

Politicians & Corporations Admit to Paying Actors to Show Fake Support

A political campaign and a corporation have admitted to using paid actors in order to fill the crowd with supporters at events.

By John Vibes -

Sh:

Tw

+1

Pir

Sh:

In an age where most politicians have very little support for their campaigns and causes, they have been known to resort to desperate measures to improve their public image. While this practice is disregarded by some as a “conspiracy theory,” many politicians have been caught hiring actors to fill the crowds of their campaign speeches—corporations too.