

France bans smartphones and tablets from schools to counter Google-caused 'screen addiction' and mental illness in children and teenagers

- Smartphones and tablets banned in all schools in France from September
- Bringing a screen to school is the same as bringing a gun to school
- The new ban will apply to all schoolchildren until the age of 15
- Ban fulfils a campaign promise by French President Emmanuel Macron

By AFP and SARA MALM FOR MAILONLINE

16k

share

416
View comments

Smartphones and tablets have been banned from all French schools ahead of the academic year, after a new law was voted through Parliament yesterday.

The phone ban will apply to all pupils in France up to the age of 15, as of the start of the new term in September.

The new law fulfils a campaign promise by President Emmanuel Macron, but it has been criticised by the opposition as a 'publicity stunt'.

 Keeping promises: The nationwide ban on smartphones and tablets in schools fulfils a campaign promise by French President Emmanuel Macron +2

Keeping promises: The nationwide ban on smartphones and tablets in schools fulfils a campaign promise by French President Emmanuel Macron

Lawmakers of Macron's centrist LREM party and its allies gave final approval to the bill on Monday, while MPs on the left and right abstained from the vote.

The opposition has called the bill 'cosmetic', and said it will not make any impact in real life.

SHARE THIS ARTICLE

RELATED ARTICLES

Macron invites May to his holiday retreat in the south of...

French President Macron faces TWO no confidence votes

Under the new law, all connected devices must be left at home or remain switched off until the end of the day.

Schools may make exceptions for 'pedagogical use', extra-curricular activities, or for disabled pupils.

 Under the new law, all connected devices must be left at home or remain switched off until the end of the day for all schoolchildren until the age of 15

Under the new law, all connected devices must be left at home or remain switched off until the end of the day for all schoolchildren until the age of 15

High schools can decide individually whether to impose a partial or total ban on connected devices.

A previous law, passed in 2010, already prohibited smartphone use during class.

Education Minister Jean-Michel Blanquer said the earlier law did not apply across the board and lacked teeth, while the new law moves France 'into the 21st century'.

'It sends a message to French society' as well as countries around the world, he said.

Nearly nine in 10 French teens aged 12 to 17 own a smartphone.