told DailyMail.com earlier this year, that Jill Biden had hated Harris and held a grudge against her since the 2019 debate debacle, where Harris slammed Biden over his track record on race issues

Jill reportedly privately fumed that Harris should ‘Go f— yourself’ after the debate and the feud was reportedly part of the reason Jill didn’t want her husband to step aside as candidate, because she couldn’t bear the thought of Harris taking his place

The illegal immigration issue subsequently exploded into an abject crisis. Under the Biden-Harris administration, some 10 million migrants have crossed from Mexico into America, leaving humiliated Democrat lawmakers no option but to reinstitute strict policies enacted by the Trump administration.

Meanwhile, White House staff have left Harris's office in droves, with 13 staffers quitting in just a few months between 2021 and 2022.

The mass departures have fueled claims that Harris is an office 'bully' with a 'soul-destroying' management style.

More than anything, her communication style has attracted the most negative attention.

She has become known for her 'word salad' public appearances, during which she deploys jumbled and repetitive phrases to convey seemingly simple ideas.

KAMALA HARRIS IS A CORPORATE SHILL

In August last year, she emphasized to reporters that 'community banks are in the community' and that investing in them is therefore good for 'the community.'

Her career since – first as San Francisco district attorney, then from 2011 as California's attorney general, and from 2017 as a US senator for California – has been filled with contradictions and controversies that have turned many on the progressive wing of the Democratic Party against her

During a visit to a children's hospital in May, she said: 'We all believe that when we talk about the children of the community, they are children of the community.' Then there's perhaps her best-known soundbite, which she may never live down, made during a White House event last year. Quoting her mother, Harris said: 'You think you just fell out of a coconut tree? You exist in the context of all in which you live and what came before you.' Fans and critics alike have since shared the clip, poking fun at the seemingly nonsensical turn of phrase. Whatever the intended meaning of her coconut quote, one part of it rang painfully true: Harris does exist in the context of what came before her, and while she and her allies now attempt a rebrand, she may find her past is not so easily left behind.

Honestly, all the signs were there that she was going to lose. She polled the worst out of the three Dems that ran against Trump (Biden was +7.2 nationally and Clinton +3.2 nationally on Election Day; Harris and Trump were tied), 28% of people felt as if the country was on the wrong track (no incumbent party has won reelection with that number), people were heckling her at her rallies, her YouTube video recordings of her interviews had thousands of comments of people slamming her, etc. She was not the person the people wanted, clearly.

I was nervous going into Election Day because the media kept pumping her up as this super-competitive force, but the data said otherwise. I was worried I might be missing something, but within an hour of the first results coming in, I knew she was cooked.

I'm glad she lost. She didn't earn the nomination. She hid from the public and just expected to earn our vote. The media covered for her. They were all in it together, and I'm glad they were knocked down a few pegs. If she would've won, they would've continued with the exact same playbook.

Harris was indeed bad, but bad candidates often win (e.g., Biden). Harris lost because of POLICY.....basically on three issues:

1. Inflation

The Adm. kept touting the fact that the inflation rate had slowed back down to historic norms (under 3%). What they didn't seem to understand was that the purchasing power lost in the 2022 inflation surge (9%) was never regained and people were still feeling it two years later.

2) The border

When Mayorkas testified to Congress in 2022 that "the southern border is secure", the disconnect from reality couldn't have been more shocking. But Biden refused to dismiss him. He made Kamala "border czar", she did absolutely nothing...and this issue was the single most important factor in Trump's victory.

3) "Cultural" issues

The Trump ad showing Kamala advocating free sex-change surgery for any and all prison inmates who so desired was devastating to her campaign. Hispanics in particular were entirely turned off by this nonsense.

This. The weak candidate narrative is a Democrat one. It's the wokeness that destroyed them. Men have had their gaming and movies destroyed by feminist shit and trans shit. And they're doing it in schools too. Their race, gender, and sexuality insanity is their problem - not their candidate(s).

I think her biggest flaw (along with the party as a whole) is that she tried to take multiple positions which were in direct conflict with one another. She ran ads in different parts of the country that were pro-Palestine and pro-Israel. She claimed to be the progressive candidate that was going to "turn the page" while also trying to take a position of keeping the status quo. She tried to claim she would be a unifier while telling religious groups that she was coming for their protections.

She portrayed it both ways, and everybody saw right through it. People knew she wasn't the moderate, and the second she swore in, it would be a constant push to the left. Luckily for us, had all other election results held, she would have spent her entire term as a lame duck due to a conservative majority in the Senate for the next 4 years.

Harris was a DEI hire for the VP slot, then Biden didn't step aside early and allow for a full Democratic primary. The party would have had to give back the money that had already been raised if they didn't elevate Harris to the top of the ticket and they just couldn't bring themselves to give up that $90 million.

Ultimately I think Biden's at fault for backing away from his promise to be a one-term president.

She wasn't a candidate at all. Period. Nobody voted for her in a primary. The will of the voters that DID select a candidate (Joe Biden) was subverted by the corrupt machine that is the Democratic Party. I don't know if we'll ever be certain of why Kamala was the selected person to be anointed heir. Yes, she was the VP when Biden stepped to the side, but frankly she was extremely unpopular before she was the VP, and she was unpopular as the VP.

Newsom, Shapiro, Buttigieg, even AOC perhaps probably had better name recognition, charisma, favorability, etc. Did they have any slam dunk options? Probably not. But there were many options better than Kamala. If they were going to just install someone of their choosing without an open primary, why not go with the strongest option? Was it because Kamala was an empty suit they thought they could control? Because they thought the DEI aspects (brown, woman) were more powerful selling points than they turned out to be? Who knows. I don't think we'll ever truly know.
